Arriving at headquarters, Capt. Meyers interviews President Lincoln in behalf of Capt Stark. The impersonation of Lincoln by Mr. Ralph Ince is one of the features of this film, it being claimed for Mr. Ince that his ability to impersonate the famous President is most superior. Succeeding in obtaining the pardon, which he takes to Capt. Stark in his cell, who is naturally surprised. Capt. Meyers having related his experiences to Capt. Stark and shown him his sister's locket, a warm friendship springs up between them, resulting in Stark inviting Meyers to his Southern home. Judge Stark's old prejudice causes him to offer but a cool reception. The pleadings of his son and daughter, however, prevail and in addition to relenting he accepts Meyers as a son-in-law, whole old "Mose" holds aloft the Flag of the Union; thus are they united under one flag. It is a well told story, perfectly enacted and creditable to all.

"DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE" (Edison).

Reviewed by Mme. R. G. Dolese.

HOW many of us as children recall the long labored effort to commit to memory that famous Declaration of Independence, and, after succeeding, immediately show our independence by forgetting it in our "pursuit for Life, Liberty and Happiness." What did it all mean? Nothing to us; yet we all passed through the age when history is taught us, or, as some of our more interesting neighbors would say, "learned us." Great is the teacher who can with some effort make us do the learning. This has been accomplished by the wonderful picture produced by the Edison Company, entitled "The Declaration of Independence."

Scene from "The Declaration of Independence," by the Edison Company.

In this picture we are at first introduced to Mr. and Mrs. Adams' home, and a charming picture it is, showing the refinement and simplicity of the early colonial days and being, in and of itself, a wonderful study of antique furnishings, as the detail is perfect. In the home we find Mr. and Mrs. Adams and young John Quincy Adams (afterwards President of the United States), a rare young rebel who, inspired by the gossip and tales of his father and friends, would in his vigor have sent the entire British army into the Atlantic Ocean.

The next scene we see young John Quincy Adams in company with his father, John Hancock, Benjamin Franklin and other prominent men, starting for the first Philadelphia Congress, and here we have a charming expression or motherly interest betrayed in the character of Mrs. John Adams, for young John in his intense feeling has concealed beneath the folds of his cape his father's sword; his mother, retaining the sword, sends her "men folk" out to battle, with a blessing for their safe return.

Independence Hall—A great group of men, all the leadership of the day and all the hope for the future. How interesting it is to watch the long efforts of these men to avoid the war which began at Lexington. Some very excellent facial work has been accomplished in this picture and in what line of art is it more desirable and necessary? A large percentage of the understanding of a film is hinged on facial work, especially as some of the exhibitors are so careless about sub-titles. It is also most impressive to note the difference between the plain types of American architecture, severe and simple, and the rich architecture of the English castle where George III received the Colonists who submit to him the Petition, which he returns with an answer that irritates them.

Attention should be centered on the exceedingly attractive picture showing the men entering Independence Hall and young John Adams waiting to ring the bell that was to be the signal of the passing of the bill. The wide spaces and the tall Doric columns give such a sense of magnitude. The grouping of the men, young Adams in the distance, Thomas Jefferson in a black velvet suit, and the stooping old figure in the foreground. The very attitude of the figures are impressing and the sense of largeness is one many of the manufacturers might copy.

So the story carries us on to the ringing of the Bell of Liberty, which, by the way, I informed the manufacturers was too large, but was assured by them that it only measured one foot (a very insignificant amount) from the original. Analyzing my feelings I, too, felt the intense interest of the moment. It was a feeling of excitement that prompted the thought that a long time was required to ring the bell. But the film as a whole—here we have a mere fact—no romantic story—just plain history—and the manufacturers deserve great credit for the way they have put life and interest into so dry a document as this "Declaration." Even the school histories today give a condensed form. Oh! Why were we born so long ago?

From a photographic standpoint and a study in expression, the details of the costumes and stage settings are perfect and a veritable study in antique decorations. All these points go to make the film so useful educationally. For of what value it it to have a story, even a historical story, developed that is so untrue in its surroundings that one is not sure if it is history or simply romance? Here is a great, dry essay—speech—call it what you will—vitalized and developed into living, breathing history, of intense interest to every American born or American adopted man or woman.

Something should be said for the splendid way in which the actors and actresses have worked out their parts. I think there must be something inspiring about it to make these actors and actresses feel so keenly the spirit of the time. It is especially interesting to watch the struggle of Thomas Jefferson, as through the night he writes and plans; to see the expression of fear and doubt, interest and hope on the faces of the men who come in the early morning hour to read what he has written. The words that were to flash down into the ages and make us what we are today. The boyish impatience of young John Quincy Adams appeals to us, as also does the helpless old man as he totters up the steps and impatiently awaits the signal to sound the Liberty Bell; the wild, anxious crowd of men and women whose very backs are potent with interest as John Hancock reads to them the stirring words. Photographically, this especial scene deserves credit. It is wonderfully well posed.

If all history could come to us in so happy a way, we would not have to be "taught." Somebody in that studio must be afflicted with an "artistic temperament" and recognizes his blessing. This film will make an epoch in educational films and, if we have many more like them, students will surely find lessons their recreation.

Scene from "The Declaration of Independence," by the Edison Company.

"THE BATTLE OF TRAFALGAR" (Edison).

THE battle of Trafalgar, arresting as it did the power of Napoleon, just when that power seemed to develop into omnipotence, is justly counted among the fifteen decisive battles of history. A film maker, who undertakes to reproduce an event of such importance in moving pictures, deserves encouragement for the effort alone. It may be added at the outset that the effort of the Edison Company was altogether creditable. The picture has bits of historic realism that are quite clever. The "fighting top" of the enemy's ship "The Redoubtable" was an extremely well conceived and well executed scene and has the merit of being in the story of it well sustained by historical tradition. The scene on board the "Victory" when, after so many hours of bloody fighting the fortunes of war went with the British, is stirring in the picture, as it must have been in reality. The death of Nelson was an affecting scene and to an Englishman must bring to mind one of the proudest moments in the history of his country. The appearance of Nelson before the Board of Admiralty is likewise worthy of special mention. The psychological moment has been seized by the director, and the spectator at the end of the scene feels that Nelson is going forth to conquer or to die.

Special credit is due to the film maker for abstaining from the "love-fiction" too often interwoven with so-called historical pictures. The historical novel has been the pet aversion of literature and it would be too bad to have a revival of it on the screen. The educational value of the picture is great.

"THE RULING PASSION" (Biograph).

This Biograph film deserves special notice because of its juvenile characters. The play is unique because of the fact that children take the most important parts from beginning to end, and their histrionic ability is deserving of commendation. A bright boy having been to the theater is controlled by a passion for acting, and at a children's party produces some very creditable little plays. Going from the house to the seashore, the acting is made more real upon the water when, through the loosening of a rope, two young people are carried away in a boat upon an ebb tide. It is some time before the youthful stage manager can procure assistance in the timely arrival of his parents, who secure the aid of a motor boat to pursue the little craft, which is rapidly foundering. The thrilling chase of the motor boat is somewhat prolonged, causing the danger of the children to become very harrowing to the feelings of the beholders. The rescue is, however, timely, and a restored family made happy; a little punishment is administered to the cause of the mishap, and the youngsters are all put to bed with the parents' happy "good night," but still in his dreams the young actor continues to give evidences of the "ruling passion." There are some pretty pictures in this film, and altogether it is one to interest the family—children will like it, and parents will see that it carries the lessons of timely warning. It encourages the development of the good in the boy and rebukes the bad, and will prove helpful in suggesting the control of a "ruling passion."

Scene from "Trafalgar," by the Edison Company.

Technique of the Photoplay

By EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

Copyright by E. W. Sargent. All rights reserved.

CHAPTER VIII.

Comedy Essentials.

Photo-comedy is divided into the usual classifications of comedy, farce comedy and farce. True comedy differs from farce largely in the matter of degree.

Polite comedy is more the comedy of idea than of action, while farce is dependent upon the extravagance of its action rather than upon the coherency of the story. Farce comedy occupies a vaguely defined middle ground.

But photo-comedy cannot be purely the comedy of idea. There must be a touch of humor in the acting to supplement the humor of the story and sprightliness of action must replace the clever lines of the spoken play.

Most producing companies make a farce of any comedy idea produced, but there are some few directors who produce both comedy and farce according to the value of the script and make their comedies as delightful as the best work of the dramatic stage.

A comedy should begin with some humorous situation which is developed to its fullest possibilities in diverting action. The probabilities need not be as closely adhered to as is required in the photodrama, but the absolutely impractical plot should be treated farcically rather than seriously, since the plot itself is a farce.

In the comedy of the theater the playwright depends upon the humor of his lines more than upon the humor of his plot. In the photo-comedy the dialogue is absent and humorous situation and action must replace this lack. It is not sufficient that the idea is humorous, the plot must be susceptible of interpretation in humorous action and that action must be indicated in the manuscript. It is not sufficient to explain that "Smith tells Jones to go home in funny action." Tell what that action is if your comedy is to be understood.

Comedy Must Be Good Natured.

Comedy never should be ill natured. The afflictions of the unfortunate may strike a few as being capable of humorous treatment, but a comedy based upon a deformity or depending upon an affliction for its humor will find no place in the studio. A person with a hare lip may appeal to some as being humorous, but a comedy based upon this theme will not make far-reaching appeal and is more deserving of a place than comedy based upon kicking a crutch from under a cripple. The comedy of good humor is to be preferred and it should be played with a rollicking spirit that will add to the charm. This is not possible where the main theme is suggestive of the clinic.

The same applies to the treatment of racial characteristics. The grotesque Irishman, the blundering German, the excitable Frenchman and the other familiar types of farce comedy should not be employed in photo-comedy. These types are the creation of the stage and the comic papers and many of these caricatures are offensive to persons of the same nationality. The photoplay makes its appeal to all races and there is no reason why a manufacturer should deliberately affront a large clientele to permit the making of a few comedies.

On the other hand the natural humor and wit of the Irishman can be employed to good advantage, the bewilderment of the newly arrived German is productive of comedy situations that are natural and unforced, but there is a difference between a kindly utilization of such matters and the sweeping caricature that suggests that all Irishmen have green whiskers and that all Germans are like the "Dutchmen" of the stage. The commercial shrewdness of the Jew is best appreciated by his own people, but they know, too, that swindling is not shrewdness, and the impetuosity of the Latin temperament can be advantageously employed at times, but not always.

Humor of Action and Idea.

Humor of action is vastly different from the humor of idea. One appeals to the mind through the reasoning powers, the other through the eye. If appeal to reason can be made through appeal to the eye, the ideal condition is attained. The humor of idea finds its expression in the climax, but the climax must be led up to by humorous action. One or two purely explanatory scenes may be permitted where essential, but following that the action should be rapid and genuinely funny. Plate smashing, the use of the slap stick and other devices of burlesque are not funny in themselves. They must be given a reason or they merely clog the action.

One of the best examples of the comedy of action was done by the Lubin Company some time ago, under the title of "Wifie's Mamma." The first scene merely showed the receipt of a letter announcing the intention of the wife's mother to make a visit. This was a purely explanatory scene to permit the introduction of the letter. Mother arrived in the next scene, an essential fact made lively by the dropping of a suitcase on her toes. The incident was made to appear an accident, but the audience knew that it was purposely done, the opening gun of the campaign.

Arrived at the house, the old lady dropped her pocketbook and while she stooped to pick it up the husband dropped the suitcase on her again, another accident, of course, but one the audience understood.

The cook objects to the presence of the old lady in the kitchen and while the wife tries to smooth the matter over the husband gives the cook five dollars to run the old lady out. The cook earns the money by throwing mother out of a second story window, but this has no effect, and in turn she is dropped out of an automobile, taken horseback riding on a nervous horse, taken for a row in a boat with some auger holes in the bottom and pitched down the side of a mountain. After all that she goes home and writes to explain that she should have gone long before, but that the warmth of her welcome made her feel that it would be discourteous to leave.

The comedy of action had been strong throughout, but the letter in the last scene brought the comedy of idea as the husband thought to the strenuous efforts that were unavailing.

The Chase Picture.

Although overdone a couple of years ago, the chase picture holds its own, although it is infrequently seen at present. The chase picture is one in which some character or object is pursued through a succession of scenes more or less amply equipped with comedy action. It is the simplest form of comedy picture and the ease with which chases were made resulted in an overproduction that in turn almost banished the chase for a time.

The chase offers the requisites of fun and liveliness and where there is established some definite reason for the run, it is still employed but it is no longer sufficient to bat a ball off a baseball field and have the entire company chase it through 950 feet of film.

The chase should not occupy the entire length of film and it should follow a series of incidents which give rise and reason to the pursuit, but with these provided the chase becomes a matter of providing comedy for the various scenes. Much of this comedy cannot be devised until the picture is taken, for each location may present some feature which will suggest a bit of business, but the leading action should be written in and the director left to supplement this with his own ideas as they are suggested to him.

Pills, Potions and Powders.

Some thousands of manuscripts have been written based on pills, potions, powders and influences, and a large percentage has been produced. There has been employed about every kind of preparation imaginable and the few concerns still making them are using over and over again ideas drawn from the early productions. The comedy picture was in existence some ten or twelve years before the dramatic photoplay, and it was precisely this type of crude comedy that was first exhausted. An influence story embodying some absolutely new theme might find acceptance, but it is doubtful if there exists any market for this sort of extravaganza.

The same amount of effort diverted to the farce will prove a better investment of time.

Much the same applies to the amorous old maid, the inquisitive old woman, the absent-minded professor, the henpecked husband, the shrewish wife, the tramp, the bookagent, the bad boy, the foreign count and other familiar types. New ideas might be found to fit these, but they are all on file in the negative room of the manufacturer and it is easier to rewrite an old script than to wait until the outsider sends in a new development.

Comedies in Simple Settings.

It is well in planning comedies to keep the settings simple and inexpensive. A manufacturer will spend hundreds of dollars for the feature scene of a drama when he will object to the small extra expense for comedy setting. The big scene will carry the drama, but the comedy will carry itself and it is useless to plan big effects when they will not be appreciated. An additional cost of a few hundred dollars for some strong effect will not be objected to, but comedies which require elaborate special sets, which actually destroy valuable property, or which necessitate an unusually extended period of taking will not gain much consideration unless there is a compensating gain in unusualness, which is not probable.

The appearance of new catch phrases, the invention of a new slang expression or the popularizing of a song is almost certain to be followed by scores of scripts based on the same. It is a good thing for the photoplaywright to keep away from these temptations, for it is largely a waste of time. To be pertinent the story must be made at once and the studio force is better able to get out an emergency script that will be filmed before the first of the outside contributions appears.

The greatest mistake the novice makes is the belief that if a scenario sounds funny it must be funny. The reverse usually is true. The successful comedy script makes poor reading and the cleverly written scene reads better than it acts. The synopsis may be humorously written if it does not consume too much space, but the stage, not the manuscript, is where the humor of the scenario should develop. It is entirely possible to write a scenario that is almost entitled to a rank as a gem of humorous literature and yet which is done into the dullest sort of action.

The comedy script calls for a fuller treatment than the dramatic scenario. In the latter it is sufficient merely to hint at the byplay, but in the comedy script every action counts and all comedy bits should be explained briefly but fully, that no point may be overlooked.

Originality of thought is at a premium, for here the themes have been worked over more often than the dramatic story and the ability to give novel treatment to an old theme is a valuable asset. The beginner will find it advisable to start with the dramatic scenario and attempt the comedy script only when familiarity with the work and knowledge of the companies makes success more likely.

* * *

This is the last of Mr. Sargent's articles on Technique of the Photoplay, but other articles on scenario-writing will be published from time to time. The Technique of the Photoplay will shortly be issued in book form.

WITH THE WESTERN PRODUCERS.

A great deal of excitement has marked the first month of the Bison Co.'s stay in Bear Valley, which is located thirty-five miles east of Redlands, California, in the San Bernardino Range.

During the taking of an Indian picture in which canoes were used, George Gebhardt and Chas. Insley were capsized. In their efforts to free themselves from the canoe they became entangled in a large bunch of tenacious lily pads. Their struggles only heightened the peril of their position. The third trip to the bottom was being made when the other players got to their assistance. These unfortunates had only recovered from their scare and weakness when the mountain fever descended on practically the entire company, further delaying them. Miss Evelyn Graham probably suffered most.

And now the western slope of the San Bernardinos is in the grip of the most disastrous forest fire in its history. The Bison people will probably take a number of magnificent and awe-inspiring western pictures with one of the most terrible and fearsome "sets" that nature can afford—that of a forest of giant trees swept by a tornado of flame and smoke.

* * *

The peaceful quietude of Edendale is being broken by a small army of workmen who are tearing down the old Selig studio, and like the "Phoenix," are raising from the ashes of the old pile a thing of beauty and grace.

The rear quarter of land is being cleared for the new Mission Stables in which will be housed Selig's equine props. The stable as planned will be one of the most sanitary and up-to-date affairs in the whole southwest, and will accommodate twenty-four head of horses at one time.

An immense property room of a capacity sufficient to care for anything from a cowboy pair of a chaps to a historical pageant is already nearing completion.

The executive offices of the company will be at the extreme corner of plant, with separate offices for each of the three producers, and an office for the stage manager and property man. The corner of the office building will be surmounted by a high tower of mission design. And in fact the whole plant will be built on the mission style. The inner yard or court will be an exact reproduction of the famous missions of Franciscan days.

Arrangements have been completed with three theatrical men of nation wide renown to act as directors and producers, relieving Mr. Boggs of some of the strain to which he has been subjected.

Mr. Boggs writes and produces very nearly every one of Selig's Pacific Coast releases. This in addition to being the Selig Company at the Wreck of the Santa Rosa Off Point Aiquello, Cal.

General Manager of the Selig Polyscope Co. Everyone who has any dealings with Mr. Boggs is always full of praise for this all around good fellow and thorough gentleman.

The Yosemite Company and the local company are now merged as one big organization of thirty players. This will enable the three producers to pick just the particular kind of talent for the work in hand.

The company which has been working in Florida moves to Colorado in a few weeks. After their stay there it is generally understood that they will come on to California. From all indications the whole Selig Co. will eventually consolidate into one big organization, located in Los Angeles, where they can work fifty-two weeks out of every year.

In organizations of this kind there is always some one used as the butt of the majority of jokes. With Selig's bunch it is a genial German, who was christened by his parents Fritz, last cognomen Bulkie, joined making the euphonious title of "Fritz Bulkie." Fritz is very loyal to the Selig Co., and through his numerous escapades with other studios has caused himself to be labeled "Mr. Polyscope." Among his other accomplishments is an inordinate dread of water. Recently while standing near the edge of the big tank he was shoved in by a festive player. Mr. Polyscope immediately proceeded to the bottom like so much pig iron, and it took the combined efforts of Selig's best swimmers to "salvage" Fritz. On being revived he promptly filled the air with a stream of lurid German profanity sufficient to intimidate the boldest of the jokers.

Miss Eugenie Besserer, who was severely injured by being thrown from her mount recently, is rapidly recovering and will be back in the picture in about three weeks.

The beautiful Iva Shepard has entirely recovered from her accident and will be seen in all future pictures.

In a studio popularity contest Tom. Santschi won by a big majority, as being the best all around actor and good fellow in the bunch.

The Santa Cruz pictures have been sent to the home plant and will soon be released in four reels of stirring marine dramas.

Sydney Ayres, the latest recruit from the "legit," had his enthusiasm dampened, literally speaking, the other day when his part called for a half-drowned and shipwrecked man tied to a spar. Mr. Ayres has no knowledge of swimming and his evident terror has resulted in the coining of a studio term "Goaty," meaning anyone who loses his nerve or angora.

CHICAGO LETTER.

By Jas. S. McQuade.

THE visit of the members of the Exhibitors' Association of Illinois to the Selig plant, Friday, August 25, an account of which appears elsewhere in this issue, marked the beginning of closer relations between the exhibiting and manufacturing departments of the moving picture industry.

The great interest taken by the visitors in the various processes revealed in the factory was fully equalled by the enthusiasm with which they participated in the production of several scenes of a film then under way, the day's sights furnishing an educational course in film manufacturing and production that cannot fail to make prouder of their calling and more confident than ever in the future of moving pictures.

The visit also impressed them with the magnitude of a first-class film manufacturing plant and of the capital involved, not to speak of the weekly expense of operation. They were impressed, too, by the careful, painstaking necessary in the production of a film, for they, themselves, were obliged to repeat a scene three times in succession before the producer was satisfied with the result.

I believe that Mr. Selig took a long step forward when he extended the invitation. It is step that can be repeated by other manufacturers, with much profit to the moving picture industry. Such instructive and enjoyable gatherings cannot fail to create a feeling of higher esteem for pictures among exhibitors. By getting familiar with the great outlay required for many of the films turned out, exhibitors will place still higher value on their programs, and will enlighten their patrons also as to the heavy expenditures necessary for the production and manufacture of films. Such meetings will also serve to convince exhibitors that the manufacturers are co-workers with them and not autocrats of the picture business.

S. S. Hutchinson Talks of Europe.

S. S. Hutchinson, president of the American Film Manufacturing Co., was seen here soon after his return from Europe, and expressed himself as being highly pleased with the sale of the firm's product in London. He attributes the increased demand largely to the truthful depicting of Western life in America, which, of itself, possesses an educational value for citizens of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland.

While in London Mr. Hutchinson met E. H. Montague, Selig's European representative; Harry Spoor, of the Essanay; Mr. Samuel Long, of the Kalem Co., and Mr. George Smith, Vitagraph's representative. During his stay in Paris he met Mr. Reader, Vitagraph's Paris representative. It will be news to some to learn that the Vitagraph Co. has an important factory in Paris.

The American film product, generally, is creating an increasing demand on the Continent, as it is more popular in non-Latin countries than that of any other make. The Gaumont product also stands very high. United States films are made the criterion for all others, and the sales exceed those of all other makes.

In an interview which appears in the Kinematograph & Lantern Weekly, of London, August 10, Mr. Hutchinson is quoted as follows:

"I may surprise you, when I inform you that our temporary arrangement with Messrs Aitken, the Western Import and Film Company, will shortly cease, and in future we intend to handle our subjects in this country ourselves. For that purpose we have formed a subsidiary company to be styled 'The American Film and Manufacturing Company, London, Limited,' with power to open up branches and agencies throughout Great Britain and the Colonies, which will have full control of all releases in this country. Every facility will be given the new company in order that their products may be more widely known, and therefore appreciated. In America, our productions will be made as perfect as possible, expense will be no object, and our great aim will be to make the 'Flying A' even more popular than it is at present. With respect to subjects to be produced in the future, in addition to the popular Western and Cowboy scenes, we shall endeavor to give a more comprehensive idea of the most beautiful spots in America, and views of actual life and circumstances that have not hitherto been attempted, our idea being to show more clearly and naturally the realities of American life, and make the subjects more educative than they usually are. Scenes of the baser sides of life, depicting the primary instincts of greed, avarice, lying, etc., will form a new, and we hope an interesting and successful series. We have other features in view, which we hope, under the new circumstances, will still further enhance the already sound position of our films with exhibitors and their patrons."

Colored Productions.

Following his policy of giving the theaters of the country at least one of the perfectly colored Gaumont films each week, Mr. George Kleine announces a series of exceptional strength to be released during the next six weeks.

The Gaumont colored productions are notable in that they present not only ordinary topical films, designed merely to introduce spectacular subjects, such as parades, etc., but they also include comedies, dramas and historical films, all in rich, quiet tones, rather than in the flashy, harsh colors generally associated with theatrical presentations.

There are many patrons of moving picture theaters who are attracted more by colored films than by the finest masterpiece in purely dramatic or comedy lines. Any showman who is attempting to meet this demand on the part of the public will find among the appended list of George Kleine films some that will attract his particular type of audience:

"Giving the High Sign, or the Woman Hater," release date Sept. 2nd, 1911. This is a great comedy in seven magnificent colored scenes.

"Mated by Chess," release date Sept. 9, 1911. A beautiful romance, with out-of-door settings, showing foliage and flowers in the exact color of nature.

"Crossing the Alps in a Motor," release date Sept. 19, 1911. This film shows rare scenes of rugged beauty, with perfect color values.

"The Culture of Bulbous Flowers," hyacinths, tulips and narcissus, release date Sept. 23, 1911.

"The Upward Way," release date Oct 3, 1911. This is a historical and biographical drama taken from the life of Lully, the great Florentine musician, introducing the elaborate costuming and furniture of the days of Louis XIV. The film is valuable from a standpoint of educational strength as well as from its power to hold the interest of the audience in the plot.

"Pansies," release date, Oct. 10, 1911. This affords a dreamlike study of the velvet-petaled beauties.

"Done Brown," release date Oct. 14, 1911. This is an up-to-the-minute society drama, showing the clever manner in which a young wife kills the germs of fickleness in her husband.

Following these, with release date as yet undecided, comes a beautiful interpretation of "Fridolin," one of Shiller's best known ballads.

These films are, of course, furnished the theaters of the country as regular releases, without any extra charge whatever, and too few of the managers are making use of the publicity to be gained by announcing colored subjects in advance. The Gaumont color quality has long been accorded a leading place and, in the future, special attention will be paid to the production of feature comedies and dramas, in addition to spectacular and scenic films, which have hitherto constituted the bulk of the colored releases in America.

The Precision Camera Floated.

The stockholders of the Precision Camera Company, among whom are S. S. Hutchinson, J. R. Freuler, E. Mandelbaum and H. E. Aitken, held a meeting in the Ashland Block, Wednesday, August 23. The object of this meeting was to discuss the best plan for the marketing of the camera. The machine is being manufactured in Chicago, and it is given out that quite a stock has been completed.

The Precision camera is based on the Eames patent and other improvements, which has been patented, or patents applied for, by the company. Members of the company claim that the camera is positively non-infringing, and that it has been pronounced so by leading patent lawyers thoroughly familiar with camera litigation.

A practical test of the value of the camera was made recently when the negative of a full reel film was taken by it, simultaneously with another negative taken by a camera of the Warwick type. Positive prints were made from these negatives and projected on a screen. After critical observation was made, it is said that the positive made from Precision's negative was chosen in preference to the other.

It may be stated that the lens on the Precision camera moves up and down, vertically, intermittence being thus secured, the principle being somewhat similar to that which governed the Biachi camera.

Ventilation Ventilated.

Ed Kelling, chief theater inspector of the building department, Chicago, has crossed swords with Dr. Ball, of the sanitary department, over the attempt of the latter to make it obligatory for builders of new moving picture theaters to install a certain patented ventilating device in each house that will pump air through the floor or through the rear wall.

Mr. Kelling holds that Dr. Ball is conflicting with the building department, which is in favor of a concrete floor, and of an inflow of fresh air, unladen with germs. With the health department and the building department against him, not to speak of hygienic science and plain horse-sense, Dr. Ball is up against it. Good for Superintendent Kelling!

Manager Bradlet's Successful Opening.

John M. Bradlet, who is well known in moving picture circles, opened the Lyric Theater, Ottawa, Ill., on Saturday evening, August 26, with most encouraging results. Mr. Bradlet secured the Lyric a short time ago, and with his sound practical and theoretic knowledge of the exhibiting department and a live, appreciative community to deal with, his numerous friends will not be surprised to learn of his success. Mr. Bradlet started in well. He had an excellent program of three reels, the oldest film being under 30 days, and all in fine condition. They are of the licensed brand and are furnished by the General Film Company's branch at 17-19 South Wabash Avenue. Ottawa picture lovers asserted that they had never before seen such steady pictures, nor any that were softer or more pleasing to the eye. A patent curtain brought out the details perfectly. When "Plants and Flowers" (Gaumont) was thrown on the screen, it was greeted with repeated applause, and many remained after the second show to compliment Manager Bradlet on the success of his opening.

The Lyric is the leading picture theater in Ottawa and Manager Bradlet has safeguarded his patrons from all risk from fire. A new fireproof operating room has been built, connection being made with the outer air through the roof of the booth. Mr. Purcell, the operator, is an intelligent and safe projector. Mr. Bradlet is a firm believer in playing the pictures, and has secured in Miss Anderson, an accomplished pianist and musician, a valuable aid.

Film for American Federation of Labor.

Representatives of the American Federation of Labor arrived in Chicago, recently, from Washington, D. C., where they had been in consultation with Samuel Gompers and John J. Mitchell, with authority to arrange for a moving picture that will show the arrest at Indianapolis of John J. McNamara, secretary of the local organization there, and his alleged illegal removal to Los Angeles for trial.

Arrangements were made with the American Film Manufacturing Company, of this city, and a contract signed for the film. It is the intention to exhibit the film in all the prominent independent picture theaters in the country, under the auspices of the American Federation of Labor, the local unions for each city to aid in the sale of tickets, and the net proceeds to be applied to the defense fund of McNamara and his associates.

It is said that Messrs. Gompers and Mitchell will appear in the pictures, as will also the executive board of the Ironworkers' Union in Indianapolis. This board was in session when McNamara was arrested.

That Sweet Young Lady Censor.

Sergeant O'Connor, head of the Chicago censor board, had some quiet fun of late with the representatives of the Chicago daily press. He jokingly announced that he had offered the position of assistant to a fascinating young lady, Miss Emma Anderson.

Her schoolmates had been waiting for some time to play a joke on her, and they circulated the story that she was appointed an official city censor. Sergeant O'Connor helped them out, and every newspaper in the city devoted a story, embellished by a handsome cut of the young lady, to the announcement.

Hearts were aflutter with excitement, and the good wives of several film men had made up their minds to keep a close watch on their hubbies. Now that the dream has been dispelled, sighs of regret chase one another down Film Row.

The Butterfly, in Milwaukee, Opened.

J. R. Freuler, owner of the Western Film Exchange in Milwaukee, informed me, during his stay in the city last week, that a new independent theater, the Butterfly, will be opened in that city, Friday, September 1.

The house has been built by Meister & Reise, at an outlay of $80,000. It will seat 1,500 people. Picture programs exclusively will be run, the service being furnished by the Western Film Exchange. A large pipe organ has been installed, and other music will be furnished by a carefully selected orchestra. The admission will be 10 cents. Otto Meister will be manager.

Columbus Delayed in Landing.

Hundreds of people in the employ of the Selig Polyscope Company have been waiting for over a week, near South Chicago and the lake, to take part in "The Landing of Columbus." The Santa Maria, Pinta and Nina, gifts of the Spanish government to Chicago's park commissioners, after the great Columbian exposition, are being used in the pictures, and over 200 sailors in Genoese costume have been on edge to get ashore from the vessels and greet the hundreds of West Indies Indians that gaze over the stormy waters with awe at the white-faced strangers.

It was not until Sunday, August 27, that the lake got sufficiently smooth to permit of the pictures being taken. Mr. Selig has seen a negative of the landing and is greatly satisfied with the result, after such long waiting.

Chicago Film Brevities.

P. P. Craft, of the Monopol, was in the city Monday, August 28, and called at The World office.

"Dante's Inferno" is being shown at the Princess Theater here, and though well projected and exhibited amid dignified surroundings, it is not doing the business expected. The location of the Princess has a great deal to do with it, as it is out of the run of the most popular first class theaters.

The Star Theater, of De Kalb, Ill., owned by Lindsay & Condon, has been running all summer to handsome profits. Independent service furnished by the Anti-Trust Film Exchange is used. A strictly picture program is always given at this house.

E. Mandelbaum, of the Lake Shore Film & Supply Company, Cleveland; H. E. Aitken, of the Western Film Exchange, New York, and J. R. Freuler, of the Western Film Exchange, Milwaukee, were in the city Wednesday, August 23.

"Back to the Primitive," by Selig, has broken all records for sales in London. Eighty-eight prints were sold in London alone for the United Kingdom and the Colonies. The sum total went over a century and a half.

Several exhibitors have informed me that the factory patches of new releases are coming apart very frequently for the last four or five weeks, while going through the projecting machine. They attribute the trouble to the cement used.

L. J. Weiss, owner and manager of the Electrical Theater, Naperville, Ill., a licensed house, was in the city Thursday, August 24. The Electrical has been run all summer to very fair business. Straight moving pictures and good vocal numbers have formed the programs. Film service is booked by the American branch of the General Film Company at 429 South Wabash Avenue.

Carl Ray, treasurer of the Exhibitors' State Association of Michigan, was in the city last week and attended the big blowout at the Selig plant. Mr. Ray is owner and manager of the Lyric, Amuse and Elite theaters, and of the Temple Opera House, in Muskegon, Mich. He informed me that he will open a new house, the Majestic, in Muskegon, on September 1st. The Majestic will seat 350 people.

Phil Gleichman, of the Cadillac Film Exchange, Detroit, was in the city Tuesday, August 22.

William H. Swanson has secured the exclusive rights to picture the celebration held in Cheyenne, Wyo., for a number of days, commencing August 23.

F. C. Aiken, manager of the General Film Company's branch at 17-19 South Wabash Avenue, paid a visit to Milwaukee recently, where he found business in excellent condition. The Alhambra, the new theater acquired by the Saxe enterprises, is unable to take care of the people on Saturdays and Sundays. On these days, with 2,500 people inside, a long line may be observed in the lobby and extending out into the street. Similar conditions prevail at the Princess and Modjeska. The Orpheum is also doing record business.

Mr. Rothapfel, former manager of the Alhambra Theater, Milwaukee, has gone to Minneapolis, where he intends securing several first class houses for moving picture exhibitions.

H. K. Somborn, formerly of the Pittsburg Calcium Light & Film Company's staff, was in the city recently, looking over theater prospects. He may settle here, if he finds the right theater and the right location.

J. R. Brennan, manager and proprietor of the Colonial Theater, Evansville, Ind., spent a week in the city recently, he and Mrs. Brennan being the guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Scates. He reports that the Colonial has been run all summer with fair profits. In fact, he states that all the picture theaters in Evansville have shown profits for the summer. There are eight licensed and five independent theaters in Evansville. Mr. Brennan stated that he ran the "Battle Hymn of the Republic" (Vitagraph) to big business and repeated it after an interval of two weeks to an increased business. He expressed the wish that more high class pictures of the same order would be turned out. The Colonial gets service from the General Film Company's branch at 117 North Dearborn Street, this city.

Walter L. Rubert, owner and manager of the Twelfth Street Theater, Kansas City, advises that he opened with the "Crusaders" on Sunday, August 20, and will continue that subject until September 2, giving continuous hourly performances, from 10 a. m. till 11 p. m. A private exhibition was given for the press, clergy and city and county officials of Kansas City, Friday, August 18, and gave great satisfaction. Special music by an orchestra of eight pieces and a lecture accompany the exhibition of the film. A comprehensive descriptive herald was widely distributed throughout the city by Manager Rubert.

J. E. Tabor and wife, of Belvidere, Ill., called at 117 N. Dearborn Street recently. They were celebrating their seventh wedding anniversary. Mr. Tabor is a member of the firm of Tabor & Babcock, who own and operate the Majestic Theater in Belvidere. Mr. Tabor reported an increase in business for the last two weeks.

R. C. White, in charge of the booking department of the General Film Company's branch, 117 North Dearborn Street, is spending a vacation among the lakes in Wisconsin. Mr. Scates, manager of the branch, is attending to the booking during his absence.

Mr. Shearer, formerly owner of an independent exchange in Kansas City, has opened an independent exchange in Davenport, Ia., and has arranged for the purchase of films from the Sales Company, to commence September 1. Mr. Shearer was in Chicago the latter part of the week of August 19, and arranged several business matters in connection with the opening of his exchange.

John Pringle, a camera man who will be remembered by his work in the production of "Buffalo Hunt" and "Bucking Bronchos," for the Miller Brothers, was a caller at the World office last week. Mr. Pringle resides in Chicago at present and has engaged in the production of several fine industrial films.

John Hardin, Western manager for Thos. A. Edison, Inc., since the pioneer days of the film industry, left for Orange, N. J., Tuesday, August 29. Mrs. Hardin accompanied him and henceforth they will reside in Orange. A farewell lunch was given at the Union, in his honor, and was concluded just before Mr. and Mrs. Hardin boarded the Twentieth Century for New York.

LETTERS OF AN OLD EXHIBITOR TO A NEW FILM MAKER.

(Fourth Instalment.)

Saratoga Springs, August, 1911.

Said one of the oldest Saratogians to me to-day: "Yes, the place is very dead this year and if racing does not come back it will be nothing more than a flag station between New York and Montreal." Too bad, if true. The vast hotels, their size emphasized by their emptiness, make one feel sorry for the owners. The quiet and the refined character of the visitors, taking the place of the sporting crowd, has, however, its compensations.

You know, old friend, it would pay you to have an old hardened exhibitor around your studio just a little before the crank begins to turn on the camera? Take a veteran of not less than five years' experience, give him a good salary and insist on having him around as much as possible and giving his views. If you can get a good, strong, husky chap he would fill the bill best, other things being equal. A man that discourages backtalk by his looks and appearance is, for your needs, especially valuable. At the present time exhibitors entering a studio might well say with Dante: "All hope abandon ye, who enter here." That is to say, if they are allowed to enter at all. If the reception extended to moving picture people generally by the magnates at 80 Fifth Avenue is any criterion, it's just as well for us common folks, who don't know much more than pay our bills to stay away from the moguls and ruefully think of our littleness and their wonderful greatness. Of course we all know, that the gentemen up in that big, high building are great and wise, but in some ways they are so different. They make it so painfully plain to the simple exhibitor who ventures to call there, that they want no further relations of any but the two-dollars-a-week-by-mail kind . . . , but this is getting away from the subject in hand.

There isn't an exhibitor in the land, who has not more than once felt a fierce desire to change some parts of a reel, with an axe if necessary, but once the little pictures get on the celluloid it is too late. We could whisper something into the actor or actress's ear, that would be very much to their advantage. Likewise the director might be surprised into doing somethng he had not counted on, when he started in the game. How often have I heard dear and loyal patrons say, when a certain trade mark was flashed on the screen "Oh, it's a ———, I don't like their way of doing this, that or the other thing? If the exhibitor cares to draw such a man or woman out, he puts himself in the way for a lot of information, that ought to be worth at least ten dollars a word. The right kind of veteran exhibitor ought to be a kind of encyclopedia of useful knowledge to the film maker.

Do you know that there are still big fortunes to be made in your end of the game, if you will only for the sake of Holy Michael stick to quality. Some of the old time makers are falling down badly just now in the matter of quality. You know what a stickler I have always been for Pathe's. They knew in the exchange that my loudest holler died down to a soft groan every time they handed me a Pathe. What a change, Theodosius, what a "horrible mutation" as they would say in Boston. I saw a picture of theirs the other day "Over the Cliff" and a Max comedy. By the sacred typewriter, but it was awful. The "drama," an old revamp of one of their earliest pieces, and the comedy a veritable sleep compeller, when it did not provoke something besides sleep. What did the old fighter say about war? You must have three things—money, money, money. Adapted for you people that means: Quality. To find quality in some of the recent pictures it would be necessary to revise the table of chemical formulas and invent new fractions—it's so near to nothing.

I would like to write more, but you know how it is when the motor car is impatiently waiting. We are going to Mount McGregor, to see the cottage where U. S. Grant spent his last days on earth. It's a long and arduous journey and it's hot, but I positively assure you, as I watch them stock the car, we will not suffer from the exhibitor's arch enemy—thirst.

O. E.

RE-OPENING OF PARK THEATER, BROOKLYN.

People in the vicinity of the Park Theater at Fifth Avenue and Fifteenth Street, Brooklyn, N. Y., are pleased at the re-opening of this excellent moving picture house, well known for its refined program and pleasing surroundings. Mr. Germain, the proprietor, is more ambitious than ever to give exhibitions of the highest order. Knowing this, an audience of appreciative people always fills the auditorium. The most important additions made during the vacation are two large electroliers—one on each side of the screen—which are lighted during the changing of reels, giving a most attractive array of colors, tending to make the few minutes' wait one of relief and pleasure.

Souvenirs marked the opening, and thirst-refreshing beverages were free to all comers. The program was an excellent one, including Pathe's "Current Events," which are proving immensely popular; "The Inventor" (Gaumont), "The Ruling Passion" (Biograph), "The Sardine Industry" (Lubin), were the latest pictures, which, with others, proved a most acceptable exhibition. The musical parts of the program were in keeping with the reputation of the house and, accordingly, well pleasing. Proprietor Germain takes good care that his place does not deteriorate with time, but, on the contrary, continues to maintain a standard of value so that not only are his patrons pleased, but the value of the moving picture as a real entertainer is increased. There is no doubt that the Park Theater will realize the prosperity it richly deserves.

CATSKILL MOUNTAIN PLAYHOUSE.

The Wauwanda, the largest and finest theater in the Catskills, opened to good business not long ago. The house is located at Haines Falls, N. Y., in the heart of the mountains. It has a capacity of 1,000 and is fitted with every convenience for its patrons.

The motion picture end of the business is in charge of Ralph Weyant Brill, proprietor of the Ideal Amusement Company, of Kingston, N. Y. Direct current is supplied by the Wauwanda's own power plant.

Rusk & Andrews are the proprietors and are now using four reels, with occasional vaudeville and a 3-piece orchestra.

Selig Entertains

Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association of Illinois Visits Selig Polyscope Company's Plant.

By James S. McQuade.

ABOUT 250 exhibitors, most of them from Chicago, and some from outlying points who chanced to be in the city, were initiated in the mysteries of film making and production at the big Selig plant Friday, August 25. It all came about through an invitation extended the members of the Exhibitors' Association of Illinois by Wm. N. Selig several weeks ago. Licensed and independent exhibitors were about evenly represented.

The turnout was a credit to the local organization and to the exhibition business generally. A long line of automobiles started promptly at 10 o'clock in the morning, from the Masonic Temple Building, Randolph and State streets, and paraded through the Loop district, the cars being tastefully decorated with flags and banners. Every one in the party wore a white silk badge, which bore in blue letters the legend, "Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association of Illinois. Off for Selig's."

When the first car in the line reached Claremont Avenue and Irving Park Boulevard, the occupants faced a Selig camera that did not cease its clicking until the last had sped past, the incident being the first step in the preparation of a delightful surprise that was sprung on the visitors a few hours later.

The reception was held in the spacious and handsome offices in the new building, Mr. Selig and Mr. Tom Nash fairly beaming with pleasure as they welcomed their guests of the day. As it was impossible to conduct all the visitors through the plant at the same time, they were subdivided into several smaller parties, each being in charge of a member of the Selig staff. In this way, in succession, each party was taken through the menagerie, the stables, the machine shop, the carpenters' shop, property shop, wardrobe department, the old studio, the perforating, printing, developing, washing, drying and finishing rooms of the factory, the vault and thence, through an underground tunnel to the new plant, viewing the new boiler and power house on the way.

Arriving in the basement of the new plant, the visitors were shown the machinery installed for the cooling and heating systems (which govern the entire plant), at a cost of $20,000. The first floor, which contains the general offices, the new carpenter shop and stock room, was next inspected. On the second floor the eyes of the visitors bulged as they examined the modern conveniences provided for the members of the Eastern stock companies. Tastefully furnished dressing rooms for ladies and men, with lavatories and bathrooms connected, stage director's rooms, camera men's rooms, reading rooms, library, laboratory, etc., all evoked praise and expressions of surprise.

The new studio, on the third floor of the new plant, was reserved as the climax for the sightseers. With a floor space of 80 by 125 feet, this imposing structure has nearly 14,000 square feet of glass on its roof, one side and gables. Several street scenes can be built in it at the same time, and large masses of people can be assembled on its floor, as the scenes may require. For the benefit of those who have not been able to visit the Selig plant, it may be stated here that the various buildings have a floor space that slightly exceeds one and seven-tenths acres, the grounds comprising about six and one-half acres.

The sightseeing over, the visitors were put to work; but it was work that meant fun to the men who hitherto have confined their attention to the showing of pictures. They were asked to volunteer their services in picture making, in several mob scenes of a feature film, now being produced by one of Selig's Eastern companies. "A Run on the Bank" is the title, and one can easily imagine how a crowd of over 200 picture exhibitors, with their keen appreciation of realism and action, would behave under the circumstances.

The first mob scene was enacted in the new studio, in the interior of the bank. After Producer Otis Turner had drilled the men a little, the word for action was given. And what a human maelstrom eddied and swirled in an instant! Dan Mulvey, a bulky gentleman, who has the cut of a trained athlete, was swept off his feet, and every square inch of his anatomy was subjected to a pressure of human feet and wooden flooring that would have reduced the ordinary man to a thing of two dimensions. But Dan came up smiling and dust covered, and all ready to take part in the outdoor scenes. These showed the storming of the bank from the outside. How the exhibitors performed their parts will be seen some weeks hence, when "A Run on the Bank" is released. That in which a huge, black-maned lion appears at the bank window will bring a thrill, if not a spasm.

Another scene in the same film, the great circus scene, was enacted by the visitors, under Producer Turner's directions. In this instance there was the need of young ladies to add the tinge of realism, and so the girls from the Selig factory were called upon. Out they came, a bevy of as bright-eyed damsels as ever gazed on sawdust ring, or smiled roguishly over a glass of pop. I believe—for I participated in this mix-up myself, not being proof to the blandishments of one of the aforesaid damsels, who was anxious to secure a young, good-looking partner to escort her to the show—that the two circus scenes of this film will be "some pumpkin." Look out for George Hines, Dan Mulvey, Mr. Tishart and Sam Schiller (the first three at the main entrance and Sam as the ticket taker). They worked so hard and earnestly that Producer Turner took compassion on them and permitted them to take off their coats. No circus shark could use more cunning wiles, or be more successful in "shortchanging" than were practiced by Hines, Mulvey and Tishart. I was thankful that I had only stage money in my pocket. I regretted this fact later, however. That was when I discovered that my blue-eyed partner had called me a "tight-wad," because I had failed to buy her a toy balloon or a glass of real pop. Don't forget to watch John Miller, the gentlemanly ticket taker at the left side entrance.

After their strenuous efforts in the production of a film the exhibitors and other guests present were informed by Producer Turner, in a neat speech of thanks for their intelligent assistance, that a Dutch kommers awaited them in a garden nearby. The repast was thoroughly enjoyed under lofty shade trees and in trellised arbors, all pronouncing the surroundings ideal and reminiscent of a good old country picnic, where good will and congenial association presided at the board.

Announcement was next made that a still picture would be taken of the gathering, on the Byron Street side of the new plant, in front of the general offices. Thither the party streamed, and the result of the photographer and the engraver's art is shown in the accompanying illustration.

Just before the camera was operated, F. O. Nielsen in a short, pithy speech, acknowledged, in behalf of his brother members of the association, their deep appreciation of Mr. Selig's hospitality and thanked him for a most enjoyable time. The educational value of the event to exhibitors was dwelt upon by Mr. Nielsen. "We came here with great expectations and found that they have been far exceeded," said Mr. Nielsen. "Whether those of us present remain in the picture business or not, we shall remember what we have seen here on this occasion, until our dying days, and I ask all present to join in three rousing cheers for our generous host, Mr. Wm. N. Selig."

Mr. Selig then invited all to view "Lost in the Jungle" in the exhibition room, in the new plant. This remarkable animal picture, the last of the great African series of films, which will be released some time in October, was received with loud applause. At the close, Mr. Twist, of the Selig publicity department, announced that, if those present remained in their seats for a few moments, a film showing the arrival of the automobiles at the plant, a few hours before, would be run off. This was done and prolonged cheering greeted the pictures, exhibitors being astonished at the shortness of the time taken to get the film in readiness.

The committee on arrangements is to be congratulated on the happy manner in which the members of the association were assembled at the plant. The members were: A. H. Hill, D. L. Mulvey, Sid. Smith, F. O. Nielsen, I. L. Gelder, J. A. Alcock, C. C. Whelan and C. A. Anderson.

Among other guests present were George Kleine, John Hardin, John B. Rock, Schuyler Colfax, of the Eastman Company, Messrs. Mock and Woodward, of Motography, and Claude Erby, of the New York Clipper. The Chicago press was also well represented.

Noticeable among the city officials present were Sergeant O'Connor, head of the Chicago Censor Board, with Mr. Tishard and other members of the Board; Building Commissioner Knight and Chief Inspector of Theaters Ed. Kelling and his assistant, all of whom were delighted with the events of the day.

WIT ON SCREEN STOPS PANIC.

"Don't hurry out; only the wicked are afraid of thunder." This slide hastily prepared and flashed on a moving picture screen stopped a panic in Hartford, Conn. During a severe thunderstorm the audience became startled. Ushers tried their best to keep them from going out, but it took the operator's quick wit to turn the panic into a laugh.

CONDEMNS "SIXTUS THE FIFTH."

Augusta Knights of Columbus Say It Is Historically Incorrect and an Insult to Catholics.

Bearing out the contention of the Moving Picture World that pictures calculated to cast odium upon any religious sect should not be made or displayed, we submit to our readers the correspondence between the Consolidated Film & Supply Company, of Atlanta, Ga., and the Committee of the Knights of Columbus, representing the United Catholic societies of Augusta, Ga., protesting against the exhibition of the Ambrosio subject, "Sixtus the Fifth":

Augusta, Ga., August 23, 1911.

Consolidated Film & Supply Co.,
Atlanta, Ga.

Gentlemen:—Several days ago there was shown, at the Dreamland Photo Playhouse here, a picture alleging to be an incident in the life of Pope Sixtus V, which was very obnoxious to every Catholic patron of this popular little theater.

In behalf of various Catholic societies of Augusta, which include practically every Catholic layman in the city, the undersigned, acting as a committee, write you, asking that there be no further insult to our religious convictions in the films handled and distributed by you. We believe that such representations, while due to an ignorance of history, are harmful to the depiction of truth, and bring our faith into disrepute through injustice. But even if the incident were true, there is no reason why a thing offensive to so many of the patrons of your photoplay houses should be portrayed. Being untrue, it is both insulting and malicious.

We believe that your sense of fairness, as well as your business judgment, will indicate the folly of thus annoying so large a percentage of photoplay patrons, and respectfully call your attention to the matter.

Thanking you in advance for your courtesy, we beg to remain,

Yours very truly,

JAMES J. FARRELL,
JNO. L. ARMSTRONG,
THOS. P. DAVIS,
Committee.

August 26, 1911.

Mr. J. J. Matthews, Grand Knight,
Augusta, Ga.

Dear sir:—We have before us your esteemed communication, under date of August 23rd, relative to a picture entitled, "Sixtus the Fifth," which was shown at the Dreamland Photoplay house, your city.

Wish to say, first, that we are sorry indeed to know that this picture was offensive to the Catholic societies of Augusta, and wish to say that this is the first letter of criticism that we have received concerning this particular film and are very grateful to you for having called our attention to same.

We wish to explain fully our position concerning this film, as well as all others which we supply to our customers. We do not manufacture the films, but buy them from the Motion Picture Distributing & Sales Company, No. 111 East 14th St., New York City, which company represents the sale of all film produced by the Independent manufacturers. The film in question being from one of the manufacturers represented by them. Each picture we buy from said Moving Picture Distributing & Sales Company, is exhibited before what is known as a National Board of Censors, which is comprised of representatives of the various religious societies and institutions, and we buy only such pictures as are passed by this Board of Censors.

We are sending your original letter to the Motion Picture World, New York, which is the medium through which all manufacturers, as well as exhibitors, are reached when it comes to a matter of criticism of films, etc. We are sending this letter, requesting that they publish it for the information of all exhibitors, censors, manufacturers, and in fact, everyone connected with the moving picture industry, requesting that they also send you a copy of this paper, containing their editorial concerning this particular film.

Again thanking you for calling our attention to this, and trusting we will be able to suppress all pictures of such a character that could possibly offend yours or any other religious society, we beg to remain,

Very truly yours,

CONSOLIDATED FILM & SUPPLY COMPANY.

The position of the Moving Picture World on pictures of this character was expressed at length and with vigor in the issue of August 19 under the heading, "No Sectarian Films," and needs not to be reiterated at this time. The above correspondence is a sufficient endorsement of that position to need no further comment.

SUNDAY CLOSING LOSES IN WICHITA, KAN.

After a strenuous effort to enforce the closing of picture theaters on Sunday in Wichita, Kan., a decision against the Sunday closing ordinance has been handed down by Justice McCandless to the effect that the law against the opening of business places on Sunday does not include picture shows. The matter was brought to the attention of the court by habeas corpus proceedings to remove from custody Clayton T. Cunningham, one of Wichita's picture theater managers, arrested under the ordinance. In commenting upon the ordinance, Justice McCandless said: "The ordinance in question prohibits the operation of butcher shops and other similar places of business. Now, it is clear to me that a moving picture show is not a 'similar place of business.' The shows are at liberty to run on Sundays so far as that ordinance is concerned."

Speaking for the theater managers, Mr. Cunningham declared: "All the moving picture shows will open for business next Sunday, and there is no law to stop them. We expect to furnish only the highest class of entertainment. No questionable films will be run. There will be no graphophone music on the street. We are going to give the people strictly high class entertainment, especially on Sunday."

Picture Trade in Other Lands

United States Consular Reports Note Peculiar Features of the Business—Information for Manufacturers.

Good Suggestions from Malta.

(From Consul James Oliver Laing, Valetta.)

Badly edited moving picture films produced here have caused ridicule, or have not been understood. This poor preparation is less noticeable in the French and Italian films of their own production shown here. German films I have seen here are not so well edited as French and Italian films.

When foreign houses secure the rights to American films they sometimes write in explanations and headlines to elucidate the situations in the language of the country where the film is to be shown. These explanations are sometimes ridiculous and at times positively harmful. A good example of the harmful kind was shown here recently. It was a cowboy and Indian scene of intrigue, deception, and fighting. The Indians were in the traditional Indian costume and the cowboys wore their costume, rather exaggerated for the occasion. The label of the film stated that this picture had been taken in the United States, and that the actors wore the American national costume.

Another similar case is cited. My informant says that a scene of a holdup in the "cow country," in which several men were killed, a chase on horseback took place, and a lot of shooting was indulged in, had as a sub-title, the statement that this was an event in regular life in America. I do not believe any American firm labeled its products in this untrue and harmful fashion and can only suggest that American firms disposing of films to foreign firm should take steps to see that the editing is more intelligently done.

Incorrect Translations Do Harm.

Another means of making a film ridiculous is to send a film edited in one language to a country using another language and leaving the local advertising to the local manager of a small picture show, who makes translations of the editing that produce weird results. A foreign firm recently sent a film here entitled, "Customs of the Indian Castes." One picture theater here had it headlined as, "Customs of the Chaste Indians." After seeing the picture, one wondered just what the moral code of the Indians had to do with it. Another theater here went further, and its announcer gave to the film the title, "The Costumes of the Indian Castes." The "costumes" of the Indians consisted, with monotonous uniformity, of about 4 yards of muslin each. Those who saw the picture must have wondered that the company which made the film should have taken the trouble to photograph such a lack of variety.

On another occasion an Italian film had a headline indicating that a man had entered a girl's home and carried her away by force. By an incorrect translation into English a disgusting expression was thrown on the canvas which caused many women to leave the theater. The pictures themselves were perfectly moral, in fact pointed a moral, and were of a high grade of workmanship.

Methods Need Improvement.

As it is practically impossible here to know the methods of American firms in sending out their films, the bad results are pointed out with the hope that they can be remedied for the good of American manufacturers.

In general, it may be added that films showing any of the natural wonders of the United States are enjoyed by the people of Malta. Pictures, too, of American street life are enjoyed. A recent picture of the entrance to Brooklyn Bridge was a great success. American humorous pictures do not, as a rule, please so much as Italian and French pictures. The subjects of the latter are better known to the Maltese and the customs of Italy and France better understood. American "horseplay" humor is incomprehensible to them. At a recent exhibit of the Jeffries-Johnson prizefight pictures, Johnson is represented as striking with a board of various newspaper men and others who had been captured by the crowd around the negro's camp and brought struggling good-naturedly before him. This was perfectly incomprehensible to the Maltese, who inquired politely, but with intense interest, "Why is Signor Johnson striking the white gentlemen with that club?"

"Horseplay" in connection with an American college hazing scene failed to arouse a smile here recently. The spectators did not know what it meant.

Character of Presentations in Malta.

It is the custom in Malta to give three films. The first is usually rather long and is a love story or a drama. The second is usually a picture of some natural wonder or descriptive of an industry or a travel picture. The third is a farce. In the latter case, Italian and French pictures are popular. In more cases than not, the picture brings in at some stage a chase in which one after another joins and ridiculous falls and other situations occur.

There is music and each performance is begun with really good music. Usually there are long pieces. A longer time is given to the music at each performance than is usual in the United States. Admission is 4 cents or 6 cents when there is one vaudeville act.

Moving pictures are popular in Malta, where there is very little amusement for the people after working hours. There are half a dozen moving picture shows within 200 yards of Queens Square in Valetta, and a number of theaters in Sliema across the Marsamuscetto Harbor.

Pictures in Turkey.

(From Consul General G. Bie Ravndal, Constautinople.)

Within the last two years quite a number of theaters giving exclusively moving picture performances have sprung up in Constautinople as well as in the seaport cities of the empire. There are now about 10 such places in Constantinople. The price of entrance varies from 3 piasters (13 cents) in the gallery to 10 piasters (44 cents) in the orchestra. The films are generally changed every three days.

There being such a scarcity of theaters in Turkey, the inability and expense of procuring available and satisfactory plays and actors and the varied linguistic classes of people that have to be catered to give to the moving picture business an era of great prosperity.

The majority of films are imported from France. The next largest number come from Italy. America and England come next in importance and a few films are imported from Germany.

One company imports most of the films and loans them to the various theaters in the empire. A French firm also has a local representative here. The approximate total amount of films imported by the former company for the current year is $60,000 and by the latter $10,000. To this must be added the various films that are imported direct from the makers by the large theaters, the definite amount being impossible to ascertain. Generally speaking, $75,000 would cover the total imports of films in Turkey. Few of the films are sold outright; in some cases when the film becomes shop worn it is sold to local dealers for 10 centimes per meter (1.93 cents per 3.28 feet).

Official Regulation in Austria.

(From Consul General Charles Denby, Vienna.)

There are no special regulations and decrees concerning the censorship of cinematograph films in Austria. The right of the police authorities to censorship is based on the general features and organization of the police department of the year 1850, according to which they must watch over all public productions and provide suitably for the maintenance of public peace, order, and decency, and prevent everything that might excite public displeasure.

On this basis all shows, including cinematograph performances, are subjected to inspection, and all owners of cinematograph theaters may present only such films as are declared by the police department to be admissible. The films are shown to officers of the police by representatives of the film factories before they are given out to the cinematograph theaters. In examining the films, the first point is to see whether their contents violate the general regulations of the penal law—for instance, that they do not present treasonable actions, incite hatred and contempt of classes of society, and that they do not contain gross indecencies or glorify criminal deeds.

Furthermore, from the standpoint of public offense, the pictures may not present barbarous scenes, such as executions, with all details, acts of cruelty, profanation of religious usages or ceremonies, ill-treatment of animals, etc. The films must also be shown to representatives of educational authorities, who give their opinion as to whether these films are adapted to productions visited by children. The practice of the police is, on the whole, very liberal, and only veritably repulsive and indecent films are prohibited.

China.

(From Consul General George E. Anderson, Hongkong.)

The Imperial Maritime Customs returns for China do not specify the imports of films for moving pictures into China, and Hongkong has no customs returns whatever, the result being that it is impossible to give any figures as to the present use of films in moving picture establishments either in Hongkong or in China. However, it may be said that there is a good and a growing business in all such lines of goods both in this district and in Chinese ports as well. In Hongkong there are half a dozen large cinematograph establishments and there is a large and growing business in private entertainment outfits. These entertainments generally are commencing to appeal to the Chinese, and owing to their comparatively low price of admission they are within the reach of a great population. There are indications that the immediate future may offer a great opportunity in the interior ports of China in this line, but to establish such means of entertainments in Chinese cities generally would require a campaign of education and considerable capital.

The cinematograph business in Hongkong and the lower China coast is largely in the hands of Portuguese, former residents of Macao, who also have practically complete control of the skating rink business and nearly all similar enterprises. They lean to French films as a matter of preference, though English films are common because of the fact that this is a British community and must have some British scenes. Some American films are used, but they are obtained mostly through European exchanges. The sale of the European goods rather than American seems to have been altogether a matter of convenience and due largely to the fact that few American film houses have reached after the business in this portion of the world.

Guatemala.

(From Consul General George A. Bucklin, Jr., Guatemala City.)

An inquiry has been received as to the outlook for success in touring Central America with a motion picture outfit, showing films depicting scenes and methods connected with manufacturing in the United States.

In general it may be said that it is improbable that such motion picture exhibitions would appeal strongly to the public here, at least not to the extent of causing them to attend night after night such exhibitions, especially if an admission fee were charged. On the other hand, not to charge an admission fee would be likely to discredit the matter with the public. A large number of industrial films could probably be sold if interspersed with others of a comic or theatrical nature. Without question, these industrial films would advertise the firm they represent, as the public here is very fond of motion pictures.

The success or failure of such a project would depend very largely upon the ability and tact with which exhibitions of this nature were conducted in these countries.

As to whether the time is right for such exhibitions it would seem that the time could not be better, as the motion picture show has become very popular, as there is practically no other kind of performance.

Herbold's Acme Theater, New Castle, Pa.

A Day with Simpson

Moving Picture World Man Initiated Into the Pleasures of Posing for Slides.

By A. Mac Arthur.

DID it ever occur to you while sitting in a theater looking at a set of illustrated song slides projected on the screen that the artists posing for the pictures enjoyed the biggest piece of graft ever invented in photographic work and earned their money easier than anyone you ever saw; that the whole thing was very easy, and that you would like to try a hand at it yourself, for you were sure that you could do just as good, if not better than most of those you have seen? Well, that's just how it struck me, and I was determined to try it myself if ever the opportunity was presented.

My chance to pose for a real photographer came when it was least expected. Mr. Simpson, of song slide fame, acquainted me with the fact that Mrs. Simpson and himself had just finished writing the words and music for a song entitled "I Fondly Dream, Dear One, of You," Mrs. Simpson having written the words and Mr. Simpson, the music.

Alfred L. Simpson.

Arrangements were made to pose the song and I was invited to accompany the party to get an idea how to work it out. Therefore, one fine morning, we all started out in Mr. Simpson's touring car, having the Newark Bay Club in Bayonne, N. J., as our objective point, a most ideal spot for work of this kind.

After the party had lunched and inspected the house and grounds, the proper locations were picked out for the backgrounds and the first real work began when the model, Miss Markey, announced that she had changed her dress, powdered her nose and fussed herself up in general and was all ready for business. It was then, only, that I found out I had been booked to play the role of the loving lover, and believe me, though I thoroughly enjoyed myself, I had decided at the end of the day that a model and her or his job was not to be envied, for often, just as the photographer had arranged a very pretty and catchy pose in which either one or the other stood with arms outstretched and eyes riveted on a certain spot for several minutes, the sun would disappear, flies would light on our noses or something would happen to change the whole situation, and the photographer and the models would again have to arrange for another pose, all of which takes time and is very trying on one's nerves and patience, especially when you are trying to look your best. Just then the camera man would ask you to be "natural," as this is one of the secrets of properly posing an illustrated song. After a little patience, however, you grasp the idea and things run along more or less smoothly.

The Party Enroute.

Just as it is in every other line of picture work, superiority and artistic feeling counts, and right there is where Simp-

The World Correspondent's Busy Minute.

Miss "Phil" Markey.

son's slides get the jump on many of the other makes, for Mr. Simpson and his assistant, Mr. Yukelson, have a knack of locating places and selecting models possessing both fine appearance, photographic experience and ability, in all of which my team mate, Miss Markey, excelled. In arranging the various poses Mr. Simpson and Mr. Yukelson cannot always follow out the scenario as laid out in advance, but accept suggestions from their models, which appeared to me to be wise. For instance, when the song called for the man to hold the girl in a loving embrace, she did not feel at all natural in the position in which she was placed and requested permission to alter her pose accordingly, which not only appealed to her, but appeared more natural and to me it seemed much more realistic.

The Simpson finished product needs little if any introduction, for in every house in which moving pictures have been exhibited, so have Simpson's celebrated slides, and to-day Alfred L. Simpson enjoys the reputation of being the pioneer and one of the best slide manufacturers, and though he has been reported as being seriously ill with little or no hope for recovery, we have a photograph of him with this yarn, well as ever, and driving his own car. Directly behind him is Mrs. Simpson, who originates the beautiful coloring in Simpson's slides and beside her the pretty little girl is Miss Markey, who posed for the song.

It is a well-known fact that a song properly illustrated and properly sung is as much liked by an audience as a moving picture and is a relief to the eye from the flicker of the machine. In fact, the moving picture helps the illustrated song and the illustrated song helps the moving picture, especially when properly presented with good pictures, artistic posing and a good singer. Some songs require as much preparation as a moving picture; the models have to be carefully selected, properly costumed and the song has to be carefully selected for illustration and then a proper plot or scenario has to be laid out to produce the proper effect.

Then, there is the technical part, requiring fine photography, the making of good slides and last, but not least, the proper and beautiful coloring which has to be done entirely by hand. Mr. Simpson is also the inventor of the Simpson Solar screen and holds patents which cover all metallic coated screens for projection, which also enhance the beauty of moving pictures and slides and enable the exhibitor to give performances in well-lighted and properly ventilated auditoriums. The illustrated song slide properly made has come to stay and will always be necessary as a part of the picture show. They certainly require much more artistic ability and deep thought than we had any idea of.

AN ORIGINAL CRITIQUE.

The following witty review was printed in one of the Baltimore papers: "It would be hard to find a better example of the possibilities of moving picture reproduction than the presentation of Dante's Inferno, which began a week's engagement at the Auditorium Theater last night. Baltimore is the first city in America to see this picture. With such wonderful vividness and minute attention to detail is the story of the poet's conception of Hell told that the very horror of it all fascinates one. That this is so shows that human nature under the surface is much the same as in Mediaeval days.

"Almost as interesting as the pictures themselves is their varied effect upon the spectators. There is the giggling slip of a girl, whose escort wonders audibly if Dante's 'kimono is made of asbestos'; the student of Dante with the Ibsenesque pose; the bibulous looking individual who makes a dash for the nearest bar at the end of the first 'act' and never returns; the impressionable woman whose 'Ahs' and 'Ohs' puncture the silence, and a dozen or more other distinct types, each a study in itself."

There is no doubt about it, the pictures do "grow on you."

THE SCENARIO, OCEAN GROVE, N. J.

The Scenario Theater was especially built for Mr. Salo Ansbach, the lessee and manager, by the Ocean Grove Camp Meeting Association, and is a radical departure for the Methodist Episcopal Church. as hitherto this organization has frowned on all amusements of a theatrical character. It has a seating capacity of about 600, and is located on the Boardwalk, fronting Westbury Lake. It is one of the few picture houses in this country playing the pictures with an orchestra, each member of which is an accomplished musician and all graduates of European conservatories. All the attendants are in uniform. The Mirror screen is used and is giving the greatest satisfaction. Two Power's No. 6 projecting machines and a Kleine dissolver are used. The operator's booth is asbestos board. The whole equipment was installed by Harry Mackie, 853 Broadway, New York City, and everything is of the best. Three operators are employed. A continuous show from 10 a. m. to 10. 30 p. m. is given. Under the genial management of Mr. Ansbach the house is doing capacity business.

Observations by our Man About Town

THE tie of goodfellowship between the motion picture makers and the patrons of the picture theaters will not be complete until the former either abolish or modify the rule against disclosing the identity of the players. There was a time when a polite refusal of the information was accepted in a kindly spirit. It was taken as being supported by some justification. That was in the comparatively early period of the pictures, when the audiences did not appear to take so much interest in the personality of the people who acted the parts. In those days the audiences were apparently seekers of entertainment only and did not seem to care whether the leading man or leading woman was married or not. That may have been the reason in some cases. Possibly the lack of interest in the personal identity of the handsome hero and the beautiful heroine was due to the bad acting of both. This is not at all unlikely, for in the days when most parts were played by amateurs and cheap, stray professionals some of the work was bad enough to deter any curiosity in that direction other than to have warrants sworn out for cruelty to the public.

* * *

But audiences have changed since then. The matinee girls who rave over the handsome actors are now regular patrons of the theater, and I am led to believe that if they are not accommodated with the information they so frequently seek they will become peevish. I met one of these girls and she was quite severe in her criticisms of the film manufacturers for, as she termed it, their silly rules prohibiting the furnishing of names of players to interested patrons of the pictures.

* * *

The sentiments of the young lady I refer to may be better understood when I give them in her own way. "I cannot understand," she said, "why all us girls should be wrongly taken. I come from Trenton, N. J., and we have some very excellent picture shows there. There are four of us girls in a party visiting the shows four or five times a week; sometimes in the afternoon and at others in the evening. No week passes that we do not see most of what we consider the best productions, after reading the announcements. Each one has a preference as to the character of productions. One of us is of a romantic disposition; another is more disposed toward problem plays and consequently takes to pictures having more of a bearing in that direction. I like comedies, but also welcome other good stories. Why, my most intimate chum has the Wild West bee in her bonnet. So you see in one respect are tastes quite different, but we are all interested in the players. No, not unduly so. Players we frequently see become intimates with us and it is quite natural that we should wish to know their names. Such a desire is not unreasonable, nor improper. My mother also frequently sees the pictures and she, too, becomes very anxious to know the name of the players. As an instance, she saw a picture called 'Tho Your Sins be as Scarlet,' and become very much interested in the lady who played the leading rôle; so much so that she endeavored to secure photographs of certain scenes with the intention of having them framed with a portrait of the leading lady. The motives of us girls are the same. We are not of the giddy kind that seek the names of actors because of any sentimentality and desire to write them and dwell upon our admiration. Not in the least. When we go to a theater and see a play with speaking parts, we are furnished with a program giving the cast. I cannot see any objection to giving the same information regarding the picture players. We should not be misunderstood. I know well that the objection to furnishing names has been chiefly on account of a suspected desire on the part of many young women and men to correspond with certain players. There are many such foolish humans, but I assure you there are many in whose favor discrimination can be made with safety. I think it is a good proposition to let the audience and the players become as intimate as common sense and propriety may dictate. Us girls have lots of fun when our particular favorites appear in the pictures, and we would get more enjoyment if we knew the real names of the players and not be obliged to make substitution."

A manufacturer spoken to on the subject said the veil of secrecy is not now as closely drawn as it has been. Managers of theaters have been urging the change for some time, claiming that it would materially increase their business—that it tended to create a steady patronage. At first many of the players were opposed to the disclosure of their identity for professional reasons which have since been pushed aside by the change of sentiment due to the steady influx of the higher class of professional talent into the picture field and the general uplifting of the business. The added dignity, in fact, has made many of them quite anxious to have their identity become known. In these days it is the photoplay, and the impersonators are photoplayers. When they meet and ask each other concerning their engagements you no longer hear them say to those in whom they wish to confide, "I'm doing the dumb for the Edilugraph."

* * *

It is quite true. Much of the secrecy no longer exists. It will soon be a thing of the past. Nearly all the manufacturers are now furnishing large photographs of the stock company members with the respective names on each. As soon as the use of these photos become more general, the anxious inquirers will diminish rapidly in number.

* * *

Many manufacturers are also sending to the exhibitors periodical descriptive pamphlets which fill the aching void when the photos are not in evidence. In these pamphlets the descriptions are preceded by the casts, so that the advantages of the programs are also covered. Some up-to-date managers order an advance supply of these pamphlets. Others reprint the contents in their own house papers, of which I have seen some very excellent specimens.

* * *

Of the photos, let me say, many managers do not go far enough in their use to derive all the advantages to be secured through them. Some are content to make use only of those representing certain favorites, or some particular producing company. This is a mistake. Variety in the display of photos is just as essential as posters. Where a house displays the photos of one company each day the group should be in accord with the feature film of that day. Even where there is a general display of photos issued by all the companies manufacturing the films used by the house it is a good idea to have the frames so arranged that they can be easily removed from place to place and carry out the feature idea. In this manner the photos can be made of continuous advertising advantage to a house aside from the original value attached to them.

* * *

When photos are not displayed and the house does not distribute printed matter showing the casts, the managers can give the names of the players from the pamphlets I have referred to. It would seem that there is little ground left now for complaint that the names cannot be learned, but some people cannot be satisfied. I gave all this dope to a young lady who was "just dying" to learn the names of a half-dozen or more and was told it was not the information she wanted. Her desire was to learn their real names, whether they were married, where their respective home towns were located, etc., etc. When such persistency (Is that the correct term? Impudence is perhaps better) is projected, none can blame the players for seeking seclusion, annoying and a little more amusing. An almost incredible communication was shown me at a studio. It was from a young man of 25 years desiring to pose. He claimed considerable experience on the amateur stage. "Am looking for a job. I can pose like the dickens," he wrote. "I am the living image of one of your actors. I am not one of those conceited actors that dress swell and think they can act; have photos of themselves in all kinds of positions, with letterheads to dazzle the eye, and when it comes to a show-down don't know the difference between disdain and haughtiness. Anyway, the proof of the pudding is in the eating and if you want to give me a try-out just drop a line to (giving his name and address) that's me, Mr. Chairman." The climax of the letter was this: "I earn my living as a bellboy."

Education and Science

THE MOVING PICTURE AS AN EDUCATOR.

Its Possibilities at Last to be Realized.

By Mme. R. G. Dolesé.

THAT the motion picture deserves a place in education has long been the belief of many of our most prominent educators and of some of the humble ones. Who is there in this world who can honestly say they do not care for motion pictures ? That you do not care for certain ones, yes, true enough, but that all motion pictures are outside your liking—well, we doubt it. Probably you have never seen the ones we are thinking about. At any rate, children love them and now, at last, we are going to have an Educational Department that will be able to furnish the films we most desire.

Our greatest men and most prominent writers have long claimed that education "through the eye" is more lasting, more thought-producing than any other method. How many of our great teachers have striven for years to bring before the world the truth that "Seeing is Believing." In colleges and school, nature classes have been formed for travel; the more fortunate ones even going into foreign lands. In all our public schools teachers attempt to take their pupils to visit factories, to see the great working of the work-a-day world, to take them out into the woods to see the trees, the mountains and the rivers, and while all educators believe this to be the most instructive lesson given to the children, from a practical standpoint, it has been found very difficult to accomplish.

Do you recall, as a child, the doubts that were foremost in your mind when you were told about some great natural phenomenon you had never seen? What does a mountain mean to a child who has never traveled beyond the boundary of the plains? What does the ocean mean to a child who dwells in the interior? A name only. And so we use pictures, photographs, drawings and paintings and they are helpful. But think what it means to see a motion picture! A seacoast, for instance, with its great rocky beach, long stretches of sand and the waves beating themselves against the rocks, mountain high; or, as I saw the other day, great waves dashing over the bow of a steamer in mid-ocean. What would all this mean to a child, a man or woman. There are plenty who never travel beyond the boundary of their home State, but who, going to a motion picture theater, come away impressed and amazed by a street scene of a great metropolis with its masses of humanity, cars and vehicles rushing here and there. Their minds have been opened to a new and wonderful train of thought that greatly helps over the road they are traveling. For we all know that the more we can put into our minds, stored up in the pictures of our memory album, the more we have to give to those about us and the greater is our enjoyment.

An Educational Film Bureau.

The Educational Department of the General Film Company is preparing to place before lecturers, programs for an evening's entertainment, covering the subject on which they are to speak, natural science, physical science, geography, historical studies, travels, literature. Pause a moment to think what it will mean to a student of ancient, mediaeval or modern literature, to have the poem or story depicted before his eyes, produced in a masterful way by splendid actors and actresses. It will be to the person unable to travel, a working out of the old adage about Mohammed and the mountain and we are bringing the mountain. We will bring also foreign countries and their industries, engineering feats of world-wide interest, great canals in process of construction. Is there anyone who is not interested in the Panama Canal or the canal which is being built in the western part of New York State? Would not the teacher as well as the pupil welcome the story of animals and plants and even human lives that tells a story exactly as it is happening when the picture is taken? Or think what it would mean to a small farmer gazing for the first time upon the vast expanses of Western corn fields with the great machinery now used in planting and gathering the same; or the Western farmer gazing for the first time upon the ingenuity of the man in the East who has to raise his corn on a rocky soil.

Truth is what we want in teaching. I do not agree with an educator who says that education is to-day made too easy. In this great hustling, bustling period of our existence we must take things quickly and the time does not allow of children remaining as long in their schools as when there were fewer inhabitants on this globe; so, if we can teach what we all must know by motion pictures in the school, will we not then accomplish a great step toward higher education.

With this thought in view the Educational Department of the General Film Company has planned and put together all the forces they could, and now has arranged a comprehensive catalogue of educational film subjects which is in the hands of the printer and will be available at no distant date. This, I know, will be welcome news to Moving Picture World readers. Just as soon as the catalogue is ready and the details for the distribution of the films have been arranged full particulars will be given on the Educational page.

BOYS AND THE PICTURES.

In a recent communication from England the interesting statement is made that a firm of publishers of juvenile literature, finding that a special boys' paper with a circulation of 400,000 monthly copies, had dwindled down to about 100,000 copies; also that a profit of 20,000 pounds (100,000 dollars) per annum had been completely wiped out. A search for the cause of this singular state of things revealed the fact that the boys were turning their attention and their money to moving pictures; in a conflict between pictures and literature the pictures were preferred.

While such an exact example may not have been brought to the front in this country, there is no doubt that the conditions here are practically the same. Not only is it an old truth that in books the illustrations receive first attentiin, it was little supposed, however, that the illustrations would some day so grow as to largely supersede and partly eliminate the literary. That it is to so great an extent doing so is an important fact, one that cannot be ignored, indeed it must be dealt with. In addition to the knowledge that the pictures were a source of pleasure to boys, there now comes the added knowledge that they are a source of knowledge of the book kind, yet distinct and apart from anything that belongs strictly to the school-book and school-room. By a singular coincidence the writer of this page recently made an appeal for "pictures for boys"; it now appears that the appeal was not only timely, but necessary.

The value of the moving picture is again hereby augmented. Every day brings increasing demands and responsibilities which are not being met. Without doubt there is not far distant an upheaval in the manufacturing world. It is a truism that what the people demand they will get, therefore cinematography will perforce be compelled to come out from the theater into the world of usefulness, enlightenment, and culture, and show educationals. It is too big for its present handling and yearns for a power to do it justice.

THE PICTURE NEWSPAPER.

This week's edition of "The Pathé Weekly" is certainly a most royal number. Beginning with a picture of the Czar of Russia at the unveiling of a monument erected to the memory of those sailors who preferred death rather than surrender to the Japanese. There follows the last appearance in public of the Dowager Queen Pia of Portugal accompanied by the King of Italy.

Other pictures are those of the King of Roumania entering one of his principalities, being received by the Mayor, and the King of the Belgians with Crown Prince Leopold attending a royal function. Admiral Togo, of Japan, is shown paying his respects to the Mayor of the City of New York, and the Crown Prince of Germany visiting in a foreign country in state. The assembling of the American war vessels off Provincetown for the naval maneuvers, with views on board some of the vessels, evokes patriotic sentiments. The next picture shows the training of police dogs in Germany completes a most world-wide series.

The extraordinary scope covered by this week's edition is certainly praiseworthy and combines a most thoroughly instructive and interesting series of events. The last picture is that of the Delgates at the Moving Picture League of America in Cleveland, Ohio. This picture is in strange contrast to the usual stiff picture of conventions to which we are accustomed. Although assembled in group form there is much animation for all. Remember, there is no need for the "still a minute please" of the photographer. One delegate, however, seems to have forgotten that if not necessary to "keep still," neither is it necessary to abuse the occasion by giving a voluntary exhibition of rudeness. This particular delegate is shown in what is known as a most insolent attitude, with his thumb to his nose and his fingers extended with that movement in which insult, vulgarity and indecency are combined. If he were back in the crowd he might pardonably be supposed that his ill behavior would not be noticed, but he is in the front row, in the center group, where the officials are usually found; he is also standing but second from the lady who occupies the position of honor next to President Neff. Besides abusing his office as delegate, he uses the Pathe picture to unwillingly exhibit something they would not otherwise tolerate; furthermore, he is sending all over the United States a picture of the supposedly cream of moving picture men with himself in the front behaving with an indecency which must bring odium upon his associates. What must the good public think of such associations as this? It would seem that for their own sakes President Neff should humbly ask the Pathe people to cut off this the last picture on the reel, for, truly, "if thy hand offend thee, cut it off" is good advice here applied to a moving picture.

PROVING THE THEATER.

A visit to the New York Fourteenth Street "Bijou Dream" for the purpose of recording the moving pictures shown as an evidence of the "signs of the times" proved very satisfying. Five new releases made up the program, every one of which was a most creditable picture; they were: "The Winds of Fate" (Edison), "The Runaway Leopard" and "Chrysanthemums" (Pathe), "Captain Barnacle's Baby" (Vitagraph), and "Saved from the Snow" (Selig). With such an evenly balanced program as this any audience must be pleased; drama, comedy and scenic, each having its place without the slightest incongruity.

As a comedy "The Runaway Leopard" is decidedly novel. A young leopard at large seems to have a flavor of danger, but its meanderings in an artist's studio, the dining room of a private house and in a millinery store prove more humorous than dangerous. "Chrysanthemums" is a beautiful colored display of this famous flower and is attractive. The other stories receiving notice elsewhere do not need special mention here. It is a pleasure to report so acceptable a combination of good pictures as those named.

Mr. James G. Piratsky, in addition to being manager and proprietor of a high-class picture house, is the editor of a daily newspaper in Watsonville, Cal. By this means the moving picture, in at least one instance, receives its just dues from the press. In a recent issue the editor published an editorial drawing a conclusion between the empty theater gallery and the full picture house. Mr. Piratsky also states that he has tried vaudeville in connection with his moving pictures, but it proved a big failure. What the people want is good, clear moving pictures.

Kalem Company in Ireland, in Costume for "Colleen Bawn," Taking Shelter While Waiting for a Rain to Cease.

Projection Department

Edited by F. H. RICHARDSON

More Foolishness.—In August, 1910, the National Fire Protection Association appointed a committee consisting of ten members, Mr. T. B. Sellers, Chairman, to compile a set of ordinances designed to reduce fire risk. These ordinances have been finished and it is intended that they serve as a model for different cities in preparing ordinances to govern the various things covered, viz: Fireworks, Picture Machines and Operating Rooms, Storage and Handling of Films; Use, Storage, etc., of Petroleum, Coal Tar, Oils and the products thereof. The committee in submitting its report, which has been adopted by the association, says, in part: "The ordinance to regulate the installation, operation and maintenance of motion picture machines has been drawn after a careful study of practically all of the State and municipal ordinances now in force to regulate the motion picture hazards, and we believe that its official adoption by this association will establish a standard of protection, never reached before in establishments in which motion picture exhibitions are given."

You will please take careful notice that the committee says it has carefully studied existing ordinances. It does not, however, say that the committee consulted one single practical motion picture man, or called into consultation one single practical man who, from actual work in operating rooms knows what is good and what is bad in the existing ordinances the committee studied. Supposing you or I, gentle reader, were called upon to act on a committee to draft an ordinance or law to be set up as a model for the government of fire departments all over the country. We would first get all the existing laws. Good! We would then call in practical firemen, would we not? since neither you or I are practical firemen ourselves, therefore are not in position to know what will work well in practice. We might know exactly what end it was desired to accomplish, but only the practical fireman, who is an expert at his business, could tell us whether or not our proposed method of accomplishing the end would work well in practice.

Were any of the members of the association's committee practical operators? They were not! Did the committee call any practical men into consultation? Apparently they did not, else their work would not have contained the monumental blunders it does. The following is the report of the committee, now adopted by the association and put out as a model for cities to follow:

MOTION PICTURE MACHINE ORDINANCE.

An ordinance to regulate the installation, operation and maintenance of motion picture machines, to regulate the arrangement of audience rooms in which motion picture exhibitions are to be given, in relation to illumination, aisles, seats and exits, and the storage of combustible films therein, to provide for its enforcement, to prescribe penalties for its violation, and to fix the responsibilities of proprietor, manager or other representatives in charge of said audience rooms and the motion picture machine therein.

Be it ordained by .....of the City of ..... as follows:

SECTION No. 1. Any person, firm or corporation desiring to exhibit, use, handle, repair or store any motion picture film within any building or enclosure now built or which shall be hereafter constructed, located within the city limits, shall first appear before ..... and file a written application (in duplicate) for a permit to do so. Said application shall contain the location and a description of the room and building in which said film is to be used, handled, repaired or stored, together with plans and specifications showing full details of all arrangements made and to be made to safeguard the premises and persons who may be therein.

SECTION No. 2. No motion picture machine or device shall at any time be operated in any building or enclosure, nor shall the public be admitted to the audience room in which such motion picture exhibit is to be given, until the installation of such machine or device and the arrangement of such audience room and its accessories have been made to fully conform to all of the provisions and requirements of this ordinance as hereinafter specified, nor until after approval by .....

SECTION No. 3. Every motion picture machine or device must, before being operated, be installed in a room, compartment, booth or enclosure, constructed entirely of fire-resistive material which may include only brick, tile, concrete, galvanized iron, hard asbestos board, asbestos building lumber, or their equivalent. All such rooms, compartments, booths or enclosures shall be constructed in complete conformity with the following conditions and specifications:

SECTION No. 4. Location: The booth must not be placed directly over an exit, and in all cases must be securely anchored or fastened so as to prevent dislodgment in case of panic.

SECTION No. 5. Size: Each room, compartment, booth or enclosure in which a motion picture machine or device is installed, must not be less than seven (7) feet in height, with area of floor space varying in accordance with the number of machines or devices installed in such booths, as follows:

1 Picture machine	6 feet x 8 feet
1 Picture machine and 1 stereopticon.....	9 feet x 8 feet
2 Picture machines and 1 stereopticon.....	12 feet x 8 feet

SECTION No. 6. Construction and Arrangement of Booths:

(a) Metal or Asbestos Booths: If the room, compartment, booth or enclosure is constructed of galvanized iron, hard asbestos board, asbestos building lumber, or their equivalent, it must be constructed and equipped substantially as follows:

Frame: To be made of at least 1½ inch x 1½ inch x ¼ inch angle or tee irons as follows:

Four outside horizontal members at top and bottom.

Four corner uprights.

Intermediate uprights on sides and intermediate members on roofs, spaced every two feet.

Doorway to be two feet wide by at least five feet high, with an angle iron framing.

All joints in frame to be made with 3/16 inch steel plates, to which each angle iron or tee iron shall be riveted or bolted by the use of at least two ¼ inch bolts or rivets. All bolts or rivets to have flat heads, said heads always to be placed on exterior side of booth and properly countersunk.

Covering of Booth: Sides and top of booth and main or entrance door shall be covered with hard asbestos boards or asbestos building lumber, of at least ¼ inch thickness, or their equivalent, or with steel or galvanized sheet iron of not less than No. 20 U. S. gauge. The asbestos, or its equivalent, shall be so cut and arranged that vertical joints between boards shall always come over an angle or tee iron, to which it shall be securely fastened by means of proper bolts and nuts spaced not more than six inches apart. The sheet metal shall be so cut and arranged that joints shall always come over a member, be overlapped, and bolted or riveted to such member; bolts or rivets to be spaced not over three inches on centers.

Flooring: Floor shall be made of two parts, an upper and a lower floor. Lower floor shall be made of wood, ⅞ inch minimum thickness, supported on lower leg of horizontal angle irons. Resting on this floor shall be a floor made of hard asbestos board, asbestos building lumber of ⅜ inch minimum thickness, or an equally good non-combustible material.

Openings: There shall be not more than two openings in the booth for each machine—one for observation by the operator and one for operation of the machine. Opening for machine shall be not more than six inches high and twelve inches long. Opening for operator shall be not more than four inches wide or more than twelve inches high. The two openings for each machine shall be provided with a gravity door, constructed of metal not less than 3/16 inch in thickness, and when closed shall overlap the openings at least two inches on all sides, and arranged to slide, without binding, in properly constructed grooves; said doors to be held open normally by use of a fine combustible cord fastened to a 160 degree F. fusible link, the whole so arranged that the door may be easily released and closed by hand.

The main or entrance door shall be hung on at least three heavy hinges and arranged to close against a substantial metal rabbet. The door shall also be provided with a substantial spring which will keep it closed tightly.

Shelves: All shelves, furniture and fixtures within the booth shall be constructed of non-combustible material.

Ventilation: Booths shall be provided with a ventilating inlet in each of three sides; said inlets to be fifteen inches long and three inches high, the lower side of same to be not more than three inches above floor level. Said inlets shall be covered on the outside by a wire netting of not greater than ⅛ inch mesh, to be firmly secured to the asbestos boards or metal by means of iron strips and screws or rivets and on inside by gravity doors arranged to slide in properly constructed grooves, and which, when closed, shall overlap ventilator openings at least two inches on all sides; said doors to be held open normally by use of a fine combustible cord in series with a fusible link which melts at a temperature of 160 degrees F., so arranged that the doors may be easily released and closed by hand.

Near the center of the top of the booth shall be a circular opening of not less than ten inches in diameter, the upper side of said opening to be provided with an iron flange, which flange is to be securely fastened to the tee irons supporting the roof. Securely fastened to this flange shall be a vent pipe of not less than ten inches in diameter, said pipe leading to the outside of the building or to a special incombustible vent flue; all parts of vent pipe to be at least six inches from any combustible material. Attached to or in this vent pipe shall be placed a box containing a twelve-inch electric fan, said box to be provided with a door of sufficient size to permit of the examination or removal of this fan, this door to be made tight and provided with proper fastenings. Box and vent pipes to be made of galvanized iron or other non-combustible material. Fan to be so connected that its operation can be controlled from within the booth.

(b) Brick, Tile or Concrete Booths: If the room, compartment, booth or enclosure is constructed of brick, tile or concrete, it shall have walls not less in thickness than eight inches, except that if reinforced concrete is used the thickness need be only four inches. The ventilation and general arrangement of the booth and the protection of openings shall conform with the requirements of sub-section (a) preceding.

(c) Portable Booths: Portable booths shall not be used in any theater or public hall in which a permanent booth has been or is installed, but shall be used only for the temporary one-night exhibition of motion pictures in places of assemblage, such as halls belonging to commercial organizations, churches, schools, etc., where it is deemed impracticable to install permanent booths made in accordance with the above specifications.

In constructing a portable booth the specifications for a permanent booth shall be followed, with the exceptions given below:

1. Intermediate uprights may be spaced every four feet apart.

2. Special means for ventilation need not be provided except that there shall be an opening for ventilation in the top of the booth, this opening to be ten inches in diameter and a metal sleeve at least eighteen inches in height, provided with a ventilating cap, shall be attached thereto.

3. The booth may be made in a folding type so constructed that when assembled it will be rigid and all joints tight so that flames may not pass through them.

4. The base of booth shall have a flange extension outward on all four sides provided with a sufficient number of holes, through which booth may be fastened to floor.

SECTION No. 7. The motion picture machines must be securely fastened to the floor to prevent accidental overturning or moving of same.

Shall be equipped with a feed reel enclosed in a metal magazine constructed of 20 U. S. gauge metal without solder, with a slot at the bottom only large enough for film to pass out, and with cover so arranged that this slot can be instantly closed. No solder to be used in the construction of this box. Door on side shall be of metal and provided with spring hinges and latch, which will keep door closed tightly.

Shall be provided also with a take-up reel in a magazine, similar to that used to enclose feed reel. A door to be provided to cover opening through which film is received, and a door at the side to be provided to remove film. This door must be of metal and equipped with spring hinges and latch to keep same securely closed.

No motion picture machine shall be operated other than by hand power. The handle or crank used in operating said machine shall be secured to the spindle or shaft so as to prevent its coming off.

A shutter must be placed in front of the condenser, so arranged as to be normally closed and held open by pressure of the operator's foot, or automatically closed when film is stationary.

SECTION No. 8. The ARC LAMP used in a motion picture machine must be constructed and installed as follows:

(a) Must be substantially constructed and entirely of metal except where the use of approved insulating material is necessary.

(b) Must be so designed as to provide for proper ventilation and to prevent sparks being emitted from lamp when same is in operation, and mica must be used for frame insulation.

(c) Self-closing doors must be provided on side and rear of lamp enclosure, and observation ports not larger than two inches square may be provided when closed with glass.

(d) Lamp must be controlled by a double pole switch and cut-out within easy reach of operator.

(e) Conductors supplying current to lamp must not be smaller than No. 6 B. and S. gauge or its equivalent. Stranded conductors, provided with approved lugs, must be used between lamp and permanent wiring. An asbestos insulation must be used on conductors inside lamp and where liable to be brought within six inches of the lamp or resistance. Conductors passing through case of lamp must be protected with porcelain bushings.

(f) Resistance box must be kept not less than one (1) foot from any combustible material or must be separated from it by a slab of slate or marble. The resistance box must be surrounded with a substantially attached metal guard having a mesh not larger than one square inch, which guard is to be kept at least one inch from outside frame of rheostat.

(g) The lamp must not be mounted upon a base or frame composed of wood.

SECTION No. 9. No artificial light shall be used in any room, compartment or booth in which a motion picture machine is installed except that produced by electricity. All electric wiring must be brought into the booth and carried to all machines, lights, etc., in iron conduits. One light will be allowed for each machine and one for the re-winding bench, but all such lights shall be provided with wire guards, and reinforced cord shall be used for pendant purposes. If house lights are controlled from within the booth, an additional emergency control must be provided near the main exit and kept at all times in good condition.

All electrical wiring or apparatus used in connection with any audience room or located in any room, compartment, booth or enclosure containing a motion picture machine, or in which an exhibition thereof is to be made, must be in full compliance with the rules of the National Electrical Code and inspected and approved by .....

SECTION No. 10. No films shall be exposed in the booth at the same time, other than the one film in process of transfer to or from the machine or from the upper to lower magazine, or in process of rewinding. A separate metal case, made without solder, shall be provided for each film when the same is not in the magazine or in process of re-winding, said films to be kept in these cases. No material of a combustible nature shall be stored within any booth except the films needed for one day's operation.

SECTION No. 11. At least two standard hand chemical fire extinguishers shall be provided, one inside the booth and located in an accessible place within easy reach of the operator, the other located outside of the booth near the door to same.

SECTION No. 12. Neither smoking nor the keeping nor use of matches shall be permitted in any booth, room, compartment or enclosure where a motion picture machine is installed.

SECTION No. 13. Each machine, while in operation, shall be in charge of an experienced operator.

SECTION No. 14. The entrance door to the motion picture machine booth shall be kept closed, but not locked, when an audience is in the building.

SECTION No. 15. No motion picture machine shall be installed, maintained, or operated in any building that does not abut directly upon a street, nor shall any such machine be installed, maintained or operated in connection with any exhibition room that does not immediately and directly abut upon a street. Every exhibition room abutting upon but one street shall have two exits, each at least five feet wide, opening upon the street; and no such room shall exceed one thousand square feet in area. Exhibition rooms located at the corner of and abutting upon two streets, or a street and a public alley, shall be provided with at least three exits, two upon one street and at least one upon the other street or alley, said exits to be not less than five feet wide; and no such room shall exceed two thousand five hundred square feet in area. Exhibition rooms abutting directly on three streets or on two streets and a public alley, shall not exceed five thousand square feet in area unless located in a building of fireproof construction and shall have two exits upon each of the three sides adjacent to said streets and alleys respectively; said exits to be not less than five feet wide. An open court leading directly to a street or alley and not less than six feet in width shall, for the purpose of this ordinance, be deemed an alley; such passageways shall be kept free from obstruction, and well lighted. No exhibition room with a gallery or galleries shall be located in any building except it be of fireproof construction. All seats in any exhibition hall for picture machines shall be securely fastened to the floor, and shall be so arranged that there will be not more than nine seats in a line between aisles, nor more than four between an aisle and the wall. No exit from exhibition halls for picture machines shall be less than four feet wide, and all exit doors shall be arranged to swing outward and be provided with fastenings such as can be opened readily, from the inside without the use of keys or any special effort, but not locked when the hall is open to the public. All exits and entrances shall open directly from the exhibition room upon the street or alley. All aisles shall lead directly to exits and all exits shall be directly accessible to aisles. No aisles shall be less than three feet in width where they begin, and shall be increased in width toward the exits three inches to every ten running feet length.

SECTION No. 16. Each exit must be marked by means of an illuminated red sign, containing the word "Exit" in six (6) inch white letters easily discernible by the audience at any time during the performance. Light used in marking exits or lighting passageways, stairways or inclines leading from them shall not depend upon or be controlled by switches or fuses located in room, compartment, booth or enclosure containing motion picture machines, but shall be placed in the ticket office. Sections 17, 18, 19 and 20 provide penalties, etc., for violations of the law.

You will note that section 3 allows galvanized iron to be used for operating room walls, while section 4 stipulates that it shall be No. 20 gauge. Sheet metal is not fit for an operating room for many reasons. Only one need be mentioned; if unprotected it would get red hot in less than one minute in a real brisk film fire. Apparently the committee proposes allowing operating room walls of one thickness of unprotected No. 20 galvanized iron, though the language is somewhat ambiguous on this point. The text precludes the use of cement and concrete, which is the ideal operating room floor. But it is in the matter of openings that the committee really shines. The opening for the operator shall not be more than four inches wide by twelve high. To the committee this probably seemed a trivial thing, but it literally spells ruin to projection and endless discomfort for the operator. The writer would refuse, point blank, to work in a room with a four by twelve inch observation port, under any circumstances. Imagine rubbering through that knot-hole for eight hours. Sitting in operating position how much of the picture can you see at a time, especially if the throw be a short one? As has been time, time and again pointed out in this department, if projection is to be good it is absolutely essential that the operator be provided with an observation port ample in size to allow of a clear, unobstructed view of the entire projection, either when seated or standing in ordinary operating position. With anything less the projection will invariably suffer more or less—generally more. I only wish that committee could be compelled to keep their eye constantly glued to a space from 12 to 20 feet wide, by two-thirds that height, seeing every portion of the space all the time, for eight hours. And the committee and the association hopes to inflict this piece of idiocy (that is the only word that fits the case) on fifteen thousand operators! If there were any earthly sense or added safety in such a provision we could have patience, but there is not. With shutters, semi-automatic in operation, properly made and with heavy penalty attached for their not working perfectly, there is not one shred of reason why the operator's observation port may not be 12 x 20 inches, and that is what it should be. That clause is born of ignorance of matters with which such committees attempt to deal (ignorance of things from the practical end, I mean), which foists such nonsensical blunders upon us. Blunders which spell hardship for thousands of operators and injury to the exhibitor. The above is strong language, I know, but it might well be even several times stronger. At this stage of development it is absolutely inexcusable that such things should be. We rather expect city councils to make monkeys of themselves more or less, when dealing with such subjects, but when a body pretending to evolve models for the entire country does the same thing, that is something else again.

We find nothing wrong, as we read, after the above, until we come to the ventilating flue. This is recommended to be ten inches in diameter in all cases. The area of a ten-inch circular pipe is 78½ square inches, adequate, but none too large for the smallest room named, viz., 6 x 8 feet. It would be far from adequate for a room 8 x 12, however. This is the more certainly true if the pipe be a long one. An 8 x 12 room ought to have a vent pipe of not less than 144 square inches area. But this is not the worst. The recommendation is that all parts of this vent pipe be at least six inches from any combustible material, which proviso renders the installation of a vent pipe absolutely prohibitive in a very large percentage of the storeroom theaters. Asbestos insulation an inch or an inch and a half thick would have served every purpose of safety. Section 7 reads that upper magazine shall be of No. 20 gauge metal. Why No. 20? One manufacturer makes magazines fully 1-16th of an inch thick. Is that objectionable? It should, of course, read: not less than No. 20 gauge. No firetrap is required on magazines, but in place must be a "door." Ridiculous! We also see that the old, obsolete foot shutter is raked from the scrap pile and restored to us by this committee of Solomons. In clause b, section 8, we are gravely informed that the arc lamp must be designed as to provide proper ventilation and to prevent sparks being emitted when lamp is in operation. That's a hot one, isn't it gentlemen? The Dear Committee of course really meant that the lamphouse should be thus made, but, not even knowing the names of the things they were setting themselves up as experts on, they got somewhat twisted. In clause d, same section, we are informed that lamp must be controlled by a double pole switch. No particular kind, such as knife switch, is named, so you will doubtless be at liberty to use a snap switch if you wish. In clause e, same section, the "case" of a lamp is named. I've worked quite some time in operating rooms, but have never heard of a lamp case before. Lamphouse is meant, of course. One inch mesh guards for rheostats are allowed in clause f. A fat lot of good such a guard would be. But here is a real, genuine laugh: Clause g gravely relates to us that "The lamp must not be mounted upon a base or frame composed of wood." Verily this is wisdom, for such a base would be in flames in less than two minutes. Imagine a wooden lamp-base! Lamphouse and table or stand is meant, of course. Section 13 says each machine while in operation shall be in charge of an experienced operator. Surely such a law would be pie for the cheap manager. Of what earthly use to say "experienced" without defining the minimum amount of experience? A man who had run a machine two weeks could claim to be "experienced" under the wording of that clause. Exhibitors should examine section 15 closely. They are then at liberty to laugh or swear, as to them seems best. An exhibition room abutting on one street may not exceed 1,000 square feet area. That means 20 x 50, or its equivalent. At most this would leave not to exceed 44 feet actual seating area in length, while four, or even three feet for an aisle would reduce it to 16 or 17 the other way. Total seating capacity rather under than over 160. If you abutt on two streets you may actually be allowed to double this. Marvelous wisdom! Where did they get it all? And this bundle of stupidity is actually being put forward by a reputable association as a model for cities in creating their laws. Why did a committee who were so densely ignorant of their subject that they cannot even call things by their right names attempt to do such a thing without calling in practical motion picture experts into consultation? Echo answers, "why?" We would earnestly recommend city authorities to seek elsewhere than the above quoted document for guidance in compiling laws governing operating rooms and theaters.

Several Things.—New York City writes: "Wrote you some time ago and in your reply (January 28 issue, page 193) you asked me to report on certain things. My picture was out of focus on one side; due to side throw. You suggested that I try several lenses and that possibly I might find one which would very nearly overcome the difficulty. I did this, but without much improvement. At the same time I asked you to advise me what to do with an asbestos curtain already coated with two coats of whitewash . You suggested getting wide bleached muslin and stretch it over the old curtain. We did so and pasted it on. Two days after the inspector came in and we had to remove the muslin. He said the screen would not be fireproof with the muslin on it. Have followed your idea of putting two rollers on the bottom takeup bracket of my Powers five and have not lost my loop for months. It works like magic. I note in last week's issue, in article on studios, you say titles are made by painting the letters in black on white cardboard. A gentleman who claims to have been director for some of the leading manufacturers tells me it is the reverse, viz.: white letters on black. Is he right? I have found an excellent lubricant for machine gears and enclose sample stick. It is called Chrystal Sperm. As you see it is in stick form, hence very convenient for use. Rub just a little on the gears a couple of times daily and they will run fine. It may be had at any bicycle store, but there are two kinds, white and dark. The white is the right kind. I have your handbook. I cannot see how you can sell it for $1.50. It certainly is worth more than that. Chrystal Sperm may be had by mail. Be sure to get the white kind. I wish to thank yourself and all the correspondents of the department for all the many things I have learned through the medium of its columns. I had my machine overhauled two weeks ago and now cannot get a steady picture. It jumps, but only on one side of the crank. Have tried turning bushings without effect. Have new cam, star, intermittent sprocket and spindle. Parts are all stamped N. Power and am sure they are the real goods."

If the new lens you speak of does not do the trick you might try stopping down the lens by reducing its diameter by about ¼ inch by means of rings of black paper. Put a ring on the front of the front and rear of the back combination by taking the combinations apart and clamping the paper rings in. This may or may not help. I can suggest nothing further. As to the inspector ordering the removal of the muslin, I have spoken to the chief inspector concerning it. He tells me the reason for ordering the muslin off was that if one be allowed to go that far another would make that technical infraction the excuse for something perhaps far worse. Glad the second roller idea gave satisfaction. Most titles are made from white letters on black field. It is possible to make them the other way. It is simply a matter of positive and negative and calls for no argument. Colored letters are due to the tinting of the film itself. Letters on untinted stock will show white. Many thanks for the information concerning Chrystal Sperm. The sample looks good and I have no doubt but that it will do all you claim. We made the price of the handbook low in order to get the operator to buy it and learn that there really are books of that kind worth purchasing and studying. The operator had, for the most part, never laid out a cent for projection knowledge. He was skeptical as to the value of such things. He would not, as a first experiment, have ventured two dollars and a half. He would, however, probably take a chance on the lesser sum. He has found out that he has made an excellent investment and will, next time, be willing to pay something like what a book of that kind is worth. Taking the exceeding difficulty and tremendous amount of hard work involved in the making of such a work, there is practically nothing at all in it, from a monetary standpoint, at the figure it sells for. As to the machine trouble: you say the picture jumps on "one side of the crank." By this I assume you mean that it jumps only during one-half of each revolution of the crank. I think this indicates that for some reason or other the whole head, or the lens itself is vibrating during each alternate half-revolution of the crank. Also see to it that your tension springs are tight enough. If you don't find the remedy in these suggestions, please describe the jump more in detail.

Light Trouble.—Brooklyn, N. Y., writes: "I cannot get a round spot. It forms in all kinds of shapes and is ragged on its edges, instead of clean-cut circle. Have 60 cycle A C, 40 amperes through a compensarc. Also used 50 through a rheostat. Use your set and get both craters to face the condenser, as you advise, most of the time, especially with 50 through rheostat. Trouble seems to be in handling of lamp. Why do fresh carbons make less noise than after they have burned for a time?"

You have mistaken my meaning, I believe, to some extent. Fig. 33C, page 88 of the handbook, shows ideal A C set. I did not mean, however, that any attempt should be made to utilize light from the lower crater. Quite the reverse. I take all my light from the upper, keeping the lower advanced exactly enough to hold the upper crater in shape as shown and at the same time not to allow of the condition shown at Fig. 33D, which latter must be carefully guarded against. You can hardly expect to get the clean-cut spot had from D C with A C, but the A C should be round, or reasonably so. Are your condensers clean and square with each other? Possibly you are using too much of the light from the lower crater. Don't try to use both, is my advice. I presume the added noise in burned carbons is due to change in the carbon binder under the action of heat. I know of no other cause for it.

Ninety Degree Automatic Lamp.—Seattle, Wash., writes: "I notice on page 455 of the Aug. 19 issue you say: "Ninety degree lamps have not been found adapted to moving picture work.' Will you kindly tell me why this is so? I have in use a lamp of this kind of my own invention that operates six to eight hours at a time without any attention whatever. The carbons are reset every two or three minutes, as I desire, by mechanical means, and the light is without flicker of any kind. Has such a lamp any market if offered for sale? Everyone that has seen it considers it a superior light, but operators seem to think it may endanger their positions if an automatic light is used. I cannot see it that way, as it seems to me that to relieve an operator of care of the light would be to the advantage of any manager, as it gives the operator the more chance to watch the running of the film. My carbons are set exactly central with the condenser at each setting and the resetting every two minutes for direct current and every three minutes for alternating seems ideal. The setting is hardly perceptible to the eye. Has such a lamp any value in the moving picture business? I am a subscriber to your valuable paper and look forward to many changes in the moving picture business, as it is going to have a great influence over the progress of the world, standing next to the newspaper in point of influence."

Frankly, Seattle, I'm skeptical! The matter of an automatic lamp has been subject for experiment for some years. Many have evolved an automatic, ninety-degree arc lamp, but the fly in the ointment is that carbons are not, and probably never will be perfect. The automatic lamp may work fairly well when carbon is uniform and as it should be, but when the slightest flaw is encountered there is trouble galore and nothing one can do but just endure the poor curtain results until the flaw is burned away. Another thing: you say that with D. C. an adjustment every two minutes is all that is necessary, while every three minutes with A. C. is sufficient. This decidedly is news to the Editor. According to what I know, one cannot maintain good light—really good light—with D. C. and trim his lamp "every two minutes."

With A. C. I seldom allow my lamp to burn more than half a minute without adjustment. True, the adjustment is very slight, but it is exactly the matter of frequent, slight adjustment which gives steady, brilliant, uniform illumination, according to all my experience. Automatic lamps have been found fairly successful in stereo projection where very small amperage is used. For other purposes they have, so far, proven failures. If you really have a lamp which will at all times maintain absolutely steady, brilliant illumination, well and good. Operators need have no fear of results of its introduction. Anyhow, such a thing could no more be suppressed than you could bottle up Vesuvius. You will have to show me, though, Seattle. Perhaps your idea of good curtain results and mine may be at wide variance. I said ninety-degree lamps had not been found to be practical for motion picture projection simply from the fact that they are hard to handle—that is to say it is exceedingly difficult to manage the lamp in such manner as to maintain even illumination at all times, considering the heavy amperage necessary to M. P. projection. The Bausch & Lomb people have a very good automatic ninety-degree lamp used for small amperage, but, as I have said, heavy amperage, comparatively heavy, I mean, is quite another matter. There is most decidedly a market for an automatic lamp, ninety-degree or otherwise, provided it will run an evening's show without a change in curtain illumination from opening to closing, and do it every day. However, it will have to be decisively demonstrated to convince me. You may say that operators do not produce such perfect results with handfed lamps, and I freely grant that the great majority do not. The good ones do, however, and the time is not far distant when nothing less will be accepted by any manager who knows his business.

Wants to Learn.—Ogdensburg, N. Y., writes: "Am fair electrician and mechanic; have built an arc lamp, stepdown transformer and rheostat, and have studied electrical matters to considerable extent. Would like to become an operator. Would you advise me to secure position in some repair shop as assistant under some first-class operator? Where could such a job be had? What is the average pay of assistants in New York City? What states, if any, grant licenses to operators under 21?"

Exactly what you mean by a 'job in a repair shop under an operator' I do not know. I would advise that you secure a position as operator's assistant in some good theater, attend strictly to busines, study both the practical and theoretical sides of the profession and study them hard, not running away with the idea that you are an operator at the end of the second week, because you can make a patch and thread the machine. I cannot tell you where such a position may be obtained or what the probable salary will be. If you have the stuff in you to make a good operator, or a good anything else, you will answer those queries for yourself by hustling for the opening and making good when you get it.

Light Waves.—Mr. E. B. Stone, Athens Ga., writes: "Your Lessons on Light, which have been running in the department, have impressed me very much. They show evidence of deep study, which the average operator cannot appreciate. Light action is a great subject for study and one which cannot be mastered in a short time. The study of light action through lenses and in mirrors is interesting, but the subject becomes even harder when one attempts to study illumination. In illumination light is caused by heat waves and I wish some one who understands the matter would explain it through the department. Here is what I get out of it, but with your knowledge of electricity, in which I am deficient, you might make it clearer to us: White light is a combination of all the colors of the spectrum. It is a wave motion, with an average wave length of .00005 of a centimeter. It has been proven, however, and we must accept as true the theory that lights of various colors have different wave lengths. In order they are red, orange, yelllow, green, blue and violet. Knowing all this is of no practical value unless we also understand certain other things, viz.: intensity of illumination is equal to the quantity of luminous energy falling upon a given surface divided by the surface. Law of Exchanges, it is called, and Stefan's Law of Radiation. Prevort's Law of Exchange tells us that all bodies at all temperatures radiate energy in the form of waves, and when a body is at constant term it absorbs at the home rate, it radiates energy. Stefan's Law of Radiation tells us that when most all solids are heated to certain, different temperatures the total intensity of emission is directly proportionate to the fourth power of the absolute temperature. For when any solid is heated we first see a red color, then orange, then yellow and finally white. That is to say, bodies become visible at a temperature close to 525 degrees C and white hot at about 1,500 degrees C. This proves that increasing the temperature also increases the intensity of emission of all wave lengths and that the increase is most rapid in the shorter waves. Hence the 3,500 degree C value of an arc lamp carbon can be raised to 3,800 degrees C. The light is also due partly to luminescence produced by molecular and chemical changes which cause less heat and more light. It then follows, if the foregoing be true, that the positive carbon, from the crater of which practically all light comes, must be at higher temperature than is the negative. Now what I don't understand, and cannot get explained satisfactorily, is, what is the nature of the positive charge producing the difference in temperature? We know also that the positive carbon is consumed much more rapidly than is the negative. Now in A C a study of its nature shows that both carbons are the same and I suppose neither attains as high a temperature as a positive charge would give it. This is the reason of the difference in light afforded by the two kinds of current and thus the more I study the less I find out I know. But I do wish you, in your own good way, would go down into these subjects and explain them to your friends, myself being one of the flock. There is 40 volts drop between the positive and the arc-stream, 2½ volts drop in the arc-stream and 2½ between the arc-stream and the negative."

I wish I thoroughly understood all that myself! However, you are mistaken in some things. I believe your error is in having gone too deeply into the purely theoretical, and extremely difficult of comprehension, end of things without sufficient study of simpler, more practical matters. In the first place, you give a reason why less light is had from a given amperage with A C than with D C. You are in error. The A C carbons are alternately charged positively. Since the crater always forms on the positively changed carbon it follows that, each carbon being alternately positive and negative, craters will be formed on both. It also follows that they will be much smaller when divided between two carbons, than when the whole force of the current is concentrated on one crater; also they will be of less temperature, hence emit less light, even when their light is combined. However, inasmuch as we find that the light strength is directly proportional to the amperage employed, it seems to me your argument that it is the positive charge which forms the crater and produces the light is wrong. True, the crater does form on the positive, but it is the amperage, not the nature of the charge, which governs its luminosity. The point you have raised is one which has bothered me for a long, long time. I have consulted some of the best posted men in this country, without getting any definite explanation as to why the crater forms on the positive carbon or why it is luminous. I have searched everywhere I can think of for an answer to those two questions. The accepted theory is that current flows from positive to negative. If it were the reverse I could readily satisfy my mind with the explanation that luminosity is caused by the terrific impact of the current with the carbon after leaping the air-gap. We know that there is great resistance in the air-gap and that the hot carbon point also offers high resistance. We know that resistance means heat, which in part accounts for the tremendous temperature of the arc and carbons. This, however, does not explain the reason of the crater forming on the positive. If any of our readers can shed light on this matter we shall be glad indeed to hear from them. Doctor Gage might try his hand at it, if he will. The Lessons on Light will be resumed shortly.

I. A. T. S. E.—Clinton, Ill., writes: "Am an interested student of the moving picture business. Have devoted three years to it, last two as manager of my own theater. Have been reasonably successful. Have derived much good from the 'World,' especially from the department you edit. I note, August 5 issue, a letter from a so-called union, consisting of 14 members, which is fighting L. U. 185 I. A. T. S. E. The same identical condition obtained in St. Louis up to a few months ago. L. U. 143 I. A. T. S. E., of which I am a member, had a great deal of trouble with the so-called I. B. E. W. union, which consisted mainly of operators unable to qualify for the I. A. card. However, the affair is now adjusted and many of the organization named are now members of our local. Wish to inform all operators who are contemplating joining a union that the I. A. T. S. E. is the only operator's organization recognized by the American Federation of Labor, as is shown by accompanying circular letter, which I would ask you to kindly print.

St. Louis, January 24, 1910.

To Whom It May Concern:

This is to certify that the Moving Picture and Projecting Machine Operators' Union No. 143 is duly affiliated with, and recognized by, the Central Trades and Labor Union of St. Louis and vicinity, and that said union is affiliated with the American Federation of Labor through the International Alliance of Theatrical stage employes.

This also certifies that the slides displayed in the various moving picture shows in St. Louis by the members of the Electrical Workers' Union No. 1, I. B. of E. W., purporting that they are affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, is a misrepresentation, as the members of the aforesaid Electrical Workers' Union No. 1 are not affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

Respectfully,

The Central Trades and Labor Union,
David Kreyling, Secretary.

Because both the St. Louis and the Spokane locals were engaged in a scrap with I. B. E. W. operators' organizations does not by any manner of means prove that the propositions are identical. As a matter of fact, ninety-nine times out of every hundred where such a fight springs into existence there is wrong, to some extent at least, on both sides. I notice in one place you say most of the "other fellers" couldn't qualify for an I. A. card. A little further on you say many of them are now members of the I. A. The two statements don't quite tally, brother. Understand me: I am not defending the formation of I. B. E. W. operators' unions. The I. A. T. S. E. is at present the only organization for the operator to get into, since it is the only union recognized by the A. F. of L., as the letter says. It does not, however, follow that the I. A. T. S. E. always has been in the right in general or individual cases. As a matter of fact, it has not. What the trouble was in St. Louis I don't know. What I am getting at is that the drawing away of operators into another organization, while wrong, usually signifies injustice, in some degree at least, on the part of the local Asks Questions.—Van Buren, Ind., writes: "Have a non-adjustable rheostat and wish to make one which will deliver 20 to 40 amperes. What kind and size wire must I use and how many feet would it require. What size fuses should I use on the main switch, 110 volt D C current using up to 40 amperes at the arc and about ten amperes for lights? Could I use a rheostat connected up like sketch?

Have an Edison Exhibition Model machine, inside shutter, 50 foot throw and 14 foot picture. Have trouble with my picture moving up and down. Can stop movement by holding lower loop against plate below aperture, but when I take my finger away it commences to jump and sometimes loses the lower loop and misframes. What is the cause? Also sometimes the sprocket holes show on left side. This occurs only on some films. Have large ghost, dark blue and shaped like a watermelon seed standing on end. When I move lamp forward it spreads all over curtain and gets lighter, with rays running in different directions. This is my first letter to the department, but have gained many useful ideas therefrom. I couldn't do without the 'World.' For the benefit of those who may not know, I will contribute an excellent receipt for film cement: one-third banana oil and two-thirds collodion."

Well, Van Buren, you certainly have troubles of your own. As regards the rheostat, the arrangement you show would work all right, provided there were sufficient resistance remaining after the left hand switch is closed to only allow 40 amperes to pass and further provided that the coils up to that point be of sufficient capacity (the wire of large enough diameter) to carry 40 amperes without undue heat. You will find that identical arrangement in effect, photographically illustrated by Neighbor Pringle, St. Paul, Minn., on page 1231, November 26, 1910, issue, and on page 532, on March 11, 1911, issue it is illustrated by sketch by Friend Maddern, Willows, Cal. As to wire, you may use soft, black iron wire, such as you may obtain from your local hardware stores, about No. 8 gauge. I cannot tell you the length since every different batch of wire may have different resistance value per foot, even though of the same diameter. Stretch out plenty of it on insulators and test by making connection from one of the resistance wires to lamp. Then attach wire to switch and connect other end to a piece of copper and slide same along the wire until the desired amperage is obtained. That will be the amount of resistance wire necessary (for lowest amperage, of course). Coil up the wire then by winding around a mandrel. A small shade roller will do but an iron rod is better. You may get the regular resistance wire, of course, which is made of nickel steel and has a fairly constant resistance value. Write the Driver-Harris Company, Harrison, N. J., concerning this, they being the manufacturers of Climax resistance wire. Where a total of 50 amperes is used, the various circuits being protected by their own cut-outs, of course, it would be wise to use not less than 60 ampere fuses for the mains. Even 75 would not be excessive since the possible plunging of the audience in total darkness is a very distinct danger and ought to be guarded against thoroughly. The circuit fuses should be located on the board with the main fuses, therefore danger of trouble between the main and circuit fuses is practically nothing at all. If your description of film movement is correct I should say your tension springs are not set to give sufficient tension. They may be bowed out by inserting a screwdriver under them, one at a time, and pulling out, at the same time running the tool up and down. Try grasping the upper loop between thumb and finger as machine is running, and holding same with some pressure. If that takes out the jump it is almost sure the tension springs are at fault. It is also possible, from your description, that the film is not held against the intermittent sprocket snugly enough by the idler roller. In one of these two things I think you will find your fault. I do wish those describing film-jump would be just a little more explicit. If it moves up and down in quick jerks that means one thing; if the movement is rythmatical, four times to each turn of the crank, that signifies a totally different trouble, while if it moves up gradually as the machine speed is accelerated, that is still another proposition. Are the teeth of your intermittent sprocket badly worn? As to the sprocket holes, I think probably the sprockets or guides at top of gate are out of line with aperture. Probably only such makes of film as have comparatively wide sprocket holes show the fault. Line your gate and sprockets carefully with aperture. As to the ghost: I take it you mean when you move the lamp back or forward in relation to the condensers the effects you describe occur. Try moving the whole lamphouse back or forward. You should have two 6½ condensers I think, though possibly one 6½ and one 7½ would serve better. Given proper condensers and having your outfit properly lined (see page 119, July 22 issue), moving lamphouse ought to overcome the ghost matter. Many thanks for formula; but you don't say whether it is for ordinary stock, for N I, or for both. I take it to be for ordinary only.

Condensers.—Del Rio, Texas, writes: "Find enclosed $1.50 for handbook. Have been reading the World for some time and have discovered how little I really know. However, I get as good results as any one I have seen to date. Have a new set of lenses, model B Edison machine, new. Projection lens is O. K., for I tested it in old machine. However, the condensers seem to be off for light on screen is brighter in some parts than others. I cannot remedy the fault, though picture is fairly good as it is. What is the trouble and what size condensers ought I to have—throw 69 feet?"

In order to know what focal length of condensers are suited to your case I must know focal length of projection lens. To ascertain this I must know both throw and width of picture. You have not described the effect with detail enough to enable me to form a decided opinion. Try moving the whole lamphouse back and ahead. Try using the condensers from your old machine. Be sure your outfit is properly lined (page 117, July 22 issue). Examine condenser lenses and see that they are clear white and smooth on their surface. To aid you with further suggestions must have detailed description of effect on screen.

Comments on the Films

Licensed.

"Then You'll Remember Me" (Edison), August 25.—Some of the scenes of this interesting picture were produced to be in tune, so to speak, with the song, "Then You'll Remember Me," and to illustrate it. When, about three months ago, a lyric photoplay, "Silver Threads Among the Gold," was released, this reviewer for several weeks heard that air hummed or whistled on the street or played on the piano in private houses he chanced to be passing. It might have been coincidence or consequence. The song was a fine song and the picture that embodied it was simply constructed, sincere and very human. It was a true lyric photoplay, one that was content to be merely an expression of the song, a jar into which the song might be poured and nothing else. The result was a masterpiece, a picture of which the Edison Company can well be proud. More recently, this same company produced a patriotic picture telling the story of our national anthem, "The Star Spangled Banner." This also was successful, but wasn't a lyric picture in the same sense as the former was. The present picture, "Then You'll Remember Me," attempts to weld scenes that are truly poetical and in which the sentiment of the lyric is dominant, with scenes that have nothing whatever to do with either song or sentiment. As someone once said to the poet Wordsworth, "It is safe to put poetry into prose, but to put prose into poetry is deadly." That is what this picture does. It doesn't pretend to be a prose play with poetic scenes, but a poetic play, and its very prosey scenes disappoint us. Some prose was perhaps necessary to give the picture backbone, but the picture seems to have much, quite unnecessary prose. There are four long conversations in it which we have no means of fathoming. The worst one of these is between the two senior partners (strangers to the picture till that moment) in their business office at Sidney. It shouldn't have been in any picture, much less a lyric one. The result is that while the lyric makes the situation in some of its scenes, concrete and personal, its use serves to point out the picture's bald places. The other fault of the picture is, that in its endeavor to be imaginative it overshoots the mark. This is true in several places, especially in the attitude of the players to their vivid mental images. These people were not mad. People who really experience such visions know that they are not fooled by them. They may step toward them and even hold out their arms to them, but only in the greatest stress of passion and in the greatest hopelessness. The closing of this fine picture was, we are sorry to say, awkward.

"The Wool Industry of Hungary" (Eclipse), August 23.—Pictures of sheep come out very well in animated photography. Their wooly fleeces give pleasant contrast with meadow trees or a background of hills, and there is a sentiment attached to them that helps out a picture not a little. This picture gives some idea of sheep and wool growing and wool making conditions in Hungary. Methods seem to be very primitive there.

"Condemned for Treason" (Eclipse), August 23.—It is widely held, or seems to be, that moving pictures, because they are not hampered by the narrow limitations of the stage, are also above the limitations that the drama accepts and utilizes to deepen the impression. When a scenario writer uses a novelist's freedom in making a picture, it may tell a clear and pleasing story, but it is not so likely to impress the spectators with the qualities of the situation effectively, is likely to fail to give any lasting impression at all, as in this case.

The idea in this picture would make a good story. A young French artist is helped by an Italian basket maker's daughter and he falls in love with her. War breaks out and he has to fight against this girl's friends. He is the means of saving her life and that of her father and mother, and for this he is imprisoned five years for the treason of helping the enemy. On his release, he finds the girl married. At no time does the picture show us a truly dramatic struggle. It is wholly incidental, though the incidents are connected into a clear story. The scenes are extremely well acted. But the story is so weak that approval of the players is the greatest pleasure that the picture affords. The majority of pictures are weak for this same reason. They lack dramatic construction. When setting forth any intensely interesting narrative, as in some historical pictures, close construction may be not necessary, but any picture is likely to be stronger because of it, where it can be used.

"Grey Wolves" (Selig), August 24.—The real grey wolves of this picture were, in one sense, not the tame animals used in the forest scenes, but the speculators in the Chicago wheat pit. Though not a life portrayal, it's a story of business life. Both hero and villain are what might be called giants of the wheat pit (stock market). In the early scenes they are rivals in love. The villain is a bad loser and tries to ruin the hero by "bearing" on the wheat market. They and their adherents come together on the floor of the pit and the scene makes a good picture of the rush and pandemonium of that place at such a time, with its excited faces, its hands waved in the air, its pushing and struggling for place. The hero's health breaks under the stress of the encounter and he is almost ruined financially. The doctor sends him to the woods, where he is pictured as having a different kind of struggle for his life, this time with read wolves. He returns and, in another encounter with the villain on the floor of the pit, wins and is made richer at the villain's expense.

The picture is not up to Selig standard. Its first weakness lies in the fact that the great majority of spectators wont understand enough of what goes on in "the pit" to get a clear idea of the struggle. Most will be prejudiced against the hero as a wheat speculator; and not sympathizing, will lose the thread of the story and let the rest pass on over their heads. Even those who understand will find in this picture of the pit, good as it is, many suggestions of unreality. It might have been effective on the stage where voices and noise would have hidden its necessary defect, which is that nearly every one of the minor figures acted his part well for a moment, stopped acting for just one second, when perhaps he was brushed aside by one who was acting more vehemently for the time, and took up his part again. The mind notices these things and they ruin the illusion. This reviewer has never seen a battle scene where actors' faces or even gestures were plain that was truthfully effective and for just this reason.

The picture of the hero's experience in the forest was weak for two reasons. It was "played" for the story's sake. This was very plain in one instance. The hero, hearing wolves, ran away from his gun. A man might have done so, of course; but the action weakens our sympathy for him, and the small boy especially will feel disgusted. It wasn't necessary. Guns sometimes get jammed. The man might have been shown as crouching in the back of the hut after he had reached it, depending on picking off the wolves as they came through the window. This would account for the fact that he didn't protect the window that he was unable to close. It was naturally the place to begin his struggle with them. The scene was also weak from the fact that the wolves were a bit too tame.

The villain looked more like a stock broker than the hero did. He did not fit his part very well. The minor actors did very good work.

"A Rebelious Blossom" (Lubin), August 21.—She was a rebelious blossom, a schoolgirl (Miss Lawrence) and, as pictured, a charmingly prankish young lady. She didn't like the idea of her mother's marrying again. The player who takes the widow's part also deserves praise. Mr. Johnson is the grey-haired suitor, and fills the part with distinction. In the picture there are four or five, perhaps more, bits of true comedy that fairly scintillate; but as a whole the comedy shows unnecessary weaknesses as though it were hastily constructed.

The first scene is in the heroine's room at a boarding school. There is going to be a shindig, tea and cookies, and the other girls in wrappers are sneaking in. They get carrying on and one girl laughs so loud that the head mistress knocks. They can't hide fast enough and are caught. This schoolma'm isn't very well drawn. She writes to the heroine's mother: "Unless your daughter will conform to our regulation she will have to be suspended from the school." It isn't a typical letter and should, perhaps, have been shown merely as a typical ending of the letter, if some way could have been devised to make the showing only of the ending of a letter natural. It was not necessary for us to see the letter being written. We would have known who sent it to the mother.

The next scene shows an elderly lady and gentleman seated talking together. They are the girl's mother and her suitor, but at first this isn't known. We naturally supposed that the lady was the girl's mother and the man her father, for nothing had warned us that the mother was a widow. In a regular play, the handbill would have supplied the information. It is, in fact, not a bad idea to introduce the chief characters in a photoplay by means of a bow before the curtain. It uses film, but in this case, if we had already seen "Mrs. X, a widow," it would have saved confusion. The mother receives the schoolmam's letter and at the suggestion of her elderly suitor, writes to the girl that if she doesn't behave, she'll get married.

The scene that follows is one of the picture's gems. The girl and her roommate are reading dime novels and eating candy. It's very original and must be seen to be enjoyed. The girl gets the letter. The scenario's first weakness occurs here. The situation is overdrawn and Miss Lawrence is not at her best in picturing the result of this letter. It ends by her packing up and going home, which is not only unnecessary, but shuts out delightful possibilities, that in this case could have been pictured perfectly. No doubt many a schoolgirl has wanted to pack up and go home, but very, very few have done it. The schoolmam would have enjoyed reading that letter. If she had found the girl in the sulks and made her show it, or if she had picked it up and read it in the girl's presence, there would have been a thoroughly mad girl to picture and it might have been worth while. The difficulty could have been solved by a convenient summer vacation.

The scenario's great shortcoming occurs in the next scene. Before this, the Rebellious Blossom had been the heroine; from now on, it is the mother who is leading lady. Though the girl has still a very important part to play, the chief interest lies in the mother's love match. The girl's reconciliation with it is even shown, as it were, off the picture; we don't see it, though it is suggested, vicariously, by the suitor's nephew. Because of this, the talented player, not having any carefully worked out business that pictured a clear-cut character to carry through, seemed, now and again, to step back into a very well marked personality with which she is familiar, the "Hoyden." And, even allowing that the picture is divided at this point, the remaining scenes, taken by themselves, are not perfectly knit together. Three or four scenes are shown as in the grounds about the mother's house, but the eye has no way of being sure of it. The time we spend wondering where those scenes are and how or why the characters got there is a loss to the impression and it makes the picture less concrete.

When the first scene of this part opens, we see the widow and the suitor talking together, making love. The daughter's approach is announced. The maid must have been in the woman's confidence. This is not typical and wasn't necessary. If we had caught a glimpse of the girl through one window as she got out of a carriage, the suitor's hurried exit through the back window wouldn't have been any less amusing. When the daughter enters, the mother suddenly discovers that the suitor's hat (he must have been a professor) was there on the table, as big as life. Her rendering of this discovery fairly sparkles. Her first move is to get the girl, who hasn't noticed it, out of the room; her next would probably have been to glance out of the window by which the professor left; he might have been just under it. She would have seen him in the bushes and that would have connected that spot with the house. This reviewer suspects that those bushes were not in the same place, but they might have been.

By a happy chance, the professor's nephew comes to visit him and to fool the girl, the mother and professor agree to have him pretend to court her. He does it too thoroughly. Of course, the intention was to add to the fun by making the professor jealous; which would also furnish a good climax. But the professor would have had far more reason to be jealous if he'd had less cause. In the end, this nephew consoles the girl.

And this is one of the best, it surely is one of the brightest comedies of the week.

"The Professor and the New Hat" (Edison), August 23.—The new hat was the absent-minded professor's daughter's. It was delivered at the house and truly, in its paper package, it looked like a big bunch of roses. The professor put it in water, much to the girl's dismay when she found it out. The farce-comedy might have been funnier if it had been made, in some of its lesser parts, a bit more human and reasonable. Most of the professor's business was not bad; but the love scenes, especially the long cling of the girl and her lover, do not mean very much nor afford much of a handle for our sympathies. By far the best thing in the picture is a bit of character drawing in the millinery shop scene. The chewing gum saleslady is a fine portrayal. Perhaps she was "goin' to be married come Thursday week." It was made plain anyway that she "didn't have to take no trouble with customers." The Misses glared at her; but she kept on chewing and took her "royal American" time.

"The Question Mark" (Edison), August 23.—The reviewer saw this farce in two houses, uptown and downtown; and he hasn't the slightest doubt of its being a thorough-going success. It took very well. "That's fine, now," said one man in front of him. The reviewer, somewhat surprised, looked around the house. Perhaps ninety per cent. or more of the people seemed to be enjoying it thoroughly.

"The Diving Girl" (Biograph).—A little comedy in which an uncle takes his niece to the seashore. The stunts she does in the water quite unnerve the staid uncle and he locks her in her room. But she escapes and makes more trouble for him. He finally concludes that home, where there is no danger of drowning, is the best place for his venturesome relative. And home they go, much to her regret.

"$500 Reward" (Biograph).—This film offers something of a novelty in detective comedies. A valuable necklace is stolen for which a large reward is offered and two rube detectives undertake to find the thief and secure the reward. Moving incidents by flood and field follow their attempt and they succeed in landing the victim of the robbery and the detective working on the case. An everyday copper captures the burglar and secures the reward. There are many amusing situations before the course of the thief and the amateur detectives is run.

"Simple Ike Decides to Marry" (Kalem).—It takes a good many feet of film to tell the story which proves that the joke is on Jim, yet most of the picture is entertaining and some is funny. It is a matrimonial game, with an advertisement in a newspaper. Simple Ike answers it. The arrangements are all made and the bride is coming on a certain train. Here the boys at the ranch take a hand. They get Molly, the cook, to impersonate the bride and Simple Ike, because of ridicule, marries her. The real bride is carried away by Jim. Six months later Jim is so thoroughly subdued and trained that he is shown industriously doing the washing. Ike invites the boys in to dinner and the smiling Molly convinces them that he won the prize after all, even though it was forced upon him.

"Wages of War" (Vitagraph).—This film is somewhat complicated and it is difficult to tell whither it is all tending. It seems to be a warning against war, showing some of its horrors in shooting and counter shooting. A girl's attempted sacrifice stands out very clearly and her willingness to be shot in place of her brother represents a high type of self sacrifice. But she is spared by a Union officer, who expresses a desire to make her his wife. The reviewer confesses that he was not able to follow the narrative very well through it, but the devotion of the girl for her brother was a good bit of work.

"Among the Japanese" (Selig), August 28.—These scenes show a good many Japanese characteristics. They were taken mostly in the street and are filled with interesting faces, some unconsciously buying or selling.

"In the Shadow of the Pines" (Selig), August 28.—Mr. Hobart Bosworth is the English major of this picture who, wounded in battle, is sent by the family doctor to Canadian wilds to recuperate. He falls in love with the daughter of the agent at whose house he stays, and his father writes that he will cast him off. He tears the letter and puts his arm about the pretty quarter-breed girl. The acting, particularly of the hero, but of the whole cast, is good.

"Giving the High Sign to Women-Haters" (Gaumont), September 2.—A Greek philospher is represented on this film as teaching men to despise women. He introduces a sign language which gets around the need for talking. The women scheme to ruin the philosopher and begin by flattering him. He falls in love with one of them, renounces his philosophy and is shunned by all his former male followers. The settings of the story are interesting and artistic. The acting is good.

"'Spike' Shannon's Last Fight" (Essanay), August 26.—The chief interest in this film is a four round boxing bout, which seems not posed, but the real thing. A love story, and the fact that "Spike" entered the ring to get money to pay for an operation for his sick wife give it heart interest, but the mill is the thing. "Spike" wins and he leaves the ring never to enter it again.

"Archibald, the Hero" (Lubin), August 26.—Archie, the tenderfoot, accidentally captures a bold, bad man. Later, however, the bad man escapes from jail, and Archie exhibits a brand of fear that is new in that part of the country. The conduct of the film is fresh. The story furnishes good entertainment.

"A Boy of the Revolution" (Pathe), August 26.—In this film is shown something of the trials of Revolutionary times. A Continental soldier is hidden in a hollow tree and a boy carries him food. A British soldier sees the boy and forces him to disclose the hiding place. The boy overcome with remorse succeeds in releasing him and dies in his stead. The uniforms of both the Hessian-British soldiers and of the Continentals are true to the times.

"A Handsomer Man" (Vitagraph), August 26.—John was jealous. That was plain to be seen at the start and when he finds a note from his wife saying that she has gone with a handsomer man he takes his revolver and prepares to end the whole thing then and there. The telephone bell rings and his wife tells him she is out riding with her father. With his temper cooled he drops into a chair and patiently waits for her return.

"Two White Roses" (Edison), August 26.—A bachelor wants to get married. After advertising, a meeting is arranged with white roses as sign and signal. They lose their roses. The complications through the loss of the roses are permeated with a delicious brand of humor quite satisfactory to the most exacting.

"The Island of Ishia" (Gaumont), August 26.—An interesting travelog illustrating this volcanic island fifteen miles or so southwest of the Cape of Miseno on the Bay of Naples. It is not large, consequently about all its picturesque points have been put on the film.

"A Sunday Hunting Party" (Gaumont), August 26.—A hunting party burlesque, well conceived and well carried out. The hunters are deceived into following a fox terrier instead of a fox. There are all sorts of horses and the hounds vary as widely as the horses and the chase they get is such as would tire the most vigorous, ending on the grounds of the piqued neighbor who substituted the dog for the fox .The comedy has rough and tumble passages.

"Through the Window" (Pathe), August 23.—In a touching scene in this dramatic picture a child brings about a reconciliation between a father and his daughter whom he disowned because she had married against his will. It makes, taken as a whole, an effective human story, which is very well acted by Pearl White and Octavia Handworth.

"The Venom of the Poppy" (Edison), August 22.—Here is a smuggling story which has some elements of novelty. There is an interesting love tale in the smuggling case in which a girl must condemn her brother or her lover, but the brother, a customs inspector, takes the matter into his own hands, and refuses to divulge the name of the leader of the smugglers, who is his sister's sweetheart. The brother resigns. But the guilty man shows great bravery in a shipwreck and is allowed to go without imprisonment. A wedding probably follows and he starts life anew where the poppy will not tempt him.

"The Soul of the Violin" (Gaumont), August 22.—In this film is told the story of a woman who inspired her husband with her violin as he painted pictures which made him famous. Then he left her and she falls into destitution, ultimately parting with her violin, her most cherished possession. She learns the location of her husband's home and borrowing a violin from a street musician plays under the window some of the music of former happier days. The memories awakened bring him in contrition to her feet and they probably live happily ever afterward.

"How Betty Won the School" (Vitagraph), August 22.—A girl's boarding school is the well pictured background of this very breezy story. Betty is a Westerner, but she's afraid of worms. This girl ran away from the secret society meeting when frightened by wet marcaroni, thinking it worms. But later, when all the girls are having a spread to whcih she is not invited, she captures a burglar with her rope and immediately becomes the heroine of the school.

"The Rose of Kentucky" (Biograph), August 24.—On this film we have a love story which gradually develops before the audience as a planter watches a girl he has adopted grown to womanhood under his care. He loves her himself, but thinks himself too old. He shows a fine character during the attack of night riders upon the planter's barns. The chief point of interest is probably this attack.

"Bess of the Forest" (Lubin), August 24.—A little lost American girl is found by a Mexican and taken home. Years later a young surveyor hears the story from the girl's parents and later stumbles upon the Mexican's cabin and recognizes the girl from the picture of her mother in her locket. The alarm is given, but the suspicious Mexican tries to get away before the cowboys arrive. However, they are overtaken and there is a fight with knives between the Mexican and the surveyor in which the surveyor is wounded and in return the Mexican is shot. After this there is a happy family reunion and the surveyor gets his reward.

"The Cheyenne's Bride" (Pathe), August 24.—There is an exciting race in this picture which brought the audience in one theater out of their seats almost before it ended. There is enmity between the Sioux and the Cheyenne tribes. And when a Cheyenne woos a Sioux maiden he is promptly taken prisoner and condemned to death, but the girl saves him. Her incensed father binds the girl on a horse and provides a horse for a Sioux brave and the Cheyenne. The race to save the girl is exciting, but the Cheyenne wins.

"A Spanish Love Song" (Melies), August 24.—A double love story is carefully worked out on this film. With excellent acting and clear photography there is nothing lacking to make it an entertaining and interesting picture. There are dramatic situations and pretty love scenes. It is a very acceptable film.

"The Spirit of the Gorge" (Edison), August 11.—In this Indian picture there is a succession of thrills. There is also a good deal of Indian life shown. It is a love story. During some festivities the girl falls over a cliff into the gorge below. The chief appeals in vain for someone to rescue her. A figure is seen clambering down the rocks. It proves to be the brave who fell exhausted on a long run and lost her. He reaches the water, seizes a canoe, but it is dashed to pieces on the rocks. He swims to the drowning girl and keeps her above water until the tribe arrives and takes her out.

"Fate's Funny Frolic" (Essanay), August 25.—The perversity of fate furnishes the situation pictured on this film. Two young people are invited to a house party and the hostess, as a matchmaker, purposes to see that something comes of it. But unkind fate decrees that they shall meet before she has the pleasure of introducing them and there are certain circumstances connected with each meeting which put the young man in a bad light and after the third mishap the young woman has him arrested. Fate was only playing, for things become straightened out and the wedding eventually takes place. This is a bright story acceptably told and has much in it to amuse as the picture runs.

"The Little Cripple" (Kalem), August 25.—While the producers of this film do not say that they intended any particular propaganda when they released it, there is no question that it will serve as important a purpose in helping to overcome the unreasonable prejudice which exists in the minds of many toward hospitals. It represents parents objecting to sending their crippled child to a hospital for treatment, but being persuaded to do so are overjoyed at her recovery. The story is fairly well told and the happiness of the family after its re-union is almost contagious. It seems to affect the whole audience. Everyone wants to share in it.

"Nick Winter Turns a Trick" (Pathe), August 25.—Nick Winter (photoplay goers will remember him) sees a burglar take a sum of money. He disguises himself and undertakes to steal it from the thief's pocket. He is arrested, but the police insist upon the victim accompanying them to the station house. There the detective discloses his identity and the burglar is placed where he will do no harm for a time.

"Eastern Europe" (Pathe), August 25.—A series of views representing scenes in the east of Europe. Like all the Pathe travelogs they are well photographed and the pictures are acceptable.

"Across the Mountain Passes of New Zealand" (Pathe), August 25.—In this scenic the artist has selected his views carefully and the pictures afford an acceptable reproduction of the picturesque passes of a range of mountains in New Zealand. Such pictures, when well photographed, are good additions to a program. Perhaps the most serious fault with this one is that it is too short.

Independent.

"Mutt and Jeff and the Country Judge" (Nestor), August 26.—This picture has more in it than any other Mutt and Jeff picture that this reviewer has seen. It is amusing as a whole (almost) in a quite fresh and interesting way. Mutt is certainly an original villain. His villainy has a cold-blooded quality in this picture that gets over as effectively as does Jeff's hard luck. The picture ends very commendably —Mutt gets ten days, while Jeff has a vacation at Atlantic City, and Mutt dreams of him on the boardwalk.

"The Indian's Love" (Powers), August 26.—In this film an Indian love story is worked out with all the settings of warriors, gamblers, an obdurate father who insists upon giving his daughter into the hands of a man she hates and fears.

"The Hold-Up" (Solax), September 1.—An unmistakable military atmosphere keeps this exciting and fairly well conducted melodrama safely among the good films. The story is of a prank that some younger officers of the post play to frighten a comrade. To this the jealous villain very nearly contrives to give a fatal ending; but it is forestalled by a plucky girl, who has overheard the villain's lie. The soldiers of the film have the bearing of real cavalrymen. Some of the players, too, act like West Pointers. It is a story of a prank; but it is made interesting.

"The Torn Scarf" (Rex), August 31.—The players in the Sicilian vendetta picture do very well in putting over the firey, volcanic characteristics of Sicilian people. The costumes, the dances, the parts of the picture that show southern life are very interesting. The story is also entertaining, but it will hardly convince critical spectators.

"The Valley of La Vierge" (Itala).—The valley lies among Swiss mountains and a beautiful mountain torrent flows through it. The railroad follows this stream, crossing it now and again by bridges. The pictures were plainly taken from the back platform of a train ascending the valley and give a clear idea not only of the natural scenery of the place, but of the little farms, villages and dwellings.

"Gulnara" (Ambrosio), August 23.—Love and treachery are the principal motives in this film. It tells how a Greek abducted the wife of a warrior. The warrior finds her by disguising himself as a dervish. She kills the pasha and taking his ring succeeds in releasing her husband from prison. The woman escapes from the palace by means of a rope, but when the husband attempts to descend he is recognized by the renegade Greek who cuts the rope, dashing the unfortunate man to the rocks below. The photography is good, but this reviewer doesn't think the subject a wise choice. Dramas are to be commended, but a film in which there are unwarranted abductions and murders are quite as well left off the screen.

"A Gay Bachelor" (Solax), August 23.—An astonishing and amusing ending closes this comedy. It tells of a gay bachelor who meets a widow and induces her to promise to marry him. But when he calls at her city home he finds she has five children. His friends give him a tip and he borrows five others from an orphanage, presenting them as his own. To his surprise she accepts them all with open arms and the bachelor has to make the most of a bad bargain.

"The Confessional" (Champion), August 23.—The young high church Episcopal clergyman of this film is intrusted with a secret regarding a fake robbery with a tragic ending, and rather than disclose who the robber was he gave up the girl he loved, his parish and all he held dear and went to a distance to begin over again. It isn't a very convincing picture.

"Auntie and the Cowboys" (American), August 24.—The audience laughed heartily at this comedy. Auntie has upbraided the young man for his love for racing and has forbidden his calling upon her niece, Daisy, any more. Auntie herself is looking for a gentle horse. In town she sees a mule attached to an old rig and buys it. On the way home the cowboy overtakes her and challenges her to a race. And there is a race. Auntie evidently has sporting blood, too. She stands up in the rickety old vehicle and applies the gad to that mule in a way that sends it flying over the ground while Bud keeps close behind, arranging it so they arrive at the house neck and neck. Auntie immediately removes her objections to his attentions to Daisy.

"What a Pennyworth Did" (Lux), August 25.—A farce-comedy, exhibiting with considerable humor the results of a pennyworth of electricity. The stimulation gets into the organ man's music and is sufficient to keep everybody within hearing on the jump for a time, to the hearty amusement of the audience.

"The Stampede" (Solax), August 25.—The chief interest in this picture is in the stampede of horses which is reasonably well handled. The rescue of the girl from the crazed animals is not a bad piece of work. A love story runs through it which gives it heart interest.

"A Marriage in the Stars" (Eclair), August 28.—Very good acting sets this film among the best of the week. The story makes amusing comedy and there's just a touch of farce given to it in the right places, like salt, that keeps it pleasant. The players are from the famous Parisian theaters, and what this reviewer especially noticed was the marked contrast that their rendering of the scene where the irascible parent dismisses as unwelcome would-be son-in-law makes with the rendering that this not uncommon scene usually gets. In the usual film the parent seems to think it necessary to overdraw a rage until it becomes ridiculous. So skilfully is the comic situation acted in this film that the action seems natural in that particular atmosphere, even in those parts that required farce. It would have been no hard matter to make the scene where the two lovers attempt to commit suicide seem very foolish. As these two artists put it over, it is hard to tell it from pathos; in fact, though not a great scene nor a very remarkable one, but it was handled with remarkable intelligence.

"His Royal Highness" (Imp), August 28.—The reason why stories like "Cinderella" are so everlastingly charming lies in our own human weakness. Nearly all of us are Cinderellas more or less. We find it very easy to identify ourselves with any Cinderella heroine, we can sympathize with her, pity her and love her. Any picture, drama or story that gives us anything like a true Cinderella is sure to be well received. "His Royal Highness" does this very effectively and though one might point out a few flat places in the comedy, the story is told with many very humorous incidents. It is the domineering elder sister who lets herself be flattered by a crazy man whom she parades as the royalty, over the town, while the true prince is helping the younger sister with the dishes.

One has some reason for thinking that producers rely too much on the freedom humor gives in making up their scenes. Humor is spontaneous. It doesn't come by rule. For this very reason any apparent working for effect or planning kills the fun. In this picture we see the crazy man going into a costumers to buy a gown and crown while we know that he has no money. This lets the cat out of the bag and afterward when he appears dressed up it isn't nearly so funny as it would have been if he had come by the costume more naturally, taken then from the costumer's wash line, for instance; but that would have caused the scenario writer much trouble to arrange for.

"The Western Doctor's Peril" (American), August 28.—A fairly well conducted, exciting and possible story of a doctor's experience is pictured on this film. The doctor (the player who takes this part fills it very acceptably) is hurrying to a sick patient. A crime has been committed (a murder and a robbery) and the thief has galloped on. The doctor takes the road behind him also cantering. The crime is discovered and the posse is now seen following the criminal, but behind the doctor. Just before these men reach him, the doctor has picked up a bag of money, part of the plunder, and a bit further on at the watering trough is found "with the goods on him." His friend the sheriff has difficulty in saving him from lynching.

From this point the story is pictured dramatically, what we have already seen being a necessary statement of the situation. And the way the situation is handled is very commendable, for the denouément is the struggle between the sheriff, who demands that the doctor have a fair trial, and the murdered man's brother, who schemes to have the doctor lynched, is directly brought about by the doctor's character. The spectator knows him to be innocent and, what is more, sees the fine and human traits of his character as working not only to save him but to clear him from suspicion even of his enemies. The spectators are made very deeply interested because th doctor, as pictured, is shown so worthy of human sympathy and respect. This is the most commendable part of a very good picture.

There is originality and freshness too in the way this denouément is brought about. The dead man's brother, in order to get the sheriff out of the way, tells him in a note sent anonymously that the real culprit may be found at a village some miles off. This touch of villainy intensifies the struggle, yet it is suggested to him by his deire for revenge.

It isn't inhuman; we can understand it. After the sheriff departs, he takes his gang to the prison to hang the doctor, but the doctor isn't there. Without the man's knowing it, his little son has fallen and is unconscious. The boy's mother, her husband not being at home, has run to the sheriff's house and begged the keys to get the doctor. The doctor is glad to be of service and help the boy. The sheriff meanwhile has found the real culprit and with proof of the crime is coming back. The lynchers find the doctor attending the chief lyncher's son, and just at this point the sheriff arrives. It's a picture that a human mind can take pleasure in. It's a good Western picture.

"The Patched Shoe" (Solax), August 30.—In this comedy a mischievous but very interesting little girl and a burlesque rural detective play the chief parts. It has some very humorous scenes and serves very well indeed as light entertainment.

"How Tony Became a Hero" (Champion), August 30.—There is a very original vein of farce and humor in this Western comic picture. To give a taste of what its quality is—a cowboy is dicovered by three Indians and, like a possum or a bear, climbs a small tree. The Indians make a fire under the tree and smoke him out; but this, as pictured, is really amusing. The presence of a white donkey in the picture is one of its assets. The solemn common sense pictured by this animal is in amusing contrast with the asinine goings-on around him. These asinine doings, however, are meant to be funny, and a large percentage of them truly are.

"The Moth" (Thanhouser), August 29.—It might be well, according to this film, for an officious young man to delay saving the house until he investigates the source and cause of the smoke. This young man, when he organized a bucket brigade and put out a fire ma had lighted to put the kibosh on moths, got in wrong with ma, lost the girl and received a sample of what ma could say and how vigorously she could say it when occasion demanded. He thought he should at least be praised for saving the house, even though he did ruin the furniture. The hurt expression on his face is deliciously humorous when he realizes the full import of the occurrences.

"The White Chief" (Powers), August 29.—An Indian picture of some merit, having one scene that reminds one of the story of Moses, whose own mother was hired to nurse him after he was found in the bullrushes. This Indian mother forsakes her babe, but is granted the privilege of caring for it after other squaws discover it. The boy grows up and defeats other braves, becoming the chief of the tribe. Eventually he wins the hand of the squaw of his choice, though not without some romantic trials.

"An Indian Legend" (Bison), August 29.—The principal feature in this all-Indian picture is the rescue of the maid condemned to death for treachery and placed in a canoe to be sent through the rapids. She is rescued by her lover in a sensational manner. There are some war scenes and scenes of warlike preparations which are interesting as showing what the Indians did under such circumstances, and thrilling because they are well acted. The backgrounds of the scenes and the rushing water in the rapids are natural and filled with attractive, wild beauty.

"A Daughter of Dixie" (Champion), August 28.—Another in the Champion's series of war stories, telling of the love of a Union soldier for a Southern lassie and how she held a searching party, led by her brother at bay with a musket pointed at his breast while her lover was making his way from the house as rapidly as possible. After the war closed he returned to the South to claim his sweetheart and her brother was the one to welcome him most warmly. These stories all have something of the thrill of the clash of arms and the counter claim of love, but are all more or less improbable.

"The Power of Devotion" (Yankee), August 28.—A man who went insane and turned against his faithful wife is shown on this film. He is sent to a sanitarium, from which he escapes, and she takes up the search for him alone. She finds him on the brink of a dangerous precipice. He falls over and the fall restores his reason. The first face he sees is hers and her loyalty, as shown, brings him back shortly to himself.

"An Obliging Young Man" (Eclair), August 28.—Here is a story of how courtesy is its own reward. Some cynics are disposed to reiterate the assertion that no one else rewards it. This young man was a genius in obliging. What he couldn't think about and couldn't do all in an instant wouldn't be worth the trouble required to discover them. The favors performed are astonishing and lead to complications in which much fun lurks.

"Views of Hot Springs, Arkansas" (Imp), August 28.—This travelog illustrates some of the most attractive scenery about this popular resort. Many have never seen Hot Springs, consequently this picture will be doubly welcomed. It is well worth while as a scenic and it conveys interesting information regarding a place much spoken of in the papers.

"THE MAN BEHIND THE SCREEN."

"The man behind the screen" or the famous talking pictures of to-day is no cinch, says "Jack Stinson," at the "New Comedy Theater," Broadway and Sixty-fifth Street, New York. One day comedy and the next day drama makes a man hustle in the line of talk. The question is, why have these so-called "talking pictures" made such a hit with the public of to-day? Simply because it tells the story to those who would not exactly understand what they were looking at upon the sheet. So it's the man behind that does the trick and it is believed by Mr. Stinson that the high-class operas of the present time can be produced in time by the picture companies and used in the same manner.

SELIG WILL RELEASE FOUR REELS PER WEEK.

Starting with the release of Friday, Sept. 8, 1911, "The Heart of John Barlow," the Selig Polyscope Company will increase their regular weekly program to four reels per week. For the present this new Friday release will not be limited to any one class of productions, but will be noted for its wide range of unique subjects.

"The Heart of John Barlow" is a strong dramatic story of a sea-faring man's love and devotion to his home, wife and little ones, and is especially appropriate for the first subject on this new release.

LAVEZZI MAKES OWN PARTS.

E. W. Lavezzi, of the Lavezzi Machine Works, wishes to make the fact known to all persons interested that all parts he is using in repairing machines are not what are termed "genuine manufacturers' parts." The Lavezzi Machine Works will use whatever parts they see fit to accomplish the desired result, regardless of who makes the part. "Close examination and actual use of our hardened and improved parts will prove that nothing better is made," says Lavezzi.

"THREE-SHEETS" AND BOOKLETS WITH "ROMEO AND JULIET."

In addition to the extra lobby display matter on "Romeo and Juliet" Thanhouser Company has been offering exhibitors gratis, they announce that both three-sheet posters and special booklets for theater distribution are now available to exhibitors who wish to spend a little money in featuring the picture. This makes "Romeo and Juliet" the first film issued as a regular release on a manufacturer's regular release day, to be honored with a three-sheet poster, or indeed anything over the size of a one-sheet. The departure, since it is made in behalf of a Shakesperian production, a "classic," would seem to prove that the best classes of people are being drawn to the moving pictures.

KALEM ACTORS AS HUNTERS OF WILD ANIMALS.

The Kalem stock company operating in Santa Monica Canyon, California, under the able direction of Mr. P. C. Hartigan, find a diversity of entertainment during their spare moments in playing the part of Nimrod. As evidence of their prowess a collection of handsome skins is now displayed in the Kalem Company's general office, 235 West Twenty-third Street, New York. Among the collection of skins are deer, coyote, mountain goat, rattlesnake and gopher. These trophies from the wilds give us a true idea of the surroundings where Mr. Hartigan and company are producing Kalem pictures.

WARNING!

Do not pay any money for subscriptions to the Moving Picture World to H. T. MAY, 423 Glenmore Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y. He is not authorized to act as our Agent.

MOVING PICTURE WORLD, 125 E. 23d St., New York City.

Manufacturers Advance Notes

"THROUGH THE AIR" (Imp).

In line with the interest pertaining to aviation, the Imp Company has filmed a story that will no doubt prove of more than passing interest. The drama is entitled "Through the Air" and is for early release. The picture shows a genuine air ship in flight in a thrilling race with a racing automobile, the aviator being the hero of the story and, of course, right triumphs in a most novel manner. The film is an expensive one, for the services of bird-men and their craft come high, but the end has justified the means and the result is highly gratifying to the Imp director, who staged the drama, as well as to the heads of the concern. The scenes are laid in the West, the locality being admirably selected and the careful attention to details is marked. There is a strong plot in which there is a scheme to cheat an old miner out of his right. The plot is frustrated by the daughter of the old man, who enlists the services of a young inventor who is experimenting with an airship. The villain steals the papers to the claim and starts across the country to file on them. Duplicate papers are placed in the hands of the aviator and he makes a flight to the office of the recorder, racing against what appear to be hopeless odds, as he is handicapped at the start. The race is one of the most exciting effects ever witnessed on the screen, with the air navigator winning by a small margin. The hero returns to his garage to be met by the girl, who rewards him with her love and the plotters are chagrined by failure. There is a thrill in every foot of the film.

Scene from "Through the Air" (Imp).

The Presbyterian Church of Grand Junction, Colo., has purchased a projection apparatus and will conduct a regular Sunday evening moving picture service.

"THE LIFE SAVER" (Lubin).

One of the very best stories that has ever been produced by the Lubin Company is entitled "The Life Saver," and will be released Wednesday, September 20th. It has been produced by the premier Lubin stock company, which is now in Maine. The entire picture is filled with magnificent local color—the ocean, the mighty rock-bound coast, a life-saving station, a light-house, etc. One of its features is an exhibition drill of the government life-saving corps. The fall or slide down the face of the cliff is really remarkable, as is also the rescue by the hero of the piece. The picture contains also considerable comedy of a high order and has several dramatic situations of great intensity.

Scene from Lubin's Release, "The Life Saver."

The story concerns Jack Ronald, a daring life guard; his sweetheart, Jessie Storm, daughter of the life guards' Captain, and James Calvin, the son of the District Inspector. The latter arrived at the station one day with a party of friends to inspect it and immediately began paying marked attentions to Jessie. These were distasteful to her until she noticed Jack acting as cavalier to Vera Stanhope, one of the guests. Then, to arouse her lover's jealousy, she began a lively flirtation. She was quite successful in her object, for when Jack saw her in young Calvin's automobile, he immediately lost all interest in Miss Stanhope. That evening after the visitors had gone, the two lovers parted after a quarrel.

Calvin returned a few days later to see Jessie and while seeking her on the cliff he lost his footing and fell down to the water's edge, where his foot caught in a crevice and he was held at the mercy of the incoming tide. His cries were finally heard by Jessie, who rushed away and told Jack. That brave guardsman scornfully refused to rescue his supposed rival, but he could not resist the pleas of the girl whom he still loved with his whole heart, and at the risk of his own life he rescued the man whom he believed to be the cause of all his unhappiness. Calvin was taken to Jessie's home, while his rescuer sat down to brood on the cliff.

When Calvin was resuscitated he asked to see the man who had saved his life. When the reluctant Jack was brought in, Calvin shook hands with him and then drew out a large roll of bills which he thrust into his hand. The brave guard's bitterest feelings were aroused at this. He scornfully threw the money on the floor and stalked out of the room. Calvin made a bad blunder worse by trying to treat it lightly, and Jessie, angered at this insult to her lover, told him in good round terms what she thought of him. Then she ran out and hurried along the cliff until she found her noble lover and there was a delicious reconciliation.

THE BURGLARIZED BURGLAR (Essanay).

The Essanay Company's reputation for good comedies is well sustained in "The Burglarized Burglar," a comedy which is genuinely original in plot and excellently acted by the Essanay Chicago players. It is the story of a fortune-hunter and an heiress and what fate hands the fortune hunter in a nice little package, labeled "Stung," will be productive of many laughs.

In the comedy, Francis Bushman as Howard Graham, the young hack-writer and fortune hunter, ably interprets the part, while Dorothy Phillips, the Essanay's popular little ingenue is pleasing as Dorothy Willard, the heiress.

The story, in brief, tells of the love of Dorothy and Howard, which is strangely objected to, however, by Dorothy's father, who has set his heart to marry Dorothy to a man of means. Graham is a typical hall-room boy, but by appearances and bald nerve manages to keep pace with the fast set in which Dorothy travels and stand off his creditors.

Scene from "Burglarized Burglar" (Essanay).

When the story opens Graham has about reached the end of his string and is contemplating several "duns" which have closely followed a request from Dorothy to take her to the opera and a reminder of her coming birthday, all of which finds him flat broke. While thus engaged Graham is surprised by the sudden entrance of a man through his chamber window. In his haste the fellow drops a revolver which

Scene from "Burglarized Burglar" (Essanay).

Graham hastily secures and covers the intruder. Noting that the fellow's pockets bulge suspiciously he searches him forthwith, extracting a pearl necklace, a wallet and a watch, all of which plunder the buglar was previously seen taking from the Willard home.

This was a windfall to Graham and he proceeded at once to the Willard home, first locking the burglar in his closet. But trouble began to come his way when he presented Dorothy with the necklace. The girl innocently showed it to her father who thought it looked familiar. He at once made an investigation and discovered that his house had been robbed of a necklace he had purchased for his daughter, his money and his watch, so he sent for a policeman and accuses Graham of having stolen the articles.

Graham now insists that it was all a joke; that he knew the things were from the Willard's, and that he has the burglar from whom he took them, locked up in his closet. Willard demands to be shown and the family follow Graham and the policeman to Graham's room, but when the young man throws open the closet door he finds that the burglar has flown. The policeman prepares to take Graham into custody, but Willard does not want any scandal. The family, however, look upon him as the thief and Dorothy follows her parents out with her nose in the air, leaving poor Graham with his troubles and the opera tickets, which he tears to small bits.

The release date of this picture is September 15th.

THE UPWARD WAY.

An Inspirational Picture, Done in Colors, by Gaumont—A Kleine Release.

This picture is historical in character, being built around incidents in the life of Giovanni Battista Lully, the Florentine violinist, born in 1633, died 1687. He was a contemporary of Moliere; in fact, they were intimate friends and Lully composed interpretative music for several of Moliere's dramas. Lully is perhaps best known to the world of music for his introduction of the lively and melodious dance music in the place of the slow and dignified style which had been common until his entry into the field of original composition.

Scenes from Gaumont's "The Upward Way."

In 1650 he left his home in Italy and went to Paris, and there, after severe hardships, he found a place in the orchestra of the French Court. Although friendless and a stranger in a strange country, his strong personality and decided originality in the composition of music soon made a place for him in the artistic circles of the French capital and afterward led to wealth and honor.

Lully is the author of some twenty operas, which met with very enthusiastic receptions upon their introduction to the public of his day, and some of which attest his excellence as a composer by the fact that they are played now with great success.

Not confining himself to composition of new melodies, he made a close study of the orchestra into which he introduced several new instruments and he also exhibited deep study in his staging of his own operas, occasionally taking some of the leading parts himself.

The incidents of the film, although containing certain elements of fiction, serve to combine with the dramatic entertainment features of an educational nature in that they well present the energy and resourcefulness of the poor Florentine musician who made for himself one of the greatest place in the world of music.

There are fourteen scenes, which appear in the following order:

1. The Duchess of Montpensier holds a reception for celebrities.
2. The Duke of Guise arrives.
3. The daughter of Lambert, the king's music master, faints after rendering a violin solo.
4. The Duke of Guise calls for Lully, his Italian servant, who possesses a marvelous medicine.
5. Lully becomes infatuated with Lambert's daughter.
6. Lully proves a better musician than servant. He is ejected from the kitchen.
7. He serenades Lambert's daughter and wins her father's admiration.
8. Lambert, in his capacity as master of the Royal Orchestra, presents Lully to Louis XIV.
9. Moliere and Lully collaborate in the production of "The Country Gentleman."
10. The presentation before the king. The leading actor is late—a messenger comes to the stage saying, "His Majesty is impatient."
11. Lully prepares to play the leading part—he replaces an owl on the stage decorations by a sunflower, the king's emblem.
12. "Gentlemen, the king grows more impatient."
13. Lully holds the play until all is in readiness.
14. After the performance. The king congratulates Lully and asks Lambert to give the hand of his daughter in marriage to the composer.

"HAL CHASE'S HOME RUN" (Kalem).

Kalem has turned out a good picture introducing a baseball game and featuring Hal Chase, famous first-baseman and manager of the New York American League team. A little love comedy opens the subject, showing Grace and her sweetheart, Tom, who is anxious to get married. Tom is a good "fan" and coaxes Grace to go to a game. She gets interested, so much so that she makes a condition of marriage that the home team, the Highlanders, must win the pennant, and she gives Tom to understand that there is nothing doing if Hal Chase's Huskies do not make good.

Scene from "Hal Chase's Home Run" (Kalem).

Tom is very much disturbed when this information sinks in, but he gets an idea: he will see Chase and explain the situation. So he goes out to the grounds one morning while the team is practising and has a talk with Chase, who tells him that the pennant is cinched if the team wins that day's game. Tom rushes back to tell Grace and they both attend the decisive game that afternoon—a regular battle between New York and Cleveland. In the succeeding scenes of the picture Chase is shown playing his position on first; then he goes to bat and raps out a home run, bringing in two baserunners and getting home in a sensational slide, scoring three and saving the game for the home team.

Several close-up views of the famous Highlander in action are given in the picture, and in the final scene Chase calls upon the lovers at Grace's home and is shown the engagement ring, after which he joins their hands and gives them a sort of "God bless you, my children," for it was really his good stickwork that cinched the engagement for Tom.

NEW MOTION PICTURE COMPANY FOR ST. LOUIS.

The St. Louis Motion Picture Company, the incorporators of which are not named, has been formed to manufacture motion pictures in St. Louis, Mo., and will soon be ready to release. The company is under the direction of G. P. Hamilton, well known in the motion picture business. Mr. Hamilton will have sole control of the new company's studio and factory, assisted by a staff of experienced picture men in every department. The new company is incorporated under the laws of the State of Missouri and is financed by St. Louis capitalists. The product will be marketed under the trade name of "Shamrock."

Calendar of Independent Releases

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 4, 1911.

AMERICAN—The Cowboy and the Artist (W. Dr.)....1000
CHAMPION—Grant and Lincoln (Dramatic)..... 950
ECLAIR—All On Account of Coat (Comedy)..... 886
IMP—The Haunted House (Dramatic).....1000
YANKEE—Inshavogue (Dramatic) .....

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 5, 1911.

BISON—Little Dove's Romance (Dramatic).....
POWERS—Red Feather's Friendship (Dramatic)..... 960
THANHOUSER—Count Ivan and the Waitress (Dr.).

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 6, 1911.

AMBROSIO—Tweedledum and the Adventuress (Com.)
AMBROSIO—Italian Artillery (Scenic) .....
CHAMPION—When the Law Came In (Dramatic)...
NESTOR—The Flower of the Tribe (W. Dr.).....
RELIANCE—Temptation (Dramatic) .....
SOLAX—The Best Policy (Mil. Dr.).....

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 7, 1911.

AMERICAN—Three Million Dollars (W. Dr.).....1000
IMP—Duty (Dramatic) .....
ITALA—Infinitive Ways of Providence (Dramatic)...
REX—Picturesque Colorado (Scenic) .....

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 1911.

BISON—A Western Tramp (Dramatic).....
LUX—Bill Buys a Lobster (Comedy).....350
LUX—A Romance of a Wager (Dramatic)..... 642
SOLAX—The Best Policy (Military Drama).....
THANHOUSER—Romeo and Juliet (Dramatic).....
YANKEE—Faded Roses (Dramatic) .....

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 9, 1911.

ITALA—Foolshead Hypnotizer (Comedy) .....
GREAT NORTHERN—A Dream With a Lesson (Dr.).
POWERS—The Twin Squaws (Dramatic)..... 975
RELIANCE—His Dream (Dramatic) .....
NESTOR—Mutt and Jeff and the Escaped Lunatic (Comedy) .....

FOUR LUBIN REELS WEEKLY.

Beginning with the week of September 6 the Lubin Company will release four reels per week. There will be a liberal sprinkling of the popular Lubin comedies among the four reels, together with strong dramatic subjects in which Miss Lawrence figures in the leading parts.

"THE MISSION WAIF" (Melies).

Subject of Cover Illustration.

Our current front cover illustration is from a forthcoming Melies subject entitled "The Mission Waif," which will be released September 28. The picture was taken on the grounds of one of the old Spanish Missions of California and is rich in settings and beautiful in conception. The story concerns a bandit, wounded by pursuers, who is harbored in the old Mission by a pretty girl who was adopted in her youth. A pretty romance follows which ends in the death of the bandit, who is killed in defending the Mission against the Indians.

HIGH PRAISE FOR CHAMPION PICTURES.

Regarding the Champion's Monday program of war stories and historical dramas, gleaned from American history, comes a letter from a far away exhibitor that proves the growing popularity of this class of Champion pictures:

Sidney Mines, Cape Breton.
Nova Scotia, Aug. 25th, 1911.

The Champion Film Co.

Gentlemen:—The laudable efforts of Peace Congresses and the provisions of Arbitration Treaties, to the contrary, notwithstanding, the masses of humanity still dearly love a fight, and from the days of the shepherd stripling, slung-stone in hand, on the plains of Palestine, in the early ages, right away down to the burly colored "heavy champ" within the ropes at Reno, the world has vociferously acclaimed its champions. A like reception invariably awaits the exhibitors of Champion films, with their realistic and blood-stirring battle scenes and border romances. This tribute I am tendering gratis, as a token of my growing admiration for the execlient drawing qualities of your reels. Yours for crowds,

W. H. CUZNER,
Mgr. Crown Theater.

Calendar of Licensed Releases

CURRENT RELEASES.

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 4th, 1911.

BIOGRAPH—The Stuff Heroes Are Made Of (Dramatic) 998
KALEM—Rory O'More (Dramatic) 1000
LUBIN—A Gay Time in Washington (Comedy) .....
PATHE—The Hermit (A Western Drama) 1000
SELIG—How Algy Captured a Wild Man (Comedy) 1000
VITAGRAPH—Jealousy (Dramatic) 1000

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 5th, 1911.

EDISON—The Three Musketeers, Part I (Dramatic) 1000
ESSANAY—The Diamond Gang (Dramatic) 980
GAUMONT—A Society Mother (Dramatic) 1030
PATHE—Pathe's Weekly No. 36 (Topical) .....
SELIG—The Totem Mark (Historical Drama) 1000
VITAGRAPH—A Friendly Marriage (Dramatic) 1000

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 6th, 1911.

EDISON—The Three Musketeers, Part II (Dramatic) . 1000
ECLIPSE—Clever Beyond Her Years (Dramatic) 675
ECLIPSE—Lake Thum in Switzerland (Scenic) 325
KALEM—When Two Hearts Are Won (Comedy) 1000
LUBIN—A Question of Modesty (Dramatic) 600
LUBIN—Pardon Me (Comedy) 400
PATHE—Honoring a Hero (Dramatic) 1000
VITAGRAPH—The Willow Tree (Dramatic) 1000

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 7th, 1911.

BIOGRAPH—The Old Confectioner's Mistake (Dramatic) 998
ESSANAY—The Dark Romance of a Tobacco can (Comedy) 700
ESSANAY—Never Believe in Signs (Comedy) 300
LUBIN—The Story of Rosie's Rose (Dramatic) 1000
MELIES—The Hobo Cowboy (Dramatic) 1000
PATHE—The Red Man's Dog (Ind. Dr.) 675
PATHE—Japanese Dice and Butterflies (Scenic) 328
SELIG—A Tennessee Love Story (Dramatic) 1000

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 8th, 1911.

EDISON—At Jones's Ferry (Dramatic) 1000
ESSANAY—The Wrong Glove (Comedy) 990
KALEM—When the Sun Went Out (Dramatic) 1000
PATHE—Culture of the Dahlia (Educational) 559
PATHE—Arabian Types and Customs (Scenic) 425
SELIG—The Heart of John Barlow (Dr.) 1000
VITAGRAPH—Cherry Blossoms (Dramatic) 1000

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 9th, 1911.

EDISON—That Winsome Winning Smile (Comedy) ... 500
EDISON—That Winsome Winnie Smile (Comedy) 500
ESSANAY—Broncho Bill's Last Spree (W. Comedy) .. 980
GAUMONT—Mated by Chess (Dramatic) 660
GAUMONT—Farming—Old and New Methods 377
LUBIN—The Ranch's New Barber (Comedy) 600
LUBIN—The Ward (Comedy) 400
PATHE—A Tragedy at Sea (Dramatic) 1000
VITAGRAPH—Jimmie's Job (Comedy) 1000

ADVANCE RELEASES.

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 11, 1911.

BIOGRAPH—The Village Hero (Comedy) 675
BIOGRAPH—The Lucky Horseshoe (Comedy) 321
KALEM—A Sheepman's Triumph (Dramatic) 1000
LUBIN—Divided Interests (Dramatic) 1000
PATHE—Eva Is Tired of Life (Comedy) .....
PATHE—Little Moritz and the Butterfly (Comedy) ....
PATHE—From Lourdes to Garvarnie (Scenic) .....
SELIG—Kit Carson's Wooing (Drama) 990
VITAGRAPH—Foraging (Dramatic) 1000

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 12, 1911.

EDISON—Off the Coast of Maine (Scenic) 265
EDISON—Under the Tropical Sun (Dramatic) 735
ESSANAY—Two Men and a Girl (Dramatic) 980
GAUMONT—How to Catch a Bachelor (Comedy) 836
GAUMONT—From Bordeaux to Pauillac, France (Sc.) 164
PATHE—Pathe's Weekly No. 37 (Topical) .....
SELIG—Dad's Girl (Dramatic) 1000
VITAGRAPH—Her Crowning Glory (Comedy) 1000

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 13, 1911.

EDISON—The Escaped Lunatic (Comedy) 500
EDISON—For the Queen (Comedy) 500
ECLIPSE—The Hand of the Law (Dramatic) 665
ECLIPSE—Norwich and Vicinity (Scenic) 330
KALEM—The Express Envelope (Dramatic) 1000
LUBIN—His Girlie (Dramatic) 1000
PATHE—A Prisoner of the Mohicans (Dramatic) 1000
VITAGRAPH—Beyond the Law (Dramatic) 1000

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 14, 1911.

BIOGRAPH—The Squaw's Love (Dramatic) 998
ESSANAY—The Puncher's Law (Western Drama 980
LUBIN—Al Martin's Game (Dramatic) 1000
MELIES—A Shattered Dream (Dramatic) 1000
PATHE—College Sweetheart (Comedy) .....
PATHE—Art Industries in Kabylie (Ind.) .....
SELIG—The Wheels of Justice (Dramatic) 1000

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 15, 1911.

EDISON—The Lighthouse by the Sea (Dramatic) 1000
ESSANAY—The Burglarized Burglar (Comedy) 980
KALEM—The Alpine Lease (Dramatic) 1000
PATHE—Madame Tallien (Dramatic) .....
PATHE—Every-Day Life in Mallaca (Scenic) .....
SELIG—(Title not reported).
VITAGRAPH—Vitagraph Monthly (Scenic) 1000

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 16, 1911.

EDISON—(Title not reported).
ESSANAY—The Millionaire and the Squatter (W. Dr.) 980
GAUMONT—The Cinematograph Fiend (Comedy) 575
GAUMONT—A Mountain Torrent in Austria (Scenic) .. 415
LUBIN—Cement Rock Blasting (Ind.) .....
LUBIN—The Scheme that Failed (Comedy) .....
PATHE—A Western Memory (Dramatic) 1000
VITAGRAPH—By Woman's Wit (Comedy) 1000

WANTED 10 Experienced Exchange Managers must furnish best of references and bond. Apply by letter only enclosing full particulars. No interviews granted until after receipt of first letter.

W. S. MILLIKEN

145 West 45th St. New York City

CAMERAMAN, ALSO DEVELOPER wanted for Western studio. Apply, stating experience and further particulars, to "Middle-West," care M. P. World.

WOOD FOLDING CHAIRS

All styles, hard maple. Seats fold independent of legs. Best and cheapest chair on the market for Moving Picture Shows.

Columbus Awning & Furniture Company

832 Ninth Avenue New York City

NEW FIELD BIG MONEY EASY WORK

Why don't you think up plots for Motion Picture plays? It's easy, and pays well. We teach you by mail how to write and sell your plots. Many successful graduates.

DEMAND UNLIMITED. FULL DETAILS FREE.

ASSOCIATED MOTION PICTURE SCHOOLS

911 Chicago Opera House Building CHICAGO

CORRESPONDENCE

IN THE MISSISSIPPI VALLEY.

The Varsity, one of the two houses which are operated at Havana, Ill., by the volunteer fire department of that city, is moving to a new site on Orange Street. The building has been remodeled and a new inclined floor laid.

R. P. Hanahan, a former resident of Urbana, Ill., has leased the airdome in Urbana for two years, with a privilege of renewing it for a third year. Mr. Hanahan formerly was in vaudeville.

A. H. Peterson, of Chester, Ill., has leased the La Sousa Building on North Market Street, Marion, Ill., and will open a moving picture show. A new front and a stage for vaudeville will be built.

Alderman Robinson, of Beloit, Wis., has introduced a measure into the city council, asking for the censorship of moving picture shows, along with dance halls, and vaudeville theaters.

Richard Griffith and his son, John Griffith, under the firm name of Griffith & Griffith, have opened the Star Theater at Belvidere, Ill., giving pictures and vaudeville.

The remodeled Lyric has been opened at Gibson City, Ill., by C. J. Grim.

The Airdome, Commerce Street, Galena, Ill., owned by William Tiffany, was destroyed by a young tornado August 18, causing a loss of $800. Mr. Tiffany and others, who were in the tent at the time, escaped with minor injuries. Tent poles were leveled and the canvas torn to shreds, the seats were broken and the scenery wrecked. Both the pianos and the picture machine were badly damaged.

Minonk, Ill., may have a new opera house erected jointly by the lodges of Masons and Modern Woodmen of America.

E. B. Terpinitz, J. O. Gentry, Dr. A. G. Purdy, George Schwartz and Will Hays, have leased the Opera House at Carbondale, Ill.

Miss Lora Atto is the pianist at the re-opened Crystal at Rantoul, Ill.

William Coleman, of Aurora, Ill., announces that he will open a moving picture show on Broadway, in that city, in the fall.

Richard Griffith, operator at the Casino Theater, Herrin, Ill., and Miss Rachel Davis, of that city, were recently married.

The Star Theater, at Henry, Ill., has been purchased by J. K. O'Neill, of Chicago.

The staff of the Irwin Theater, St. Charles, Ill., this year will consist of: Manager, Fritz Carlson; ticket-seller, Paul Kollauf; orchestra leader, Franz Ronz; operator, Andrew Pierson, and assistant and utility man, Arthur Sweetman.

Watseka, Ill., has a new ordinance requiring a license fee of $50 a year from moving picture shows.

The business men of Eureka, Ill., give a free moving picture show each Tuesday evening to attract shoppers to the town. The entertainment is given in the public square.

Walter A. McDowell, of Belvidere, Ill., has leased the Derthick Opera House in that city.

Even the smaller town patrons have rebelled at the "vaudeville." Witness these extracts from papers where was once a good Southern Illinois "suit-case circuit:"

"The day of the cheap vaudeville, such as is seen in the moving picture houses, is passing, if the reports of the hooking agencies are true. Complaint from the booking agencies regarding the discontinuance of vaudeville, in the motion picture shows, is the best evidence that cheap vaudeville is doomed to go, as the booking agent is in that business. In many circuits out of the big cities, the vaudeville teams are compelled to make such big jumps that the railroad fare is quite an item. At one time a St. Louis booking firm had enough houses on this circuit to keep a team out two weeks, but now there is only two on this same circuit, Litchfield and Mt. Olive. Vaudeville, no matter how cheap, is an expense to the motion picture show proprietor. Nine out of every ten would rather spend more for pictures and cut out the vaudeville, but shows are run according to the wishes of the patrons. It has always been a question, why well meaning, and refined people will go night after night and hear the "guff of the gutter" dished out by pin-headed vaudeville people, that are not performers—just got a lot of nerve and its real nerve, too."—Litchfield Herald.

"Manager Fellis, of the Hillshoro Opera House, is seriously considering the idea of doing away with vaudeville acts as a steady diet in his electric theater. The general public is tired of the regular singing, talking and dancing acts put on by the average bone-headed vaudeville artist, and are demanding something new. Manager Fellis proposes to quit the vaudeville circuit and give his audience vandeville only once or twice a week, and to give them only extra good numbers then. He will put on more reels and will probably contract with another picture company, so as to get new faces and new scenes in his films."—Hillsboro News.

We have been marveling at the Southern Illinois newspaper accounts of a fake train robbery produced at Granite City, Ill., by the "Edison Vitagraph Company" especially this: "The bandits tore the masks from their faces and wrung the hands of the members of the train crew. Then the members of the train crew walked across to a string of box cars nearby, climbed thereon and were allowed to look at the great train robbery film, 2,000 feet of it, just made." While you wait? F. H. M.

SEATTLE, WASH.

Mr. J. W. Griggs and J. H. Crook, have bought out Belloir's photoplay theater at Black Doamond, Wash, and it will hereafter be known as the Diamond photoplay theater.

Mr. W. B. Hoyt, 640 Trafton Street So., of Tacoma, Wash., has begun showing pictures around Puget Sound with his gasoline launch furnishing his current by means of a cable from his launch. Mr. Hoyt will no doubt make a success of this venture, as there are many small towns on the sound.

Dr. Jacobs has bought the Ideal Theater, of North Yakima, Wash., from Gordon Wenkler. It was formerly the Avenue Theater, started by Mr. Fred Shafer. The policy of the house will remain the same.

The Green Lake Theater, at 7201 Woodland Avenue, opened August 8, 1911, and is playing to very good business. J. W. Cranney and James Forrest are proprietors.

The Crown Theater, at 1016 First Avenue, of this city, owned by S. T. Hunserberg, has been sold to R. C. Sinclair.

Mr. W. Adams will operate the Starland Theater, of Aberdeen, Wash., which, until recent date, has been under the management of Mr. T. J. Lyle. The policy of the house will remain the same, Licensed service being used. Mr. Adams was formerly with Davis and Adams, of the Orpheum Theater, Cosmopolitas, Wash.

Mr. Lichenhert, of the Tannhauser Theater, Tacoma, Wash., has closed his theater and will move to a better location, and expects to open in about ten days in the residential part of the city.

It is rumored that a large protoplay theater will be constructed between the Pantages and Empress Theaters in Tacoma.

Mr. E. E. Belloir, formerly of Black Diamond, Wash., has bought the Columbia Theater at Renton, Wash. Mr. Belloir has remodeled the Columbia, and is playing to very good business.

The Washington Association, for prevention and relief for tuberculosis, headquarters 915 Cobb Bldg., Seattle, Wash., have started a campaign for three months throughout the State. Miss B. I. Beals, executive secretary, is in charge and will lecture on the films. Thos. Edison, Incorporated, has given the use of the following films: "The Man Who Learned," "The Wedding Bell," "Suffer Little Children," and "The Red Cross Seal." The films will be shown in photoplay houses preceding regular hours.

Mrs. D. V. Lucas has bought the Rose Theater, of Anacortes, Wash., from Mr. H. Swain. The policy of the house will remain the same, service being secured from the Seattle Branch of the General Film Co.

Mr. W. F. Kerr has bought a half interest in the Star Theater, at Sunnyside, Wash., from Mr. J. G. Sill. Mr. Kerr will remain in Sunnyside and will co-operate with Mr. Sill.

Mr. E. D. Tate, salesman for the Western Film Co., of this city, reports that North Yakima has five motion picture theaters, all of which are doing a very good business. Mr. Tate secured the Ideal Theater for service which was formerly supplied by the Pacific Film Exchange, also the Peerless Theater, of Montesano, Wash., owned by Mr. Harry Howell, also the Savoy and Washington Theater, of this city.

The Old Family Theater, on Pike Stdeet, which has seen better days, has been transformed into a store front. It was last occupied by the People's Amusement Co., of Portland, Ore.

The Pastime Theater, of this city, owned by Mr. Frank Stebbings, has changed his film service from the Pacific Film Exchange to the General Film Co. Mr. Stebbins has installed an Ozone Purifier, and helps the house wonderfully.

Mr. C. H. Hawkins arrived in Seattle last week, after a most extensive trip throughout the State of Washington, with his "Frontier Celebration" pictures, and will soon leave for the smaller towns in the State.

Mr. W. H. Winters and his wife, of the Seattle Stage Lighting Co., left Thursday, August 10, 1911, in their automobile, for a much needed rest and will go to Mount Ranier Wash. They were accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Ross, of this city.

Mr. Jay Haas, formerly Advertising agent for the Levy Amusement Co., of this city, has been appointed manager of the Grand Opera House, by Gene Levy. Mr. Haas has been in the employment of the company for over four years, and Mr. Levy has appointed a very good man for the position. The Grand Opera House is one of the largest Vaudeville and photoplay theaters on the Pacific Coast.

Mr. Oren Woody, of the Seattle branch of the General Film Co., is touring the State, and visiting the different exhibitors, and will no doubt return the latter part of the week.

L. L. GOLDSMITH.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The initial how which Kinemacolor made in the Capital City was so successful that these views will remain here another week. The people who thronged at the Belasco Theater at afternoon and evening exhibitions included not only the pleasure-seeker, but the scientist, the traveler, the educator and the artist, and all marveled at the process that could so perfectly transfer nature to films. Perhaps the Naval Review in British waters caused the most enthusiasm, especially the passing of our own "Delaware." By request, several features of the Coronation ceremonies are being repeated this week, with the addition of that wonderful production of Dante's Inferno, a most realistic silent drama. Aside from the wonders of Kinemacolor, and the delight of the scenes shown, the remarks offered by Arthur Lotto, have added much to the understanding and pleasure of the exhibition.

Recent changes have occurred at the Cosmos places. Arthur Manvel, as conductor of the orchestra, with direction over the music, appearing at the various other houses under the Brylawski management. Mr. Manvel is a composer, pianist, orchestrator, and an all-round musician. As an exhibition of his many talents, he was discovered a week ago writing the cornet part for a song with his right hand and playing the vaudeville sketch in progress (something entirely different), with his left hand, on the piano. "What are you doing?" questioned Manager Brylawski, in amazement. "Well, you see, the cornet part is missing for Miss X's song, and I must have it ready tonight and this is the only time I have to write it." Manvel is some musician.

Tom Moore and his wife have at last left the city for a vacation, which will most likely last until sometime in Septemher. Mr. Moore, Sr., has matters in charge, with the able assistance of Mr. W. Mack, who was formerly Tom Moore's right-hand man when the latter was in the exchange business.

Another big motion picture event in the city was the appearance, on Sunday night, of Lyman H. Howe's travel carnival, at the Columbia Theater. This is the third of this series and each exhibition has been attended with an overflow house. The fact that these have become a source of education to the student as well as the scholar and professional man, have made them eagerly sought by Washingtonians. They have furnished a "vacation" for the members of Congress who have been held in the capital by extra session. This is about all the glimpses that these law-makers will get into other lands this season, and they appear to be making the best of it. A little comedy is always nicely scattered in this exhibition, which adds to the pleasure of the spectators. W. H.

HARRISBURG, PA.

Harry Smith, operator at the Photo-Play, is confined to his bed with sickness.

A. F. Branca, Manager of the Photoplay Film Exchange, accompanied by his wife and son, visited New York last week on business and pleasure and incidentally took in Coney Island, as Mr. Branca's six-year-old son, Ralph, wanted to see Coney. But upon arriving there, the youngster said: "Papa, I don't care to stay here any longer," whereupon his father asked why, and received this reply: "Why, father, this all old to me, I've seen it all in that film." Moral—Summer resorts be careful of the cameraman.

L. Levy, an operator of Altoona, Pa., is visiting friends in this little burg.

Well, that cold wave of Friday and Saturday of last week, sure did the moving picture theaters some good. It was too cool to spend a pleasant evening in the parks, so every theater in the city did capacity business. There is one thing the managers do here in this burg that, to the writer's way of thinking, is entirely wrong. That is, to give the operator the bell signal to speed up the machine, or, in other words, chase the film, and thereby chase the crowd, all to the disgust of the patrons of the respective houses. Now, the writer realizes that the managers wish to make hay while the sin shines, or, in other words, take in the nickles while the crowd is there, but when the pictures are projected upon the screen as they often are, it has a tendency to bring the picture business into disrepute, and will eventually cause the public to avoid patronizing the houses that continually use "chaser films." All managers know that the speed at which the pictures are run is one essential of good projection, and why they insist in running chasers is a question.

On a recent trip to New York, it afforded the writer hereof great pleasure in meeting a number of people connected with the cinematograph industries and the memories thereof will ever remain pleasant ones, especially the meeting of Bro. F. H. Richardson, the genial editor of The Projection Department of The World, and I hope to be able to enjoy his splendid work for many years.

Gust. Branka has gone to York, Pa., where he will assume the management of the branch office of the Photoplay Film Exchange.

M. P. Ney, owner of the Palace and Royal Theaters in Steelton, Pa., reports capacity business in both houses.

Licensed Film Stories.

LUBIN.

THE SCHEME THAT FAILED (Sept. 16).—Dick Birch and Harry Blake were "hall room" boys. To keep the wolf from the door, they did their own cooking, a fact which they kept from the knowledge of the landlady by concealing their oil stove in a hat box and their cooking utensils under the bed and in the closet.

One day they decided to become detectives. Soon after that Dorothy, their employer's daughter ,entered her father's office and wrote a note, telling her father that she was going to visit her friend Ethel for a few days. After she had gone, Dick hit on the scheme of changing the note so that it said Dorothy had gone away forever. When her father read the note he was greatly excited, and rushed away to secure the assistance of detectives.

In the meantime, Dick and Harry had applied to a detective agency for employment, and while they were waiting to see the manager, they arrayed themselves in disguises and detective badges. When Dorothy's father entered, he encountered them, and thinking they were real detectives, he told them of his daughter'a disappearance. Dick and Harry joyfully accepted his generous retaining fee and as soon as he had gone, hired an automobile and went to Ethel'a home, where they persuaded Dorothy to accompany them by telling her that her father was very ill. Then they promptly took her to their boarding house and left her in charge of the landlady, telling that good woman that the girl was crazy. Away flew the amateur detectivea then to Dorothy's father's office to obtain the reward.

Meantime, Ethel had followed Dorothy'a trail and rescued her from the landlady. The two girls promptly telephoned Dorothy's father, who was just in the act of paying over the big reward to the supposed detectives. He dropped the receiver and ripped off the disguises and seeing his former clerks, assisted them from the office on the toe of his number tens.

Dick and Harry are seen finally in their hall room mourning over the scheme that failed.

CEMENT ROCK BLASTING (Sept. 16).—The film shows the first Portland cement mill built in the United States, located at Coplay, Pa. Then follows exhibitions of deep well drilling, charging and tamping of the hole and the inserting of the fulminating cap.

The climax of the picture shows the setting off of an immense blast. Eight and one-half tons of high explosives are used in this blast, inserted in fourteen holes, all of them running over a hundred feet deep. The consequence of this enormous amount of explosive was the moving of fifty tons of solid rock. The finish of the picture shows the condition of the spot after the blast occurred.

ECLIPSE.

THE HAND OF THE LAW (Sept. 13).—A party of coastguards is advised of the landing of smugglers. The officer in command bids farewell to his fiancée, Juana, and starts in pursuit.

The smugglers are overtaken and one of them, who tries to kill the officer, is thrown over the cliffs. A little later Juana passes, and hearing him calling for help, dresses his wounds.

The smuggler recovers and sets out in search of the coastguards and their prisoners. By a clever ruse he frees his friends and captures the officer and his men. However, one of the coastguards escapes and gives the alarm at the neighboring village.

Juana, hearing of the danger that threatens her lover, leaves with peasants, who rush to the rescue of the coastguards.

They soon encounter the smugglers and their prisoners, and by a well-aimed shot Juana mortally wounds the man she had helped a few hours before and frees her lover.

NORWICH AND VICINITY, ENGLAND (Sept. 13).—Excellent views taken in and about this fine old city of England. Perhaps the most curious specimen extant of the genuine old English town. It is the capital of the county of Norfolk, and stands mainly on the right bank of the river Wenson. The original walls of the city were built in 1294, but the narrow limits were long outgrown by 1671. Today the bulk of the city has a very modern appearance.

GAUMONT.

HOW TO CATCH A BACHELOR (Sept. 12).—George, a confirmed old bachelor, receives a shock when his mother writes him that she has found a charming wife for him. Horror-stricken at his impending fate, he hastily writes that he does not care to marry a flirt.

His mother and the girl, however, think differently, and Yvette begs the mother to let her try a little scheme on him. Upon gaining her consent, she immediately disguises herself as a flower girl, and wends her way to the villa where she knows George is staying. She finds him seated on the garden wall, and playfully flirts with him. Of course he falls in love with her, and makes an appointment to meet Yvette in the garden under the olive tree. About eight o'clock our confirmed old bachelor hurries to their meeting place, only to find that his love has flown and left a letter pinned to the tree trunk. Tearing it open, he reads: "If the intrigue pleases you, come and see it through in Paris," and to his great surprise, it is signed by the girl he has sworn he would not marry, Yvette d'Andreville.

However, regardless of his previous determination, he hastens to Paris, only to find that she has successfully hidden herself. He appeals to his mother for aid, and during their conversation, fails to notice the entrance of his sweetheart, in her costume of a flower girl. Stealing up behind him, she tickles his ear with a flower. Turning around suddenly, George discovers his little flower girl smiling at him, and for some reason, strange to say, his world is all sunshine again.

FROM BORDEAUX TO PAUILLAC, FRANCE (Sept. 12).—The film opens with a panoramic view of Bordeaux, taken from the top of St. Michael's Tower. Interesting views of the many monuments and its superb public buildings are shown. Views are also given of the public squares, after which are seen a number of charming views of the coast between Bordeaux and Pauillac.

THE CINEMATOGRAPH FIEND (Sept. 16).—A celebrated cinematograph operator, while busy in his office, receives a telegram from his company, requesting that he photograph the Cabinet Council, who will arrive in his city at noon. Upon consulting his watch he finds that very little time can he lost and hurriedly making the necessary preparations, he hastens out to do his duty.

Upon his arrival at the station, he places his camera in front of the station exit, and, regardless of his own discomfort, patiently awaits the arrival of the Council. After some time he learns that they have eluded him and entered a building nearby.

Upon his focusing his camera in front of the building, he is immediately bombarded with mattresses, wardrobes, tables, chairs, etc., but undaunted, he attempts to enter the house through one of the windows, only to find that the building is on fire. He sticks to his post, however, and is only dislodged when he is finally deluged with a stream of water from the hose.

However, a number of other operators have arrived by this time and are soon quarreling among themselves. In the general scuffle which follows, they overlook the arrival of a man from a rival company, who coolly proceeds to take not only an excellent photo of the council, but also a most entertaining picture of the scuffle which is taking place among his rivals.

A MOUNTAIN TORRENT IN AUSTRIA (Sept. 16).—The little village of Golling, near Salzbourg, is frequently visited by tourists because of its beautiful situation among high mountains, and the little church of St. Nicholas, built on a rock, is also a curiosity of the country.

The beautiful falls of the Schwarzbach have rendered Golling well-known to the excursionists. The Schwarzbach falls from a height of over two hundred feet, making a powerful rapids, which have formed a natural bridge by wearing their way thorough a solid wall of rock.

When the sun shines through the branches of the pines and meets the mist arising from the falls, we see light effects of rare beauty.

PATHE.

EVA IS TIRED OF LIFE (Sept. 11).—The story of how Eva is discharged by her employer, and in consequence wants to depart this life, and the various ways in which she attempts suicide, with the most side-splitting results, spoils in the telling. Mere words can never convey the excellent humor in the picture, so we will not attempt to describe poor Eva's suffering, but just advise you to see the picture for yourself.

A PRISONER OF THE MOHICANS (Sept. 13).—A young girl, who has gained the esteem of a poor, starving Indian, was later surprised and bound by a band of Mohicans and carried off to their encampment. Her horse, coming home riderless, gives the alarm, and the girl's father and the boys on the ranch find her trail, and follow it, led by the starving redman. The trail leads to the water's edge, and here the Indian proceeds alone. Silently paddling a canoe across the stream, he comes to the tepees of the tribe. It is night and the Indians are asleep. The sentry dozes, and a quick blow silences him for good. Softly the girl is awakened and the two steal away and start to paddle away. They are seen, however, and pursued. The race for life is a close one, ending finally in the girl and her rescuer having to swim for it. After many exciting adventures, however, the faithful Indian restores the exhausted girl to her parents.

COLLEGE SWEETHEARTS (Sept. 14).—Billy and his sweetheart are attending colleges situated side by side. They are both expelled for flirting with each other, and each reaches home about the same time. Both sets of parents are duly wrathful, but Billy suffers the most, and decides to leave home. The day he decides to go he sees an ad in the paper for an assistant butler and he applies and gets the job. Fate decrees that the place is the home of his sweetheart, and they have many good times without the knowledge of the parents. Also some troubles which are too funny to attempt to describe. Anyway, the story ends with a marriage.

MADAME TALLIEN (Aug. 15).—The fascinating story deals with a woman of resource during the Reign of Terror in France. She is a member of the aristocracy, and as such, she and a friend are thrown into jail. When the prison inspectors of the Committee of Safety go through the prison, one of their number falls in love with this beautiful woman and effects her release. Later she marries him and becomes Madame Tallien, in which position she gains the release of her friend, who accompanied her to prison. This leads to a bitter scene between husband and wife, but the charms of the beauty win out at last and all ends happily.

A WESTERN MEMORY (Aug. 16).—Violet Drew, the daughter of the Inn keeper at Mountain Top, falls in love with a young fellow who has come to Mountain Top for his health. She first feels the sensations of love when she saves him from a broken neck while he is riding a bucking broncho which the boys have coaxed him to mount. This love is entirely acceptable to the young man, but the parents of Violet want her to marry Tony, a wealthy Mexican, who lives near by. Things progress nicely for a while, until one day the young man, who has recovered, receives a letter from his father, calling him home. When he leaves, he leaves a broken-hearted little girl behind him. Years pass and one day a man and a woman climb the hill where Violet and her lover were wont to sit. The man is the young patient of long ago, and the woman is his wife. Up on the hillside they come across a lonely grave, and the man, stooping, reads the inscription: "In memory of Violet Drew. It was her wish to be buried here."

BIOGRAPH.

THE STUFF HEROES ARE MADE OF (Sept. 4).—A young author comes to spend the summer at the homestead, and becomes quite impressed by Jennie and Alice, the two daughters of his hostess. He is, however, rather impartial in his attentions, though Jennie fancies she is the favored one. On the evening of his departure, Mamma and Papa go for a visit, to be away over night. The sisters have several of their girl friends to come and keep them company for the night. An ugly looking tramp, appreciating the favorable opportunity, breaks in, frightening the girls, with the exception of Alice, out of their wits. She, learning that her sister's locket is downstairs in easy access, braves the danger to get it, by pretending to be sleep-walking. Her scheme works until she tries to overpower the burglar. She puts up a stubborn fight, which terminated in her favor, for the author returns for his forgotten suit case. The author is not long in realizing who is the real one of the sisters, much to Jennie's chagrin, who makes a bluff at self-destruction, but her rube sweetheart says, "Don't do it," and she "don't."

THE OLD CONFECTIONER'S MISTAKE (Sept. 7).—Old Daddy Dodson would have spent a cheerless life had it not been for the children in the neighborhood, who all loved him, and to all of whom he was indeed a daddy. He was an ice cream maker and when the Lady Bountiful of the village takes all the kiddies for an outing he is commissioned to supply the ice cream. While making the cream he is seized with a violent toothache and sends to his druggist friend for some laudanum to ease the pain. When the children get to the grove they become impatient for the ice cream, so Lady Bountiful goes to the nearest telephone to hurry it up. This and several other things flurry Daddy and in his haste and excitement he pours the laudanum into the ice cream instead of extract. When he makes the discovery the cream is on its way, and the effort to intercept it or keep the children from eating it is most exciting.

THE VILLAGE HERO (Sept. 11).—There is a call for volunteers for the village militia while the young folks are assembled on the village green. Eugene, the village masher, is first to respond, much to the admiration of all the village belles, including Max's sweetheart, who would like to see Max imbued with the same spirit. The hero gag is not very much in Max's line, and it is only through his sweetheart's tears that he consents to become a soldier. He is tried out as a bugler, with laughable results, and when the battle starts he "beats it" and hides. The next morning, tired and hungry, he enters a house which has just previously been attacked by a gang of revolutionists, who, seeing him enter, and thinking a regiment behind him, flee in terror. The people of the house look upon him as their deliverer and he is made a hero in spite of himself. Decorated and promoted, he returns to the village, just in time to call down Eugene, who proved himself an awful coward, as he is bragging to the girl about his deeds of valor.

THE LUCKY HORSESHOE (Sept. 11).—An irascible landlord, while on his way collecting rents, picks up a horseshoe, which changes his nature completely, particularly as he almost immediately finds a ring, which appears to be a $3,000 diamond. He becomes excessively generous with his cash, expecting to make it up by the sale of the ring, which he learns later is worth just exactly ten cents.

THE SQUAW'S LOVE (Sept. 14).—White Eagle is betrothed to Silver Fawn before leaving for a hunting trip. Gray Fox, his friend, loves Wild Flower, the chief's daughter, but when he asks her father's sanction, he is exiled for his presumption, the chief ordering him to be taken off to the wilds and deprived of his firearms. Starvation would have been his fate, had not White Eagle happened along. To aid his friend, White Eagle promises to bring Wild Flower to him, and when Silver Fawn sees White Eagle stealthily leave the camp with Wild Flower, she imagines her lover false. She follows, and creeping up behind, hurls Wild Flower over into the stream, from which perilous plight she is rescued by Gray Fox, who is escaping in a canoe from a gang of drunken Indians, who have seized him. The chief, however has ordered death to the fugitives, and after the meeting of the four an explanation given, they make good their escape, only after Wild Flower has swum under the canoes of their pursuers and ripped them with a knife, causing them to sink.

EDISON.

UNDER THE TROPICAL SUN (Sept. 12).—Marcadies, after descending from her high load of sugar cane, stood beside the sweating oxen, and was told to move on by the new American foreman to make room for those behind her. She was in no mood to adhere to his command, and simply turned her back to him. Then came Morales, her Cuban lover, but while speaking with him, she could not forget the new American foreman.

The foreman saw Marcadies home from a dance. At her gate she halts a moment and then was gone. The foreman walks away with bowed head.

The next day when Morales wanted to quit work, the foreman realized that he had done the man a great wrong and soon set about to rectify it.

OFF THE COAST OF MAINE (Sept. 12).—In the opening scene of the film we see the tide going out—a panorama of falling waters. The camera next shows us God's mirror reflecting a quiet, peaceful hamlet nestled beneath green hills and valleys; then in striking contrast follow scenes that breathe the anger of the deep in its tempestuous struggle—the waters boiling, the waves dashing high and the spray blowing about as if the wind were adding its strength to the fight.

THE ESCAPED LUNATIC (Sept. 13).—There is a quilting bee at Mrs. Cobb's farmhouse, and the topic of conversation prevalent with the women assemblage is on the escaped colored lunatic. They are afraid that he will come in upon them at the least unexpected moment.

Early in the afternoon of the same day, Mr. Cobb is asked by a neighbor to help in removing a stove. During the operation he covers his hand and face with soot, and on his way home is accosted by the constable and a volunteer who are in search of the escaped lunatic. When he reaches his house, the quilting bee rush out. They see the supposed lunatic enter the cellar, and hold the door down until the constable arrives. Mrs. Cobb then recognizes her husband, and all ends happily.

FOR THE QUEEN (Sept. 13).—A May party is organized and the King and Queen chosen to the satisfaction of everybody save one small boy, who thinks he should have been chosen King.

The party arrives at the park and go through the Maypole dance and the crowning of the Queen. And then the tragedy begins, for the little Knave of Hearts, who has been nursing his jealousy, seizes an opportune moment and steals the crown and queenly bouquet which are left unguarded by their possessors. He is, however, seen by two very tiny heralds to the Queen and they, seeking out the King and his little partner in the field of daisies, inform them of the terrible happening. Drawing his trusty sword the King dashes off to reclaim the lost crown and punish the offender. After many adventures he recovers the trophies and then discovers that he does not know where he is. The little queen has watched anxiously all afternoon for her knight, but he has not come and she is forced by those in charge of the party to go home. Meanwhile the father and mother of the boy have become anxious and hasten to the police station. They are just explaining their fears and anxieties to the sergeant when the little May Queen comes in. Just then a policeman brings in the little King fast asleep. He wakens, discovers the Queen, and kneeling before her he holds up the crown and bouquet. Her father sets her down and receiving the token from him, she offers him her hand as a fitting queenly reward for his valor.

THE LIGHTHOUSE BY THE SEA (Sept. 15).—The two daughters of an old lighthouse keeper fall in love with two young fishermen. The girls seek secluded spots to tell their lovers "sweet nothings," before they sail away on a long fishing voyage.

One day a report comes to the old man that a ship has been dashed upon the shoals. The vessel happens to be the very one on which the young fishermen sailed. The little family searching amidst the rocks and angry waters for a survivor, suddenly see far out in the ocean a man seated upon a spar. He is recognized as one of the girl's lovers. The other is also seen struggling further out. The girls look to their brother to rescue their lovers. But he is only able to save one. Which one shall it be? It is better to see the film than to describe it, so we will leave the reader with these words.

KALEM.

A SHEEPMAN'S TRIUMPH (Sept. 11).—The cattlemen draw a dead line and defy the sheepmen to cross it. Nan writes her father, the cattle rancher, she is coming home for a vacation. Ben, the son of a sheep raiser, tells his father he is having trouble with the cattlemen.

Nan arrives from college and is welcomed by every man on the ranch, with whom she is a great favorite. The cattlemen plan to stampede their cattle over the sheep. Ben learns of their plan and warns his men. Nan out for a ride, finds herself directly in line of the stampeded cattle. Ben, who is making an effort to protect his sheep, sees Nan's danger and rescues her from a perilous position. Nan and Ben become great friends and agree to exchange notes, using a hollow tree as a postoffice. Nan's father discovers their friendship and orders Nan to have nothing to do with the sheepherder's son. The young people, however, elude him and elope. The rancher rages and swears vengeance, but through his love for his only daughter, a reconciliation takes place and a truce in the war between the cattlemen and sheepmen is declared.

THE EXPRESS ENVELOPE (Sept. 13).—The old station agent becomes ill and his daughter, Hazel, takes his place. Freight engineer Tom Evans, Hazel's sweetheart, makes a call. A message comes over the wire addressed to the superintendent of the Lucky Strike Mine, reading: "Express envelope containing money for monthly payroll on 9:20 express." H. L. Babbs, treasurer.

While Nan is on the station platform signing for the express package a couple of tramps, looking for a place to spend the night, enter the station and see the telegram concerning the express envelope. Hazel is attacked by the tramps, who demand the money that they know is in the station. Getting her right hand free, standing with her back to the operating table, Hazel calls the operator at Brooksville, five miles away, asking for help. The operator receives the call and rushes out of the signal tower to a freight train on the siding. Running to the engineer, who happens to be Tom Evans, he tells him of Hazel's apparent danger. Evans uncouples his engine from the train and rushes to the rescue, arriving in time to not only protect Hazel and the express envelope, but he also effects the capture of the tramps.

THE ALPINE LEASE (Sept. 15).—Jenson, an unfortunate oil operator, buys the abandoned Alpine Lease. Rodney Willis, the young foreman of the adjoining Sterling lease, meets Jenson's daughter, Chick. The Sterling's manager laugh at Jenson's efforts to redeem the dry Alpine Lease. Two weeks later Jenson strikes an oil pocket. The Sterling's manager plans to secure Jenson's well by claiming it is on the Sterling lease, and has ejectment papers served on Jenson. Young Willis, disapproving of his superior's methods, searches the records and finds Jenson's title is good. In the meantime Jenson, crazed by his apparent loss, starts out to destroy the derrick rigging. Chick, seeing her father's peculiar actions, follows him and climbs the derrick. During the struggle in mid air, between Chick and her father, the old man with the torch in hand, drops to the platform below, the torch quickly igniting the oil.

Rodney, arriving at the Jenson cabin to tell them of their good fortune, finding the house deserted starts for the well, expecting to find them there. As he approaches he takes in the situation at a glance. Getting nearer he sees Chick perched on the ladder near the top with the flames and fumes shooting up about her. Tying a handkerchief over his face, he successfully performs a daring rescue. The manager of the Sterling lease tries to have Jenson arrested for attempted arson, but is confronted with the proof of the validity of Jenson's title.

VITAGRAPH.

BEYOND THE LAW (Sept. 13).—Anse Langdon, whom Jennie Williams accepts, incurs the hatred and enmity of Lee Hayes, another suitor for Jennie's hand. Anse and Jennie are married. Lee waits his opportunity and tries to inveigle Anse into a fight with him. Anse resents his aggressiveness. Lee draws his gun, but Anse is too quick for him, takes his gun away from him and gives him a severe thrashing. Lee has another gun concealed, follows Anse and from a point of vantage shoots and mortally wounds him. Anse drags himself to the door of his cabin, where he falls dead. His wife finds his body and a note which Anse has written on a piece of birch bark, stating that Lee Haines shot him. The sheriff is notified of the shooting and is on the track of the guilty man.

Filled with that primitive and inborn idea of justice, Jennie determines to interpret the law according to her own judgment, and if possible, bring the slayer of her husband to a full reckoning of his deed. She follows his trail, and with the unering aim of a skilled mountaineer's daughter in the use of firearms, she gets a line on her husband's slayer; he receives the full penalty of Jennie's self-imposed sentence.

The sheriff of the county meets Jennie as she is returning to her home with her rifle in her hand. He inquires of her for news of Lee Hayes. In reply, she takes the sheriff to the silent form of the fugitive, nodding her head in answer to his questions. He understands. He discharges the cartridges from the dead man's gun, places the weapon in the cold hand and tells Jennie to go to her home, that he will answer for the man's death: necessary in the discharge of his duty as sheriff, being sworn to capture his man dead or alive.

THE VITAGRAPH MONTHLY (Sept. 15).—The September number contains such stirring events as: Bobbie Leach Goes Over Niagara Falls in a Barrel, and into the depths of its seething caldron below. Another item of extreme interest, is a deer hunting trip, depicting the itinerary of the guides and hunters, showing the sleds drawn by dogs, the guides and hunters following the tracks of the deer, etc. The film closes with a kaleidoscopic view of one of nature's most artistic provisions.

FORAGING (Sept. 11).—Jack Ainsley and Bob Hutchings, members of a Canadian regiment, go to the Boer War. They have been fast friends, Jack helping Bob out when in need and Bob doing likewise. When their commissary is low, Bob and Jack, with other members of the regiment, go foraging. They confiscate chickens from a Boer farmer, and Jack, being a little in the rear of his companions, is struck down by the farmer. When they return to the camp they miss him, especially his sweetheart, Anne Harrington, a Red Cross nurse, and immediately set out to recover him. He is rescued and brought back to camp, where they enjoy a fine chicken dinner. Shortly after, the regiment is ordered back to Canada, and Bob and Jack separate.

Jack marries Anne, and is made judge in his city. Bob has had hard luck and is down and out. While walking in the street one day, he notices a baker drop a loaf of bread. He picks it up and eats it with avidity. He is arrested and brought before Judge Ainsley, who recognizes his long lost friend. Judge Ainsley pays for the loaf of bread, and it is not long before he has Bob on his feet again.

HER CROWNING GLORY (Sept. 12).—Helen, a mischievous little girl, is the daughter of a wealthy widower, Mr. Bunny. The child delights in encumbering her father, and he takes it good naturedly. Mr. Bunny decides to engage a governess for Helen. Her advent is a signal for rebellion on the part of the little one. She slaps the nurse whenever she can, and makes a great deal of trouble for her.

Mr. Bunny, in the meantime, is attracted by the governess' luxuriant tresses, and asks her to become his wife. The governess does not think much of his affections for her, so she has Helen cut her hair, when it is hanging out of the window to dry after giving it a shampoo. The job is neatly done, and when Mr. Bunny notices her head, he ridicules her. His employee makes a hasty exodus, therefore their marriage never eventuated.

BY WOMAN'S WIT (Sept. 16).—Mr. Munsey spends so much time at the club that his wife determines to play a little joke on him. She arranges the supper table, but be does not put in an appearance. Then she begins smoking a cigar, throwing the ashes around the room, and places a cane and a pair of man's gloves on the table. When her husband arrives, he is somewhat shocked at his wife's attitude towards him. To get even, he writes a fictitious letter and signs it, "Flora." This he places in his pockets, where his wife finds it. She, determining to get back at him, hires the grocery clerk, dresses him up as a dude, and goes to the restaurant, where he usually dines. She is discovered by her husband, who is furious. He insists upon her returning home with him, but she refuses.

At home he pleads with her, and after explaining that he wrote the letter, she apprises him that it was only the grocery clerk she dined with. Through these mutual explanations everything is cleared up, and Mr. Munsey stays at home rather than at the club.

SELIG.

THE HEART OF JOHN BARLOW (Sept. 8).—John Barlow, the captain of a fishing schooner, returning home, is surprised at the cool reception given him by his wife, who has been receiving the attentions of Paul Drew, during his absence. Their two children, hunting for candy, incidentally knock down their mother's handbag, which is opened by the fall. A slip of paper, bearing the message: "We will leave together to-morrow morning," written by Paul to John's wife, is picked up by him. He is terribly distressed at his wife's actions, but patiently awaits the outcome.

Uncle Sam Protects Purchasers of the Exclusive Rights

READ THIS LETTER

DIVISION OF CUSTOMS

TREASURY DEPARTMENT
OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY
88725
WASHINGTON

August 24, 1911.

The Great Northern Film Company,
No. 7 East 14th Street,
New York, N. Y.

Gentlemen:

Replying to your letter of the 10th instant, I have to advise you that the copyrighted film entitled "Temptations of a Great City" which was recently seized at the Philadelphia Post Office, was addressed to G. W. Bradenburg, 233 North Eighth Street, Philadelphia.

Respectfully,

F. M. Halstead
Chief, Division of Customs.

No inclosure.

OF OUR FILM

"TEMPTATIONS OF A GREAT CITY"

under the new Copyright Law, the violation of which is a criminal offense.

Exclusive Rights

All of Canada and all of the Western States are still for sale for this big feature which is drawing crowded houses through the Eastern and Central States.

Temptations of a Great City will be exhibited to prospective purchasers of State Rights by Charles L. Marshall, 227 New York Life Building, Kansas City, Mo.

Write or Wire Quick

Monopole Film Company, 145 WEST 45th STREET NEW YORK CITY

Tuesday, eptembr 12th
On One Reel

"OFF THE COAST OF MAINE"

A short scenic film of great beauty, showing the northern coast of Maine with the waves dashiug high on the shore.

"UNDER THE TROPICAL SUN"

CAST.

The Foreman of the Sugar Plantation
A Youug American.....Herbert Prior
A Worker on the Plantation .....Mabel Trunelle
Her Cubau Lover.....James Gordon

Taken iu Cuba, in aud around a sugar plantation. A pretty story of a charming youug Cuban girl and her two admirers.

EDISON FILMS

TRADE MARK

THOMAS A. EDISON, Inc.
72 Lakeside Ave., Orange, N.J.

Wednesday, September 13th
On One Reel

"THE ESCAPED LUNATIC"

CAST.

Zeh .....John R. Cumpson
His Wife.....Mrs. C. J. Williams

This is a country comedy and shows how a hard workiug farmer was mistaken for a dangerous lunatic and all because he got his face black by helping a neighbor lift a stove.

"FOR THE QUEEN"

CAST.

The May Queeu.....Leonie Flugrath
The King .....Yale Boss
Her Jealous Knight.....Robert Tansey
Two Heralds .....Harriette Mendel, Edna May Weick

A charming comedy of children on May Day. Delightfully and naturally played, it is as refreshiug as it is origiual.

Send us your name for the Kinetogram Mailing List

Friday, September 15th

"THE LIGHTHOUSE BY THE SEA"

CAST.

A Lighthouse Keeper.....Charles Sutton
His Two Daughters.....Mabel Trunnelle, Laura Sawyer
His Sou .....Richard Neill
Two Young Fishermeu.....James Gordon

This story of the sea is powerful in its strength and delineation of character. A storm breaks along the coast and those who are out in fishermen's boats are in great danger, but happily a timely rescue is made.

Releases of

TUESDAY, September 12th

Grey Wolf's Grief

An Indian Tale.——"'Nough Sed!"

A new kind of drama, with the love of an Indian brave for his squaw as the basis for the plot. His sacrifice in her behalf; his perilous ride on the bumpers of an express train, and his arrival just in time to be too late.

SATURDAY, September 16th

The Horse Thief

"One Good Turn Deserves Another."

Imagine the possibilities for a picture play with this theme. The Indian horse thief saved by the sheriff; the downfall of the sheriff through the cursed drink, and his reformation by the grateful Indian. Some story, huh? Well, don't miss it. You'll get few as good.

ARE YOU GETTING

2—Powers Picture Plays—2

WEEKLY?

Powers Motion Picture Co.

145 West 45th Street, NEW YORK CITY

Studio: Napera Park, N. Y.

Paul is caught by John taking money from the safe, and is unceremoniously dragged to his home. The men are interrupted by a knock at the door, and John pushes Paul into a closet. The visitor is Mrs. Barlow, who, becoming impatient for Paul, goes to her home. She is reprimanded by her husband, and is overcome with shame at the sight of Paul. John, who loves his wife dearly, forgives her.

KIT CARSON'S WOOING (Sept. 11).—Kit Carson, scout, hunter, trapper and soldier-of-fortune, has won the enmity of Azakah, the cruel chief of a prowling band of renegade Indians. Azakah's braves are constantly on the lookout for Carson, but he succeeds in eluding them for many years. Azakah has taken unto himself a white wife, who later bears him a daughter, Lat-to-nick.

Eventually Carson is captured, and is about to be burned at the stake, when Lat-to-nick interferes and claims Kit as her own. The old chief accedes to the girl's wish, but places Carson under a close watch. Gradually Kit realizes that his gratitude towards Lat-to-nick has grown into a deep, all-absorbing love, and is made happy by the knowledge that it is returned in equal measure.

Later, Kit hears of a plot on the part of the band, to rob and massacre the passengers of the express stage coach, and decides to prevent this at all hazards. He takes Lat-to-nick into his confidence, and she agrees to help him. They watch their opportunity and finally manage to escape. Without horses, they heroically start out overland, to warn the stage driver of the ambush that awaits him. They overtake him in the nick of time, and the Indians are beaten back. The tired and plucky couple are carried to town and the express agent shows his gratitude by uniting them in wedlock.

DAD'S GIRLS (Sept. 12).—Dad, a likable old pioneer character, lived among the foot hills of the Western mining region, on a ranch with his two daughters, Rose and Madge. As sort of a side issue he had been doing a little prospecting, and about the time the story starts, we see him carrying some of his quartz to Andy Thomas, a young assayer located in a nearby village.

Andy is a good-hearted chap, who has fallen into the clutches of a local card sharp, who holds his I. O. U. for a large gambling debt. The gambler has offered to cancel this debt if the assayer will put him next to some good near-by claim and report unfavorably on its value to the real owner.

Andy's opportunity comes when Dad brings in a quantity of this new-found quartz for an assay. Andy tells Dad that his claim is not worth anything, and then goes in search of Jim, the gambler, to give him the tip. Jim goes to Dad and tries to buy the property, but in the meantime, Dad has done a little assaying on his own account, and refuses to part with his claim.

Rose and Madge have gone to town to purchase supplies, and while there they meet Sam Gleason, the young cowboy sheriff, who is in love with Rose. Jim attempts to make love to Rose, hoping thereby to get in on a portion of the mine. He is rebuffed by the sheriff, but follows the girls on their return to the claim.

While racing homeward, Rose drops one of her bundles and dismounts to recover same, while Madge rides on slowly. Jim comes upon the scene and attempts to force his affections on the defenceless girl. Madge sees what transfers from a distance, and rapidly riding to the scene, she lassoes the gambler and drags him unmercifully over rocks, through the river and up the steep embankment of the opposite shore. Here he is released and told to get out of sight in a hurry. The humiliated Jim decides to kidnap the girls, with the aid of a nearby band of renegade Indians, and does so.

The girls, however, effect a thrilling escape, and in the get-a-way, Rose is slightly wounded. In the meantime, the sheriff has been notified of the girls' non-return, by the anxious Dad. Gathering a posse, the sheriff goes in search of the girls and rescues them after a thrilling combat with the Indians. The crowd are for lynching the card sharp, and his accomplice, Andy, but the girls intercede, and the pair are given an hour to get across the country line on a balky burrow. The doctor attends to Rose's injury, and once more peace and quiet reign on the little ranch of Dad and his girls.

THE WHEELS OF JUSTICE (Sept. 14).—James Hazen, one-time crook, now wealthy and reformed, is recognized on his wedding day, by a former pal, Florrie Cook, who follows the young couple to Hazen's new home in the country. Hazen has isolated himself here in the hope of finding security in complete loneliness. He turns such neighbors as call out of the house, which causes much unhappiness for his wife, Alice.

Cook, threatening to expose Hazen's real character to his young wife, compels the husband to treat him as a welcome guest. Cook takes further advantage of his hold over Hazen, when he tries to make love to Alice. She is rescued from him by Richard Courtright, one of the neighbors. Alice goes home and tells her husband of their guest's latest outrage, and insists that he be turned out. Hazen orders Cook to leave, and Cook agrees to do so, provided Hazen will help him burglarize Courtright's house. Hazen protests, but finally agrees to do this in order to rid himself of Cook. He advises Alice that he is seeing Cook to the depot, and requests her to retire early. Alice amuses herself during the evening by experimenting with flash-light photography, and upon retiring, leaves her camera set up to take another view of the library.

During the night, she is awakened by the sound of what she supposes to be burglars, and lighting a candle, she proceeds to the library, where she searches for her husband's revolver, in vain. Thoroughly frightened, she blows out the candle, and catches up the flash light pistol, which explodes at the moment, registering an instantaneous photograph of her husband, and Florrie Cook, the bag containing the booty from the Courtright house, falls open at their feet. Cook, in his wrath, throws the camera out of the window and makes a move to attack Alice. Hazen interferes, and in the ensuing mixup, Cook kills him. He then seizes Alice and drags her away. Rex, Courtright's collie dog, finds the camera the next morning and playfully lugs it home to his master. In an effort to locate the owner, young Courtright develops the roll of film and thereby learns the identity of the burglars who robbed his home on the previous night. Alice is rescued, and taken to the Courtright home. Later, on his death-bed, Cook confesses to the crime, and as the clouds of mystery roll away, Alice finds her true lover in that of her rescuer, Courtright.

ESSANAY.

TWO MEN AND A GIRL (Sept. 12).—John Lincoln, an ardent cyclist, after a long spin on his wheel from his home in the city, meets with Elsie Ferris, who also has a bicycle, but who has met with a slight accident, through the bicycle chain breaking. Lincoln accompanies her to her home, a short walk through the woods, where he is introduced to Elsie's parents, and to Joe Derby, a suitor for the girl's hand. Darby exhibits his keen jealousy from the first and secretly vows revenge against Lincoln. A few days later Lincoln again visits Elsie and the two are spied upon by Darby, who, in a fit of rage, hurries away and enters a saloon at the crossroads. Here he becomes intoxicated, and talks freely of getting even with the young city chap. Lincoln soon rides past and Darby, mounting a wheel, starts in pursuit. A few minutes later Lincoln rides by Elsie's house, followed closely by Darby. Waving his hand to the girl, Lincoln rides on and Darby, alighting at the Ferris gate, points after Lincoln and shows Elsie a knife, with which he boldly threatens to take Lincoln's life. A moment later he is again in pursuit, and the terror-stricken girl, mounting her wheel, and armed with a revolver, rides fast in pursuit. She arrives at the scene of the quarrel in time to shoot the knife from Darby's hand. Darby, wringing his hands in pain, slinks away and Elsie runs to Lincoln's arms.

THE PUNCHER'S LAW (Sept. 14).—Tom Patterson, a young puncher, becomes engaged to Ethel Hastings, a pretty Western girl, just preceding Pattersons's departure with the other punchers for the big fall round-up. A few weeks later, Ethel meets Jack Ferguson, a strolling gambler, whose apparently ardent and sincere love soon turns the girl's head. Following her promise to marry Ferguson, Ethel visits Tom at the round-up, and gives him back his ring. Heartbroken, Tom releases her and leaves the ranch. Only a few weeks elapse when the girl realizes her terrible mistake in marrying the gambler. She is ill when Jack tells her he has decided to leave her. Despite her pleas for him to remain he goes away. Some time later, Ethel locates her husband, and going to him, begs him to take her back, but he thrusts her out of the house and the heart-broken girl, stumbling away, drops in the grass, where she is found in a dying condition by Tom Patterson. He soon learns the truth, and after the girl dies he seeks out Ferguson, and at the point of a gun makes him come to his shack and view the frail body of his former wife. Patterson then gives Ferguson the choice of a vial of poison or a bullet from his Colts, and the latter, seeing that escape from death at the hands of the enraged man would be fruitless, swallows the poison.

THE BURGLARIZED BURGLAR (Sept. 15).—Charley Fortune-Hunter, a young hack writer, woos a pretty heiress, Dorothy Willard, but, strange to say, the match is objected to by Dorothy's papa, who prefers that Dorothy pick out a young man with more collateral. Charley is having a hard time of it in stalling off his creditors and only partly succeeds in doing so, by telling of his engagement to the heiress to the Willard millions. On her birthday, Dorothy insists that Charley get a box to Grand Opera, which he manages to do by "hocking" his watch. In the meantime, a burglar enters the Willard mansion and steals a necklace of pearls, intended as a birthday gift to Dorothy from father, and also gets away with the old man's wallet and his watch. Pursued by the police, the burglar dashes into Charley's hallroom, where he, in turn, is held up by the impecunious writer, who unloads the valuables and locks the burglar in the closet. Exultantly Charley looks at the pearls, which he resolves to give to Dorothy for her birthday present, and finding the wallet well filled with currency, orders a taxi. When he presents the gift, the delighted girl rushes to her father immediately and shows him the necklace. The old man is thunderstruck as he recognizes the pearls and tells her to send the young man in. You can imagine Charley's surprise when the old man identifies the watch and wallet as his own and is about to summon the police when Charley explains that it was only a joke and that he can produce the real burglar ,if they will accompany him to his room. They do, in company with a policeman, and Charley gets another shock when he finds that the burglar has escaped. The policeman is about to take Charley away, but the old man stops him. Nevertheless, Dorothy is convinced that Charley is a thief and sails out of the room with her nose perked at a sharp upward angle, while the young man drops into a chair and stares dumbfoundedly at the opera tickets.

Scene from "King for an Hour" (Eclipse).

THE MILLIONAIRE AND THE SQUATTER (Sept.) 16).—Gordon Olcott, an Eastern millionaire, goes West and examines large tracts of land with the view of purchasing a tract, intending to build a summer home. After selecting a suitable tract, covering several thousands of acres, he learns that a miner, working a claim on a portion of his tract has refused to vacate. Olcott notifies the United States Marshal, who in turn notifies Silas Strong, the miner. The latter, far from hastening to vacate his premises, rages and storms and frightens the deputy out of the house with threats to kill anybody who attempts to put him off the rich man's acres. Learning of Strong's obstinacy, Olcott decides to settle the matter in a hurry, and sends the sheriff and a posse to Strong's cabin, with orders to force Strong off the land, if the latter refuses to leave peaceably. This is accomplished while Strong, helpless to interfere, reviles his persecutors. One day Olcott is hunting in his woods when Strong, armed with a revolver, comes on the scene. Olcott is about to bring down some kind of game or other, when his gun kicks violently and he rolls off the top of the cliff at the feet of the man who has intended to kill him. Bleeding and stunned Olcott, not knowing Strong, begs the latter to help him and Strong, forgetful of his vow for vengeance, carries the wounded man to his shack, where he is tenderly cared for by Alice, Silas's daughter. However, it is months afterward before Strong is finally reconciled to the millionaire and only until the two young people tell him of their engagement. With their marriage, the old miner is permitted to return to the Olcott estate and finds in his son-in-law a whole-hearted and genuine young gentleman.

MELIES.

A SHATTERED DREAM (Sept. 14).—Father Martin had lived carefully all his days in order to save enough money to enable him to fulfill the dream of his life—a visit to his birthplace across the seas. On the eve of his departure, a parishoner came and confessed a theft, exposure of which would spell his ruin. The amount of the theft was the same as Father Martin had accumulated.

The clergyman, on hearing of the young man's plight, hesitated only a moment, when, with magnanimous nobility, he gave up that which was his dearest passion, to save a soul from disgrace. More noble charity would be difficult to conceive.

BIOGRAPH FILMS

Trade Mark

RELEASED SEPTEMBER 4th, 1911

Trade Mark

The Stuff Heroes Are Made Of

How a Young Girl Cleverly Outwitted a Burglar

A young author comes to spend the summer at the homestead, and becomes quite impressed by Jennie and Alice, the two daughters of his hostess. He is, however, rather impartial in his attentions, though Jennie fancies she is the favored one. On the evening of his departure, mamma and papa go for a visit to be away overnight. The sisters have several of their girl friends to come and keep them company for the night. An ugly looking tramp, appreciating the favorable opportunity, breaks in, frightening the girls, with the exception of Alice, out of their wits. She, learning that her sister's locket is down-stairs in easy access, braves the danger to get it, by pretending to be sleep-walking. Her scheme works until she tries to overpower the burglar. She puts up a stubborn fight, which terminated in her favor, for the author returns for his forgotten suit case. The author is not long in realizing who is the real one of the sisters, much to Jennie's chagrin, who makes a bluff at self-destruction, but her rube sweetheart says, "Don't do it," and she "don't."

Approximate Length 998 feet.

RELEASED SEPTEMBER 7th, 1911

The Old Confectioner's Mistake

A Case of Toothache That Almost Caused a Tragedy

Old Daddy Dodson would have spent a cheerless life had it not been for the children in the neighborhood, who all loved him, and to all of whom he was indeed a daddy. He was an ice cream maker and when the Lady Bountiful of the village takes all the kiddies for an outing he is commissioned to supply the ice cream. While making the cream he is seized with a violent toothache and sends to his druggist friend for some laudanum to ease the pain. When the children get to the grove they become impatient for the ice cream, so Lady Bountiful goes to the nearest telephone to hurry it up. This and several other things flurry Daddy and in his haste and excitement he pours the laudanum into the ice cream instead of extract. When he makes the discovery the ice cream is on its way, and the effort to intercept it or keep the children from eating it is most exciting.

Approximate Length 999 feet.

RELEASES FOR NEXT WEEK

September 11th, 1911

The Village Hero
COMEDY
Approximate Length 675 feet.

The Lucky Horseshoe
COMEDY
Approximate Length 321 feet.

September 14th, 1911

The Squaw's Love
An Indian Poem of Love in Pictures
DRAMATIC
Approximate Length 998 feet.

BIOGRAPH COMPANY,
11 East 14th Street, New York City

Licensees of the
MOTION PICTURE PATENTS CO.

GEORGE KLEINE, Selling Agent for Chicago,
166 State Street, Chicago, Ill.

Independent Film Stories

RELIANCE.

CLOUDS AND SUNSHINE (Sept. 2).—John Ryan is discharged by Robt. Brown, the manager, and two months later his family is in sore straits. Brown is called away from home one evening and Ryan, in a dark mood, sees him go down the street. A wild idea of robbing Brown's home seizes him and he forces an entrance and cuts the telephone wires. Upstairs the baby has swallowed some poison and the frantic mother rushes to the 'phone to call a doctor. Ryan seeks to escape, but she clings desperately to him and finally makes him understand the situation. He rushes out, brings back a doctor and the child's life is saved. The next day Brown rewards him by putting him back to work.

TEMPTATION (Sept. 6).—Jasper dearly loves his wife, and she makes him unhappy by her lamentations over his small salary and her inability to buy fine clothes. On a Saturday he is sent to deposit a large sum of money and arrives after the bank closes. The works have also closed and he is compelled to keep the money until Monday. He decides to steal the money from himself, establishing an alibi. He sends himself a telegram from a supposed friend, who is leaving the city, to meet him that evening. A peddler is struck by an automobile in front of the Jasper home, and is given shelter by Mrs. Jasper. When her husband breaks into his own home, he is heard by his wife and the peddler, and the latter shoots him. The incident is a strong lesson to the Jaspers, she resolving never to give way to vanity, and he never again to yield to temptation.

ECLAIR.

MAGIC MUSIC (Sept. 18).—Mariette is trying to concentrate her thoughts upon her music lesson, but it seems to be a vain attempt. Soon her teacher enters and endeavors to help the pupil, but poor Mariette's attention will wander. Her eyes are conscientiously fixed upon the notes—but, wonderful occurrence, the magic of the mystic East seems to have permeated those same notes, and we behold upon the friendly screen a scene of such enchantment as human eye ne'er saw before.

WHEN THE LEAVES FALL (Sept. 18).—Baby is very unhappy, father is very sad; in fact, gloom hangs over all the family, for mother is very ill, and father is writing the sad news to grandma. The letter is interrupted by a visit from grandma herself, and baby learns that doctor says dear mother will die "When the Leaves Fall." Baby is frightened; she looks at the pretty green leaves—they must not, they shall not fall. With childish confidence she climbs upon the fence, and with her tiny fingers the little tot endeavors to tie the leaves upon the twigs, for mother must not die. Baby slips and falls, her injury is not too serious, and when baby is recovering she learns that mother will go to the sunny South where the leaves never fall, and she will not die. Baby's simple faith has its reward.

BISON.

LITTLE DOVE'S ROMANCE (Sept. 5).—Burns is hunting in the woods, and fires as Little Dove comes riding up. The report startles her horse, and it wheels suddenly, throwing the girl to the ground. Burns carries her to his camp, nearby, and he and his friend bandage her sprained ankle. Her tribe misses her and trails her to the camp, where an attack is prevented by Little Dove, who explains that the white men are her friends. She falls in love with Burns, who does not encourage her. The white men depart and Little Dove's sadness is pathetic, but she finally accepts the love of an Indian brave.

A WESTERN TRAMP (Sept. 8).—The tramp is made the butt of the cowboys' rough jokes. He discovers a plot by which Smith is trying to make Mrs. Jones believe that her husband is in love with a dance-hall girl, and persuades the girl to confess to Mrs. Jones the part she played in trying to inveigle Jones into a compromising situation. Smith is run out of town by Jones, and the tramp is given a good home as a reward.

AMBROSIO.

TWEEDLEDUM AND THE ADVENTURESS (Sept. 6).—Tweedledum learns of a wealthy man who is held for ransom by an adventuress, and when she attempts to beguile another victim he warns him, and, playing detective, impersonates him. The woman overhears the plot, and when Tweedledum calls she dresses in male attire and engages him in conversation. Suddenly a trap door opens and Tweedledum is dropped to the cellar, placed in a sack and cast in the river. He manages to free himself and disguised as the maid-servant, effects an entrance, arrests the woman and releases the imprisoned man.

IMP.

BY THE HOUSE THAT JACK BUILT (Sept. 11).—Purity, a bond girl, is discovered intently poring over a volume of the Nursery Rhymes, while seated in the garden of her mistress, caring for a child. She is discontented with her lot and longs for an adventure, such as she has read about.

Suddenly an old hag appears to her out of space and asks for food. Purity, in the goodness of her heart, brings her the viands and the woman is instantly transformed to the richly attired old lady of Banbury Cross, kind and indulgent. She announces she has been commissioned by Old King Cole, of nursery rhyme fame, to find a bride for his son among the mortals and she has selected Purity, as she is beautiful, and meets all the requirements. She administers a sleeping potion to the girl that causes her soul to leave her body and, clapping her hands, her white horse appears, accoutred for a trip to fairyland.

Seated behind the old lady of Banbury Cross, Purity is transported to the unknown realm. Here Purity meets all the characters mentioned in the nursery rhymes. The prince, the son of Old King Cole, immediately falls in love with Purity, as the old woman of Banbury Cross has conspired with Cupid to pierce the heart of the prince with an arrow. The wicked queen of the gnomes, however, is in love with the prince, and she induces Taffy, the Welchman, who is a thief, to steal the heart of the prince.

The prince is transformed from a generous and lovable young man to an individual without a heart, and declines to marry the little maid from the earth. This angers Old King Cole and he sends his retainers to bring the queen and Taffy. They are led by little Boy Blue, and, after a short struggle, the capture is made. The heart is of no use to the queen as it has been rent in twain by the arrow of Cupid.

Taffy and the queen are condemned to be hanged, but Purity intercedes for them and the king grants them mercy and they are commanded to leave the domain. Purity and the prince are married amid pomp and splendor and are supposed to live happily ever afterward. (Copyrighted 1911, by Independent Moving Pictures Co. of America.)

THE BROTHERS (Sept. 14).—Patrick Curran and Dennis O'Day both love the handsome and vivacious Rose Grady, who is something of a flirt, and keeps her lovers in suspense. Father Curran, the priest, a brother of Patrick, looks earnestly after his flock which has in it several men who are bent on whiling away their time at the public house in drinking and games. Shamus McCarty is the village drunkard and causes the priest much concern to keep him sober.

There is a love scene between Patrick and Rose and Dennis appears on the scene. The rivalry is bitter and hasty words are spoken. An encounter is imminent when Father Curran comes on the scene and acts as peace-maker. At his request the lovers shake hands and are once more friends.

Proceeding on his way, Father Curran finds Shamus under the influence of tipple and he takes his bottle away and lectures him on the evils of the drink habit. The Father returns home, and, seated by the fire, lights his pipe and dozes. His sleep is disturbed by a horrid dream.

Patrick and Dennis fight over the favors of Rose, and Dennis is thrown over a cliff. Patrick takes refuge in the house of his brother and when the excited villagers come for him the priest tells them he is not there and they go away. Shamus, the drunkard, believes Father Curran is telling a falsehood, and he returns and sees Patrick through the window. He conceives a plan to get even with the priest. He rushes to the crowd, tells them of his discovery and then sneaks to the house and sets it on fire.

Father Curran awakes with a start, to find it all a dream.

Patrick and Rose come in for his blessing and there is a comedy scene with Shamus. The priest is relieved but discovers that his pipe has set fire to a newspaper, the smoke having filled the room, probably suggesting the firing of the house by the tippler in his dream. (Copyrighted 1911, by Independent Moving Pictures Co. of America.)

THANHOUSER.

THE BUDDHIST PRIESTESS (Sept. 12).—A young missionary, filled with religious fervor, joyfully accepts the post to carry the gospel to a section of Japan, where white men are not known. His wife and little daughter go with him, and he starts for his station with native guides and bearers.

When they have penetrated some distance into the interior, the missionary and his wife are stricken with the plague. Their native escort, in fear, basely flee, leaving them helpless and alone in a strange deserted region.

The fleeing bearers pass a Buddhist temple, which they find for the moment unguarded. The scoundrels loot the temple, carrying off with them a jeweled idol.

The missionary and his wife die shortly, leaving the little child alone in a strange wilderness. She wanders off in the same direction as that taken by the bearers when they fled. She arrives at the temple, shortly after the loss of the idol has been discovered by a Buddhist priest, who has rushed out to summon the natives. Finding a house, and hoping it contains people who can aid her, the little child enters the temple. She finds it deserted, but worn out with her long walk, she sinks on the pillaged altar and falls asleep. When the priest and the natives return, they find a tiny kimona-clad creature on the altar, with a strangely beautiful white face. They at once decide that this must be their God, come to life, and bow down to her and offer her homage.

For ten years the little foreigner held undisputed away as priestess of the temple. At first she was too young to realize her position, and gradually her old life fades away, and seems but a dream. She could scarcely remember any life save the secluded one she led in the temple.

A young American naval officer, whose ship is temporarily anchored in the waters of Japan, gets shore leave for a day's hunting. He penetrates into the interior, shooting many strange wild birds. He aims at a bird on the wing, wounding it slightly, and is surprised to see it fly into a secluded dell. On following the bird, he finds himself outside the walled garden of the temple, and learns he has shot one of its sacred pigeons, which he finds being carefully tended by the beautiful young priestess. With this introduction, a friendship, which soon ripens into love, develops between the officer and the priestess. The pigeon which he wounded is trained to carry their love messages from the temple to the ship. The officer finally prevails upon his loved one to leave her temple and sail with him back to the land of her people. They are attacked by an indignant band of natives, who refuse to allow their priestess to be taken from them. The fugitives take refuge from the angry mob in the temple, from which place of safety they despatch the carrier pigeon to the ship with a message imploring help. The blue jackets get the message, and reach the temple in time to rescue their officer and his future bride from the hands of the natives.

IN THE CHORUS (Sept. 15).—A young widow is compelled because of her poverty to leave her only child, a little daughter, at a charitable institution, while she hunts for work. The child, punished because of some minor infraction of the rules, runs away, and takes refuge with a kindly old couple, who being childless, welcome and finally adopt her. In the meantime the mother receives word from the asylum authorities that the little one has been lost and that everything indicates that she was drowned. The mother, alone in the world, has just secured a position in the chorus of a musical show, and tries to drown her sorrows in a life of gayety.

Ten years later, a theatrical manager who stops by chance at a farmhouse, is charmed by the voice and beauty of a young girl he sees there. He offers her an engagement in one of his attractions, and the girl, dazzled by the thought of a life on the stage, gladly consents, and later appears in the city.

The mother is a member of the same chorus, and at first laughs at the new member of the cast and her shy country ways. She and the other girls induce the newcomer to attend a dinner which some men about town are giving, and laugh at her prim, high-necked dress. On a sudden inspiration the mother offers to rearrange the girl's attire so that she will not look so "old fashioned." Deftly she removes the yoke of the dress, and for the first time sees a scar on the girl's shoulder. A recollection of the fact that her own child was scalded on that same shoulder years before flashes through her brain. A few questions establish that her belief is correct. The mother recognizes the daughter, but the girl does not know her.

The mother's first thought is to save her daughter from treading the path she has followed. She induces her not to attend the dinner, and after the others have gone on jeeringly, she paints to the frightened, innocent, country-bred child the pitfalls and dangers of a life in the chorus. She proves to her that she will be far happier with the people who have been so kind to her, and leads the girl back to her foster parents.

But the mother does not reveal her identity. She considers that she is not worthy to associate with the innocent young woman, and decides that it is her duty to disappear as soon as she has placed her in safety. She creeps into the girl's room at night, places a farewell message on her pillow, kisses her softly and steals out into the night alone, determined to lead a new life, and in time become worthy to reveal herself to the daughter she had lost, but found again.

NESTOR.

THE FLOWER OF THE TRIBE (Sept. 16).—Having failed to buy Silver Star, the chief's daughter, Jesse Emmett, assisted by his friend, Decker, had succeeded, after a desperate fight with the redskins, in which the old chief was mortally wounded, in carrying her away by force. However, the young braves, who had given chase to the white renegades, so severely wounded Emmett, that he was forced to seek shelter in Dan Spencer's shack. Here, he explained that Silver Star was his wife. But while grandmother Spencer was binding up his wounds, the Indian maiden whispered the true state of affairs to little Vera, and as a result, the renegade, taken wholly by surprise, was quickly driven out at the point of a gun.

Luckily, 'ere he could attack them through the window, Roy Spencer appeared. An exciting encounter took place, in which Roy proved victor, greatly to the relief of Silver Star, who at once

PATHÉ'S WEEKLY

THE ESSENCE OF THE WORLDS EVENTS JUST AS THEY HAPPEN. TO BOOK IT MEANS NEW PATRONS, MORE MONEY, IN THE BOX OFFICE.

ISSUED EVERY TUESDAY

ECLIPSE

KOSMIK FILMS

A Gaumont Every Tuesday and Saturday,
an Urban-Eclipse Every Wednesday

Gaumont

Current Releases

Gaumont of Tuesday, September 12, 1911 About 1000 feet

How to Catch a Bachelor

Comedy. About 836 feet.

Showing how one attractive belle won the man of her choice in spite of the fact that he had foresworn marriage.

From Bordeaux to Pauillac

Travelogue. About 164 feet.

A voyage from Bordeaux, the well known French city, to Pauillac, on the estuary of Gironde.

Eclipse of Wednesday, September 13, 1911. About 995 feet.

The Hand of the Law

Drama. About 665 feet.

A thrilling drama built around the experiences of a clever smuggler.

Norwich and Vicinity, England

Travelogue. About 330 feet.

Excellent views taken in and about this fine old city.

Gaumont of Saturday, September 16, 1911. About 990 feet.

The Cinematograph Fiend

Comedy. About 575 feet.

Showing the troubles of a moving picture camera man.

A Mountain Torrent in Austria

Travelogue. About 415 feet.

The beautiful falls of Schwarzbach, near Golling, in Austria.

REGULAR ADVANCE ANNOUNCEMENTS MAILED FREE

WRITE TO

ECLIPSE

George Kleine

166 N. State St., Old No. 52 State St.

CHICAGO, ILL.

Licensed by the Motion Picture Patents Co.

Gaumont

hastened back to the Indian encampment, to appraise them of her welfare.

To her sorrow, the maiden found her father dead, while the new chief had already ordered a war dance, and stubbornly refused to believe her story, that the settlers had proven themselves her stanch friends. The old chief's death must be avenged! he declared, and accordingly ordered Silver Star placed in her tepee, under guard.

Realizing that unless she warned her new friends, they would all be massacred, the maiden quickly feigned illness; then, while her guard ran for help, slipped stealthily out, mounted a horse, and had not only notified the Spencers, but Roy had already galloped away for assistance ere the Indians crept into sight. Dan Spencer had but his old mother and little daughter to assist him in defending their shack, yet so true was his aim, that he succeeded in keeping the Indians at bay until Roy, with the other settlers dashed up to his rescue and drove the redskins away.

Silver Star had paid her debt of gratitude—she had saved her friends' lives, even at the cost of her own people.

MUTT AND JEFF AND THE ESCAPED LUNATIC (Sept. 9).—Mutt and Jeff are seen in their room, confronted with the serious problem of procuring breakfast. After some very deep thought, Mutt hits on a plan, and Jeff is dispatched to a neighboring grocery store, full of instructions as to how to bring home the eggs, to say nothing of "the bacon."

No distance is too short, it seems, to provide adventures for this adventurous little cuss, and the usual comical situations and obstacles appear, and are also as usual, met and overcome in the usual comical manner.

Returning to the expectant and hungry Mutt, picture Jeff's dismay and Mutt's disgust upon the discovery that, the purloined hen fruit is "of a vintage," and has acquired everything in the way of odor to offend the sensitive nostrils of Mutt; Jeff "gets his."

They must eat, however, and it's up to Mutt. A newspaper "ad" for waiters catches his eye and looks good to him—waiters surely have a chance to eat. So sallying forth hopeful and determined, the cafe in question is reached, and jobs secured, and then trouble and fun begin, and things move fast and furious, climaxed by the arrival of an escaped lunatic—with an appetite. Jeff, in the meantime, has been made chef, the former incumbent having been removed through the machinations of Mr. Mutt.

The lunatic engages the funny fellows as his personal bodyguard, with promise of large sums of money in return for faithful service, which is eagerly pledged by the enthusiastic Mutt. The arrival of the keepers from the asylum, is the signal for a general mix-up. The head waiter decides that everyhody is crazy, and even fears for his own mental equilibrium, if the new help is not immediately disposed of.

On his complaint, Mutt and Jeff are also seized as lunatics, and in a frenzy of funny fits, are dragged off to the foolish factory. This is one of the best of the "Mutt and Jeff" pictures, which by the way, are showing marked improvement with each succeeding release. Their popularity is still growing, and deservedly so.

YANKEE.

TANGLED HEARTSTRINGS (Sept. 11).—Mrs. Dane, a wealthy widow, becomes interested in the son of her gardner, who is trying to become a lawyer. Mrs. Dane finally decides upon sending the young man to a New York law school, and after an affectionate farewell to his sweetheart, father, and friends, he leaves.

A year later he has become one of the brightest students of the term. Mrs. Dane falls in love with the young man, and asks him to marry her. The student's father is apprised of this, and succeeds in having Mrs. Dane leave his son go back to his country sweetheart, who has been pining for him.

The young lawyer reprimands Mrs. Dane in the midst of a reception, for her actions. Two years later Tom's sweetheart dies, and learning the truth from Mrs. Dane, accepts her as his wife.

WOMAN (Sept. 15).—Living a frivolous, butterfly life, Eleanor Summerville cannot sacrifice her pleasure-loving habits for the sake of love, and refuses the offer of marriage of Frederick Robinson, but becomes the wife of Count von Bulow.

When she hears of Robinson's success in the financial world, where he is known as one of America's multi-millionaires, she regrets her decision of having married the nobleman, and, notwithstanding the fact that Robinson is married, she decides upon winning him away from his wife. Although Robinson shows her, time and again, that he does not care for her, she, with the devilish cunning, traps him into a compromising position, and is discovered by her husband, who immediately issues a challenge to the man he thinks has ruined his home.

Finding that the lives of two good men are at stake, she regrets her conduct and does everything in her power to stop the duel. The duel is fought and Robinson is wounded. In her efforts to stop the duel, she meets with a serious accident, from which she cannot recover.

She confesses to her husband and exonerates Robinson of all blame. She does not survive from the shock and accident, and after receiving for-

The Leading Motion Picture Producer of the World

SELIG

Announcing Four Releases Per Week

STARTING with The Heart Of John Barlow, on Friday, Sept. 8th, 1911, The House of Selig will increase its weekly program to four reels each week. This new release will appear every Friday. INSIST ON GETTING THE BIG SELIG QUARTET EACH WEEK AND YOU WILL DO THE BUSINESS.

NOTE TO EXHIBITORS: Answering the request of the majority of exhibitors Selig Bulletins will hereafter be issued in the single sheet style. Make display preparations accordingly.

COMING ANNOUNCEMENT COMING

"THE TWO ORPHANS"

In Three Reels will be released on Sept. 25th, 26th & 28th

From the world's greatest play SELIG, the producer extraordinary, has made the world's greatest, most elaborate and most expensive picture. Kate Claxton's own version was used, and produced under her own supervision. Every detail of action, costuming, scenery, effects, etc., are historically correct. Selig has spared no expense to make this the picture ideal. BOOK THIS MASTERPIECE AT ONCE AND MAKE PREPARATIONS FOR THE LARGEST BUSINESS IN THE HISTORY OF YOUR HOUSE and

"Lost in the Jungle"

is on the way

TRADE MARK

SEPT. 8th

"The Heart of John Barlow"

An exceedingly human story of a sea faring man's love for his home, erring wife, and babes. Length about 1,000 ft. Code word "ASSISTANT."

SEPT. 11th

"Kit Carson's Wooing"

A love story from frontier history. Produced in Yosemite Valley. Length about 1,000 ft. Code word "ANGLING."

SEPT. 12th

"Dad's Girls"

A thrilling western romance of original plot. Unique horsemanship. Length about 1,000 ft. Code word "ANGSTJAHR."

SEPT. 14th

"The Wheels of Justice"

A new story of a gentleman burglar who cannot shake off the past. Delicately handled. Contains strong moral. Written by Henry K. Webster. Length 1,000 ft. Code word "ANGUS."

FOLLOW THE FLAG

Selig Polyscope Co. TRADE S MARK Chicago U.S.A.

EUROPEAN OFFICES

LONDON — BERLIN — ST PETERSBURG.

FOUR-A-WEEK ESSANAY

Remember, These Days Are Essanay's:
TUESDAY :: THURSDAY :: FRIDAY :: SATURDAY

Release of Tuesday, Sept. 5th

THE DIAMOND GANG

(Length, approx. 980 feet.)

A sensational drama of the police department. Shows a running fight between escaping diamond thieves in an auto and a squad of police in a street car. A Real Thriller.

Release of Thursday, Sept. 7th

Two Good Comedies on One Reel

The Dark Romance of a Tobacco Can

(Length, approx. 700 feet.)

An original comedy photoplay with a laugh in every foot.

RELEASED WITH

Never Believe in Signs

(Length, approx. 300 feet.)

A short, snappy comic. The little laundress's sign was misleading, but it certainly drew the business.

Release of Friday, Sept. 8th

THE WRONG GLOVE

(Length, approx. 980 feet.)

A pleasing light comedy of rural life, excellently acted and original in plot.

A FEATURE WESTERN ATTRACTION

Release of Saturday, Sept. 9th

BRONCHO BILL'S LAST SPREE

(Length, approx. 980 feet.)

This is another of our famous "Snakeville" comedies, and one of the best of the entire series. If you want to laugh long and hearty do not fail to book this winner.

GET THE POSTERS OF ALL OUR PHOTOPLAYS

They are the most attractive posters made.

Essanay Film Mfg. Company

521 First National Bank Building, CHICAGO, ILL.

5 Wardour Street, London, W.

giveness from those she had wronged, she dies, praying for forgiveness from the Higher Power.

GREAT NORTHERN.

A DREAM WITH A LESSON (Sept. 9).— A poor student is preparing himself for the medical profession. He cannot join in the pleasures of his fellow-students on account of his poverty. A cousin, who loves him, brings fruit and flowers, and as he is bidding her adieu at the door, his attention is attracted by a crowd of street urchins annoying a fashionably dressed and beautiful young woman. He goes to her aid, and is rewarded by a smile of gratitude and a flower from her corsage. Going back to his room, he listens at the partition to his neighbor, a rich old miser, counting his wealth. Getting out of his window, he creeps along to the window of the adjoining room and sees the old man with his money. Instantly the desire to possess it and thus satisfy his ambitions comes over him, but he thrusts the idea aside and goes back to his room. Here he falls asleep, and we see his dream vividly portrayed. He fancies that he has gone back to the neighbor's room, strangled his victim and stolen his wealth. Then he goes to a fashionable restaurant, and meets his fair charmer once more. After a time he returns home, and again creeps to the old man's room, where he sees the police investigating the case. They discover him at the window and go to arrest him, and in his haste to escape, he falls to the ground. The shock awakens him, and he discovers, to his great joy that 'twas all a dream.

POWERS.

GRAY WOLF'S GRIEF (Sept. 12).—Doctor Ruthbone and his wife go West to enjoy a vacation. While riding the ranges the wife's horse takes fright and dashes madly across the plains. She is rescued from sure death by Gray Wolf's squaw, named Silver Heels. The four become great friends. Silver Heels is taken sick and the doctor discovers that she has tuberculosis. He tells Gray Wolf that it will be impossible to save her life unless she is taken to the city, where she can be treated. Gray Wolf finally consents to allow Silver Heels to accompany the doctor East.

Several months pass and Gray Wolf, in a vision, imagines he hears his squaw calling him. Mounting his horse he rides to the depot and catches the train and rides the bumpers to the city. He arrives in time to let Silver Heels breath her last in his arms. Imagining the doctor caused his loss, he is about to kill him, when Silver Heels appears and stays his hand. He carries her West and buries her, alongside the tepee where thep spent many happy hours together, and where he can he always near her.

THE HORSE THIEF (Sept. 16).—A half-breed Indian and his squaw hold up the sheriff and his wife and steal their horses. A band of cowboys, returning from a roundup, recognize the horses and force the Indian and his squaw to return with them to town. On the way they overtake the sheriff and his wife, who are walking town-ward, to give the alarm. The sheriff, in gratitude to the half-breed for not shooting his wife during the hold-up, claims that he lost the horses in a card game. This alibi frees the half-breed, who, ashamed of what he has done, returns the horses to the rightful owner and swears that he will henceforth lead an honest life. He tears a playing carn in half, giving the sheriff one part and keeping the other section himself. Some time later the sheriff, through drink, loses his position, and the half-breed, who has become a model citizen, is elected in his stead. The sheriff is called to find a cattle rustler. He catches the suspect, and in searching his prisoner, he finds half of a playing card. He matches the piece with the one he has, recognizes in the prisoner bis one-time benefactor, and realizing that "one good turn deserves another," sets him free.

CHAMPION.

CHARLIE'S BUTTIE (Sept. 11).—George Hamilton, a Southerner, his wife and family and colored servant, have emigrated and settled in the great West. It is the period before the Civil War, but Charley, the servant, has long since been a free man, the boon of freedom being granted by his kind master for his loyalty.

One day, a note comes to Hamilton; the contents were startling: "The Indians are on the warpath. Make for the fort." No time was to be lost, for the fort was many miles distant. The horses were harnessed, every one was mounted, all ready to start; but stop! Where was Dorothy Hamilton? The joy and pride of the region had been momentarily forgotten. The anxious parents were soon quieted when Charley appeared with the "little missy" in hand. He placed the child before him on his horse and the cavalcade started.

Only a few miles had been covered when the clattering of hoofs was faintly heard. The spurs were applied to their frightened beasts and the race for life was begun. All seemed well until it was seen that Charley's animal was beginning to lag. He spurred the horse onward, but to no purpose, The mother looked back with agonizing expression, crying, "Oh my baby! Oh my baby!"

Charley beard the wild whoop of the Indians not a hundred yards off. He knew it was impossible for the borse to gain tbe fort with its double burden. Each second heightened the danger. His mind was now made up. He dismounted, and striking the beast, sent it forward with his "little missy."

Then flinging himself behind a rock, he halted the onrush of the now thoroughly infuriated savages, who saw their beautiful prey slipping from their grasp. Crack! Crack! bis weapon flashed, and each bullet found its mark in the redman's breast. Meanwhile Dorothy and her parents had eluded harm and reached the fort. They told their tale, and a company of troopers rode out to the succor of heroic Charley. But when they reached him, his bruised and disfigured body met their gaze. He had given his life for little Dorothy, the Prairie Flower.

THE RED DEVILS (Sept. 13).—Vast crowds of soldiers and civilians are seen entering the circus gronnds, fronting the spread of canvas. We enter and see that which has a charm for all, the circus sawdust ring. We behold with delight the antics of the clown, while the ringmaster, handsomely arrayed, struts about in lordly style.

Then the Red Devils rush on; they are four acrobats who perform in quick succession, head stands, neck throws, ground and lofty tumbling, and other daring acrobatic feats. Then dashes on the loveliest of women, in face and figure, bestriding a noble horse of creamy hue, and all loudly applaud. Later we peep into the dressing rooms of the performers, which puts us in touch with tbe heart of the play. We then see the picturesque caravan on its way, with the old familiar stagecoach, carrying on top and inside, the circus troupe.

Suddenly we are startled by a sudden onslaught by Indians upon the coach. Death seems imminent. At this juncture, the Red Devils leap from the coach and by the performance of their circus stunts, amaze the painted savages, thus arresting their attack for the time being. In the meantime, a body of U. S. cavalry arrive, in response to a message sent to her sweetheart by the fair circus rider, and the Indians are put to flight.

At the head of the gallant troops rides the handsome soldier whose heart has been lost in the sawdust arena. But this time he has won bis prize and placed the circlet of gold upon her finger.

LUX.

BILL BUYS A LOBSTER (Sept. 8).—Despite the severity of his weekly adventures recently, little Bill is here to cheer us once more with his frolicsome escapades. We see him seated tete-a-tete with a very pretty girl, indulging in the luxury of a particularly magnificent lobster for dinner. It is, of course, quite inconceivable that Bill should do anything without its having some astonishing consequence, and the effect of the succulent crustacean is in nowise disappointing. Immediately he finishes his repast, Bill is seized with most alarming spasms, and then, apparently taking on the habits of the shellfish he devoured, commences to walk backwards out of the room. Tripping up at the top of the stairs, he falls down headforemost and then leaps backward into the street, where be seeks refuge in a waiting carriage. But no sooner has he done so than the horse begins jibbing, and is not stopped until the angry driver expels poor Bill from the vehicle. Bill's experiences on horseback are equally thrilling, and result eventually in his being cast off backward after a marvelous backward ride. Still in a state of invertion, he collides with the tables of a cafe and brings down the wrath of the proprietor upon his head. At last, however, he manages to steer himself home, where he is met on the doorstep by Mrs. Bill, who affectionately gathers him up in her arms. and departs indoors.

Ornamental Theatres

PLASTER RELIEF DECORATIONS

Theatres Designed Everywhere

Write for Illustrated Theatre Catalog. Send us Sizes of Theatre for Special Designs

The Decorators Supply Co.

2549 Archer Avenue :: CHICAGO, ILL.

THE ROMANCE OF A WAGER (Sept. 8).—The Hon. Percival Malpas remarks to his friends upon human charity. No argument will convince him that the public are really generous, until at last his friend, Lord Ponteport, wages five thousand dollars that he will solicit alms as a beggar and live for one month upon the proceeds of same. Lord Pontcport then disguises himself as a vagrant and repairs to a church. At first he is successful, but later comes to grief and is thrown into a prison cell as a robber, but the stipulated time of the disguise being up, he is able to throw off his disguise, and the error is soon righted. We later see him going to the lady of his choice, but not for alms this time, but for something dearer.

REX.

PICTURESQUE COLORADO (Sept. 7).—When nature finished the rest of the world, she took all the colors left on her palette and generously and recklessly threw them into that spot of the earth that is now Colorado (given that name fo rthat very reason). Eventable riot of awe-compelling color, a blending of almost sacred beauty, Colorado is nature's masterpiece. The rainbow and an Italian sunset all frozen into the everlasting hills—the matchless granite hues soothe yet stir one to the unknown depth as their sublime spell falls upon us. We unconsciously acknowledge the majesty of nature and her supremacy over merely human artists. They are psalms and a sermon in stone.

As we stand in the Garden of the Gods, looking at the wierdly wondrous figures carved by the great sculptor, we forget our petty cares and paltry woes, our yearnings and our hopes or despairs, our conquests or defeats, for we are in Divine presence, selfishness and avarice are forgotten, for we are with beauty and our own heart and soul and mind become beautified. Colorado's charm is at once an aspiration and an inspiration.

Poets of song and nature's genius have been inspired to dream, dare an achievement through the mighty sight of the wonders of nature. Artists have vainly attempted to translate on canvas a picture of picturesque Colorado. Rex has accomplished, with the aid of science, what artists have failed to produce.

SOLAX.

HECTOR'S INHERITANCE (Sept. 6).—Hector is a poor dishwasher in Brown's Café. He is lazy, dirty and a boy of no account whatever. Brown, who owns the café, reads in the paper that Hector's uncle has left him a million dollars. Brown thinks he will treat Hector pretty well and perhaps come in for some of the million.

He therefore gives him a pocket full of money, new clothes, etc., and sends him out to enjoy himself among the gay people of the café. Hector is not slow at having a good time and for several days he has the gayest kind of a gay time with automobiles and pleasant companions. Suddenly Brown, who is reading the paper, discovers that Hector's uncle was insane and only THOUGHT he had a million dollars, and consequently Hector is as poor as ever.

He is thrown out, with Brown left to reflect on his bad luck and worse judgment.

THE BEST POLICY (Sept. 8).—Two brothers and a girl. Both are in love with her. Jack, fond of society and high living, always well dressed and gay, seems to have the best of it against his more simple and plodding brother, who rather shuns society, and is wrapped up in his work. Jack, however, has a lot of debts and needs money badly. One day he sees his father receive a big sum of money and put it away in the safe without locking the safe door. Jack steals the money and puts a few bills in his brother Harry's coat pocket. Harry is accused and might have spent a number of years in jail had it not been for the girl in the story. Louise was a clever girl and had just begun to suspect that Jack was not the hero she had first thought. Her love of justice, as well as a growing love for Harry, helped to set a clever trap for Jack in which he was caught, and most of the money recovered. Of course, she marries Harry.

Among the Exhibitors

Milwaukee, Wis.—Plans have been filed with the city building inspector for a $25,000 vandeville theater at Twentieth Street and Fond du Lac Avenue. The building is to be erected by the Atlas Amusement Company, St. Louis.

Indianapolis, Ind.—E. W. Roberts, who established the Princess Theater in this city three years ago, has sold the moving picture show to Charles Mahan and Allen Mason, for $2,000.

Oshkosh, Wis.—A new moving picture theater, the Rex, has opened in the building at 171 Main Street. The new front of the theater is attracting favorable comment. The type of the doors, the office, and the general entrance way is that of old Flemish oak, and the interior arrangement shows harmony and comfort. Arthur H. Grey, one of the proprietors of the Lyric Theater, will have charge of the Rex.

Kenosha, Wis.—The Orpheum was damaged to the extent of $5,000 by fire. The fire started just after a crowd of people had left.

Detroit, Mich.—A new $25,000 fireproof theater is to be built at the intersection of Grand River, Myrtle and Trumbull Avenues, the same to be completed by Nov. 1. The house will be opened by the Globe Theater Co., with offices in the Sun building, and will be run as a vaudeville and musical comedy house. The theater will be 60 x 90 feet, with a seating capacity of 800 to 1,000 seats, with gallery and boxes.

Oakland, Cal.—Work will begin at once on the largest moving picture theater in the West, to be erected by H. C. Capwell on Broadway, just north of the Albany Block. The theater has already been leased by Turner & Dahnken, one of the largest film operating firms in the United States. The lease calls for a rental of $100,000.

Montreal, Que.—St. Denis Street will soon have its first moving picture theater. The Mount Royal Land Company have obtained permission to erect an establishment for this purpose, between Mount Royal Avenue and Mary Ann Street. The cost is to be $15,000.

Niles, Ohio.—Geo. Verbeck has sold the Niles Theater to Chas. M. Bittner and Albert Cunnick.

Milwaukee, Wis.—Plans have been prepared for a new vaudeville and moving picture theater at 20th Street and Fond du Lac Avenue, to cost $25,000.

Childress, Texas.—A new Opera House will be erected here at a cost of $15,000.

Elgin, Ill.—Major Joseph B. Canghey and H. P. Korig will remodel the Healey Building, on Du Page Street, into a motion picture theater.

Elwood, Ind.—E. W. Roberts, who established the Princess Theater here, has sold the moving picture show to Chas. Mahan & Allen Hason.

Peoria, Ill.—The Lycenm Theater, on Fulton Street, has been sold to Chas. Loveridge, by H. Webb.

Frankford, Pa.—Plans have been prepared for a new moving picture theater at 3139-3149 Frankford Avenue, for the Allegheny Amusement Co.

Niles, Ohio.—Jack Strafford will erect a new theater on Furnace Street.

Belfast, Me.—Walter J. Clifford will erect a new theater here, to cost $8,000.

Aiken, S. C.—The Aiken Theater Co., capital $15,000. T. C. Stone, P. F. Henderson and C. D. Hall.

Childress, Texas.—Ed. Hartzell and associates, of this city, will erect a new $15,000 theater.

Big Stone Gap, Tenn.—James Taylor will erect an opera house, to cost $12,000.

Richmond, W. Va.—M. L. Hofheimer will erect a new picture theater.

Memphis, Tenn.—The building at 49 So. Main Street is to be remodeled at a cost of $10,000, and will be opened as a motion picture theater in October.

Butte, Mont.—Interior decorations of the New Orpheum Moving Picture Theater, are now completed, and it is thought to be one of the handsomest places in the West.

Savannah, Ill.—Al Dockstader will erect a new vaudeville and picture theater here in the near future.

Albia, Ia.—Alex. Long purchased the Comet, the leading moving picture theater in this city.

Sheboygan, Wis.—W. C. Weeks, architect, has completed plans and bids will be called for the construction of the Princess Theater. Seating capacity, 800.

Omaha, Neb.—J. Gregg and O. C. Fich will erect a moving picture theater at Twenty-fourth and Lake Streets. Cost, $4,500.

Woodbine, Ia.—F. L. Hupp and W. C. Wilkins will open a first-class moving picture theater.

Pittsburg, Pa.—Alterations in the building at 634 Smithfield Street, for a moving picture theater for the Union Amusement Company, will cost $3,500.

Sioux Falls, S. D.—Jack C. Moore and Ora W. Coe have purchased the Airdome Theater.

Cleveland, Ohio.—L. Cohn has let the contract for a modern theater at Superior and 113th Streets, to cost $15,000. It will be exclusively a moving picture theater, and will be up to date in every respect.

Vancouver, B. C.—Harry Clough, manager of the Province Theater, will take the management of a new motion picture theater now being erected in Sydney, Australia. It is claimed this is to be the largest exclusively moving picture theater in the world, the building having a frontage of 90 feet and depth of 188 feet. The company owning it is establishing a chain of motion picture houses throughout Australia.

South Amboy, N. J.—The K. of P. Hall is now a motion picture house and doing good business.

Green Bay, Wis.—The building occupied by Popp & Rather is to be remodeled and opened as a moving picture theater.

Glenwood, Ia.—R. B. Cunningham's moving picture show has been bought by Seymour & Fair, and will be consolidated with the Motiograph Theater.

New Ulm, Minn.—The Opera House is to be renovated and remodeled and will open September 1 as a motion picture house. Richard Higgs will be proprietor and manager.

We Offer 300 more to the Trap Drummers

Get your order in at once. At our special offer price—$10.0

This high-grade Orchestra Drum, 10 thumb screw rods, transparent drum heads, solid shells, maple, rosewood, walnut.

Size, 3 x 14—3 x 15—4 x 15—4 x 14. This offer for September and October.

E. P. Zeidler Drum Co., Cleveland, O.

Louisville, Ky.—Robert Lucas will build a brick picture theater at 2001 Frankfort Avenue, to cost $6,000.

Spokane, Wash.—E. E. Longenberger will spend $1,000 in remodeling his motion picture theater.

St. Louis, Mo.—A moving picture theater, to cost $100,000, will be erected by the Parkview Amusement Company, on Delmar Boulevard, near Hamilton.

Saskatoon, Can.—Mr. Robillard has purchased the Bijou Theater.

St. Cloud, Minn.—J. A. Gaudy, of St. Cloud, will open a moving picture theater in the near future.

Rome, Ga.—Joe Spelgelberg will open a theater at this place in the near future.

Nashville, Tenn.—W. P. Ready sold his entire interest in the Alhambra Moving Picture Theater.

Kearney, Neb.—Emil Schwarz and Paul Hoppen have purchased the Lyric Theater in Aurora.

Exiba, Ia.—P. H. Millar and J. A. Petersen will erect a moving picture theater at this place.

Des Moines, Ia.—C. E. Jordan & Co., have purchased the Scenic Moving Picture Theater.

Glenwood, Ia.—R. B. Cunningham sold his moving picture theater to Messrs. Seymour & Fair.

Oelwein, Ia.—Lloyd Skeels sold the Gem Theater to Wm. Hasbrouck.

Oconto, Wis.—Otto Haas sold the Bijou Theater to John Follett.

Grand Island, Neb.—Peter B. Peters will erect a vaudeville theater at this place.

Memphis, Tenn.—The Majestic Amusement Co. will erect a motion picture theater at 49 South Main Street. Estimated cost, $10,000.

Minneapolis, Minn.—Chas. W. Miles will enlarge the Miles Theater in this city. Estimated cost of improvements, $65,000.

Kalamazoo, Mich.—The Orpheum is the name of a new moving picture theater just opened in this city, under the management of L. C. Barnes. It is one of the handsomest establishments of its kind in Western Michigan, and is enjoying a large patronage. Mr Barnes is also manager of the Gem Theater in this city, which has been recently renovated and redecorated.

Erie, Kan.—Frank Flack and Verne Coles have sold the Erie Moving Picture Theater to Bogard & Appich, of Parsons.

Jacksonville, Florida.—The Majestic Theater, operated as a vaudeville and motion picture house, under the management of A. B. Hoyt, has been sold to Gonzales & Pryor. The new management will discontinue the vaudeville acts and run pictures only.

Oconto, Wis.—Otto Hass, who conducted the Bijou Theater here for the last three years, sold out to John Follett.

Milwaukee, Wis.—A new motion picture theater, the Victoria, has opened at Eleventh and Winnebago Streets, with a seating capacity of 700.

Green Bay, Wis.—A moving picture house will be opened on the West Side. The house will be located in the building now occupied by Popp & Rather, who will move to the Commercial Hotel Building after Oct. 1. This new theater will open about Oct. 15.

Duluth, Minn.—The New Orpheum Theater, of Hancock, has been opened to the public by Manager D. E. Rice.

Milwaukee, Wis.—The Kosciusko Theater Company will build a new moving picture theater on the north side of Lincoln Avenue, near Fifth Avenue. The structure will cost about $10,000.

Rhinelander, Wis.—Messrs. Hanson and Taylor, who disposed of their interests in the Bijou Theater and Grand Opera House, to take control of the Gem Theater and Opera House in Chippewa Falls, have sold the business there and have purchased the Star Theater in Duluth.

Superior, Wis.—Charles Lange, brother of L. H. Lange, will open a moving picture show here, commencing this week.

MR. EXHIBITOR:

You Can Now Read ANNOUNCEMENT No. 5

IN COMING BEFORE THE PUBLIC with our PROGRAMME, we did not seek the VIEWS OF OUR COMPETITORS. Neither did we assume that the public which we must serve would consult our competitors as against their own intelligence, nor shall we at any time be prepared to grant that such will be true.

WE HAVE COUNTED UPON YOUR AMERICAN BRAIN, WHICH IN ALL FRANKNESS IS THE ONLY GUARANTEE WE HAVE FOR OUR INVESTMENT.

WE are not dealing with a small proposition, but in fact the biggest thing ever attempted in the film world. Knowing all this you must realize that we were prepared to hear THE CARPING of the first to suffer, because of our activity, and had already made our analysis of the effect such CARPING would have on AMERICAN BRAIN. We cannot undertake to answer attacks on a competitive nature. Our plain obligation to you is to represent our PROGRAMME, which needs no apology nor props, but has strength sufficient to prevail of its own MERIT.

YOU can see the goods now, and judge what we mean when we speak of QUALITY in our PROGRAMME: Having seen, you can understand how it was possible to launch this big enterprise, and you can further understand why we have felt secure in putting our success in your HANDS. (Also you may be able to read between the lines and understand our attitude in the whole matter from the first day we spoke down to date.) ABSOLUTE CONFIDENCE in every phase of the MOVEMENT.

Wednesday, September 7th, 1911, Opening Day

MONDAY—"MONO," "CLARENDON," "PLANTATION."
TUESDAY—"HELIOS," "DEUTS. BIOGRAPH," "ROSE."
WEDNESDAY—"LATIUM," "MONDIA," "FEDERAL."
THURSDAY—"WASHINGTON," "FILM D' ART," "HEPWORTH."
FRIDAY—"ACQUILLA," "CRICKS & MARTIN," "MOHAWK."
SATURDAY—"SAVOY," "OKLAHOMA," "DEUTS. BIOSCOPE."
SUNDAY—"CALIFORNIA," "MESSTERS," "COMERIO."

Attention This Programme Exclusive

To the thousands who have so patiently followed our efforts up to this hour, let us say, our attitude is one of deep gratitude for your encouragement and support we are as pleased as yourself to be able to give you the service on and after Sept. 7th, 1911. Of course you realize that the NATIONAL service will not be available to all of you on the same date; that time must ensue before sufficient number of releases are in your territory to take you on. That your exchange man will honestly tell you what date he can care for you, that this is the period where your loyalty will prove our contention, and we shall have arrived upon a field of unqualified success.

YOU CAN HAVE EXCLUSIVE FILM SERVICE FROM A NATIONAL FILM EXCHANGE.

Announcement No. 6 will be at your pleasure next week.

Wire or write your wants and we will give you the information.

NATIONAL FILM DISTRIBUTING CO.

NATIONAL FILM DISTRIBUTING COMPANY

34-36 West Houston Street New York City

NATIONAL FILM DISTRIBUTING CO.

If you can't get TWO IMPS EVERY WEEK at the price you are paying Pay A Little More!

Demand Two Imps Every Week

Demand Two Imps Every Week

Let the Imps pull you out of the hole!

They will do it quicker and better than any other brand of film. Imp films cost more to produce than any others. They show more thought, more care, more expert handling, more careful editing. Advertise the fact that you show two Imps every week and you will give your competitor a body blow, no matter what brand he may be using. Keep everlastingly at your exchange till you get two Imps every week. If you can't accomplish that point by any other method, then pay a little more. Get together with your exchange right now! Plan for the biggest Fall and Winter business of your career!

"BY THE HOUSE THAT JACK BUILT"

(Copyright 1911 by I. M. P. Co.)

A story in which all the important mythical characters of Mother Goose appear. A film that will pack your house not only in the evenings but at matinees. Go after it. Released Monday, September 11th.

"THE BROTHERS"

(Copyright 1911 by I. M. P. Co.)

One of the prettiest love stories the Imp has ever produced. Scenes laid in ould Ireland. You'll see your favorite Imp performers in a new light and you'll like them better than ever. Released Thursday, September 14th.

INDEPENDENT MOVING PICTURES CO. IMP AMERICA

Independent Moving Pictures Co. of America., 102 W. 101st St., New York. Carl Laemmle, Pres. Are you getting our free lobby circuars?

INDEPENDENT MOVING PICTURES CO. IMP AMERICA

EXTRA!—If you have not received word from us during the past week regarding our new proposition on the "Imp Book" ask about it at once. Don't overlook this splendid opportunity!

"BULLY!"

MR. FRANK VANSTON, Temple Theatre, Elgin, Ill., declares:—"I simply can't say enough in praise of the film service you are giving me. Whether it is Laemmle film, Laemmle service or Laemmle luck, my business has been bully ever since I started to do business with you."

I've got more delighted customers on my list than any exchange man in the country. Why don't YOU join the list?

Carl Laemmle, Pres.

The LAEMMLE FILM SERVICE

New number

204 W. Lake St., Chicago, Ill.

Sykes Block. Minneapolis, Minn. 1517 Farnam St. Omaha, Neb.
515 Mulberry St. Des Moines, Iowa. 1110 Wyandotte St. Kansas City, Mo.

The biggest and best film renter in the world

Machines and Films For Sale

3 Second-hand Power's Machines, $90 to $170
1 Newly Rebuilt Head - - - $50
6 Second-hand Edison Machines, $85 to $110
Lot of Films For Sale Cheap

MAYER SILVERMAN
105 Fourth Ave , Pittsburgh, Pa., U. S. A.

A WONDERFUL

"KID FILM"

WILL BE RELEASED SEPTEMBER 11th

and every Moving Picture devotee will talk about it for months after. Here's the title—

HOW POOR BABIES ARE REARED IN PARIS

Plenty of Heart-interest as well as amusing situations

ON THE SAME REEL

ECLAIR FILMS AMERICA

A SCREAMING COMEDY

How Teddy Lost His Bet

Making in all a Combination Reel such as Live Managers appreciate

LOOK OUT — AMERICAN ECLAIRS

Write for Booklet

MOTION PICTURE DISTRIBUTING AND SALES COMPANY

ECLAIR FILM CO.

Factories and Studios — — FORT LEE, N. J.

A WILD WESTERN WOUNDER

THAT CAPTURES THE COIN

OLD WYOMING DAYS stands out alone as the greatest portrayal of real wild western celebration ever witnessed. Startling, death daring antics of the fearless Broncho Busters, roping and riding wild horses and steers. Cow Boys, Cow Girls and Indians in fast and furious performance.
The actual production of the last Cow Boys' Convention, held at Lander, Wyo., the fringe of our western border, July 4th.

STATE RIGHTS SELLING FAST. LIVE WIRES GET BUSY.

THE WESTERN FEATURE FILM CO. 3843 Indiana Ave., Chicago, Ill.

FOR ILLINOIS BOOKINGS for Old Wyoming Days see James T. Hennegan, WRITE, WIRE OR PHONE

167 W. WASHINGTON STREET, CHICAGO, ILL. PHONE, MAIN 2330

NESTOR

"The Worth-While Film"

2
Worth - While Films
Each and Every Week

EARL B. TINKER, Manager of Tinker Moving Picture Co., Cambridge, Mass., writes:

"The Nestor Film is in my opinion the best that is produced at this time and is a real 'Worth-While' film; not once in a while but always."

2
Worth - While Films
Each and Every Week

RELEASE OF WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 6th, 1911

"THE FLOWER OF THE TRIBE"

Cowboy—Indian Foto-Drama of Limited Length (975 Feet) and Unlimited Drawing Power

BE FROM MO.

With the exception of the MUTT & JEFF FOTO-FARCES, there's no other film, regular or special, that makes as much money for the Exchangeman or the Exhibitor as the NESTOR WORTH-WHILE WEDNESDAY WESTERN RELEASE. Don't take our "say so", Be from Missouri. Begin with

"The Flower of the Tribe"

Released Wednesday, Sept. 6th

ORDER NOW!

Scene from "THE FLOWER OF THE TRIBE" to book our release of Wednesday, Sept. 13,

BE QUICK

AT PERRY'S RANCH

A powerful foto-dramatic production of the Far West, with the mother interest running riot.

ORDER NOW!

EVERY SATURDAY
MUTT & JEFF
EVERY SATURDAY

"BUD" FISHER'S BIZARRE COMEDIANS

MUTT and JEFF

Filmed in true Nestorian Style Will Clinch Their Affectionate Hold on the Public with Their Foto-Farcical

EVERY SATURDAY
MUTT & JEFF
EVERY SATURDAY

RELEASE OF SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 9th, 1911

"MUTT AND JEFF AND THE ESCAPED LUNATIC"

(You'll Be Looney If You Don't Get It!)

Mr. David Horsley,
147 Fourth Ave., New York City.

Dear Sir:—

We are running "MUTT and JEFF" pictures every Tuesday, (which is usually our poorest day of the week,) yet it is now our best—Must say so far these pictures have proven the best drawing card we ever had.

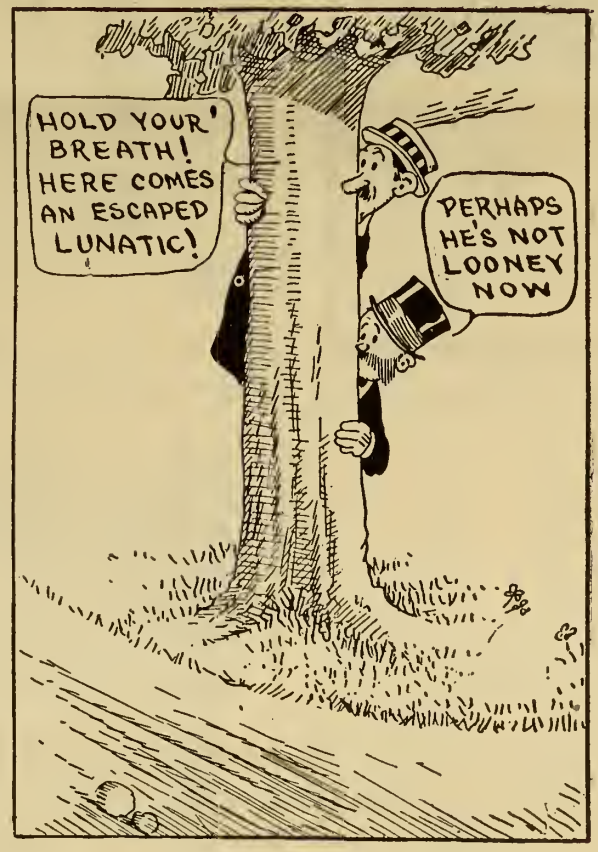
DAVIS & CASTLEBERRY
Electric Theatre, Griffin, Ga.
Elite Theatre, Columbus, Ga.
Lyric Theatre, Rome, Ga.

2
Worth-While Films
Each and Every Week



Exchangemen and Exhibitors!

A word to the wise suffices; and as you are wise to all good things, particularly the unquestioned popularity of the

MUTT & JEFF FOTO-FARCES

you should promptly book the Release of Wednesday, Sept. 9th

"Mutt and Jeff
AND THE Newsboys"

A Succession Of Screams!

2
Worth-While Films
Each and Every Week

NESTOR David Horsley, 147 Fourth Avenue NEW YORK

MOTION PICTURE DISTRIBUTING AND SALES COMPANY

Sole Distributors

NESTOR

LUX FILMS

The Cream of Perfection

Released Friday, Sept. 8, 1911

Bill Buys a Lobster

Comedy Length 350 feet

A Romance of a Wager

Drama Length 642 feet

Another Split Reel; just the kind you want for your program

R. PRIEUR

10 East 15th St. New York City

Telephone Call 3427 Stuyvesant

Sold Only Through

MOTION PICTURE DISTRIBUTING and SALES COMPANY

ONLY EASTMAN RAW STOCK USED

When you pay for the rental of Two Yankees every week, you are making an investment that will positively increase your box office receipts.

MONDAY Y FRIDAY

SEPTEMBER 11

Tangled Heartstrings

An intensely Strong Dramatic Story of a Youth's Love and Ambition.

Portrayed by an excellent cast of dramatic artists.

Code Word, Tangled

SEPTEMBER 15

Woman

A Masterful Portrayal of Longfellow's Famous Quotation:

"What Disaster can she bring upon thy house, who is a woman."

Code Word, Woman

YANKEE FILM CO.

344 E. 32nd St., New York City

MOST PEOPLE REALIZE

a penny saved is a penny earned

DO YOU?

Save Money by Using the World Famous

Lumiere Cinematograph Film

GUARANTEED

Perfect in Manufacture

Fresh Stock is here and selling fast.

POSITIVE and NEGATIVE

3½ cents per foot (unperforated)

¼ cent. per foot extra for perforation

There is none better at any price.

All orders filled promptly. Send us yours

Lumiere Jougla Co.

75 Fifth Ave., (Between 15th and 16th Sts.)

New York City

PHONE 531 STUYVESANT

Chicago Branch - 30 East Randolph St.

W. E. GREENE FILM EXCHANGE, Inc.

The Oldest and Largest Independent Film Exchange in New England

Notice to Exhibitors

We are prepared to take care of any amount of summer business in New England. You don't have to worry about your film service when you are trading with us; we do the worrying for you. The pick of the output of the Sales Co. is at your service. Write, wire or call at

W. E. Greene Film Exchange

INCORPORATED

228 Tremont Street, Boston, Mass.

Telephone 3790 2187 Oxford

YOU no doubt are aware that the film exchanges of Chicago have abandoned their slide departments, hence free slides are virtually a thing of the past. We are the Pioneer Song Slide Exchange of the United States, being organized some six years ago, carrying more slides under one roof than any one or ten exchanges.

Our method of shipping your week's supply of slides and music in one consignment every week should appeal to you, as the advantages resulting are many. Commencing Sept. 1st, we shall absolutely guarantee to furnish only one theatre in each city, (Chicago not included) with our service. This is protection and a grand opportunity to get an exclusive service, so don't let your competitor be the early bird. A letter from you will bring an immediate reply, and our Sept. 1st catalogue, just received from press.

Chicago Song Slide Exchange

6th Floor, Powers Bldg.

37 S. Wabash Ave., DEPT. 1, Chicago, Ill.

CINES CO. of ROME

Studios and Factories, Rome and Padova

CAPITAL { Preferred Stock Lire 2,000,000
Ordinary Stock, 3,750,000
Fully Paid-up Lire 5 750.000

EXCHANGE MEN WRITE TO US FOR PARTICULARS OF OUR FIRST RELEASE

Branch for the United States of America
445 Broome St., cor. Broadway
New York City

TELEPHONE, SPRING 9232

TELEGRAPHS, CINES NEW YORK

No. E-405. List $10.50.
Ask discounts of your Electric dealer. If he does not carry, write us direct.
Engineering Reports Free.

AT LAST

It is possible to have daylight pictures to run continually in a lighted theatre.

Beautiful even illumination with inexpensive indirect lighting fixtures. Not an electric bulb in sight. The light thrown to the ceiling and diffused through the room. No annoying side lights.

Theatre lighting revolutionized by this Eye COMFORT SYSTEM of Indirect Lighting.

Hundreds of installations being made.

Our engineering department will furnish you free of expense, reports and recommendations on request.

BETTER LIGHT AT LESS EXPENSE

Investigate—Write today

NATIONAL X-RAY REFLECTOR CO.,
235 Jackson Blvd., Chicago.
Gentlemen:—
Send full information regarding lighting of our theatre.

Length ..... Width ..... Ceiling Heighth .....
Name ..... Address .....

WURLITZER

55TH YEAR 55TH YEAR

Wurlitzer Piano Orchestra built in the front of the Gaither Theater, Cincinnati

The Leading Picture Theaters are Installing

Wurlitzer Automatic Musical Instruments

They furnish better music than musicians and cut out that great expense. 50 different styles. Call at nearest branch or write for big 84-page catalog

THE RUDOLPH WURLITZER COMPANY

CINCINNATI	CHICAGO	NEW YORK	PHILADELPHIA
117 to 121 E. 4th	266 & 268 Wabash	25 & 27 W. 32nd Bet. B'way & 5th Av.	1835 Chestnut
ST. LOUIS	CLEVELAND	BUFFALO	COLUMBUS, O.
913 Pine	206 Prospect	701 Main	57 E. Main

W. Stephen Bush

Has prepared and may be engaged to deliver special, complete LECTURES on

"Dante's Inferno"

(5 REELS, MILANO FILMS COMPANY)

"The Crusaders or Jerusalem Delivered"

(4 REELS, WORLD'S BEST FILM COMPANY)

These films mark a new epoch in moving pictures. They will bring the best audiences and the highest prices, provided they are properly presented with suitable music, lecture and effects. Careful rehearsals are necessary. Mr. Bush will, if desired, direct the rehearsal, provide music and of course deliver complete lecture during the running of the reels. In addition suitable reading matter for advertising the films in the daily press will be supplied.

Address

W. Stephen Bush

Care of Moving Picture World

125 East 23rd Street New York City

BUILT RIGHT RUNS RIGHT IS RIGHT

THE Makers of THE MOTIOGRAPH have been manufacturing Motion Picture Machines for MORE THAN THIRTEEN YEARS and everybody that is anybody in the Motion Picture world knows that our motto is QUALITY NOT QUANTITY.

QUALITY IN PRODUCTION IS OUR WATCHWORD

We are manufacturers in the true sense of the word. We make in our own factory EVERY GEAR—SCREW—SPROCKET—BUSHING and part that goes to make up THE BEST CONSTRUCTED MOTION PICTURE MACHINE IN AMERICA. REMEMBER—We do not depend on other factories.

OUR GUARANTEE covers the FREE REPLACEMENT OF ALL PARTS broken through defective material or workmanship.

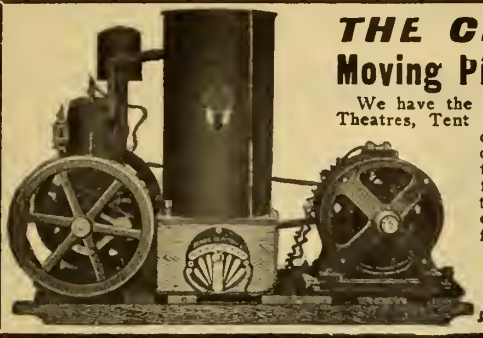
BEWARE OF THESE FACTS ADVERTISED BY OTHERS. THEY ARE NOT ALWAYS TO BE DEPENDED UPON.

It is a well known fact that the Motiograph is fast replacing Machines of all other makes. It is also a well known fact that the Motiograph Lamp House and Arc Lamp are being fitted to all other makes of mechanisms. Why? Because it is the Largest, Heaviest and Best.

THE ENTERPRISE OPTICAL MANUFACTURING CO.

564-572 WEST RANDOLPH ST. :: :: :: CHICAGO, ILL.

For Sale by every wide-awake dealer in North America.



THE CELEBRATED SCHUG
Moving Picture Electric Light Plants

We have the finest Electric Light Plants for Moving Picture Theatres, Tent Shows, Circuses, Carnivals, etc. Why use the calcium or acetylene gas lights, with all their dangers and unreliability, or pay excessive electric light bills for unsatisfactory service, when for a small sum you can install one of our Electric Light Plants, which can be operated at an expense that amounts to a trifle, and have the finest kind of lighting obtainable.

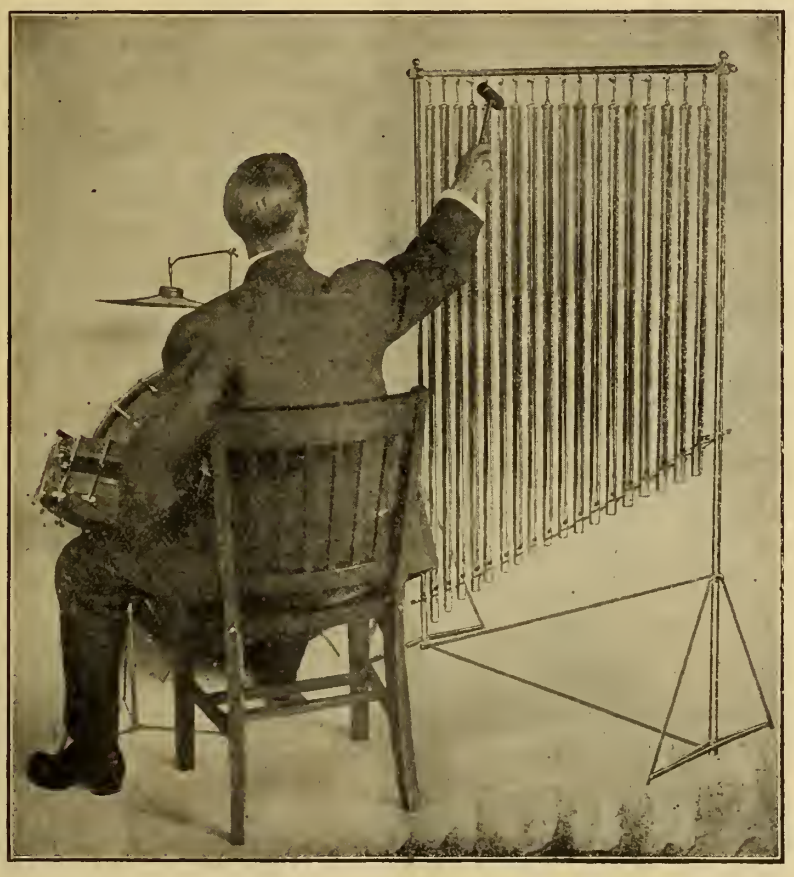
Write us at once for Bulletin No. 11.

We have a good agency proposition to offer hustlers

SCHUG ELECTRIC MFG. CO.
515 Jefferson Ave., Detroit, Michigan, U. S. A

SMALL CHIMES

A Complete Set of 18 Tones



The only difference between these Chimes and our Cathedral Chimes is in size. They have the same quality of tone, the same compass (one and one-half octaves chromatic), and are finished in the same manner.

They are a trifle less than 5 feet high and are 3½ feet in width. As you can see by the illustration, these Chimes take up very little floor space, and the performer can play them without having to change his position.

Although the combined weight of the Chimes and rack is but forty-one pounds, they are not toys by any means, but a complete set of real Chimes with volume and power sufficient for any size Auditorium.

There is a peculiar fascination about Chimes that appeals to all classes of people, and there is no place where they can be used to a better advantage than in a Moving Picture Theatre.

Order a set on trial—if you are not perfectly satisfied we will refund your money.

PRICE, $60

Leedy Manufacturing Co.

1055 E. PALMER STREET INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

If you are in the Market for

SECOND HAND FILMS

Write to the largest and most reliable Dealers and Importers of these goods in the U. S.

International Film Traders
Incorporated
8 West 14th Street, NEW YORK CITY

YOU GET IN
THE EDENGRAPH
1911 MODEL
Licensed by M. P. P. Co.

A machine that throws a perfect picture at less expense than any other on the market today.

THE COST of installation is the same as other high grade projectors.

THE DIFFERENCE IS IN THE WEARING QUALITIES

The Edengraph is a Good Investment.

WRITE TO:
The Edengraph Manufacturing Co.
135 W. Third Street New York, N. Y.

FOR SALE BY ALL AUTHORIZED DEALERS

FOR SALE—Moving picture theatre, Waukesha, Wis., 10,000 population, $20 month rent, $600, $300 down; or will rent complete, $50. One at Watertown, guaranteed $50 weekly profit. For Sale—All makes film, $5 per reel; new Powers No. 6, $175; Edison, Lubin, new, $100; Model B gas outfits, $15, $20, $25; plush opera chairs. $2; light reducers, $15; song sets, $1; Passion Play, $75. For Rent—Any make film, $1 week. Will buy Johnson-Jeffries film, Passion Plays, other films, machines, tents. H. Davis, Watertown, Wis.

SPECIAL TRIAL OFFER ON AROMA FOAM
The Powerful Perfumed Disinfectant

Immediately upon receipt of your remittance of $1.96 for a four quart order of assorted Geranium, Luxuran, Azuran and Viodor, we will ship you FREE a large compressed air sprayer and an artistically colored glass slide.

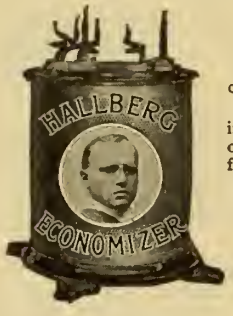
Sanitary Service Corporation
82 Wall Street, New York City
Address all communications to Laboratory,
1293 FULTON STREET, BROOKLYN, N. Y.

A "JUNK" REEL and A POOR LIGHT
Is a Bad Combination
FORTIFY YOURSELF AGAINST BOTH
Consult any live exchange in America
THEY ALL HANDLE BIO CARBONS
CHARLES L. KIEWERT CO.
No. 39 Cortland St. New York City
No. 19 Sutter St. San Francisco, Cal.

SCENERY
PAINTED FOR MOVING PICTURE THEATERS
P. J. DONIGAN SCENIC STUDIO, 418 S. Kedzie Ave., Chicago, Ill
Phone, Garfield 2710
Write for our prices on Picture Curtains

In answering advertisements kindly mention The Moving Picture World.

HALLBERG, "THE ECONOMIZER MAN" Exchanges NEW MACHINES FOR OLD!



Stop Tinkering Your Old M. P. Machine. Write me, stating Make, Factory Number, and Condition of your machine, also what make of new machine you desire—I WILL DO THE REST!

Any Old Machine Will Project a Picture. Any OF the Latest Models Will Give You a Good Picture. When Used in Connection with the Hallberg Standard Economizer, You Get the Best that Money Can Buy, Not only in Saving on Your Electric Bill, but in Quality of Light on Screen. If You Are Using any Other Make of Current Saver, Write for my Exchange Proposition for the "Hallberg," Stating Make You Have, and Particulars of Your Current.

All makes Moving Picture Machines, Supplies, Electra Carbons Etc., always in stock.

Electric Fans for either A. C. or D. C. - $7.50 and up
Exhaust Fans for either A. C. or D. C. - $15.00 and up

Complete line of Opera Chairs and all supplies for M. P. Theatre

I EQUIP YOUR THEATRE COMPLETELY -:- WRITE FOR CATALOG W. 6

J. H. HALLBERG, 36 East 23rd St., New York

THAT'S THE STUFF!!

THE ORIGINAL BIOGRAPH
CARBONS
THE SPECIAL BRAND FOR PICTURE MACHINES
See that your packages and labels are as shown on cuts

L. E. FRORUP & CO., Importers
232-234 GREENWICH ST. NEW YORK

STANDING ROOM ONLY
When You Use French Grey Teaspoons for Souvenirs

5c. EACH

FULL REGULATION SIZE AND WEIGHT

Send 10c. for sample and Plans for giving away souvenirs. The plans are indorsed by the managers of the largest houses in the country. Copies of same mailed with sample.
UNITED STATES FACTORIES CO., Manufacturers, General Offices 421 Dickey Building, Chicago

They will fill your house to capacity every performance.

Motion Picture Supplies

To get the right goods at the right prices call or write

H. A. MACKIE
Wholesale Dealer

853 BROADWAY
Cor. 14th St., New York

Jobber for Edison, Powers & Motiograph Machines.
All Others kept in Stock.

Call and see all makes of machines demonstrated on the mirror screen.

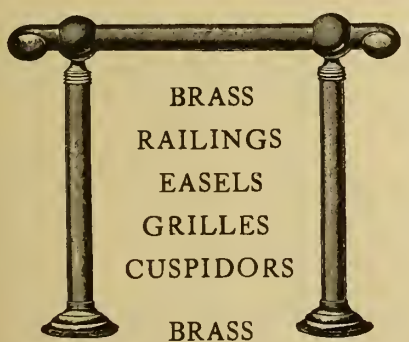
McKENNA



BRASS
RAILINGS
EASELS
GRILLES
CUSPIDORS

BRASS
KICK PLATES
STAIR TREADS, DOOR SILLS

McKenna Bros. Brass Co.
PITTSBURGH, PA.

"SILVERLIGHT"
Aluminum Motion Picture Curtain

Extraordinary Features Are: Permanent Brilliancy Economy, Flexibility Non-cracking, Safety, Strength. Send for circular. Dept. M
Ralph J. Golsen Supply Co. 84 Wabash Ave., Chicago

"Electra" Carbons

Standard for Carbon Quality

Every carbon is perfect in every detail

ELECTRA
TRADE MARK

When buying carbons why pay as much or more for poorer kinds when you can get the straightest, most uniform, homogeneous, longest-burning carbons in the world. Big stock, prompt shipments.

Hugo Reisinger
Sole Importer
11 Broadway, New York

Film Exchanges Take Notice

We can buy your entire FILM EXCHANGE or part, and will pay spot cash for same.

PROSPECTIVE MONEY MAKERS

Will sell you a complete line of films, machines, slides, etc., to open a first-class FILM RENTAL OFFICE, or can sell you any films you may want. Send for our latest BARGAIN LIST.

GENERAL FILM BROKERS, 23 E. Jackson Blvd., Chicago, Ill.

Licensed Release Dates

BIOGRAPH.

Aug. 21—The Diving Girl (Com.)..... 502
Aug. 21—$500 Reward (Com.)..... 496
Aug. 24—The Rose of Kentucky (Dr.)..... 997
Aug. 28—Swords and Hearts (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 31—The Baron (Com.)..... 587
Aug. 31—The Villain Foiled (Com.)..... 411
Sept. 4—The Stuff Heros Are Made Of (Dr.).. 998
Sept. 7—The Old Confectioner's Mistake (Dr.) 998
Sept. 11—The Village Hero (Com.)..... 675
Sept. 11—The Lucky Horseshoe (Com.)..... 321
Sept. 14—The Squaw's Love (Dr.) 998

EDISON.

Aug. 25—Then You'll Remember Me (Dr.)....1000
Aug. 26—Two White Roses (Dr.)..... 960
Aug. 29—The Surgeon's Temptation (Dr.)... 995
Aug. 30—Betty's Buttons (Com.) 450
Aug. 30—The Silent Tongue (Com.)..... 550
Sept. 1—The Declaration of Independence (Hist.) 1000
Sept. 2—New York State Barge Canal (Sc.).1000
Sept. 5—The Three Musketeers (Part I) (Dr.).1000
Sept. 6—The Three Musketeers (Part II) (Dr.).1000
Spet. 8—Jones Ferry (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 9—That Winsome Winnie Smile (Com.). 500
Sept. 9—No Cooking Allowed (Com.)..... 500
Sept. 12—Off the Coast of Maine (Sc.)..... 265
Sept. 12—Under the Tropical Sun (Dr.)..... 735
Sept. 13—The Escaped Lunatic (Com.)..... 500
Sept. 13—For the Queen (Com.)..... 500
Sept. 15—The Ligbthouse By the Sea (Dr.)....1000

ESSANAY.

Sept. 1—Miss Chatterer's Experience (Com.).. 980
Sept. 2—A Western Girl's Sacrifice (Dr.)....1000
Sept. 5—The Diamond Gang (Dr.)..... 980
Sept. 7—The Dark Romance of a Tobacco Can (Com.) 700
Sept. 7—Never Believe In Signs (Com.)..... 300
Sept. 8—The Wrong Glove (Com.)..... 990
Sept. 9—Broncho Bill's Last Spree (W. Com.) 980
Sept. 12—Two Men and a Girl (Dr.)..... 980
Sept. 14—The Puncher's Law (W. Dr.)..... 980
Sept. 15—The Burglarized Burglar (Com.).... 980
Sept. 16—The Millionaire and the Squatter (W. Dr.) 980

GAUMONT.
(G. Kleine.)

Aug. 15—The Inventor (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 19—The Son of the Shunammite (Dr.)..1000
Aug. 22—The Soul of the Violin (Dr.)..... 930
Aug. 26—The Sunday Hunting Party (Com.).. 665
Aug. 26—The Island of Ishia, Italy (Scenic).. 332
Aug. 29—Jimmie to the Rescue (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 2—Giving the High Sign to Woman Haters (Com.).....
Sept. 2—African Sharp-Shooters (Sc.)..... 210
Sept. 5—A Society Mother (Dr.).....1030
Sept. 9—Mated by Chess (Com.)..... 660
Sept. 9—Farming—Old and New Methods (Ind.) 377
Sept. 12—How to Catch a Bachelor (Com.).... 836
Sept. 12—From Bordeaux to Pauillac, France (Scenic) 164
Sept. 16—The Cinematograph Fiend (Com.)... 575
Sept. 16—A Mountain Torrent In Austria (Sc.) 415
Sept. 19—Jimmie on Guard (Dr.)..... 710
Sept. 19—Crossing the Alps In a Motor (Sc.) 285

KALEM.

Aug. 21—Simple Ike Decides to Marry (Com.)..
Aug. 23—Don Ramon's Daughter (Dr.).....
Aug. 25—The Little Cripple (Dr.).....
Aug. 28—The Branded Shoulder (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 30—Building the New Line (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 1—On the War Path (Dr.)..... 955
Sept. 4—Rory O'More (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 6—When Two Hearts Are Won (Com.)..1000
Sept. 8—When the Sun Went Out (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 11—A Sheepman's Triumph (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 13—The Express Envelope (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 15—The Alpine Lease (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 18—The Ranger's Stratagem (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 20—Losing to Win (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 22—The Cowboy's Bride (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 25—Arizona Bill (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 27—Hal Chase's Home Run (Dr.).....1000

LUBIN.

Aug. 19—Proclaiming Archbishop Prendergast (Scenic) 400
Aug. 21—A Rebellious Blossom (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 24—Bess of the Forest (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 26—Archibald, the Hero (Com.).....1000
Aug. 28—The Secret (Com.)..... 600
Aug. 28—Fountain of Youth (Com.)..... 400
Aug. 31—Romance of Pond Cove (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 2—The Easterner's Sacrifice (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 4—A Gay Time in Washington (Com.)
Sept. 6—A Question of Modesty (Dr.)..... 600
Sept. 6—Pardon Me (Com.)..... 400
Sept. 7—The Story of Rosie's Rose (Dr.)....1000
Sept. 9—The Ranch's New Barber (Com.)... 600
Sept. 9—Bill's Ward (Dr.)..... 400
Sept. 11—Divided Interests (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 13—His Girlie (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 14—Al Martin's Game (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 16—Cement Rock Blasting (Ind.).....
Sept. 16—The Scheme That Failed (Com.)....
Sept. 18—The Senorita's Conquest (Dr.).....

MELIES.

Aug. 17—The Local Bully (Com.)..... 550
Aug. 17—Two Fools and Their Follies (Com.). 450
Aug. 24—A Spanish Love Song (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 31—The Call of the Wilderness (Dr.)....1000
Sept. 7—The Hobo Cowboy (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 14—A Shattered Dream (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 21—$200.00 (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 28—The Mission Waif (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 7—The Hobo Cowboy (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 14—The Shattered Dreams (Dr.).....1000

ECLIPSE.
(G. Kleine.)

Aug. 16—For the Honor (Dr.)..... 750
Aug. 16—Moss Covered Ruins On the Isle of Wight, Great Britain (Trav.)..... 250
Aug. 23—Condemned for Treason (Dr.)..... 980
Aug. 23—The Wool Industry of Hungary (Ind.). 135
Aug. 30—Sights of Berlin (Sc.)..... 423
Aug. 30—A King for an Hour (Com.)..... 572
Sept. 6—Clever Beyond Her Years (Dr.)..... 675
Sept. 6—Lake Thun In Switzerland (Sc.).... 325
Sept. 13—The Hand of the Law (Dr.)..... 665
Sept. 13—Norwich and Vicinity (Sc.)..... 330

PATHE.

Aug. 21—The Runaway Leopard (Com.)..... 475
Aug. 21—Chrysanthemums (Scenic) (Com.)... 475
Aug. 23—Through the Window (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 24—Cheyenne's Bride (Dr.)..... 892
Aug. 25—Nick Winter Turns a Trick (Com.).. 550
Aug. 25—Eastern Europe (Sc.)..... 300
Aug. 25—Across the Mountain Passes of New Zealand (Scenic)..... 215
Aug. 26—A Boy of the Revolution (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 28—The Ranch in Fames (W. Dr.)..... 900
Aug. 29—The Pathe Weekly (Topical).....
Aug. 29—White Chief (Dr.).....
Aug. 30—For the Sake of the Tribe (Dr.).....
Aug. 31—The Medicine Woman (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 1—The Carrot Caterpillar (Ed.).....
Sept. 1—A Wedding Procession in Bavaria (Scenic) 375
Sept. 2—A Daughter of the South (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 2—Silver Tail and His Squaw.....
Sept. 4—The Hermit (W. Dr.).....1000
Sept. 5—Pathe's Weekly No. 36 (Top.).....
Sept. 6—Honoring a Hero (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 7—The Red Man's Dog (Ind. Dr.).... 675
Sept. 7—Japanese Dice and Butterflies (Sc.).. 328
Sept. 8—Culture of the Dahlia (Ed.)..... 550
Sept. 8—Arabian Types and Customs (Sc.)... 425
Sept. 9—A Tragedy at Sea (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 11—Eva is Tired of Life (Com.).....
Sept. 11—Little Moritz and the Butterfly (Com.)
Sept. 11—From Lourdes to Garvarine (Sc.)....
Sept. 12—Pathe's Weekly No. 37 (Topical)....
Sept. 13—A Prisoner of the Mohicans (Dr.)...1000
Sept. 14—College Sweethearts (Com.).....
Sept. 14—Art Industries In Kabylie (Ind.)....
Sept. 15—Madame Tallien (Dr.).....
Sept. 15—Every Day Life in Mallaca (Sc.)....
Sept. 16—A Western Memory (Dr.).....1000

SELIG.

Aug. 15—The Regeneration of Apache Kid (W. Dr.) 1000
Aug. 17—The Blacksmith's Love (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 21—Saved from the Snow (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 22—Life On the Border (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 24—The Gray Wolves (Dr.).....
Aug. 24—Santa Cruz Beach and Cliff Drive (Ed.) .....
Aug. 28—In the Shadow of the Pines (Dr.).... 696
Aug. 28—Among the Japanese (Ed.)..... 304
Aug. 29—A New York Cowboy (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 31—Thro' Fire and Smoke (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 4—How Algy Captured a Wild Man (Hist. Com.) 1000
Sept. 5—The Totem Mark (Hist. Dr.).....1000
Sept. 7—A Tennessee Love Story (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 8—The Heart of John Barlow (Dr.)...1000
Sept. 11—Kit Carson's Wooing (Dr.)..... 990
Sept. 12—Dad's Girls (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 14—The Wheels of Justice (Dr.).....1000

VITAGRAPH.

Aug. 25—My Old Dutch (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 26—A Handsome Man (Com.).....1000
Aug. 28—The General's Daughter (Military Dr.)1000
Aug. 29—The Wrong Patient (Com.)..... 551
Aug. 29—Queer Folks (Com.)..... 448
Aug. 30—The Three Brothers (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 1—The Thumb Print (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 2—The Prince and the Pumps (Com.)..1000
Sept. 4—Jealousy (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 4—A Friendly Marriage (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 6—The Willow Tree (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 8—Cherry Blossoms (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 9—Jimmie's Job (Com.).....1000
Sept. 11—Forging (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 12—Her Crowning Glory (Com.).....1000
Sept. 13—Beyond the Law (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 15—Vitagraph Monthly (Sc.).....1000
Sept. 16—By Woman's Wit (Com.).....1000

Classified Advertisements

[Classified advertisements, three cents per word, cash with order; 50 cents minimum; postage stamps accepted.]

SITUATIONS WANTED.

WANTED—By an experienced exhibitor, the management of a moving picture theater. Total crop failure here reason for seeking position. Am competent, reliable, like the business; do not use intoxicating liquors nor tobacco; am strictly honest. Can furnish bond. Address, GEORGE H. COX, Hays, Kansas.

AT LIBERTY—One of the poorest managers in the country. Knows nothing and cares less about projection, ventilation, uniformed employees, or any of the Moving Picture World's fad ideas. Would prefer to locate in a town of 800 population, with a theater using rainy service and seating less than 100. Address, R. U. AWN, care Moving Picture World, New York City.

AT LIBERTY—Moving picture operator and electrician would like position. Massachusetts license. Address, B. O. LEUCHT, 280 Oak Street, Clinton, Mass.

AT LIBERTY—First-class operator. Six years' experience. Best references. Sober and reliable. Massachusetts and Connecticut licenses. Age, 34. Address, E. A. HALL, 50 Columbia St., Swanpscott, Mass.

Thoroughly competent operator, five years' experience, both electric and calcium machines, desires position anywhere. Reasonable salary. Address, CONNORS, 2026 North 11th St., Philadelphia, Pa.

AT LIBERTY—Experienced moving picture operator, wishes position outside of Greater New York. Address, GOOD OPERATOR, care Moving Picture World, New York City.

THEATER WANTED.

WANTED—Will buy or lease moving picture theater in Middlewest. Address, Box 94, Sterling, Mass.

HELP WANTED.

WANTED—Moving picture manager with some capital as partner. Good chance for right party. One familiar with greater New York preferred. Address, A. H. SAMUELS, 301 West 108th St., New York City.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Film cement, three cents per bottle. Formula, twenty-five cents. CHARLES MARYNS, 4250 Frankford Avenue, Philadelphia, Pa.

FOR SALE—One double electric sign reading, "Theater Five-Cents." Hangs vertical. Twelve-inch letters. Wired for flasher. One two-pin Edison, good condition and ready for use. Write quick. Address, ORPHEUM, Hillsboro, Ohio.

EQUIPMENT FOR SALE.

FOR SALE—Powers Machine with No. 6 head, used only two weeks. Price, $100.00. Two Edison Exhibition Model Heads, Price, $25.00 each. Address, KOEN, care of Moving Picture World, New York City.

WANTED—A good second-hand economizer or transformer. Must be in good condition: 110 volts. Address, H. N. HUNT, Citizens Theater, Murfreesboro, Tenn.

THEATER FOR RENT.

FOR RENT—The Columbia Opera House, of North Adams, Mass.; population 22,000; capacity eight hundred. Large stage and suitable scenery. Opera, vaudeville and moving pictures. Address, 100 Holden St., North Adams, Mass.

THEATER FOR SALE.

FOR SALE—Vaudeville and moving picture business, town 3,000. Seats 300, good location, everything new and up-to-date. Outfit complete. Cheap rent, long lease. $850.00 to quick buyer. Address, HOOVER & CUMP, Greencastle, Pa.

FOR SALE—Moving picture show. Good town of 2,500. Good business. Must sell at once. For information, address Box 334 Milan, Mo.

ST. LOUIS CALCIUM LIGHT COMPANY
Established 1873
Oxygen and Hydrogen Gas furnished in tanks for Stereopticon and Moving Picture Machines. All orders to any part of the United States filled promptly.
516 Elm Street, ST. LOUIS, MO., U. S. A.

H. F. HOFFMAN
Lecturer of Special Releases
New York City and Vicinity
Care Moving Picture World
Tel. 1344 Gramercy

EAGLE FILM EXCHANGE
WE BUY the entire output of the Independent manufacturers. Ask about our Three-locked reel system.
Prompt service. Day and night service Write, wire or phone
23 NORTH NINTH STREET, PHILADELPHIA, PA.

ALWAYS CONSIDER

INTELLIGENT PEOPLE KNOW that in the race for business a thorough knowledge, skill, and experience are required to win! Fortified by these credentials the SALES COMPANY has won. This is why we are in a position to offer you positively the best.

WEEKLY PROGRAM

MONDAY
Imp Eclair Yankee American Champion

TUESDAY
Thanhouser Bison Powers

WEDNESDAY
Champion Solax Reliance Ambrosio Nestor

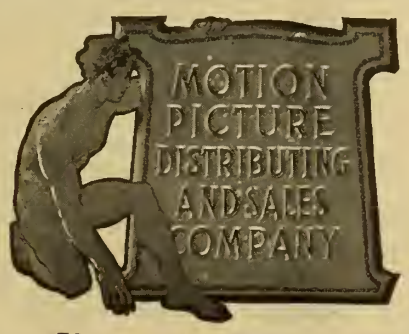
THURSDAY
Rex American Itala Imp

FRIDAY
Yankee Solax Lux Thanhouser Bison

SATURDAY
Powers Itala Gt. Northern Nestor Reliance

We have been an important factor in keeping you right. It is to your interest to stick to the Sales Company's weekly program.

We intend to hold our business on the merit of our goods.



111 East 14th St., New York City

Colorado Was Called That because of the wonderful color of its cliffs and canyons—it is masterful, matchless, mystic picture that no human artists can paint. When nature had finished the rest of the world she threw all the colors left on her palette on what is now known as COLORADO. The famous Garden of the Gods and Cheyenne Canyon.

NATURE'S MASTERPIECE

The rainbow, Italian sunset, and a blending of all the sacred beauty and awe-compelling colors are wonderfully portrayed in this picture.

A moving picture camera has accomplished what no artist ever did or could. The Rex has translated the soul stirring, worship-wooing beauty of the Colorado mountains into a moving picture!

NOW GET ON A MOVE AND GET

"Picturesque Colorado"

Released Thursday, Sept. 7th

It will simply make you gasp with its realism, detail, beauty and perfection.

OPPORTUNITY KNOCKS AT EVERY MAN'S DOOR

but it won't skin its knuckles if you don't respond promptly. Opportunity (REX) is knocking! But no one is knocking Rex.

REX MOTION PICTURE MASTERPIECE CO.

573-579 Eleventh Ave., New York City

SALES CO. Say "REX" make pictures no artist can paint.

Independent Release Dates

AMERICAN.

Aug. 7—Cattle, Gold and Oil (Dr.).....
Aug. 10—The Rauch Girl (Dr.).....
Aug. 14—The Poisoned Flume (W. Dr.).....
Aug. 17—The Brand of Fear (Dr.).....
Aug. 21—The Blotted Brand (Dr.).....
Aug. 24—Anna Harris In the Swimming Marathon 500
Aug. 24—Aunty and the Cowboys (Com.).....
Aug. 28—The Western Doctor's Peril (Dr.)...1000
Aug. 31—The Diamond Smugglers (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 4—The Cowboy and the Artist (W. Dr.)..1000
Sept. 7—Three Million Dollars (W. Com.)....1000
Sept. 11—The Stage Robbers of San Juan (Dr.) 1000
Sept. 14—The Mother of the Ranch (Dr.)....1000
Sept. 18—The Gun Man (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 21—The Claim Jumper (Dr.).....1000

CHAMPION.

Aug. 14—The Three Calls (Dr.)..... 950
Aug. 16—How the Girls Got Even (Com.)..... 950
Aug. 21—When North and South Met (Dr.).... 950
Aug. 23—The Confessional (Dr.)..... 950
Aug. 28—A Daughter of Dixie (Dr.)..... 950
Aug. 30—How Tony Became a Hero (Com.)... 950
Sept. 4—Grant and Lincoln (Dr.)..... 950
Sept. 6—When the Law Came (Dr.)..... 950
Sept. 11—Charley's Buttie (Dr.).....
Sept. 13—The Red Devils (Dr.)..... 950

ECLAIR.

Aug. 21—The Edelweiss (Dr.) .....
Aug. 21—How They Work in Cinema (Com.)..
Aug. 28—A Marriage in the Stars (Com.)..... 755
Aug. 28—An Obliging Young Man (Com.)..... 235
Sept. 4—All On Account of a Coat (Com.).... 886
Sept. 11—How Poor Babies Are Reared in Paris (Edu.)..... 630
Sept. 11—How Teddy Lost His Bet (Com.).... 235
Sept. 18—Magic Music (Trick)..... 330
Sept. 18—When the Leaves Fall (Dr.)..... 665
Sept. 25—A Just General (Military Dr.).....1000
Oct. 2—Hearts and Eyes (Dr.)..... 630
Oct. 2—For Your Hats, Ladies! (Edu.)..... 370

GREAT NORTHERN.

July 22—A Kind-Hearted Brother (Dr.).....
July 29—The Engagement Ring (Dr.).....
July 29—A Happy Home.....
Aug. 5—The Burglar and the Girl (Dr.).....
Aug. 12—The Mother's Mark (Dr.).....
Aug. 12—Teddy Trained By His Mother (Com.)
Aug. 19—The Victory of Love (Dr.)..... 950
Aug. 26—A Traitor to His Country (Dr.).....
Sept. 2—The Foundling (Dr.).....
Sept. 9—A Dream with a Lesson (Dr.).....

IMP.

Aug. 7—The Old Peddler (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 10—Dorothy's Family (Com.).....1000
Aug. 14—A Boy's Best Friend (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 17—Behind the Times (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 21—Battle of the Wills (Dr.) 500
Aug. 21—Love In a Tepee (Dr.)..... 500
Aug. 24—As a Boy Dreams (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 28—His Royal Highness (Com.).....
Aug. 28—Hot Springs, Arkansas (Sc.).....
Aug. 31—The Toss of a Coin (Com.).....
Sept. 4—The Haunted House (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 7—Duty (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 11—By the House that Jack Built (Dr.) 1000
Sept. 14—The Brothers (Dr.).....1000

LUX.

Aug. 4—An Elopement By Aeroplane (Com.).. 465
Aug. 11—Bill Wishes To Make Butter (Com.).. 458
Aug. 11—The Cripple (Dr.)..... 462
Aug. 18—Bill Tries To Make Bread (Com.).... 406
Aug. 18—A Child's Courageous Act (Dr.)..... 540
Aug. 25—Bill Follows the Doctor's Orders (Com.) 450
Aug. 25—What a Pennyworth Did (Com.)..... 450
Sept. 1—Bill as a Game-Keeper (Com.)..... 504
Sept. 1—The Invisible Wrestler (Com.)..... 340
Sept. 8—Bill Buys a Lobster (Com.)..... 350
Sept. 8—A Romance of a Wager (Dr.)..... 642

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO.

BISON.

Aug. 8—Grey Cloud's Devotion (Dr.).....
Aug. 11—The New Cowboy (Dr.).....
Aug. 15—A Sioux Spy (Dr.).....
Aug. 18—An Indian Love Story (Dr.).....
Aug. 22—A Cowboy's Loyalty (Dr.).....
Aug. 25—Pioneer Days (Dr.).....
Aug. 29—An Indian Legend (Dr.).....
Sept. 1—The Sheriff's Love (Dr.).....
Sept. 5—Little Dove's Romance (Dr.).....
Sept. 8—A Western Tramp (Dr.) .....

AMBRISIO.

(By N. Y. M. P. Co.)

Aug. 9—The Queen of Nineveh (Dr.).....
Aug. 16—The Candle Of Life (Dr.).....
Aug. 16—The Dread Of Microbes (Com.).....
Aug. 23—Guiuara (Dr.).....
Aug. 30—The Door-Keeper (Dr.).....
Aug. 30—Tweedledum's White Suit (Com.)....
Sept. 6—Tweedledum and the Adventuress (Com.) .....
Sept. 6—Italian Artillery (Scenic).....

ITALA.

(By N. Y. M. P. Co.)

Aug. 10—Love and Discipline (Dr.).....
Aug. 12—Sport Restores Youth (Com.).....
Aug. 17—Toto's Cart (Com.).....
Aug. 19—Foolshead Manikin (Com.).....
Aug. 19—The Blunt Sword (Com.).....
Aug. 24—Modern School of Italian Cavalry (Scenic) .....
Aug. 26—Foolshead—Chauffeur (Com.) .....
Aug. 26—For a Straw (Com.).....
Sept. 2—Clio and Phyletes (Dr.) .....
Sept. 7—Infinite Ways of Providence (Dr.)
Sept. 9—Foolshead Hypnotizer (Com.).....

NESTOR.

Aug. 9—Roped and Tied (W. Dr.).....
Aug. 12—Mutt and Jeff and the Goldstein Burglars (Com.) .....
Aug. 16—Hands Across the Cradle (Dr.).....
Aug. 19—Mutt and Jeff In the Banking Business (Com.) .....
Aug. 23—Alias Yellowstone Joe (Dr.).....
Aug. 26—Mutt and Jeff and the Country Judge (Com.) .....
Aug. 30—The Parson and the Bully (Dr.).....
Sept. 2—Mutt & Jeff and the German Band (Com.) .....
Sept. 6—The Flower of the Tribe (W. Dr.)..
Sept. 9—Mutt and Jeff and the Escaped Lunatic (Com.) .....
Sept. 13—At Perry's Ranch (Dr.).....

POWERS.

Aug. 1—Speculation (Dr.) .....
Aug. 5—Last of the Mohicans (Dr.).....
Aug. 8—Cheyenne Days (Scenic).....
Aug. 8—A Harmless Flirtation (Com.).....
Aug. 12—Lone Eagle's Trust (Dr.).....
Aug. 15—Babes In the Woods (Dr.).....
Aug. 19—The Squaw's Devotion (Dr.).....
Aug. 22—Black Cloud's Debt (Dr.).....
Aug. 26—The Indian's Love (Dr.).....
Aug. 29—The White Chief (Dr.).....
Sept. 2—Silver Tail and His Squaw (Dr.)....
Sept. 5—Red Feather's Friendship (Dr.)..... 960
Sept. 9—The Twins Squaw (Dr.)..... 975
Sept. 12—Gray Wolf's Grief (Dr.)..... 950
Sept. 16—The Horse Thief (Dr.)..... 950

RELIANCE.

July 26—Her Choice (Dr.).....
July 29—Thou Shalt Not Steal (Dr.).....
Aug. 2—The Broken Vows (Dr.).....
Aug. 5—His Son (Dr.).....
Aug. 9—The City (Dr.).....
Aug. 12—The Pitfall (Dr.).....
Aug. 16—Out Of Darkness (Dr.) .....
Aug. 23—A Little Child (Dr.).....
Aug. 26—The Godfather (Dr.).....
Aug. 30—A Straight Path (Dr.).....
Sept. 2—Clouds and Sunshine (Dr.).....
Sept. 6—Temptation (Dr.) .....
Sept. 9—His Dream (Dr.) .....

REX.

May 25—Called Back (Dr.).....
June 1—The Monogram "J. O." (Dr.).....
June 8—From Death To Life (Dr.).....
June 15—The Twins (Dr.).....
June 22—On the Brink (Dr.).....
June 29—Securing Evidence (Dr.).....
July 6—Fate (Dr.) .....
July 13—The Vagabond (Dr.).....
July 20—Sherlock Holmes, Jr. (Dr.).....
July 27—Her Way (Dr.).....
Aug. 3—The Artist Financier (Dr.).....
Aug. 10—The White Red Man (Dr.).....
Aug. 17—The Colonel's Daughter (Dr.).....
Aug. 24—Castles in the Air (Com.).....1000
Aug. 31—The Torn Scarf (Dr.).....
Sept. 7—Picturesque Colorado (Scenic).....
Sept. 14—Faith (Dr.) .....

SOLAX.

Aug. 9—His Wife's Insurance (Com.).....
Aug. 9—A Bum and a Bomb (Com.).....
Aug. 11—An Enlisted Man's Honor (Military)
Aug. 16—The Phoney Ring (Com.).....
Aug. 18—Let No Man Put Asunder (Dr.).....
Aug. 23—A Gay Bachelor (Com.).....
Aug. 25—The Stampede (Military).....
Aug. 30—The Patched Shoe (Com.).....
Sept. 1—The Hold Up (Military).....
Sept. 6—Hector's Inheritance (Com.).....
Sept. 8—The Best Policy (Mil. Dr.).....

THANHOUSER.

Aug. 1—The Pied Piper of Hameln (Dr.)....
Aug. 4—The Judge's Story (Dr.).....
Aug. 8—Back To Nature (Dr.).....
Aug. 11—Cupid the Conqueror (Dr.).....
Aug. 15—Nobody Loves a Fat Woman (Com.)..
Aug. 18—The Train Despatcher (Dr.).....
Aug. 22—The Cross (Dr.).....
Aug. 25—The Romance Of Lonely Island (Dr.)
Aug. 29—The Moth (Com.).....
Sept. 1—Romeo and Juliet (Dr.).....
Sept. 5—Count Ivan and the Waitress (Dr.)
Sept. 8—Romeo and Juliet—Part 2 (Dr.)....
Sept. 12—The Buddhist Priestess (Dr.).....
Sept. 15—In the Chorus (Dr.).....

YANKEE.

July 24—The Stepdaughter (Dr.).....
July 28—Deposited After Banking Hours (Dr.)
July 31—The Sea Vultures (Dr.).....
Aug. 4—Truth Shall Prevail (Dr.).....
Aug. 7—Kathleen Mavourneen (Dr.).....
Aug. 11—Grey Wolf's Squaw (Dr.).....
Aug. 14—A Good Natured Man (Com.).....
Aug. 14—A Children's Paradise (Scenic).....
Aug. 18—Her Father's Secretary (Dr.).....
Aug. 21—Colleen Bawn (Dr.).....
Aug. 25—Retaliation (Dr.) .....
Aug. 28—The Power of Devotion (Dr.).....
Sept. 1—A Great Wrong Righted (Dr.).....
Sept. 4—Inshavogue (Dr.).....
Sept. 8—Mesmerizing Moe (Com.).....
Sept. 8—Faded Roses (Dr.).....
Sept. 11—Tangled Heartstrings (Dr.).....
Sept. 15—Woman (Dr.) .....

Get Simpson's Celebrated Song Slides
OF ALL THE POPULAR SONGS
Perfection of Artistic Coloring
ALFRED L. SIMPSON
113 W. 132d St. N. Y. City

Money Makers for you. Think of the people passing by or out of your place that would drop another nickel or dime. Many styles Catalog No. 34 tells all.
KINGERY MFG. CO.
CINCINNATI, O.

FILM FOR SALE
Over 1000 reels in stock at all times, from $2.50 up.

Three Musketeers	2 reels	$50.00
Dame of Montsereau	2 reels	50.00
Fall of Troy	2 reels	75.00

Send for catalogue.
A. J. CLAPHAM
12 E. 15th St., New York, N.Y.

Operators!
I guarantee quick and satisfactory repair work on all machines. Only genuine parts supplied. Get my prices on ONE DROP OIL and BULL DOG CEMENT the best articles of their kind on the market.
H. A. MACKIE
853 Broadway, Cor. 14th Street New York
'Phone: 2478 Stuyvesant

SPECIAL ROLL TICKETS The Big Ticket. Any Printing Any Colors

5,000	$1.25	20,000	$4.60	50,000	$7.50
10,000	$2.50	25,000	$5.50	100,000	$10.00

Get the Samples Stock Tickets, 6 Cents
NATIONAL TICKET COMPANY - - - Shamokin, Pa.

Mr. Manager—

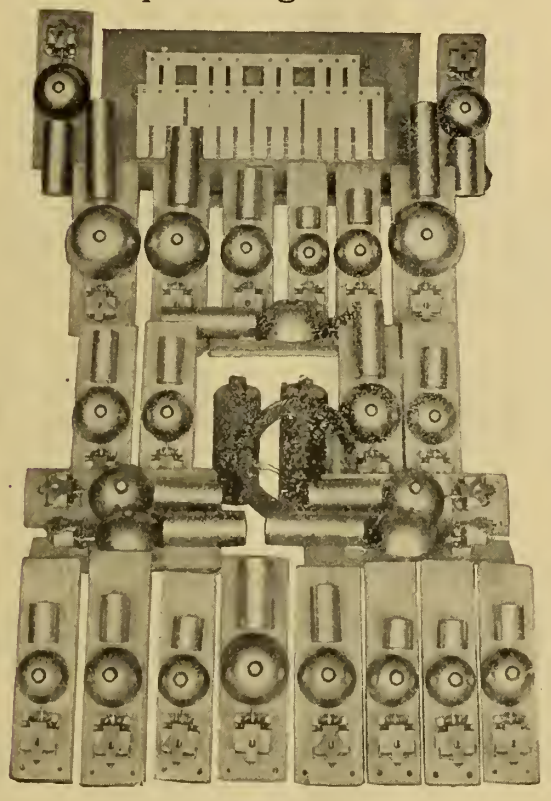
Now, when you are busy with alterations and fixing up your place in grand shape for the fall season,

DON'T FORGET

to put in those

DEAGAN BELLS

They are a real attraction and will increase your patronage at once.



Complete set ready to ship.

See here what one exhibitor says:

The Electric Saucer Bells arrived all O.K. on Friday and we had them installed in our Theatre and started them on Sunday following, and it is our pleasure to inform you that they have given the utmost satisfaction. Our audience was wild with enthusiasm. The installing of the bells increased our patronage at once. They are classy and add quality to any theatre.

JACOBI & FLETCHER,
IDLE HOUR THEATRE,
SHEBOYGAN, WIS.

Deagan's Musical Electrical Bells are made of finest bell metal, as per our own formula, and are fitted with our Patent resonaters which add fully 100% to the tone of the Bells as well as making the sound sweet, clear and silvery.

The Bells are played from a key board, same as a piano, and any one can play them with a few minutes' practice. They are correctly tuned to your piano, and can be played as a solo instrument, with or without piano accompaniment, as an accompaniment to songs, during intermission, etc.

The key board can be placed in any desired location and the bells be mounted in any part of the house, on the ceiling, side walls, under seats, corners, odd places, etc., producing the most startling effects to endless surprise and delight of the audience.

Any person can install a set of these Bells in a few hours; no experience is necessary, as complete instructions are included with each set.

We can supply you a complete outfit of these marvellous Bells for $40.00 and up.

Don't miss this opportunity. Write to day for terms and catalogues.

J. C. DEAGAN, 3810 N. Clark St., Chicago

WILL BUY OR LEASE

prints of the following famous works by

CHARLES DICKENS

"Old Curiosity Shop"
"David Copperfield"
"Oliver Twist"
"Tale of Two Cities"

Also POWERS CAMERAGRAPH

Send all particulars in first letter. Otherwise no attention paid.

Address

W. L., Room 903, 507 Fifth Ave., NEW YORK CITY

I PAY THE HIGHEST SALARIES FOR

Singers and Piano Players

of any Picture Show Manager in the United States. If you are above the ordinary, write me; if not, save stamps.

JOHN B. ELLIOTT
LEXINGTON, KY.

THE EXHIBITOR'S LIBRARY
Lectures for Feature Films

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD has prepared for the special benefit of the exhibitors of feature films a pamphlet, "HOW TO PUT ON THE CRUSADERS OR JERUSALEM DELIVERED." This pamphlet contains: A synopsis of the story; a complete set of suitable press notices; a complete lecture (written by W. Stephen Bush); suggestions as to musical program and effects. Price of booklet One Dollar.

SECOND EDITION of "How to Put on the Passion Play," by W. Stephen Bush, now ready for distribution. Price One Dollar per copy. The value of this book is well known throughout the moving picture field and has been enlarged in the second edition.

"Key and Complete Lecture for Dante's Inferno." Indispensable to every exhibitor who wishes to use the film of the Milano Films Company. Contains press notices of suitable and various sizes, a synopsis of the story, a special key good for reprinting and general distribution, and a most complete and exhaustive lecture by W. Stephen Bush, running evenly and smoothly with the action on the screen. Price $2.50.

MOVING PICTURE WORLD
125 East 23rd St. N. Y. City

BARGAINS
Lubin Cineograph Complete, $65. Edison, $50. Motion Picture Machines, $35 up.
Latest Model B Edison, Powers No. 6, and Standard a specialty
Mirroscopes, Radiopticans, $2.50 up. All Opaque Machines.
Send for Sup. 33, our great bargain list. Machines, Supplies, etc.
Motion Picture Machines Wanted.
Harbach & Co., 809 Filbert St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Advertising Slides
of all descriptions
at the right price. Write now.
EXCELSIOR SLIDES CO.
61 W. 14th St. New York City

THE WORLD FAMOUS FOLDING ORGAN
It is indispensable for traveling purposes, musical companies, concert troupes, orchestras and thousands of other purposes. Nothing better known. Send for full particulars, description and prices. Manufactured by Bilhorn Bros., 136 W. Lake St. Chicago, Ill.

FEATURE FILM CO., 412 Superior Street Toledo, Ohio
OFFER BOOKINGS ON THE
Temptations of a Great City
Great Train Robbery
Fall of Troy
AND TWENTY OTHER GOOD FEATURES
PLENTY OF PAPER, HERALDS. : : : SUMMER RATES
WRITE TODAY

FIGHT FOR IT

BIDS are invited for the American exhibition rights of the film depict ng the fight between Bombardier Wells and Jack Johnson in England for the championship of the world. This film will be a box office winner. $100,000 was paid by the company that will film the fight for the privilege.

Address B. M. P., care of M. P. World

Advertising Slides
Will help you Pay your rent

The Season Is Here. Let us tell you about it.
Send for our list of Classy Announcement Slides.

CLEAVELAND SLIDE CO.
WASHINGTON C. H., OHIO

H. F. HOFFMAN
Lecturer of Special Releases
New York City and Vicinity

Now booking engagements for
Enoch Arden Dante's Inferno
and other feature pictures,
Care MOVING PICTURE WORLD
TELEPHONE, 1344 GRAMERCY

MOTION PICTURE MACHINES
EDISON MOTIOGRAPH POWERS

Stereopticons, Post Card Projectors
Lantern Slides, Repair Parts, Supplies
Carbons, Tickets
Catalog Free on Request
AMUSEMENT SUPPLY COMPANY
105 No. Dearborn St. - - CHICAGO

SONG SLIDES

Non-Breakable—Non-Inflammable

Colored Song and Announcement Slides
Patent Applied For

Just the kind of a slide you have all been waiting for. Guaranteed against breaking from heat or the careless operator. Send for list. Made and sold only by the original inventors. None others genuine.

NORTH AMERICAN SLIDE CO., 143 North 8th Street PHILADELPHIA PA.

SLIDE SLIDE SLIDE SLIDE

SONG SLIDES

NOW READY Bound Volume No. 8
JANUARY TO JUNE, 1911

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

Price, Two Dollars EACH

Postage or Express Charges EXTRA

Supply Limited Order Now

MOVING PICTURE WORLD
125 East 23rd Street : : : New York City

SONG SLIDES FOR RENT

New { Firm Songs Hits Slides Music

Start your new season right, by getting your song slides from A REAL SONG SLIDE EXCHANGE. WE HANDLE NOTHING BUT SLIDES. We assure you prompt shipments, careful selections and no broken slides WRITE for prices and latest lists today.

United Slide Advertising Co., 61 W. 14th STREET NEW YORK, N. Y.

The Slide for Progressive Theatre Advertising and Announcements

The Spiegel Motion Slide

WRITE YOUR NEAREST EXCHANGE OR TO THE

AMERICAN MOTION SLIDE CO.
Exclusive Manufacturers in the United States
611 First National Bank Bldg. CHICAGO, ILL.

MAKE 'EM YOURSELF SLIDES

Make them yourself. Written with pen and ink or typewriter. Three minutes to make a slide. Used for advertising slides, to announce future or feature programmes, for chorus slides when chorus slide is missing. We send four colors of gelatin. The slides look well and any one can make them. They are handy also for announcing vaudeville acts. In fact they may be readily used for anything you may wish to say to your audience.

For the sum of three dollars ($3) cash with order, we will send by express, charges not prepaid, the following:

24 cover glass, 1 package binder strips, 1 dozen mats, 1 instruction sheet, 1 form sheet and 50 strips assorted colors gelatin—enough for from 300 to 400 slides. Order now. Address

UTILITY TRANSPARENCY CO.
1733 West 9th St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

THEATRE FOR SALE

Established theatre, with stage, in residence section of Brooklyn. Three years' lease, which can be extended to five. Rent, $225 per month, part of which is covered by subletting. Average receipts, $450 to $500 per week. Now running pictures and songs only. Owner has other business which demands his whole attention, is the only reason for selling. Will sell for $5,000 cash, which can be cleared during the coming season by the right management. This is a substantial proposition which will bear the closest investigation. No triflers wanted.

Apply to M. S. DeKalb, care of Moving Picture World

American Moving Picture Machine Co.

MANUFACTURERS OF THE

STANDARD

Automatic Moving Picture Machine

101-102 Beekman Street New York

If your business won't stand advertising, advertise it for sale in the classified columns of the

Moving Picture World

(Rate three cents per word, no display)
(Minimum Charge 50 cents.)

This issue circulation 10,400

The Iroquois Theatre Fire

at Chicago in 1903 will never he forgotten because of the terrible, needless, inexcusable sacrifice of 596 lives. Same old story of a panic-mad audience piling upon each other in the vain effort to escape through fire-doors that would not open. The Von Duprin Self-Releasing Fire Exit Latch opens fire-doors instantly at the slightest pressure on a solid bar stretching across the door, about waist high. This device has never failed—it cannot fail. Try it and see why. Try it now. A day's delay may cost hundreds of lives. The demonstration will cost you nothing. Catalog?

Safe Exit is a Universal Demand

Vonnegut Hardware Co., Distributers, Indianapolis, Ind.

"La Cinematografia Italiana ed Estera"
IS ITALY'S LEADING PAPER FOR THE ANIMATED PICTURE
PUBLISHED FORTNIGHTLY.
32, 36 and 40 large pages, 8 shillings per annum ($1.60).
Editor-prop'r: Prof. GUALTIERO I. FABRI,
Via Cumiana, 31 (Barriera S. Paolo) Torino, Italy

Film Perforating Dies
The A. Dewes Co.
249 Center Street
Tel. 2351 Spring New York

ON VELVET
The first Orpheum Collection of Moving Picture music (dramatic and descriptive) was issued July 18, 1910. It paid for itself in five months.
"No. 2" Orpheum Collection was issued August 17, 1911. Its only advertisement so far has been a circular mailed to former patrons. Did anybody respond? The first week's sales paid for the engraving and printing. At this rate, by the time this ad appears, No. 2 will also be
ON VELVET
Can you beat it? Don't that show that "The Orpheum Collection" is a winner? This issue (No. 2) is published for piano only, contains a Chinese and several good Indian numbers, two pages of U. S. Army bugle calls and lots of fine dramatic music., Twenty-four separate leaves, same as the first issue. Send for free sample page No. 2. For the next 90 days this music will be sent post paid for 58 cents. Both issues $1.15. Don't wait too long.
Clarence E. Sinn
1501 Sedgwick St. Chicago, Ill.

Films For Sale
500 Second-Hand Films
All Makes : $5.00 up
Send for Catalogue
GEO. W. SEIXAS
Film Broker
32 Union Sq., East NEW YORK
Phone 905 Stuyvesant

COMPENSARC
That's the device that saves Moving Picture men two-thirds on their electric light bills, and yet gives better light. Did you see our ad. last week? Well, don't look it up. Just write for our
Booklet 15018
Fort Wayne Electric Works
of GENERAL ELECTRIC COMPANY
1402 Broadway
FORT WAYNE, INDIANA 733

Motion Picture Handbook
FOR
Managers and Operators
Price $1.50
Postage Prepaid
MOVING PICTURE WORLD
125 E. 23rd Street : New York City

ATTENTION!
Anyone who is in possession of a film that is scratched, dirty, flickery or poor photography, send it to the ORTHO FILM CO., 40 East 12th St., to be redeveloped, cleaned and softened and see the improvement that can be done by the HOCH-STETTER ORTHO PROCESS. Demonstrations given free.

ATTENTION
Non-subscribers
Send $1.00 Today
For four months'
Trial Subscription
Sept. 1st to Dec. 31st, 1911
MOVING PICTURE WORLD
Box 226 Mad. Sq. P. O., New York City

FIRST OPPORTUNITY
To Rent or Lease
The Great Feature Films of the
21st Confederate Reunion and Parade
3 REELS — 2,300 FEET
These are the original, official pictures and only ones ever taken of a Confederate Reunion
FOR TERMS, WRITE THE SOLE OWNERS:
Southern Historical Views Co., Inc.
Little Rock, Arkansas

DISCHARGED
Bergan M. Birdsall, a former employee, was discharged on Saturday, August twelfth. He has absolutely no connection with this office and does not represent us in any capacity.
SWAAB FILM SERVICE CO.
Pioneer Film Exchange
129 N. EIGHTH ST. PHILADELPHIA, PA.

In answering advertisements kindly mention the Moving Picture World

FREE SONG SLIDE SERVICE
furnished to managers and singers who book any part of their show through
F. C. Taylor's Theatrical Enterprises
51 West 28th St. N. Y. City
Phone 1405 Mad. Sq.

NOW BOOKING
EASTERN STATES ONLY
LOUISE M. MARION
IN HER OWN NOVELTIES
PATRIOTIC AND ILLUSTRATED POEMS
REFINED ENTERTAINING
TERMS REASONABLE
LOUISE M. MARION
PRESENT ADDRESS
29 South 12th Street Newark, N. J.
Great Novelty and Drawing Card

Mirroroide

We Have On File Over 100 Testimonials From Coast to Coast Proving Conclusively That In

Mirroroide

We Have The Greatest And Best Moving Picture Curtain And Screen Before the Public.

We Stand Ready To Back These Claims In Tests With Any Other Curtain Or Screen On The Market—Bar None. This Has Been Proven In Tests By Exhibitors. We Can Produce Testimonials To Show You.

You Don't Buy A Screen Or Curtain For A Few Months. Mirroroide Lasts A Life Time. Our Claims Substantiated In Every Way. Besides We Show You. Write For Samples, Circulars, Testimonials, Etc., 4 Cents In Stamps. Demonstration Size 50 Cents.

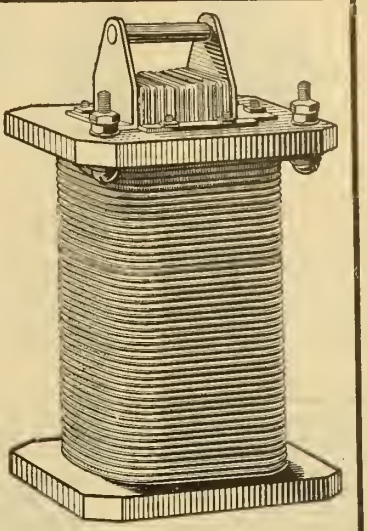
Is This Not Showing You?

Benjamin-Genter Co.
Newburgh, N. Y.

Two Big Factories Now Running Night and Day

DE LUXE COILS

For controlling Arc Lamps of Moving Picture Machines



The "De Luxe" coil operates from the usual commercial alternating current lighting circuits and delivers 35 volts at the arc and any value of current from 20 to 60 amperes. Moreover, it requires no previous experience or instructions to install or operate the "De Luxe".

For full particulars concerning this and our other current savers, address

THE ST. JOHN CORPORATION
180 BROADWAY Room 633 NEW YORK

M. P. MACHINES

SOLD ON INSTALLMENT

WRITE AT ONCE FOR PARTICULARS
OUR FEATURE FILMS will DOUBLE your BOX OFFICE RECEIPTS. Send for list now. DON'T DELAY

Chicago CHICAGO FILM EXCHANGE Omaha

SCENARIO WRITERS!

If your scenarios do not sell find out why. Perhaps your manuscript can be rewritten and made saleable, and your mistakes may be corrected in future manuscripts. The author of "Technique of the Photoplay," etc., will give your manuscript personal criticism and revision for a fee of only $2. Approved manuscripts marketed for a fee of 10 per cent. A reading fee of 50 cents must accompany each script. Unavailable scripts will be immediately returned.

Exhibitors!

Bad Business?

Submit your difficulties to the author of "The Photoplay Theater," and other articles on management, for advice and suggestion, the result of twenty years' experience in amusement enterprises. Simple questions $1 each.

Manufacturers!

Manuscripts developed, $10 each. Send in that scenario that has your staff puzzled and a practical working script will be returned.

Epes Winthrop Sargent
21 East 20 Street : New York City

When Your Picture Machine Needs Repairing

Why don't you send it to us?

We have the best equipped machine shop in the country and can repair any make of machine. Write us and get acquainted.

We buy second hand machines.

GEO. M. HOKE SUPPLY CO., 176 N. State St., Bet. Lake & Randolph Chicago, Ill.

MANAGERS! AND SINGERS! READ!

We can supply you with the best singers, musicians and operators in the business. I personally try out each applicant. I have had nine years' experience in this line. Write or wire if in need of good people

The Columbia Theatrical Exchange

O. C. PHILIPS, Gen. Mgr. Randolph Bldg., 145 N. Clark St., Chicago, Ill.

ANOTHER ENTERPRISE TRIUMPH

TOGO CALCIUM GAS OUTFIT

Complete with Rubber Tubing and Keyless Jet

SUPERIOR WORKMANSHIP and HIGH GRADE MATERIAL combined with SAFETY and SIMPLICITY place the TOGO far ahead of any other cheap outfit.

PORTABLE and ready for instant use - $25.00.

Anyone can operate it

MANUFACTURED BY

The Enterprise Optical Mfg. Co., 564 W. Randolph St., Chicago

FOR SALE BY ALL DEALERS

Opera and Assembly Chairs

Most popular priced chairs on the market for picture show use.
Prompt Shipments. Write for Catalogue
PEABODY SCHOOL FURNITURE CO.
North Manchester - - Indiana
New York Agents: ROBERT J. EHLERS CO.
Lexington Ave. and 43d St. · New York, N. Y.

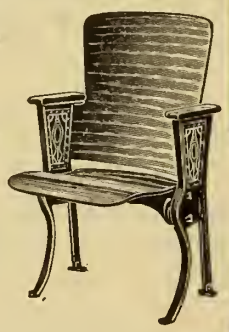
OPERA CHAIRS

FOR EVERY PURPOSE
1,000 STYLES
ESTABLISHED 1865
WRITE FOR CAT. No 31

The A. H. Andrews Co.
174-176 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.
Branches in all leading cities

WE CAN HURRY

YOUR ORDER OUT.
STAFFORD Chairs excell all others.
HEAVY FIVE PLY
seats and backs.
The last-forever kind, that you are using long after you have forgotten the price.



STEEL CHAIRS TOO
We carry several kinds of good chairs in stock, all guaranteed.
ASK FOR CATALOG 305
E. H. STAFFORD MFG. CO.
CHICAGO, ILL.

OPERA CHAIRS

GEO. W. BENNETT
744 W. 5th Street
CINCINNATI OHIO

THEATRE SALES CO.

211 Dearborn Street, opposite Post Office
CHICAGO, ILLINOIS
Long Distance Phone, Harrison 341
Dealers in Theatres anywhere in the United States and especially Chicago. Write or Call. Make Known Your Wants

OPERA CHAIRS
ALL KINDS of SEATING
ROYAL METAL MFG. Co.
1823 Dearborn St.
CHICAGO, ILL.

OPERA CHAIRS
THE WISCONSIN LUMBER AND VENEER CO. PORT WASHINGTON WISCONSIN U.S.A.
OUR SPECIALTY THEATRE AND PICTURE SHOW SEATING
THIS MAY BE THE FIRST STEP TO A FINISHED CHAIR
ONCE INSTALLED NEVER RECALLED
PROMPT SHIPMENTS
GET OUR PRICES BEFORE YOU BUY

The Wisconsin Lumber and Veneer Co.
Port Washington, Wisconsin, U.S.A.

FOLDING CHAIRS

For Moving Picture Shows, Grand Stands, Assembly Halls, etc. In sections if wanted.
Write for Catalog No. 2
The Kauffman Manufacturing Co.
ASHLAND, OHIO

CHEAP

STEEL FRAME THEATRE CHAIRS
ABSOLUTELY NON-BREAKABLE

Suitable for small Theatres and Moving Picture Shows. We carry these chairs in stock and can ship immediately.
Second Hand Chairs
Also seating for Out-of-door use
Address Dept. W.
STEEL FURNITURE CO., New York Office: 150 Fifth Avenue
GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

It pays to discriminate when you buy

THEATRE SEATING

WRITE TODAY for Cat. V2 (Mov. Picture Chairs) and Cat. V3 (Upholstered Chairs)
Send Floor Sketch for Free Seating Plan
Widest range of styles and prices. Large Stocks

American Seating Company
218 S. Wabash Ave., CHICAGO
19 W. 18th St., NEW YORK

MURDER. CRIMINAL NEGLIGENCE.

Sure it is not criminal negligence to put your theatre patrons in stalls that they can't get out of in case of fire, but, Mr. Exhibitor, don't you think you would feel better to have your theatre seated with an Automatic Folding, All-Aisle Chair?

LISTEN.

Our chair is a friend to the Public.
It advertises your theatre and makes your business grow.
It is a space-saver, life-saver, money-saver. Gives 25% more seating.

IT IS THE ONLY SANITARY CHAIR.

It will make your theatre all aisles.
It is the world's greatest theatre chair, perfected to the highest degree.
12 years' experience and scientific study of the theatre seating problem is embodied in the construction of this wonderful chair. PATENTED.

WRITE TODAY FOR CIRCULAR A
THE HARDESTY MFG. CO., Canal Dover, Ohio, U. S. A.

SPECIAL NOTICE

MANAGERS IN

Connecticut, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Maine, Vermont, New Hampshire and Canada.

Get the Sensation of the Motion Picture World.

The Wonderful

"Mirror Screen" "Glass Curtain"

The first and only "SCREEN" to project MOTION PICTURES in ABSOLUTE DAYLIGHT. Can be rented for $10.00 per week. New England State rights by permission of the Motion Picture Screen Co., of Shelbyville, Indiana.

ADDRESS ALL COMMUNICATIONS TO THE MIRROR AND TRANSPARENT SCREEN CO.

Knickerbocker Building, Rooms 203-204 1402 Broadway, N. Y. Telephone 1717 Murray Hill.

CHAS. F. POPE, Gen'l Mgr. M. R. SHEEDY, Sec'y. FRANK MANNING, Exclusive Eastern Sales Agent.

THEY ARE GOING FAST

for the simple reason that the up-to-date and live exhibitors know a good thing when they see it and always take advantage of something that will increase their receipts.

THE TIME IS UPON US

when vacation time is about over and people are settling down to the regular grind, and exhibitors of motion pictures are planning for a busy season and are looking around for new and up-to-date methods of displaying their programmes so as to get the best returns on their money invested.

YOU CAN NOT GO WRONG

if you invest in our system of displaying programmes, as the results in your case will be the same as the results in the cases of several hundred satisfied exhibitors who have taken advantage of our liberal offer and have adopted this, the most modern and up-to-date system of displaying programmes.

ORDER NOW

Exhibitors Advertising Company

Suite 604-605-606, 117 North Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

EDISON

Economy Transformer

(For alternating current)

110 volt—60 cycles; price $50.00
220 volt—60 cycles; price $55.00

DIMENSIONS

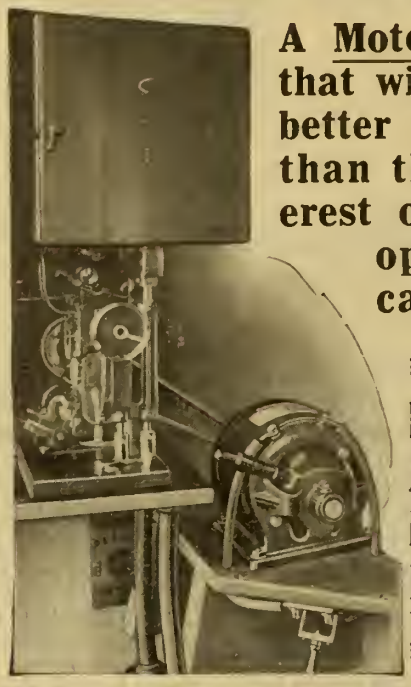
Height over regulating lever, 14 inches.
Floor space required, 10 x 12 inches.
Approximate weight, only 65 lbs.

A highly efficient Transformer, designed to meet a universal demand for some form of satisfactory current saving device at low cost. Prompt shipments.

TRADE MARK

Thomas A. Edison, Inc.
72 Lakeside Ave., Orange, N. J.

AT LAST!



A Motor-Drive that will make better Pictures than the cleverest of hand-operators can do it.

Kimble A.C.M.P. Machine Motors

built especially for this one use—variable speeds—300 to 3,000 R. P. M.—varying not by "steps" but imperceptible gradations.

New possibilities in startling effects are thus open to you, for you have to manipulate special features while the motor is grinding out the tape more perfectly and evenly than any man's hand can do it. ONE LEVER, on the motor, controls starting, stopping, reversing, accelerating, retarding.

BOTH HANDS FREE

Hitch the wire to the light socket. It requires less current than a 16 c. p. light.

Let us tell you the experiences of other managers who are using this epoch-making improvement in moving picture practice.

PRICE—F. O. B. CHICAGO

⅛ H. P. Kimble Moving Picture Machine Motor, with grooved pulley, 110 volts, $27.00—220 volts, $28.50. Countershaft, $10.00. Alternating Current only.

Kimble Electric Company
1118 Washington Boulevard
CHICAGO

A Shattered Dream

FATHER MARTIN DENIES HIMSELF THE DREAM OF HIS LIFE

FATHER Martin had lived carefully all his days in order to save enough money to enable him to fulfill the dream of his life—a visit to his birthplace across the seas. On the eve of his departure, a parishioner came and confessed a theft, exposure of which would spell his ruin. The amount of the theft was the same as Father Martin had accumulated. The clergyman on hearing of the young man's plight, hesitated only a moment, when, with magnanimous nobility, he gave up that which was his dearest passion, to save a soul from disgrace. More noble charity would be difficult to conceive.

Length 1000 Feet 9. 14. 11.

G. MELIES

204 East 38th St. New York City

POWER'S CAMERAGRAPH No. 6

The Perfect Motion Picture Machine

POSTAL TELEGRAPH – COMMERCIAL CABLES
CLARENCE H. MACKAY, PRESIDENT.

RECEIVED AT
253 BROADWAY, N. Y.
PHONE 6700 BARCLAY

TELEGRAM

DELIVERY No. 110

The Postal Telegraph-Cable Company (Incorporated) transmits and delivers this message subject to the terms and conditions printed on the back of this blank

DESIGN PATENT No. 40529

RECEIVED K·X·
AUG 26 1911
Entered A15930-1

37an k 38

GB.Atlanta Ga aug 26

Nicholas Power Co,

115 Nassau St, NYC.

Enter our order at once for fifty number six machines ten to be expressed immediately balance to follow by freight last order for twenty five entirely sold powers no six is a winner cant keep them in stock.

Consolidated Film & Supply Co-1217p

¶ Sold by the best film exchanges and dealers everywhere. ¶ The reasons which make for success in POWER'S No. 6 are flickerless pictures and substantial construction. ¶ Over 2800 users vouch for its excellence. : : :

Write for Catalog G which tells all about it.

NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY

115 NASSAU ST., NEW YORK

For fourteen years the leading manufacturers of Motion Picture Machines

CAREY PRESS, N. Y.

Vol. 9. No. 10 September 16, 1911 Price, 10c.

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

THE FILM INDEX

EXHIBITORS' GUIDE

Scene from "THE ROSE AND THE DAGGER."—(Rex)

125 East 23rd Street New York—Chicago 169 W. Washington St.

What Next?
The Dickens, you say!

WHY — DAVID COPPERFIELD!
YES — BY CHARLES DICKENS!

MR. INSISTER

Mr. Insister says: THE THANHOUSER 2-A-WEEK has made me a persistent Insister. The last few releases, even without the big Shakespearean feature, have got me so that my whole show absolutely depends on my getting

THE THANHOUSER 2-A-WEEK

RELEASED TUESDAY, SEPT. 19

THE LIE

You know the harmless, foolish liar, who hasn't got brains enough to tell one that you can't immediately spot as an unprincipled whopper. We never mind him. But the crafty, malicious liar—the brainy, sneaky proposition that plots with the cleverness worthy of a nobler cause—that is the menace with which our story deals. But in addition to his character he plays his hand in the guise of friendship. Now put two and two together, and add to it the splendid acting of the Thanhouser Stock, with our never-failing photography. That's no "baker's half-dozen"!

No. 247 Code Word, Thel

RELEASED FRIDAY, SEPT. 22

THE HONEYMOONERS

Maybe you have already been there yourself—and perhaps not. At any rate, your most throbbing reminiscences of honeymoon excitement can never present to you such a picture as that of this couple. Their friends are not what might be termed cruel—just delightfully wicked and what they forgot to perpetrate on the newlyweds was not worth while. Oh—one thing we almost forgot; the couple use brains, too, and make things more lively, but none the less interesting, by their clever scheme to avoid the maelstrom of joyful nuisance. So it's wits against wits, and the sum total is a bunch of fun. Ask Mr. Insister.

No. 248. Code Word HEHO

THE NEW THANHOUSER PHOTOFRAME
consisting of five original photos, 11 x 14 inches, of the leading Thanhouser players framed in solid oak, mission finish, complete with glass, GOES TO YOU FOR $2.50 with order. This is the prize outfit that tickled-to-death exhibitors the country over are calling THE GREATEST LOBBY DISPLAY BARGAIN EVER KNOWN. Address Exhibitor's Dept.

THE THANHOUSER LOBBY PHOTOS
consisting of five splendid individual photographs (11 x 14) of Thanhouser principals; sent postage prepaid for $1.00 with order. Address Exhibitor's Dept.

THE THANHOUSER NEWS
the "Exhibitor's Guide," containing the Thanhouser Lobby-Decorator, sent FREE OF CHARGE to all who can show connection with the Moving Picture business. Address Exhibitor's Dept.

Thanhouser Company
NEW ROCHELLE NEW YORK
SALES COMPANY AGENTS FOR U. S. AND CANADA

"DAVID COPPERFIELD" WILL ELECTRIFY!

COLOR PRODUCTIONS

Have grown in public favor until today many patrons of moving picture theatres are attracted by this type only, and the fact is recognized that when a colored feature is announced there is a decided increase in attendance. All showmen who are attempting to meet this demand will find the best answer in our notable works of art

The Perfect Products of Gaumont's Studio

PRESENT Dramatic, Comedy, Travelogue, Educational and Historical Subjects COLORED IN RICH, QUIET, NATURAL TONES

COMING IN THE NEAR FUTURE

Crossing the Alps in a Motor — Release, Sept. 19th, 1911
Rare scenes of rugged beauty with perfect color values.

The Culture of Bulbous Flowers — Release, Sept. 23rd, 1911
Hyacinth, Tulip and Narcissus.

THE UPWARD WAY — Release, Oct. 3rd, 1911
Historical and biographical drama taken from the life of Lully, the great Florentine Musician, and introducing the eleborate costuming and furniture of the days of Louis XIV.

PANSIES — Release, Oct. 10th, 1911
A dreamlike study of the velvet-petaled beauties.

DONE BROWN — Release, Oct. 14th, 1911
An up-to-the-minute society drama, showing the clever manner in which a young wife kills the germs of fickleness in her husband.

Following these with release date as yet undecided comes a beautiful interpretation of FRIDOLIN, one of Schiller's best known ballads.

These Films are supplied by the Exchanges to the Theatres of the Country in the regular releases without any extra charge, and Managers should make use of the publicity to be gained by announcing colored subjects in advance

GEORGE KLEINE, 166 No. State St., Chicago, Ill.

VITAGRAPH

LIFE PORTRAYALS

"FORAGING"

Monday, September 11th

The kind worth having are the friends like the two in this play that share each other's sorrows and joys, in fortune and misfortune. It strikes home.

"HER CROWNING GLORY"

Tuesday, September 12th

Filled with wavelets and masses of chuckles and booms of laughter. An old maid who has a beautiful head of hair but such a face—"excuse me for laughing."

"THE CHILD CRUSOES"

Wednesday, September 13th

After shipwrecked and living as castaways on a cannibal island, the two young Crusoes are rescued by the marines who landed upon the island. A thrilling story of adventure.

"THE VITAGRAPH MONTHLY" — Friday, September 15th

Clearer than print. An animated, illustrated record of all the big events of the month. Keep in touch with the world you live in.

"BY WOMAN'S WIT" — Saturday, September 16th

A clever bit of work by a clever woman who keeps her husband at home nights. Wives will take their husbands to see this picture and they will all learn something to their advantage.

FIVE A WEEK

Next Week Next Week

"ONE FLAG AT LAST"—Military Drama.....Monday, September 18th.
"HOW MILLIE BECAME AN ACTRESS"—Comedy "de Luxe".....Tuesday, September 19th.
"BEYOND THE LAW"—A Western Drama.....Wednesday, September 20th.
"FORGOTTEN"—A Touching Drama.....Friday, September 22nd.
"OVER THE CHAFING DISH"—New and Pleasing.
"THE TIRED, ABSENT MINDED MAN"—Funny "Bunnygraph" } ....Saturday, September 23rd.

The Vitagraph Company of America

NEW YORK, 116 Nassau St.
CHICAGO, 109 Randolph St.
PARIS, 15 Rue Sainte-Cecile
LONDON, 25 Cecil Court

PATHÉ FRÈRES.

NEW YORK

A NEW IDEA IN INDIAN PICTURES—AN INDIAN COMEDY

"An Up-to-date Squaw"

A PERFECT SCREAM—THE BEST YET

RELEASED SEPT. 20th

GYPSY MAIDS

A TALE OF THE FAR WEST

See the thrilling rescue of the girl in the lake, see her fall from the bridge above

RELEASED SEPT. 21st

Don't Overlook Pathe's Weekly

LUBIN FILMS

Released Wednesday, September 13th Length about 1,000 feet

HIS GIRLIE

In which Cupid gives father the merry Ha! Ha! Betty eluded watchful father, met Ralph, and the parson did the rest.

DON'T FORGET

That there are 4 Lubin releases now instead of three. Some of the best actors and actresses in the moving picture field are in the Lubin Companies. There is an enormous increase in the demand for Lubin's.

Release days are Monday, Wednesday, Thursday and Saturday. A high-class Drama, a true-to-life Western, a dandy Comedy and a "Split" each week. Get all of them.

Released Thursday, September 14th Length about 1000 feet

AL MARTIN'S GAME

An Easterner, a miner, a girl and Cupid are the principal characters in this bully Western. Faithful picturing of the primitive passions in a love-struggle on the frontier.

Released Saturday, September 16th
Split Reel

The Scheme that Failed

Two "hall room boys" decided to be detectives. Did they "detect." Well, rather. But pretty Dorothy's father nipped their ambitions and Dorothy spurned them. Laugh! Length about 600 feet.

Cement Rock Blasting

The climax of this industrial picture is the seting off of 8½ tons of high explosive, blasting out 50 tons of rock. The entire blasting process interestingly shown. Length about 400 feet.

Released Monday, September 18th Length about 1000 feet

The Senorita's Conquest

A beautiful Mexican girl is the heroine of this strenuous story. She goes to lure the sheriff to the brigand's camp. The sheriff falls in love with her and she with him. Later she saves him from execution and he snatches her from death. Capitally portrayed.

LUBIN MANUFACTURING COMPANY

Model New Studios, 20th and Indiana Avenue, Philadelphia, Pa.

Chicago: 22 Fifth Avenue London: 45 Gerrard St., W. Berlin: 35 Friedrich Str.

KALEM

ARIZONA BILL
One of the Real Western Kind

Released, Monday, September 25th — Length App. 1000 feet

HAL CHASE'S HOME RUN
A BASEBALL COMEDY

FEATURING Hal Chase the premier first baseman and manager of the New York American League Baseball team in the title role : : :

RELEASED Monday, September 27th. Length approximately 1000 Feet : :

HAL CHASE and the LOVERS

The BLACKFOOT HALFBREED
AN INDIAN ROMANCE

Released Friday, September 29th :: :: Length Approximately 1000 Feet

COMING MONDAY, OCTOBER 16th

The COLLEEN BAWN in 3 Reels
DION BOUCICAULT'S FAMOUS IRISH DRAMA

Every scene made in the exact location in Ireland described in the original play

KALEM COMPANY
INCORPORATED
NEW YORK, 235-239 W. 23rd St.
86 Wardour St., LONDON, W.
BERLIN, 35 Friedrich Str.

Solax

WEDNESDAY
COMEDY

FRIDAY
MILITARY AND WESTERN

HERE ARE SOME EXCELLENT PICTURES
GET EVERY ONE OF THEM

"Oh! You Stenographer"
(Comedy)

Released September 20th

Two sons fall in love with their father's stenographer. The father wins out.

"How Hopkins Raised the Rent"
(Comedy)

Released September 27th

One of those side-splitting comedies, full of fun from start to finish.

"NELLIE'S SOLDIER"
(Military)

Released September 22nd

Great big Military Picture with a charming girl as heroine.

"An Italian's Gratitude"
(Drama)

Released September 29th

Splendid life-like drama of love and gratitude.

Solax Company

Congress Avenue. Flushing. L. I.

REMEMBER—ALL OUR FILMS ARE TINTED AND TONED.
SOLD THROUGH M. P. D. & S. Co.

FOR BIGGER AND BETTER BUSINESS

Advertise in the Representative Trade Paper

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD

Largest circulation among moving picture men

Every Reader directly interested in your advertisement

Advertising Rates on application. Investigate NOW

A Little Higher in Price, but the Best Is the Cheapest

YOU WANT RESULTS?

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD

125 East 23rd Street New York City

Self-Preservation is the First Law of Nature

"Preserve" Your Business!
"Jam" Your House!

Faithful to our policy of injecting a sound, wholesome moral into each release: faithful to your interests and our duty, we are releasing a picture which you will agree is a masterwork of creative genius. We're not careless with our vocabulary, and when we make a statement like that—you must have faith!

"FAITH"

Released on—jot it down—Thursday, Sept. 14th—is—well, here's the briefest possible synopsis, but you'll grasp it—as you will the picture! A minister loses faith in the gospel, leaves the church and goes out into the world. He sees the world's sordid masquerade of miserable happiness, the mockery of material possessions, and at last "a small, still voice" brings him back to the path that is narrow, the road that has fewer roses but fewer thorns.

THE BIBLE SAYS
"Without faith there is fear."

Without "FAITH," Mr. Exhibitor, there is fear of the other fellow getting ahead of you.

REX MOTION PICTURE MASTERPIECE CO.

573-579 Eleventh Ave., New York City

SALES CO. says "REX" has kept "Faith" with its promises.

SOME MORE SHORT CUTS TO SUCCESS!

COMPAGNIE FRANÇAISE DES CÂBLES TÉLÉGRAPHIQUES.

NEW YORK. 28 BROAD ST. PULITZER BUILDING. 3 MERCER STREET. 1 WORTH STREET. 881 BROADWAY. 85 FIFTH AVENUE. 281 FIFTH AVENUE. ORLEANS, MASS. WESTERN AGENCY. 110 NORTH LA SALLE STREET, CHICAGO, ILL. EDWARD C. SWEENEY, Manager.

PARIS. 39 AVENUE DE L'OPERA. LONDON. 29 ROYAL EXCHANGE, E. C. 2 MINCING LANE. NEW BRIDGE STREET, E. C. BALTIC MERCANTILE AND SHIPPING EXCHANGE, E. C. 24 SOUTHWORTH ST., E. C. 30 VICTORIA STREET, WESTMINSTER. HAVRE. 40 RUE DE CHATEAU. BRUSSELS. AGENCY 17 RUE VENUS. ANTWERP. 67 PLACE DE PIERRE MIGUELON.

FRENCH TEL. CABLE CO. Phone 397 Madison. 281 FIFTH AVE. Cor. 30th St. FRENCH TELEGRAPH CABLE COMPANY. ONLY DIRECT ROUTE TO THE CONTINENT. TIME,— DATE, SEP5-1911

The following MESSAGE is received via FRENCH TELEGRAPH CABLE, subject to the terms and conditions printed on the back hereof, which are ratified and agreed to.

XL 36 BARNA 24

REXMOPIC NY

COMMENCED WORKING REX SPANISH BRANCH AT BARCELONA YESTERDAY

FILMS WELL RECEIVED ON ALL SIDES REX WILL BE LEADERS

ON MARKET

REX BARCELONA

REX MOTION PICTURE MFG CO 579 11 AVE

☞ Cable and Telegraph addresses registered at telegraph offices in any part of the World are available for the delivery of Cablegrams sent by this line. No inquiry respecting this Message can be attended to without the production of this paper. Repetitions of doubtful words should be obtained through the Company's offices, and not by DIRECT application to the sender.

Form 1516

WESTERN UNION Cable Message WESTERN UNION

THE WESTERN UNION TELEGRAPH COMPANY
INCORPORATED

ROBERT C. CLOWRY, PRESIDENT. BELVIDERE BROOKS, GENERAL MANAGER

THE LARGEST TELEGRAPH AND CABLE SYSTEM IN EXISTENCE. CABLE SERVICE TO ALL THE WORLD

26,000 OFFICES AND 39,000 ADDITIONAL TELEGRAPH AND TELEPHONE CONNECTIONS IN NORTH AMERICA

DIRECT AMERICAN CABLES NEW YORK TO GREAT BRITAIN
CONNECTS ALSO WITH ANGLO-AMERICAN AND DIRECT U. S. ATLANTIC CABLES
DIRECT COMMUNICATION WITH GERMANY AND FRANCE, CUBA, WEST INDIES, MEXICO AND CENTRAL AND SOUTH AMERICA
WITH PACIFIC CABLES TO ALASKA, HONOLULU, AUSTRALIA, GUAM, THE PHILIPPINES, JAPAN, ETC.
MONEY TRANSFERRED BY TELEGRAPH AND CABLE TO ALL THE WORLD

BRANCH OFFICES IN PRINCIPAL CITIES OF GREAT BRITAIN AND THE EUROPEAN CONTINENT. ALL FOREIGN TELEGRAPH STATIONS ACCEPT MESSAGES TO BE SENT "Via WESTERN UNION"

RECEIVED AT 11th AVE. & 42d STREET. Telephone 4090 Bryant. AUG 30 1911

50 NY FH 28 Mosoow

Rexmopic NY

" Rex Motion Picture Mfg CO

573 11th Ave NY "

Mosoow head office of Rex Russian branch now doing business rex fine quality greatly appreciated business going to be big express congratulations

Russian Depot Rex Brenner

755P

COMPAGNIE FRANÇAISE DES CÂBLES TÉLÉGRAPHIQUES.

NEW YORK. 28 BROAD ST. PULITZER BUILDING. 3 MERCER STREET. 1 WORTH STREET. 881 BROADWAY. 85 FIFTH AVENUE. 281 FIFTH AVENUE. ORLEANS, MASS. WESTERN AGENCY. 110 NORTH LA SALLE STREET, CHICAGO, ILL. EDWARD C. SWEENEY, Manager.

PARIS. 39 AVENUE DE L'OPERA. LONDON. 29 ROYAL EXCHANGE, E. C. 2 MINCING LANE. NEW BRIDGE STREET, E. C. BALTIC MERCANTILE AND SHIPPING EXCHANGE, E. C. 24 SOUTHWORTH ST., E. C. 30 VICTORIA STREET, WESTMINSTER. HAVRE. BRUSSELS. ANTWERP. PLACE DE PIERRE MIGUELON.

FRENCH TEL. CABLE CO. Phone 397 Madison. 281 FIFTH AVE. Cor. 30th St. FRENCH TELEGRAPH CABLE COMPANY. ONLY DIRECT ROUTE TO THE CONTINENT. TIME,— DATE, SEP5-1911

The following MESSAGE is received via FRENCH TELEGRAPH CABLE, subject to the terms and conditions printed on the back hereof, which are ratified and agreed to.

EL 34 BOLOGNA 26

REXMOPIC NY

ITALIAN OFFICE REX FILMS STARTED TODAY AT BOLOGNA SPLENDID

WELCOME BY MANNJ BURGERS ANTICIPATIONS OF EXTENSIVE SALES

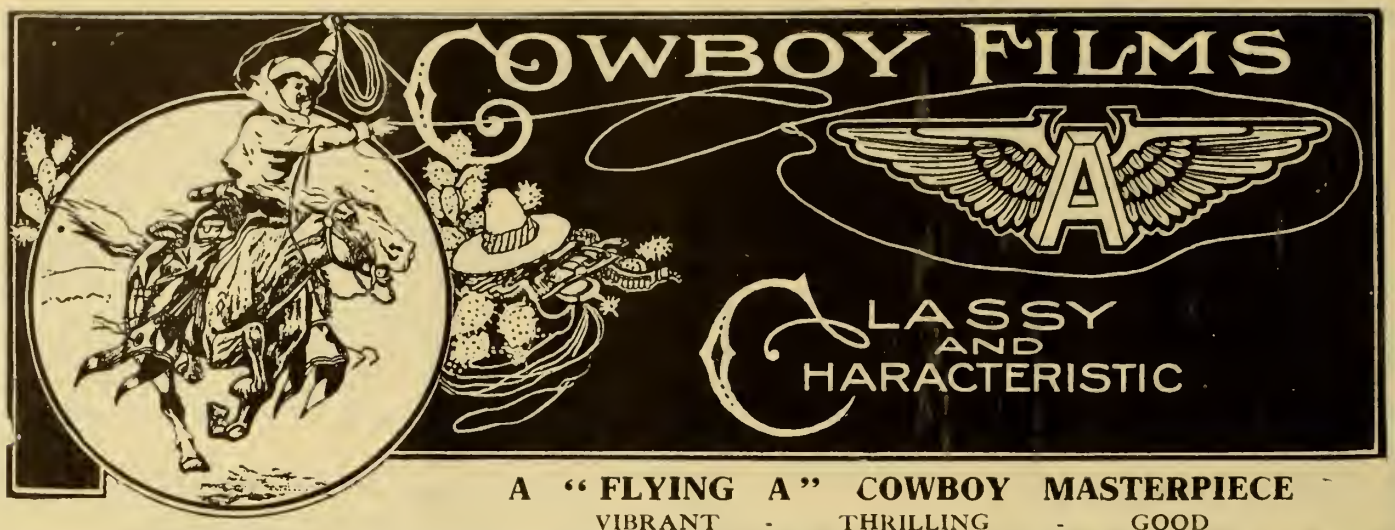
SINCERELY EXPRESS CONGRATULATIONS

ITALIAN OFFICE REX

XXX

☞ Cable and Telegraph addresses registered at telegraph offices in any part of the World are available for the delivery of Cablegrams sent by this line. No inquiry respecting this Message can be attended to without the production of this paper. Repetitions of doubtful words should be obtained through the Company's offices, and not by DIRECT application to the sender.

The "World" will tell you "REX" is KING!



A "FLYING A" COWBOY MASTERPIECE

VIBRANT - THRILLING - GOOD

"The Mother of the Ranch"

Released This Week, Thursday, September 14

A film far removed from "the usual thing" in Western stories. A production unique on account of its comprehensive worth. The story a pictured symposium of Thrills, Tears and Talent. A Western Dramatic Triumph.

GET IT - - THIS WEEK - - THURSDAY - - GET IT

NOTE.—There are two reels of the best Cowboy Pictures ever manufactured released with the "Flying A" brand on them each week. The release days are Mondays and Thursdays. Some are better than others, but they're all good. They are described in the "Film Synopsis" Department of this publication.

American Film Manufacturing Company, Producers of Flying A Cowboy Pictures BANK FLOOR, ASHLAND BLOCK, CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

Motion Picture Dis. & Sales Co., Sole Agents for the U. S. and Canada.

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

THE WORLD PHOTOGRAPHIC PUBLISHING COMPANY — 125 E. 23d. Street NEW YORK
(Beach Building) — J. P. CHALMERS, Editor and Manager. — Telephone call, 1343-1344 Gramercy

SUSCRIPTION RATES: $3.00 per year. Post free in the United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and the Philippine Islands. Canada, $3.50. Foreign Countries, $4.00, Post Paid.

DISPLAY ADVERTISING RATES ON APPLICATION.
CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS (No Display), Three cents per word; minimum charge, 50c.

WESTERN OFFICE: 169 W. Washington St. (Post Bldg.), Chicago, Ill. Telephone, Main 3145. Automatic Phone 32732.

Entered at the General Post Office in New York City as Second-Class Matter.

Address all correspondence "Moving Picture World, P. O. Box 226, Madison Square, New York," and not to individuals.

Vol. 9 — SEPTEMBER 16, 1911 — No. 10

INDEX TO CONTENTS.

BEWARE OF RED LIGHTS....774
BOSTON....812

CALENDAR OF INDEPENDENT RELEASES..793
CALENDAR OF LICENSED RELEASES....794
CANTON, OHIO....816
CHICAGO LETTER....782
CLEO AND PHYLETES (Itala)....778
CLEVELAND....808
COMMENTS ON THE FILMS (Independent)...790
COMMENTS ON THE FILMS (Licensed)....788
CORRESPONDENCE....808

DEVASTATION AT CHARLESTON, THE (Imp)....792
DON RAMON'S DAUGHTER (Kalem)....777

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE....781

FACING AN AUDIENCE....774
FACTS AND COMMENTS....772

HIGHBROW, THE....775

IMPRESSIONS OF DANTE'S INFERNO....780
INDEPENDENT FILM STORIES....824
INDEPENDENT RELEASE DATES....834
INDIANAPOLIS....816
INQUIRIES....804
IN THE MISSISSIPPI VALLEY....808

LETTERS OF AN OLD EXHIBITOR TO A NEW FILM MAKER....786
LICENSED FILM STORIES....818
LICENSED RELEASE DATES....832
LOUISVILLE....812

MANUFACTURERS' ADVANCE NOTES....791
MONTREAL....816
MOVING PICTURE ABSURDITIES....773
MUSIC FOR THE PICTURE....787

NEW ENGLAND....812
NINETY AND NINE, THE (Vitagraph)....777

OBSERVATIONS BY OUR MAN ABOUT TOWN.785
OLD TIME NIGHTMARE, AN (Powers)....778

POSSIBILITIES OF THE PICTURE....774
PROPRIETORS NOT LIABLE....786
PROJECTION DEPARTMENT....795

REVIEWS OF NOTABLE FILMS....776
REX IN EUROPE....779

ST. LOUIS....816
SAN FRANCISCO....808
SEATTLE, WASH....808
SPOKANE, WASH....816
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Independent)....824
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Licensed)....818

TAKING PICTURES UNDER DIFFICULTIES.784
TESTING NEW YORK OPERATORS' LAW...779
'TWEEN TWO LOVES (Imp)....776

WHEELING, W. VA....812

X-RAY MOVING PICTURES....781

INDEX TO ADVERTISERS.

CARBON IMPORTERS.
FRORUP, L. E....839
KIEWERT, CHAS. L....838
REISINGER, HUGO....823

ELECTRICAL SUPPLIES.
FT. WAYNE ELECTRIC CO....836
HALLBERG, J. H....825
KIMBLE ELECTRIC CO....842
MACKIE, H. A....831
SCHNEIDER, E....814
ST. JOHN CORPORATION....837

FILM BROKERS.
GENERAL FILM BROKERS....836
INTERNATIONAL FILM TRADERS....829
SEIXAS, GEO. W....825

FILM EXCHANGES.
BRADENBURG....831
CHICAGO FILM EXCHANGE....840
CLAPHAM, A. J....834
EAGLE FILM EXCHANGE....832
FEATURE FILM CO....827-830
GLOBE FILM SERVICE....830
GREEN, W. E....821
LAEMMLE FILM SERVICE....814
WESTERN FEATURE FILM CO....814

INDEPENDENT FILM MANUFACTURERS.
AMERICAN FILM MFG. CO....770
CHAMPION FILM CO....813
ECLAIR FILM CO....814
GREAT NORTHERN FILM CO....813
IMP....806-807
LUX FILM CO....821
M. P. DIS. & SALES CO....835
NESTOR FILM CO....810-811
POWERS PICTURE CO....809
REX MOTION PICTURE CO....769
SOLAX CO....768
THANHOUSER CO....762
YANKEE FILM CO....821

LECTURERS.
BUSH, W. S....841
HOFFMAN, H. F....827
MARION, LOUISE M....823

LICENSED FILM MANUFACTURERS.
BIOGRAPH CO....799
EDISON, THOS. A....802
ESSANAY FILM CO....801
KLEINE, GEO....763
KALEM CO....767
LUBIN MANUFACTURING CO....766
MELIES, GASTON....843
PATHE FRERES....765-803
SELIG POLYSCOPE CO....805
VITAGRAPH CO....764

MISCELLANEOUS.
AMERICAN MOTION SLIDE CO....829
AMUSEMENT SUPPLY CO....827
ASSOCIATED M. P. SCHOOLS....827
BAUSCH & LOMB....804
CHICAGO PROJECTING CO....831
COLUMBUS AWNING & TENT CO....827
DAVIS, H....830
DEWES, A....839
DONNIGAN, P. J....814
EXHIBITORS' ADV. CO....838
GOLSEN, R. J....829
HARBACH CO....831
HOKE, G. M....825
KINGERLY MFG. CO....834
LAVEZZI CO....829
LUMIERE-JOUGLA....823
LELAND, S. B....804
McKENNA BROS....829
MOORE, HUBBLE & CO....839
MUNCIE FILM & SUPPLY CO....827
NATIONAL TICKET CO....834
NATIONAL X-RAY REFLECTOR CO....797
ORTHO FILM CO....839
PAYNE SHOW CARD CO....839
PREMIER M. P. SUPPLY CO....830
SANITARY SERVICE CORP....829
SARGENT, E. W....839
SILVERMAN, M....839
SOUTHERN HISTORICAL VIEW CO....825
ST. LOUIS CALCIUM CO....832
TAKITO OGAWA CO....839
TAYLOR, F. C....839
THEATER SALES CO....840
W. L., CARE OF M. P. WORLD....831
ZENITH MFG. CO....823

MOVING PICTURE MACHINE MFRS.
AMERICAN M. P. MACHINE CO....827
EDISON, THOS. A....842
EDENGRAPH CO....829
ENTERPRISE OPTICAL CO....826-841
POWER, NICHOLAS....844

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.
DEAGAN, J. C....833
LEEDY MANUFACTURING CO....831
SINN, CLARENCE E....829
WURLITZER, RUDOLPH....841
ZEIDLER DRUM CO....839

OPERA CHAIR MANUFACTURERS.
AMERICAN SEATING CO....840
ANDREWS, A. H....840
BENNET, GEO. W....840
HARDESTY MFG. CO....840
KAUFFMAN MFG. CO....840
PEABODY SCHOOL FURNITURE CO....840
ROYAL METAL MFG. CO....840
STEEL FURNITURE CO....840
WISCONSIN LUMBER CO....840

PROJECTION SCREENS.
KURTAIN KOAT CO....838
MIRROROID CO....836
MOTION PICTURE SCREEN CO....821
SUNLIGHT CURTAIN CO....797

SONG SLIDE MANUFACTURERS.
EXCELSIOR SLIDE CO....830
CHICAGO SONG SLIDE CO....838
SIMPSON, A. L....834
UTILITY TRANSPARENCY CO....827
UNITED SLIDE ADV. CO....804

SPECIAL RELEASES.
CINES CO. OF ROME....823
MONOPOL FILM CO....817
NATIONAL FILM DIS. CO....819
TOURNAMENT FILM CO....815

THEATER DECORATORS.
DECORATORS' SUPPLY CO....825

Facts and Comments

FROM Europe comes a report, fraught with interest for all who are concerned in the future possibilities of the moving picture. It appears that an exceedingly active young man, gifted with remarkable talents and full to the brim of originality, is breaking down old theatrical conventions and traditions and on their ruins building up a new form of dramatic entertainment that so far has taken strong and immediate hold on the popular mind and yielded great financial returns. We are speaking of Max Reinhardt, whose methods, after scoring a pronounced success in Germany, have taken England and the northern countries by storm. His play, "Sumurun," based on a wonderful Japanese legend, has achieved an unprecedented success in London; his way of handling "Œdipus" and "Knight of the Rose" are the show sensations of a decade.

*

All preparations had been made to bring the last-named play to this country, but the initial cost of producing it and other difficulties interfered, and it may now be doubted whether any of his plays will be brought here soon, the European activities demanding all his time and attention for the present. This is a circumstance by no means to be deplored by the film-makers and exhibitors of this country, for Reinhardt is giving the drama exactly those aids and advantages which will bring the theatre into a most dangerous competition with even the best of feature films.

*

Now, then, what are his methods and his ideas? First of all, he scorns the present limitations of the conventional drama and the conventional stage. If these conventions stand in the way of making a great classic masterpiece plain and impressive to the masses, he simply sweeps them out of the way and constructs, if necessary, a new and rotatory stage, equal to all the swift and rapid scenic changes and every possible requirement of even such exacting plays as Shakespeare's historical dramas. He does all things on a gigantic scale, and when he needs more room tears and destroys and rebuilds until a mob of six hundred can find suitable room and artistic grouping upon his boards. Instead of being afraid of the spectacular features, he is glad of an opportunity to emphasize them. The result is a most remarkable revival under new but most effective conditions of great old legends and classic masterpieces that have heretofore reposed in the dust of libraries.

*

In this way he is gaining fame and incidentally fortune. His logic is so plain and simple that he who runs may read. "Many theatres," says he, "have failed because their owners or managers thought that any performance was good enough for the masses. That is a vital mistake, for it is just for those who do not know the classics, who have no interest in the masterpieces, that the performances should be especially good. Let them derive genuine pleasure from a Shakespearian play given in a truly artistic setting and historical correctness, and they will soon learn enough to prefer it. Appreciation of the beautiful and the artistic is not a class matter, but simply a matter of individual temperament."

Herein lies the lesson and warning for the men engaged in making and showing moving pictures. Up to the present the former, with some notable exceptions, have done but little to use the enormous advantages of the picture over the stage, such as outdoor settings, spectacular features, the elaboration in detail of romantic incidents, the treatment of grand classics in a befitting grand style, realizing in the film the grandest as well as the most subtle conceptions of poet and playwright and novelist. There will come, at no distant date, a great struggle between the picture, embodying higher ideals and quality and the regular theatrical attractions. The struggle will be for the possession of the biggest seating capacity.

*

At present the American stage is ill equipped for such a contest. Its various groups of masters have endeavored to "fight" the pictures by reduced admissions or by dosing them with the deadly toxin of cheap vaudeville. Such weapons have made about as much impression on the vitality and prosperity of the picture as a paper pellet thrown by a child's hand at one of the Homeric shields, composed of seven bullhides. Every day the feature film is knocking louder at the doors of the big theatres, and the knock is with more or less welcome answered with increasing frequency.

*

Unless, however, the film-makers, whether domestic or foreign, bestir themselves, the ideas and methods which have revolutionized so much of the conventional dramatic entertainment in Europe will find them unprepared when they will arrive here. That they will come sooner or later there can be no doubt. Their success abroad is blazing a trail across the big pond. Reinhardt is really using the very methods which, if properly applied, would make sure and permanent the success of the moving picture of the higher quality. The most curious phase of the whole situation lies in the fact that this foe to the superior picture has arisen in Europe, where the moving picture has never seriously threatened the stability and prosperity of the legitimate stage.

* * *

THE newspapers report that a lawyer in full practise, being, with his wife, a spectator at the exhibition of Dante's Inferno, was so powerfully affected by what he saw of the punishments in store for the wicked, that he arose in his seat and publicly announced that he had been "bad" and that he proposed to be "good." Like sinful Macbeth, shaken to his soul's depths by the vision of Banquo's ghost, the lawyer tore the mask from his inward state, but was again like Macbeth quieted by his wife, who assured him that such things "cannot overcome us like a summer cloud." It is to be hoped, that the lawyer persevered and atoned. In any event, the picture did the very thing which, according to all theology, a good sermon is intended to do: to inspire repentance and create a desire to reform. There are sermons in words and sermons in stones, but the sermons in pictures seem to do the work. Let Dante's Inferno be shown at the meeting of Bar Associations and good is bound to result.

IN the issue of The Moving Picture World for September 9th was published the final installment of Mr. Sargent's series of articles on the "Technique of the Photoplay," thus concluding a most highly instructive dissertation on scenario writing. In answer to numerous inquiries we wish to say that plans are now forming to publish those articles in book form, thus giving to writers of scenarios the first comprehensive textbook on the subject. An announcement concerning this work will be made at an early date. In the meantime it is the purpose of the Moving Picture World to continue to publish articles of interest to scenario writers, and a certain space will be devoted to that branch of the motion picture endeavor, every week, to which the writers are at liberty to contribute.

*

Scenario writing has become an acknowledged and an important part of the motion picture business. The time has passed when anything would do for a picture. The motion picture has become the "photoplay," and distinct skill in construction is called for. Thus far the producing companies have been satisfied if contributors—scenario writers—would supply them with bare ideas, and thus far few scenario writers have shown a capability of doing much more. Thus it has fallen to the lot of the editor employed by the producing company to whip the so-called scenario into shape—to develop the idea therein contained into a definite something called a picture. This has resulted in a too great similarity of treatment of a variety of ideas. Editors are human and, under the spur of necessity, do the obvious thing, regarding too closely the limitations of the company in whose employ they happen to be. The result is well known to patrons of the photoplay.

*

The time is coming, if it has not already arrived, when something more than the bare idea will be demanded from the writer of scenarios. The question is: Will the scenario writer be able to meet that demand? True, some have already qualified, and a limited supply of practical scenarios has been found to be forthcoming, but that supply is a mere drop in the bucket as compared with the thousands of utterly worthless scribblings which find their way to the desks of the several scenario editors of the different producing companies. Many of these writers display a total ignorance of the limitations of the camera. In some instances one is led to wonder if the author ever really saw a motion picture. Thousands do not furnish so much as an idea, much less anything that could, by the greatest stretch of imagination, be called a scenario. Much of this can be accounted for upon the score of ignorance, and it is reasonable to suppose that many of those who are merely suppliers of ideas may, under proper instruction, become capable writers of photoplays. It is to these that Mr. Sargent's work will be of great assistance.

*

In this field of endeavor Mr. Sargent stands singularly alone. As an editor of scenarios in the employ of one of the largest producing companies, he was the first to undertake the development of such latent talent as came to his notice through submitted manuscript. It was his success in that line that encouraged him to write the series of articles on the subject of scenario writing which have just been concluded in The World. Already there is testimony to be had of the efficacy of the instructions given by him from those who, by following his instructions, have been able to dispose of scenarios previously rejected. It is reasonable to suppose, in view of these facts, that it will be possible to develop still more of the latent talent among the would-be writers of picture plays through this instrumentality.

Moving Picture Absurdities.

By W. Stephen Bush.

THE greatest of them all is the Indian. We have him in every variety but one. We have Indians à la Français, "red" men, recruited from the Bowery and upper West End Avenue. We have Licensed Indians and Independent Indians—the only kind we lack are the real Indians. Tradition credits the Indian with uncommonly keen sight, which he seems to lose when transferred to celluloid, for on an average every Indian in the picture shades his eyes, as if it hurt him to look, on an average about eight times during a scene. The Independent Indians, especially, seem to be in need of an oculist's services. General Sherman said that there were no good Indians except the dead ones. He had never seen the moving picture Indian. There is no medium of morality about him. He is either wholly good, seemingly transplanted from the skies or else a fiend and an expert scalper in constant practise. Those who know him best describe the Indian as stoic and unemotional, but what a change when the red brother poses before the moving picture camera. He is as busy and talkative as the "villain" in the first two acts of the old-fashioned melodrama. You cannot escape the moving picture Indian. Recently I visited five moving picture houses in a Southern tour and five in a city in New England. The Indian was everywhere. The film-makers tell us that the demand for this sort of thing is overwhelming. I studied the audiences in the theatres visited, while the Indians were doing their worst on the screen, and noticed no feverish enthusiasm denoting approval. I sincerely believe they were tired of them, especially as the music with these pictures is always the same. Enter "The wicked Half-Breed." He is dear to the heart of the film-maker dealing in Western stuff. The W. H. may be divided into two grand classes, the Canadian and the Mexican. Of the two the Mexican is the more common species. When you see a Mexican in the full dress of a bull-fighter and smoking a cigarette and rolling his eyes you are face to face with the W. H. He rarely survives the middle of the reel, and is either killed by the hero or lynched by the dear cowboys. The Mexican halfbreed is invariably impolite to the heroine, and most of his troubles may be traced to that source.

Very popular with some film-makers is the "Honest Workingman." He always washes himself in full view of the audience as he comes home from work and then commences kissing his family. He is always boisterous and laughs heartily. We have known quiet, modest and retiring men in the class, but none of them appear in the pictures. Your moving picture "Honest Workingman" is constantly slapping his chest and calling attention to his horny hands and his overalls. When you see the H. W. thus disporting himself, be very sure that he will presently face some great trouble or temptation. The villain will cause his indignation by offering him from $50 upward to blow up his employer's factory, abstract the gasoline from the motor car or sell him a false key to the office. In refusing the offer the H. W. always draws himself up to his full height, which is the signal for an outburst of virtuous approval from the small boys.

These and many similar moulds are worn and cracked and should be thrown away. The surest path to success is the one where "no track of steps has worn a way." Originality is the life of the moving picture.

Michael Blewitt, a Corning, N. Y., exhibitor, died last week in Scranton, Pa., after having amassed a fortune of $200,000 in operating a chain of moving picture theaters in Scranton and vicinity.

Beware of Red Lights.

NO exhibitor who cares anything about his patrons or his program can afford to ignore the reviews of films in THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD. This department of the paper is conducted with the utmost care and with a view singly to the exhibitor's needs. If the exhibitor in Atlanta, Ga., who so gravely offended many of his patrons by showing the film called "Sixtus V" had read the film reports in this paper he would never have been in any unpleasant situation. THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD characterized that picture, which is the product of the Ambrosio Company, in its issue of July eighth, as follows:

"Sixtus the Fifth" (Ambrosio).—There have been some bad Popes beyond all doubt, and where their history is the contemporaneous history of their times their acts are legitimate subjects for representation in moving pictures. If, however, the wickedness of a particular Pope is to be shown on a moving picture screen, let there be some historical foundation, otherwise the thing becomes a slander on dead men, who depend on professors of history to defend them. Pope Sixtus V was no doubt a tyrant; perhaps he was cruel and even brutal; but his worst enemy has never accused him of having been licentious. The plot, I fear, has been constructed not out of history, but out of the needs of the film maker. As it treats of a subject which may easily offend religious feelings, such a departure from historical accuracy is to be deplored. In some respects, too, the picture is ridiculous without meaning to be so. Popes do not have their tiaras on the little table in their sleeping chamber; our Italian friends ought to know that much at least. There are many clever situations in the film, much good acting and the injection of controversial matter into the film detracts from its merits from the exhibitor's point of view.

Here was enough warning to any careful and intelligent exhibitor to keep away from this film. The independent exhibitor has no excuse for accepting such an objectionable and harmful film. What is the use of being independent if you cannot reject a picture that will hurt your box-office receipts? We will continue to hang out the danger signals, and if an exhibitor deliberately runs into a red light he alone is to blame for the ill effects.

Facing an Audience.

By W. STEPHEN BUSH.

"FACING an audience," spoken in connection with a moving picture actor, is really a figure of speech, for the thespian of the silent stage seldom faces anything more personal than a camera, or, if the scenes are taken outdoors, a crowd of gaping rustic or street gamins. The exhibitor sees the audience from the front on very rare occasions, while the piano player and ushers get but few glimpses. The only person who has an opportunity to watch the emotions of an audience during the progress of a picture on the screen is the man who attempts to lecture on it. He, too, labors under a little disadvantage, because the theatre is dark during his recital and he has his own task to perform, leaving but scant time to observe the audience. Imperfect then, and cursory as the lecturer's impressions and observations must of needs be, they may nevertheless be of interest, because they come directly from the firing line and are based on facts.

The first and most obvious characteristic of a moving picture audience has to me always been its earnestness. There is nothing of the dawdling of the blasé theatregoer, who half yawns and half talks through a performance. The men, women and children in the moving picture house are all intent and eager to an extraordinary degree. To them life is real and earnest both inside and outside the theatre. They are anxious above all things to understand what is being described on the screen.

Let no one believe that the man who during the day works in overalls, or the woman who struggles with the household needs of a big family, is less subtle in detecting and appreciating dramatic power than the man with a silk hat and a learned profession. They are the very people who know most quickly whether a picture rings morally true or false. Audiences of this type as a rule are by no means demonstrative. Only now and then after some climax, in which the better triumphs over the worse part of human nature, will you hear handclapping. The howling of small boys over the rescue of the Indian maiden or the killing of the naughty halfbreed is not heard as frequently as in the days of long ago when to the average manager of those times it conveyed the most unmistakable token of public approval.

Moving picture audiences are, notwithstanding their undemonstrativeness, quite appreciative. When the lights are turned up you may see that they are thinking about what they have seen, for the intensity of expression, so plainly visible in their faces, relaxes but slowly, showing how deeply they have been impressed with what their eyes have seen. You will find, too, that patrons of the moving picture love to talk about their favorite films and their favorite actors, and it is never hard for an alert manager to find out the sentiments of his patrons by listening to the talk in the lobbies and on the sidewalk after the performance is over.

Loyalty is another trait of the friends and patrons of the picture. Let them once become convinced that the manager means to do his best to please them and they will take as much interest in the theatre and its affairs as if they were stockholders.

What a fine and useful thing it would be for directors and producers, who are often in danger of getting "studio-stale," to go to the front occasionally, to mingle with audiences and to listen to them. If they gained nothing else, it would help them to avoid many mistakes, and it would for a surety convince them of the rising quality of the patrons of the moving picture. Possibly it might encourage them to trust in the taste and intelligence of the people, from whom they derive their income. Possibly—yes, possibly—but perhaps such a hope in the present stagnating state of affairs is utopian. A trial might be made in any event.

The Possibilities of the Picture.

Moving picture films will replace the family album and old-fashioned portraits in the homes of the well-to-do in the near future, according to Edward McConahey, of Spokane, Wash., pioneer of the animated photograph art in the Pacific Northwest.

"These domesticated moving pictures," he added, "will be made with all the care now devoted to gallery photographs and will include every member of the family, from the grandfather to the newest comer into the home.

"Think of the pleasure it would give many of us if we could see our forebears, not with the 'please look pleasant' caricature of a smile upon their faces, but as they appeared in all their naturalness a half century ago.

"There is no way of estimating the pleasure it would give children to see their parents as they looked when boys and girls, and later, as young men and women, before the responsibilities of life had checked their exuberant and youthful spirits."

Mr. McConahey, who has devoted much time to the subject since 1896, said, when asked how the idea came to him:

"One day while showing views of the late King Edward and Queen Alexandra, picturing them walking together in their garden at Sandringham, I thought: Why not have such reproductions of people less highly placed; why not have them for the people? The idea has been with me constantly since then, though I am not aware of having spoken of it to anyone before.

"I feel confident that within a few years the moving picture portraits gallery will be installed in every family that can afford it. I think, too, that in the near future, when a cornerstone is laid for a public building, a film of the entire proceedings will be placed in the hollow so that when the building is removed, succeeding generations may know what the men and women looked like who took part in the ceremonial. This would be of direct historic interest to every community.

"I have several films that I would not sell for a hundred times their weight in gold. Among them is one I took at Buffalo of President McKinley the last time he addressed the American people. One can note the furrows on his face, and every gesture and movement is true to life. Little did he or any one think that a few moments later he was to fall by the hand of an assassin. I prize it greatly and think that in twenty-five years or so it will be of immeasurably more value than it now is.

"I made a film of the Jeffries-Fitzsimmons fight. At the close of the fray Jeffries responded to repeated calls for a speech and talked for a few moments. When I showed this picture the first time a deaf man in the audience, seeing the prizefighter's lips and hands moving, queried in a stage whisper of his neighbor: 'What's he saying?'

"I have taken all manner of moving pictures, from the burial of Queen Victoria to a colored boy getting away with a ripe watermelon.

"I see no limit to the future of the film. I have an idea that the time will soon come when newspapers will show views of important events by aid of the moving picture."

Mr. McConahey's latest pictures show the moving of 1,000,000 tons of rock from the face of a high cliff overlooking the Snake River, south of Spokane. Where two shots with 40,000 pounds of blasting powder did in a few minutes what 500 men could not accomplish in a year. The film shows the various stages of the explosion, which is declared to set a new record in railroad history.

A. W.

The Highbrow.

By Louis Reeves Harrison.

"A fungus growth on society, often mistaken for real learning or achievement," is the definition of highbrowism recently given by a magazine writer, and, as far as I understand it, the term is often used in a disparaging sense for a superficial and affected dabbler in literature or art. To be more charitable to the much discredited individual in the moving picture business who furnishes the above theme, is probably an admirer or lover of the pictorial art, with a number of ideas on the subject, lacking the foundation of practical experience, who takes himself and his desultory views seriously. He may be a good fellow for all that and can rarely be regarded as dangerous, only irritating, even when he gets into print and tells us that the only good photoplays are those unappreciated by the public.

If any of us had the power to gauge the taste of an audience before or after a picture is shown it might be easily demonstrated that Mr. Highbrow is an amateur or a dreamer of lurid nightmares, but no one claims foreknowledge of public opinion, and it is extremely difficult for experienced critics to tell what those in front think of this or that presentation as pictures are now exhibited. In illustration of this I may cite a peculiar instance, rarely found, of two plays by the same author, performed by the same company under the same director, and both favorably reported by the critics. The first was received in silence and evoked faint applause. The second awakened enthusiasm from the outset and an unusual demonstration at the end. The natural conclusion was that one was only partially successful, while the other met with emphatic approval, yet careful inquiry among members of the audience discovered widespread preference for the unapplauded piece. Why? The second aroused no depth of feeling; it was amusing and easily so; enjoyment of it was contagious and a spontaneous manifestation followed. The first play was deeply absorbing; there was a fine idea involved; it set people to thinking, and, before they could recover from the lasting impression made, the censor board approval was flashed, the lights turned up and the next vaudeville act announced.

Under the above peculiar circumstances it would have been a manifest injustice to gauge the preference of spectators by what was expressed in applause, and it should ever be considered that a majority of those who go to picture shows to be entertained do so in a quiet, uncritical and unostentatious way. They like to sit and watch the photoplays and listen to the music, ready to laugh at simple things or to enjoy without demonstration whatever appeals to the higher emotions. At the regular theater recognition is often given the performers for creditable work by generous plaudits, the play being regarded as merely a vehicle for the expression of their art, or as something to be enjoyed in conjunction with it. The absence of near personality in the screen presentations disposes of the idea of applause with many, the enthusiasts being confined to small boys who clap their hands when relief after suspense is at hand.

All things considered, it is no easy matter to determine from either an expert or from a popular point of view, which plays are the best. Producers complain that, whether or not the public demand is for superior plays, the commercial demand is for the "same old thing," so Mr. Highbrow, as an offset to Mr. Lowbrow, may occupy a very useful place in an art which is in process of evolution.

When Mr. Highbrow comes forward with a scheme for the infusion of culture into the circulation of photoplays, his purpose is undeniably good, but he is often unaware that nearly all producers would be glad to raise the quality of film presentations to the limit of their ability if untrammeled by commercial considerations. They are not in the business for their health. They are aiming at the members of moving picture audiences and not over their heads. It must be admitted that some of them are aiming pretty low at that, but they are marked for eventual elimination and the trend is upward with the advance of public taste.

When Mr. Highbrow urges leadership of public taste his purpose excuses his plaint. When, however, he urges the morality of plays devised purely for entertainment he is treading dangerous ground. People go to the show because they are weary of the sermon. This is a government where all classes are supposed to participate in the exercise of political power and the national character depends upon the views of the many rather than the code of this or that sect; where the possibilities of morality depend largely upon the possibilities of liberty itself and men are the greater gainers by suffering each other to live as seems good to themselves rather than according to the prejudices of a few.

There is nothing the matter with the plain people; they resent indelicacy in picture plays as they frown upon indecency of personal conduct, from the finest motives in the world. Most of them have children and are intelligently aware that the character of the future generation is in their hands. If anything makes the average American tired it is the self-vaunting, and in many cases the self-advertising, attitude of men who set themselves on a pedestal and cry out to all within hearing, "I am holier than thou." That is what drives people to the little theaters. If there are lessons to teach, they must not be rubbed in. It is not in the nature of men who come here, either from Europe or from their mothers, to put up with too much "holy" restraint upon "the pursuit of life, liberty and happiness."

I am with you, Mr. Highbrow, in the advocacy of improvement in this form of popular entertainment, and so is everyone who has faith in its permanency. I do not believe it will perish and pass away, but will live just as our thoughts of to-day will be perpetuated, a bequest to posterity, influencing generations to follow ours. But we can judge from the history of literature that selective forces will be at work, that whatever is unworthy will be eliminated and only those plays will go down the line, bringing fruit after their kind, which have the strength or beauty to endure or fertilize. The immortality of a play lies not in its inspiration, but in its aspiration.

So much for Mr. Highbrow. Perhaps it is too much, but I am like the woman who kissed her husband and when he said that it made him a better man, she replied:

"I want to help you all I can."

Reviews of Notable Films

"'TWEEN TWO LOVES" (Imp).

IT was a distinct pleasure to the Moving Picture World reviewer to be given the opportunity of viewing in advance some of the forthcoming productions of the Imp studio. The pleasure arose out of the fact that the pictures seen were far superior to what we expected to see and because they were gratifying to the senses. How frequently does it happen that one will adjust oneself comfortably in one's seat after the first few turns of the crank, with a feeling that a few minutes of enjoyment are surely coming, only to be effectively jarred out of that hope by some glaring inconsistency in the picture. Such instances happen to the patron of the photoplay theater, looking only for amusement; but the poor, overworked reviewer making the rounds of the studios, supposed to be looking for trouble and being expected to tell somebody "what's the matter with that picture," gets jarred too frequently for comfort; hence, when he passes through a two-hour studio sitting without a perceptible jar, he is correspondingly grateful. This, with the sense of uplift that comes with seeing a good photoplay, puts one in a frame of mind to say a few good things about those particular pictures.

Reserving the others for future mention, we will record a few impressions of the picture entitled "'Twcen Two Loves." In brief, it is the story of an only daughter of a farmer; her mother is dead and she is her father's consolation. She grows up and falls in love with the young man in her father's employ, but when they tell the father of their love affair, he orders the lover off the place. He goes, but later returns and takes the girl with him, followed by a father's curse. We next see them established in their own little home, which is brightened by the presence of a child, and both are as happy as can be. A glimpse of the father shows him unreconciled and alone in his bitterness.

Then trouble comes. The young husband, at work in the cornfield, is overcome with the heat; a fellow workman takes him home and calls the doctor, but medical aid is of no avail and he dies without regaining consciousness. Later the little widowed mother is seen struggling against adversity; the once happy home is wofully bare and cheerless. The child, restless in its cradle, reveals the fact that there is no milk in the house, although it is now night. Placing the lamp on the window sill, the mother goes to a neighbor's for milk. While she is out the lamp sets fire to the house. This calamity the mother chances to discover while on her errand and she hastens back in time to save the baby. In the final scene she is seen sitting upon the steps of her old home with her baby in her arms. A shawl conceals her face, so the father does not recognize the suppliant for his charity as he takes the baby in his arms and helps the woman into the house. He ventures to remove the shawl and discovers his daughter.

The Parting. The Return.

Scenes from "'Tween Two Loves" (Imp.).

Thus baldly put, the story does not reveal much of interest. But the producer and the performers have deftly clothed the skeleton with the habiliments of life until every scene throbs with the realities of human existence. Much is to be said of the completeness of the scenic effects and of the good photography, which contribute to the excellence of this picture in no small degree, but it is the unmistakable touch of human interest, at times most absorbing, upon which its claim for consideration most solidly rests. Much good photography and expensive settings have been wasted upon lifeless situations, but no such charge can be brought against this production.

Though a commonplace chapter from the book of life it is not without its thrilling moments. When the mother enters the burning house to rescue her baby, one fairly holds one's breath until she staggers out with the child in her arms. This scene has been ably handled, the simulation of a house on fire being so real that one fairly trembles for the safety of the mother as she gropes her way to the cradle through the smoke. Indeed, one almost forgets that it is a picture.

As portrayed the story makes a strong demand upon the sympathies. The girl and her lover are not to be denied their happiness, yet one cannot fully condemn the lonely father who has lost the one object of his love—his only daughter. It is a selfish trait of human nature, but one that is of frequent occurrence. But, if the father seems to be unnecessarily obdurate, it must be remembered that the man who wishes to marry his daughter is but a farm hand, possibly unknown to him, in which case he would be justfied in opposing the marriage to the last. The character depicted being the stolid, determined type of man, it follows naturally that he should refuse to forgive and to answer the appeal of his daughter in her moment of dire need. Such unrelenting characters are not unknown, albeit they seem to be extremely severe. That he has a heart, proof is given in the final scene, when father and daughter are once more united.

There is a noticeable absence of superfluous sentimentality with which some producers would burden a story of this kind. Only one discreet love scene is given, for which the producer has our thanks. There is also a death scene which is robbed of much of the customary horrors by the omission of the agonizing throes of final dissolution—a treatment of an unpleasant subject that is highly commendable.

As a whole, the production is of the highest class and marks a distinct advance in the character of the work of the Imp Company.

"DON RAMON'S DAUGHTER" (Kalem).

CARE for the minutiæ in a picture tells. Atmosphere is an intangible quality, but, though often neglected, is the only means of giving a sense of naturalness to pictures of a bygone day. The sense of naturalness is very strong in this very carefully staged picture of the romantic and courteous life of southern California before the Gringoes came. This sense is carried over to the spectator very subtly. At first he is conscious only of pleasure. If he be in a critical mood, and attempts to analyze it, he will suddenly awake to the fact that there are Murillos and Velasquezes on the walls of the Di Garcia home. Then his eye, using this as a clue, will discover other things in keeping in the stage settings, in the acting, furnishings and deportment. All belong with the state of culture in that locality at that time. The picture seems truthful, whether it truly be so or not. The story, thoroughly romantic, is restrained and there is little in it that is not poetry. It is made effective, although not a closely constructed drama, by an atmosphere that perfumes and colors the interesting narrative, which is kept clear.

Don Ramon casts Manetta, his daughter, off because she is determined to marry a poor youth. This scene takes place in a garden. The youth is also there and Don Ramon is very angry, but acts with restraint and the scene does not leave in the spectator any sense of unreality. The youth and Manetta are married; both die and their baby daughter, Carlotta, is adopted by Donna Loretta, wife of Don Josè di Garcia, who lives in a distant part of the country presumably. These scenes are quickly passed over, leaving the greater part of the film for picturing the dramatic part of the story, which opens when this baby girl has grown up to be of about her mother's age at the time she was married. The Garcias don't know who this girl Carlotta is; they have only a locket, her mother's. The son of the house has fallen in love with her. At this point Don Ramon, Carlotta's grandfather, writes to his friend, Don José, that he is coming to visit him. Carlotta looks like her mother; her grandfather when he comes recognizes her. The scene where Don Ramon and Carlotta meet brings into the picture a new situation. Her attitude toward the old man is quite natural, human and typical, but we had not been prepared for it. It was not even impressed upon the spectator that she knew of her mother's sad story, much less resented it. This divides the picture again, making three clear cut parts, not integral acts, but three episodes. Each of these is clearly developed and in itself effective, but the last is the most important. The scenes of this are very carefully planned and pleasing. One quality in which they excel is the impression of background continuity. Of course they were taken in the same grounds, but what is more to the point, the way they were handled gives the sense of their being within sight of each other. This may not have been true, for in one scene the Indians are chasing Carlotta and her maid away from the gate and in the next are seen chasing them toward the gate. But nothing at all out of the way is noticeable at this point. The change in direction is a possibility and the action too engrossing for small considerations. The girl is captured at the gate and is rescued by her grandfather. This brings about a reconciliation.

This picture is praiseworthy. It is not constructed on the plan of the drama. Many of Shakespeare's historical, epic plays also are not; his "Henry the Eighth," his "Henry the Fifth." They are good despite weak construction; perhaps they hold more in that form than they could otherwise. It is debatable.

"THE NINETY AND NINE" (Vitagraph).

THIS is one of those rare and good pictures of which we could wish a larger supply. It is a picture that every one can see, enjoy, and profit by. While classed as a drama it is also worthy of being classed among the "educationals" because of its many beneficial points, and other lessons, making it acceptable in either day or Sunday school. The story is a twofold one, it is seldom that two stories can be told with such a unity of purpose as we find blending so harmoniously here.

In a well-to-do family there is a prodigal son, whose drinking propensities bring sorrow to the home. It is a sad sight to see a bright young man coming to the family table in a state of intoxication. Although the father seems harsh in his manner he cannot be blamed for ordering the young man from the room. Determining to leave home despite the pleadings of his mother and sisters, he packs his valise and goes out into the world. We next find him far away working on a farm, where all the indications are that he is using the strength of his young manhood in the development of both muscle and character.

Scene from "The Ninety and Nine" (Vitagraph).

The farmer's pride is his flock of sheep; he sends them forth in the morning, counts them upon their return in the evening. On this particular evening one lamb is missing. At this time the father with his family are upon an automobile tour. Their machine comes to grief near this very farm; while the chauffeur is making the necessary repairs the occupants take a walk.

The father meets the farmer and joins with him in the search for the missing lamb, which he is successful in finding, not, however, without serious reflections upon his own missing son.

The daughters, having gone in another direction, meet their brother returning from the woods, where he has spent the day wood-chopping. With great joy they take him to their parents, who receive him gladly; the father especially welcoming him after the manner of the lost lamb he had so recently found.

The young man himself now entirely reformed joyfully goes home with the family. Thus the farmer finds his sheep; the father finds his son and joy reigns.

The story is clean, wise and good, tender and sympathetic, yet morally strong.

It will be appreciated everywhere.

"AN OLD-TIME NIGHTMARE" (Powers).

Any film that shows an attempt to depart from the beaten path and blaze a trail of its own may be very properly treated as a notable film. Such a film is "An Old Time Nightmare," lately done by the Powers Company. There is a great field for pictures of child life and the supply of them is all too scarce. We appreciate that it is a difficult matter to make satisfactory productions when it involves the drilling of numerous juvenile actors. Juvenile productions have been done before, but we find it incumbent upon us to applaud the novelty of the film in question. It is a story of Birdland. A picture with a distinct lesson and moral for boys who rob birds' nests. Most of the characters represent birds, much on the order of Rostand's "Chantecler." It is a modern fairy story that the producers have seen fit to label as a "nightmare," but under either classification it is distinctly a charming and original bit of personification that will please the children beyond measure and will earn the indulgent smiles of the grown-ups.

Scene from "An Old Time Nightmare" (Powers).

The picture shows, from a bird's point of view, what a serious matter it is to rob a bird's nest. The story centers about a mischievous youngster, Tommy, and his chum. At the beginning a number of boys are seen fishing by a pond. One of the boys has had the foresight to provide himself with a triangular section of home-made pie which he evidently figures he can eat from one hand while fishing with the other. To have and to hold, in the ethics of Boyland, is a recognized principle, and no boy can be sure that a piece of pie is his until it is safely stowed away. Tommy, like the other boys, cannot endure to have pie thus flaunted in his face without succumbing to temptation. He purloins the pie and flees to safety with his chum. The pie is soon devoured, but it must have been a mince pie out of season. The boys after their long run lie down to rest beneath a tree and soon are fast asleep and Tommy dreams. The pie has a decided influence upon his dreams.

Tommy dreams that he climbs the tree and robs a bird's nest. He quarrels with his chum over a division of the spoils and the boys separate on bad terms. Master Tommy makes his way through a cornfield and there to his dismay is confronted by a huge bird that accuses him of robbery and calls a bird policeman. The frightened lad is led away and imprisoned in a large bird cage around which many birds gather to get a good look at the destroyer of their peace. A trial is then held in the court of Birdland and Tommy realizes for the first time that he has committed a capital offense, punishable by death.

The judge is a stern old eagle, and the jury is composed of solemn owls and other birds. Tommy has no defense to offer and is condemned to die. The death march begins, headed by the dove in ministerial robes to preach the sermon. Poor Tommy, firmly bound, approaches in fear and trembling, followed by a dignified committee of outraged birds. At the end of the procession follows the executioner, a big black crow, without a particle of sympathy for the quaking boy. His head is placed upon the block, and the great axe about to descend when Tommy wakes with a start. His companion also wakes and suggests that they climb the tree and rob a nest, but Tommy has learned a lesson. Never again will he rob a bird's nest, for he knows that what may be fun for him is tragedy for the birds.

"CLEO AND PHYLETES" (Itala).

The same qualities that were found in the Itala film "The Fall of Troy" are seen in this magnificent Grecian picture, in two reels (2,000 feet) telling the poetic love story of Cleo, the pretty daughter of King Diomedes, and Phyletes, the heroic warrior. The subject is treated in the same grand way. It opens with lavishly staged scenes, showing Grecian home life in pre-Homeric days, with stately ceremonial in court and banquet hall, among the fluted columns of Diomedes' high-uplifted, kingly palace. It also pictures the march of mighty armies, the attack on the walled city, the repulse, the breaking down of the gate at night, the turmoil and confusion of the hand-to-hand conflict in the streets of the city, the escape of the king, the burning and destruction of the palace and the rescue of the girl.

The picture opens with a pretty love scene. Cleo appears running away from Phyletes. She is reluctant and at the same time coyly ready to be caressed by the young warior. Phyletes has succeeded in getting his arm about her when the king enters with his courtiers. The two young people are embarrassed. The king pretends to be for a time, but bethroths them then and there. Now the arrival of the barbarian king is pictured. He is greeted ceremoniously and feasted. He sees Cleo and falls in love with her. Because his love is refused by both king and girl and Phyletes, he and his followers stalk out of the palace.

The background of the next scene is a deep gorge in the mountains, with a stream pouring through it. The wrathful barbarian, with a never-ending horde of rough Illyrian warriors with swords and spears, are seen hurrying downward through the gorge to attack the city. But they are not to take it by surprise, for now we see on one of the high, rocky meadows above the pass a flock of sheep in charge of a young shepherd. Astonished, this shepherd sees the horde winding through the valley far below and abandoning his flock, he is off at once to warn his countrymen of the peril. It is a market day and the populace are mostly outside the gate buying and selling. He arrives in time and the soldiers close the gate and for a time successfully defend the city against the attack.

During the night one gate, not carefully enough guarded, is broken down and the rough northmen drive the Greeks back from street to street and capture the palace. The king, Diomedes, is badly wounded and the loyal Phyletes carries him away to a place of safety in a herder's cabin on the hills above the city. Cleo finds her escape cut off and is captured. The barbarians have both city and palace. Phyletes comes back and finds her in the hands of the black-bearded Illyrian king. He makes his way into the vaults under the palace and sets it on fire. In the confusion he finds the girl and rescues her, knocking the barbarian down with a bronze vase. They might have escaped unseen, but the chieftain revives and with a handful of his followers gives chase. The palace is burning fiercely by this time and as the Illyrians rush across the court in pursuit, the big-girthed columns fall upon them, crushing them—they are hidden by the dust and smoke that rises from the ruins. Cleo and Phyletes find the king on the mountain and looking back see the great city in flames below them. An interesting picture.

The former film, "The Fall of Troy," had a glorious epic behind it to give it fame. This picture tells a simpler story.

Testing the New York Operators' Law.

The constitutionality of Chapter 252 of the Laws of 1911, which requires a six months' apprenticeship with a licensed moving picture operator before an applicant can be given a license to operate in New York City or in any city of the first class in the State of New York, came up before Justice Gavegan in the Supreme Court in New York City on Wednesday, September 6.

Lewis Gibelman, who has been operating moving picture apparatus in New York City and in Scranton, Pa., for the past four years applied for a peremptory writ of mandamus directed to Henry S. Thompson, as Commissioner of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity, compelling the commissioner to examine Gibelman for the purpose of ascertaining whether or not he is competent to operate moving picture apparatus and its connections in the city of New York.

Gibelman had previously applied for an examination to Commissioner Thompson, but had been refused on the ground that he did not show any evidence of serving the six months' apprenticeship under a licensed operator as the new statute required.

Gibelman, through his attorney, Anson Burlingame Cole, is making a test of the constitutionality of the new law, claiming that it violates Article 14 of the Constitution of the United States, and also Article 1 of the Constitution of the State of New York, in that it deprived the relator of his liberty without due process of law, and prevents him from exercising his right to support himself by a lawful vocation.

Mr. Cole in his argument for the writ told Justice Gavegan that that part of the law requiring the six months' apprenticeship was not within the police power of the State. He said:

"The law is not reasonably necessary to protect the health, morals or general welfare of the State, and it makes a particular form of acquiring skill and knowledge essential, and prevents persons not holding a license at the present time from following the vocation of a moving picture operator for at least six months, no matter how skilled and experienced such person may be."

Mr. Cole also said that before a new applicant for a license can get permission to work in New York City he has to (1) register at the office of the commissioner; (2) file a letter from a licensed operator that he will accept him as apprentice; (3) serve six months' apprenticeship with a licensed operator in this city; (4) file an application for examination, accompanied by an affidavit of said operator that he has served six months' apprenticeship with him, and (5) pass the prescribed examination.

The lawyer, besides the points already mentioned, said that the new law was conceived and promulgated in the interests of those engaged in the business of operating machines, and that the relation it bears to the general health, morals and welfare of the State had much less influence upon its originators than its benefits to them.

"It closes the doors to unlicensed operators for at least six months, and it creates a monopoly in favor of the licensed operators for at least that time, as no license can be issued until December 6, 1911; and that time may be and undoubtedly will be in many instances substantially prolonged by the refusal of the licensed operators to permit apprentices to work with them, or to make the required affidavit at the end of the six months, unless paid therefore any sum they may deem fit to extort."

Mr. Cole added that even if a man is willing to serve the six months' apprenticeship he can practically learn nothing as the law prohibits him from handling any of the machines unless he is licensed. "He would probably have to sit by and look happy for the probationary period," said the lawyer. He called the attention of Justice Gavegan to the fact that the undertakers' law which required a three years' apprenticeship was declared unconstitutional by the Court of Appeals.

Opposing the motion, but not very strenuously, was Assistant Corporation Counsel Nicholson, who said that Commissioner Thompson realized the difficulties under which the men labored, but that the law required him to refuse applicants unless they had served the prescribed period and provided a penalty against any official who failed to comply with its provisions.

The matter was thus put squarely up to Justice Gavegan as to the constitutionality of the new statute and he took all the papers for inspection and reserved decision on the application for the mandamus.

Our idea of hard luck is to tote a moving picture outfit to Alaska for the Smithsonian Institute, and then have the pesky thing sunk at the bottom of the Big Delta River.

Rex in Europe.

Our London correspondent sends us the accompanying picture of the recently established offices of the Rex Company at No. 5 New Compton Street, in the center of the film trade. We have already chronicled this event, but there are several attendant circumstances that are worthy of special mention. One is that two staid London newspapers who have hitherto ignored film matters, make note of the advent of the Rex films—probably it is the kingly trade name which has caught their eye. The "Daily Chronicle," in making the announcement, adds this comment: "The life portrayal and coloring of the films are wonderful, but it is their remarkable clearness which will be chiefly appreciated by the public." So much for American photography.

The reporter for the dignified "St. James Gazette" has evidently been present at one of the exhibitions, for he says of "Called Back" that it is "a truly remarkable presentation of a strong dramatic story of great human interest." This is very high praise indeed from such a source. He also says of "The Little Major" that it is an appealing story, pathetic to a degree, and is assured of a warm reception by the theater patrons."

Rex London Office.

But the most important circumstance (to the Rex Company) that attends their invasion of the British market is that the sales are already on a par with the best sellers that have held the market for years. We must not overlook the fact that films in Britain are sold on their merit and in open competition.

So it seems that the phenomenal American success of this young concern is destined to be world wide, for we are informed that Rex offices have also been established in Barcelona (Spain), Berlin (Germany), Paris (France), Moscow (Russia), Vienna (Austria), Copenhagen (Denmark), and Bologna (Italy). Other locations are in contemplation. It is both gratifying and encouraging to see a good American product so widely distributed and we shall await with interest the reports of its success in the various countries.

Mr. E. Lindsay Thompson, of Sydney, Australia, arrived at Seattle, Wash., en route for London. Mr. Thompson represents a syndicate of moving picture men in the antipodes that has revolutionized the business in that part of the world. This combination of men has placed the picture business in Australia on a high plane by obtaining control of the best theaters and by securing the patronage of the better classes.

In amending her theater fire laws to suit the latest catastrophe, Pennsylvania should remember that theaters are not the only structures that may be referred to as "fire-traps." The "factory" is the real menace, with churches a good second.

Impressions of "Dante's Inferno."

By the Rev. Elias Boudinet Stockton, S. T. B., East Orange, N. J.

For several years, the writer has been a student of the moving picture from an artistic and educational point of view, being especially interested in the possible developments of its use in the serious work of higher education in our colges and universities; but with the exception of the films made for the Russell Sage Foundation and those recently manufactured for the Medico-Chirurgical Society of Philadelphia, by the Lubin Company, and a few more of similar character, nothing suitable for anything more serious than university extension courses has come to his knowledge, until last Tuesday, when he was privileged to see the Milano Company's film of Dante's Inferno. This film is so great an improvement on any that has hitherto appeared that if it is followed, as it undoubtedly will be, by others of a similar character, it will mark the beginning of a distinct era, not only in the moving picture business, but also in the educational world.

The distinguishing mark of this film, from an educational point of view, is not the beauty of the photography, nor the excellence of the acting, nor the magnificence and delicacy of treatment, great and worthy of all praise as these are, but the absolute fidelity to the poem in all its details that has been achieved. Two careful scrutinies of the film revealed but two instances where this fidelity had been impaired: in the punishment of the spendthrifts and avaricious, the necessities of the case changed the enormous "weights" of the poet (Canto 7:27) into huge sacks of gold; and the angel who opened the gates to the city of Dis (Canto 9:73-105) was a woman instead of a man. In the first instance, the Milano Company are to be congratulated on the artistic way in which they have overcome or rather circumvented an apparently insurmountable obstacle and preserved the spirit of the poet's idea while sacrificing the letter; and for the second instance, altho' it is contrary to theology, etymology, renaissance art, and even to the poet himself, abundant excuse will be found when it is remembered that modern art so abounds in female angels, that a noted sculptor in good faith decorated a chapel of one of New York's largest churches with a number of them ,and only discovered his mistake when it was pointed out to him by the theologians. It was of course to be expected that the prominent speaking characters, such as Dante, Virgil, Homer, Horace, Ovid, Lucan, and others of whom we have authentic likenesses would be faithfully portrayed, but it was a distinct surprise and is a unique merit of this Milano film that this same accuracy of detail is found in the hundreds of lay figures who are simply mentioned throughout the poem as citizens of hell. This is only one example out of many that show the careful attention paid to every detail, however small, and the infinite pains that have been taken to have correct in every particular, even the minutiæ of the work; and it is just this that has made the Milano film a production of genius and gives it its great educational value in the realm of art and literature.

Before going further, a few words must be said regarding the accessories that accompanied the Baltimore exhibition. The decorations, or rather absence of them, in the stage setting was very appropriate to the subject and enhanced the beauty and grandeur of the pictures. The accompanying lecture was appropriately and admirably well rendered; and the idea of placing the musicians behind it instead of in front of the screen was exceptionally good, the use of an organ as the sole musical instrument being most felicitous. It is a pity that it was impossible to procure in Baltimore a vocalion organ, as with this instrument the swell reed effects of a pipe organ can be perfectly imitated and the needed religious tone brought out most impressively. The onomatopoetic or imitative sounds that from time to time occurred were most excellently rendered and it was an exquisite artistic touch to render them pianissimo, so that the sound was rather suggested than obtruded on the ear. This was particularly noticeable in the excellent rendering of the triple growl of Cerberus, which the "drummer" handled most skillfully.

Going back now to the film itself, the first impression is that literally the whole poem has been reproduced; and altho a detailed comparison of the pictures and the film reveals that there are omissions, these have been so carefully selected and are of so unimportant a nature that the impression grows on one continually that the only things omitted are repetitions, and that the whole argument of the poet has been completely represented and that every idea conceived by him has been portrayed in the film at least once. This is particularly noticeable in the first five scenes, where, by the simple expedient of placing Beatrice's intercession to Virgil in the middle of the four scenes depicting the first canto, the second canto in its entirety has been compressed into one scene and at the same time has been adequately and faithfully represented.

These introductory scenes are also noteworthy for the way in which they have brought out the allegorical interpretation underlying Dante's descriptions. One might almost think that it was the poet himself who had chosen the scenery of the gloomy wood ending in a barren waste, while the receding and advancing of the panther, representing lust, as Dante alternately combats and shrinks from it; the stubborn immovability of the lion, standing for pride and ambition; and the life and spirit with which the she wolf, typifying avarice, races down the rocks and puts the poet to rout, not only make a most realistic and thrilling climax, but are such true pictures of the nature of the sins themselves that they also suggest most powerfully the underlying allegorical meaning.

This suggestiveness of interpretation, both literal and allegorical, is to be found in nearly every scene of the film, but it is exceptionally noteworthy in the posing of the men rejected of heaven and scorned by hell for their selfish, self-centered lives, in the eager rushing of the newly deceased souls to enter Charon's boat and learn their doom, in the storm that continually chastises the gluttonous, in the approach across the Stygian Lake to the city of Dis; in Geryon, the monster typifying fraud, with the face of a just man and "the rest all serpent," and in the ice scenes of the ninth circle.

Akin to this is the delicacy with which the interpretation has been suggested. This is true not only of those portions of the poem that, plainly put, might offend morality and good taste, but even in those where delicacy is merely a characteristic of artistic merit. Cerberus, owing to his necessarily artificial structure, was a difficult subject to handle, but the skill by which the evidences of this have been concealed, and the deftness with which the descriptions of Dante's poem and Virgil's Æneid have been imitated is worthy of all praise. The treatment of Lucifer has been handled with the same masterly delicacy, as have also the portrayal of the maimed and mutilated false prophets and teachers of false doctrine, a ghastly subject from which the shocking has been entirely eliminated, and the punishment of the profligates and procurers, scourged by demons, which not only contains no objectionable elements, but also furnishes an excellent specimen of subtle characterization. Perhaps however, the finest example of this delicacy is the story of Francesca da Rimini, which shows not only the delicacy with which a difficult subject has been handled, but by the transition back to scene at the point that Paolo and Francesca turn, from reading about Launcelot, to embrace each other, gives the same delicate intimation of guilt that the poet has done by his words, "In its leaves that day, we read no more."

These three traits or features—accuracy of detail, completeness, not comprehensiveness, of treatment, and an interpretation suggested with delicacy, but definitely and correctly—are primary requisites of all really educational films and are absolute essentials for any film that will be of use in higher education. The Milano film of Dante's Inferno contains all of these elements in a marked degree, has settled once for all in the affirmative the question as to whether such films can be satisfactorily produced, and, when it is followed by others of a similar character, it will be only a matter of time and of bringing the films to the notice of the higher educational authorities, before an entirely new field of usefulness and remuneration for motion photography will be opened and developed.

ZIZ—IT'S HOTALING!

Arthur D. Hotaling, comedy producer for the Lubin Company, recently bought a new automobile. Mr. Hotaling lost no time in making a run to Atlantic City in the new car. He declares it's the fastest "buzz buggy" on the road. "I passed everything in sight," he said to a party of friends, "except one car that was going along like greased lightning. I could not seem to catch up with it and we were both going like the wind. I lost sight of him as he topped a hill. When I saw him again he had stopped by a small building and a crowd of people were gathered around. I came up to the place and found that the owner of the car was in the hands of the constable. I stopped long enough to see him fined $20 and come out of the justice's office a sad 'Budweiser' man. I certainly am lucky. If I had caught that fellow and got ahead of him it is myself who would have been the fall guy." Mr. Hotaling came to New York in the same wagon Labor Day and returned to Philadelphia the following day.

Education and Science

X-RAY MOVING PICTURES.

From the Literary Digest.

So long as we are able to take radiographs and moving pictures, it would seem not to be difficult to combine them and have a moving radiograph—an x-ray picture, for instance, of the bones of a moving arm or hand. The difficulty is, however, that a radiograph is not a photograph, and that the x-rays do not behave in all respects like ordinary light. It is necessary, therefore, to vary the ordinary processes, and this has not been done with complete success until very recently, although, as we are told by R. Villers in an article on "The Cinematograph and the X-Rays," contributed to La Nature (Paris, July 18), the idea is as old as the beginnings of radiography. We read:

"Since the x-rays act on a photographic plate, the first idea that presents itself to the mind is to receive them on the cinematograph film after their passage through the opaque body whose interior it is desired to photograph. But we must not forget that the x-rays are not refracted; it is thus impossible to concentrate them with a lens and we are obliged, in this process, to use films exactly the size of the object to be photographed. This is possible with small creatures like frogs or mice, but we are soon brought to a standstill by the mechanical impossibility of imparting motion, at the rate of sixteen photographs per second, to a film of considerable dimensions.

"The x-rays have the property of rendering certain substances flourescent . . . [and] the rays emitted by a flourescent substance acted upon by x-rays are of quite different nature from the exciting rays that produced them; they are rays of ordinary light; a lens refracts them. . . . Here is the solution: a cinematograph picture is made of the images formed on a fluorescent screen as would be done with an ordinary moving object."

The light given off by ordinary fluorescent substances is greenish, and poorly adapted for taking rapid-exposure pictures, but it has been found that tungstate of lime gives off rays, which although faint to the human eye are rich in the chemical radiation that counts where photography is concerned. Thus the apparatus with which Messrs. Comandon and Lemon have successfully taken moving x-ray pictures has three parts: the device for producing the Roentgen radiation; the fluorescent screen covered with tungstate of lime, and the cinematographic apparatus with its object lenses of special form made of pure quartz. The accompanying pictures give an idea of how well this machinery has worked. The writer quotes the inventors as saying, in conclusion:

"We have now scarcely passed the period of experimentation and material organization. The field of physiological and anatomo-pathological investigation is open; here resides the interest of cineradiography and toward this our efforts should be directed."

THE SARDINE INDUSTRY.

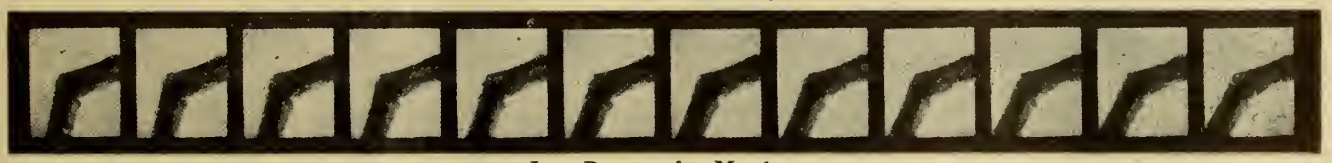
This Lubin industrial film is also an educational one. The process of the sardine industry from the ocean to the consumer is one of the most thorough of its kind ever shown; there is no omission, but a detailed illustrative exhibition from the beginning to the end. People are always most thoroughly interested in pictures depicting the process of preparation of those things which are a household commodity, and yet the nature of which may be hidden from them; especially so when prepared in a foreign land. Children, too, are delighted to see the marvelous changes together with the strange history of those things with which they are familiar, and the procuring of which is a mystery to them.

Accustomed to seeing sardines only by the small boxful, the beholder of this picture is astonished to see the fishermen bringing them in netfulls from the ocean by the tens of thousands, until he stands with them knee deep around him, an enormous wriggling, diving mass. Onward to the factory, sorted, dried, boxed, singly, fish by fish, covered, sealed, made airtight, shipped and sold; such is the interesting progress of the picture, ending with the portrait of a typical old Brittany fisherman enjoying his meal of sardines and biscuit with evident relish—everyone enjoyed this enlightening and entertaining picture.

Digestion in a Guinea-Pig.

Internal Movements of a Guinea-Pig.

Elbow of a Monkey.



Leg Bones of a Monkey.

The Human Hand. Illustrations by courtesy of the Literary Digest.

MOVING PICTURES TAKEN WITH THE X-RAYS.

CHICAGO LETTER.

By Jas. S. McQuade.

WITH the opening of the fall season comes the general report from exhibitors that business during the month of August exceeds that of all preceding years, for the corresponding month.

It is most gratifying, also, to note that pictures are retaining their hold on most of the managers who were obliged to throw vaudeville overboard during the summer. The Crystal, on North Ave.; the Garfield, on West Madison Street; the Lyceum, on Cottage Grove Ave., and the Oak, on Armitage Ave., all formerly vaudeville houses, with over 700 seats, are continuing pictures, being well satisfied with their summer profits. Mr. Levison sold his President Theater, on 55th Street, recently to Hamburger & Co., and, although the former owner proved the superiority of pictures over cheap vaudeville, the present owners have gone back to it and to a cheap picture service. Another deflection is the case of the Lyda, on West Lake Street, owned by Geo. H. Hines, which was kept open during the summer only by a picture program. Otherwise it would have been obliged to close.

It is advisable that all houses going back to vaudeville should be charged just as much for their reduced film service as for a full program. If they must have pictures to serve as a savior on a vaudeville program, let them pay the price or cut out pictures altogether. The business will be better without such customers.

Malicious Attack on Picture Theaters.

In a recent issue of The Standard, Freeport, Ill., there appeared the following article, under the scarehead. "Raps Sunday Show. Rev. R. C. Harker says it is worse than Sunday Saloon": "'I consider the five-cent theater on Sunday really worse in many respects than the Sunday saloon or the brothel, for the reason that many boys or girls who would never think of entering these latter places begin their careless life by going into the nickel show, thus beginning the disintegration of their moral character,' said Rev. Ray C. Harker, pastor of Embury Methodist Church, in his sermon on Sunday. His subject was 'Positive versus Negative Christianity.' 'I blush for any member of the church who is seen attending the nickel show on Sunday afternoon,' said Mr. Harker.

"Continuing, he said: 'There are many things that appear better to the angels than to see a member of the church standing on the street corner on Sunday with a bag of popcorn just purchased.'"

After reading the excerpt one sees at a glance that the newspaper man who wrote the head left out the word "brothel," evidently in consideration for the nicer feelings of his readers. The Rev. Mr. Harker, however, had other considerations when he used the word before a mixed congregation, many of them boys and girls of tender years, in a statement that is as flagrantly malicious as it is false.

The malice is shown in the distinction made between the five-cent theater on Sunday and the same theater on any other day. Mr. Harker blushes for any member of the church who attends the "nickel show" on Sunday afternoon, but he has no blushes for himself when he perverts the truth, by attributing to the nickel show the beginning of the disintegration of the moral character of many boys and girls. Let him furnish the proofs.

The Rev. Mr. Harker considers the Sunday five-cent theater worse than the brothel. When he makes so vile a charge, surely it must be based on something stronger than jealous indignation over the fact that he gazes out upon empty pews on Sundays. Let him furnish proof.

The moving picture theater, more particularly, is the theater of the plain people, and it furnishes entertainment and instruction in this country to many millions daily. In it the members of the family—from the aged grandfather down to the six-year-old boy and girl—seek amusement. Will the reverend gentleman dare to charge that these many millions of people, who stand for the home and decent citizenship, are fostering an institution that is worse than the brothel? He knows that he dares not.

If the reverend gentleman were well informed on the moving picture and theater he would know that prominent educators and divines have long since hailed the moving picture as one of our great modern-day discoveries that will assist immeasurably in the uplift of mankind. Along educational lines it has been shown that the moving picture will revolutionize the present methods of teaching in our public schools. It has already accomplished much in instructing the masses on the laws of health and the prevention of disease. It is being used by a number of clergymen in their churches instead of the customary Sunday evening sermon.

The picture theater itself has been gradually changed from a small, dark house to one steadily increasing in comfort, safety and seating capacity, the pictures being presented in a well lighted auditorium. Close supervision is made of the conduct of all who attend exhibitions, as managers have learned the value of a good reputation for orderly audiences. In addition, patrons are protected from objectionable film subjects by careful censorship.

In the light of all these facts, what license has the Rev. Mr. Harker to consider the picture theater worse than the brothel?

Exhibitors can do much to prevent antagonism to the Sunday moving picture show. As sensible business men and up-to-date managers, if on no other grounds, they should provide Sunday programs for their patrons. There is a wealth of biblical, classical, historical and literary film subjects to choose from nowadays. There are also scenic and travelogue subjects that could not fail to please.

I would venture to say that even the Rev. Mr. Harker would be converted were he to view a program of pictures selected from such subjects as have been specified. At any rate, it might serve to divert him from imaginative flights, in which he sees angels shedding tears over a bag of popcorn.

Local No. 2 Issues New Wage Schedule.

Lee M. Hart, general secretary and business manager of the Moving Picture Operators' Union, Local No. 2, sent out on August 28th a letter to all managers of theaters in Chicago, where moving pictures are exhibited, enclosing the new schedule of wages adopted by the Union, to go into effect on, or after, September 1.

In drawing the schedule careful consideration was given the rights of managers, and the acceptance of the schedule by the latter makes the Union financially responsible for any damage resulting from the inattention, carelessness or inefficiency of its members. For class AAA, which consists of all theaters charging 5 and 10 cents admission, running pictures, or pictures and vaudeville, with not more than one matinee, said matinees to run from 1:30 to 5:30 p. m., and night, from 7 to 11 p. m., the weekly wage is fixed at $21. Formerly $18 was paid for such services.

From what has been learned from managers and others, the increased wage will be adopted by the greater number of theater owners.

Local No. 2 has now 340 members and applicants for membership must pass a severe examination in order to be eligible. Successful in the examination, the applicant must show that he is a man of good habits and character before he is admitted.

Applicants are examined in electricity, practical and theoretical; wiring, the installation of projecting machine, on the film, patching, etc., and on city ordinances affecting picture theaters. Eighty per cent. must be scored in the examination by the successful candidate.

It is the aim of the members of Local No. 2 to raise the standard of the City Hall examinations for moving picture operators. Complaint is made that these examinations are almost farcical in their simplicity, and cases are on record where men who have passed the city examination and sought to enter the union have failed to score higher than 15 marks out of the required 80.

Complaints are made, also, that the city examination for operators is more or less controlled by political pull. For example: "B" fails to pass the examination and immediately seeks the support of some man, or men, who have a pull with the alderman of his ward. This alderman gives "B" a letter to someone on the examining board and, at his next trial, he is allowed to pass. Such men, of course, cannot become members of the union until able to pass the necessary examination.

It is pertinent at this point to remind Local No. 2 that some of the men taken into it from old No. 145, if required to pass the present examination, might find it too difficult a task. Since the Union is now responsible for damages traceable to its members, would it not be well to form classes under competent instructors and increase the efficiency of those who are lacking, until it reaches the required standard? I understand that this plan was discussed by the officers of Local No. 2 at the time certain members of No. 145 were being admitted.

It behooves everyone connected with the picture business to insist on the employment of thoroughly competent and safe operators, as on them rests the chief responsibility for the prevention of fire in picture theaters. The pernicious use of political pull in the examination of operators must be discontinued. It is extremely dangerous, and, if persisted in, may mean the sacrifice of many valuable human lives.

The Pictorial Poster Popular.

Several weeks ago George Kleine sent out a printed circular to exhibitors requesting them to specify what style of poster they preferred, whether the pictorial poster, showing a scene from the film, as issued at present by him, or a descriptive poster giving a brief story of the film subject, without illustrations.

Out of 31 replies thus far received, 18 are unqualifiedly for the 4-color, pictorial, one-sheet poster; 10 for a pictorial and descriptive one-sheet combined, such as the Vitagraph Company gets out, and three are for one sheet posters in type only.

One exhibitor, in selecting the poster in type only, gave as a reason that the illustrations are too often misleading and sensational. Another wanted a poster in type as well as the pictorial for each film.

All the replies placed great emphasis on the value of the poster to the picture business. Exhibitors depend on it as much as on newspaper advertising to bring business. The general requirement is for artistic pictorial work, eliminating offensive sensationalism.

Farewell Lunch to John Hardin.

The high esteem in which John Hardin (the Western Manager of Thomas A. Edison, Inc., for many years) is held by his Chicago friends, was expressed in words of eulogy and regret at the informal luncheon given in his honor, at the Union, Tuesday, August 29, by George Kleine, just before his departure for Orange, N. J., where he and his family henceforth will reside.

Around the table were gathered, in addition to the host, William N. Selig, F. C. Aiken, I. Van Ronkel, W. R. Scates, William H. Bell, John Verhoeven and the writer. Despite the efforts made to make the occasion cheerful, a feeling of regret at his departure prevailed, for Jack has been the fount of mirth at many a genial gathering.

Hackenschmidt-Gotch Pictures.

Moving pictures of the Hackenschmidt-Gotch wrestling match at White Sox Park, on Labor Day, were taken for the Motion Picture Patents Company by the Selig Polyscope Company. The light conditions were excellent and every movement, as well as facial expression, of the contestants should be brought out clearly.

There were 19 minutes and 50 seconds of actual wrestling which, added to the scenes showing the preliminaries, etc., will give about 1,800 feet of film. The pictures will be interesting throughout, as there was considerable action in the first bout, before Hack's shoulders were pinned to the mat. The second bout will be especially exciting, as it will tell the tale of Hack's shame, when he deliberately lay back on his shoulders to escape the punishment of the champion's famous toe hold. In it will also be seen a record of the conversation between the contestants and the referee.

"Don't break my foot," said Hack to Gotch. "Don't, that hurts."

"Make him stop, that hurts," said Hack to the referee.

"George, I can't," said the referee to Hack, "your shoulders will have to go to the mat." "All right," said Hack, "I'll let them go." And he did, as the pictures will show.

The panoramic view of the great assemblage on the grounds will afford a memorable spectacle, over 25,000 people being present.

The negative was developed and a positive printed in record breaking time by the Selig forces. Three hours and fifty-five minutes after the second fall the films were ready for exhibition. The three negative sections were conveyed in three automobiles, in succession, from the park to the Selig plant.

The date of release will be announced later.

Chicago Film Brevities.

I. Van Ronkel, manager of the General Film Company's branch at 429 South Wabash Avenue, informs me that he has placed an order for the additional three reels of the Licensed weekly output, beginning September 5th, making in all a total of 36 reels for his customers, weekly. Manager Van Ronkel states that his business is in a very healthy condition, and increasing steadily. Exhibitors at the opening of the Fall season are showing a desire to put in the very best possible service in order to suit their patrons. Mr. Van Ronkel also states that many houses, formerly devoted to vaudeville, and which have been using high class pictures during the summer, are continuing picture programs.

C. N. Walker, owner of the Orpheum, Plymouth, Ind., was in the city last week and called on the General Film Company's office at 17-19 S. Wabash Ave., where he arranged for a Licensed service. Mr. Walker reports business very satisfactory in his city.

James Craidone, owner of the Lyric, Bijou and Orpheum theaters in Janesville, Wis., paid his customary monthly visit to the city one day last week. He has been running his houses all through the summer, and stated that the business for the week ending August 26, was the largest in the history of his houses.

R. E. Aitken, manager and part owner of the Western Import and Film Co., of London, England, was in the city Wednesday, August 30. Mr. Aitken sailed for London from New York on the S.S. Oceanic, Saturday, September 2.

E. W. Dustin, manager of the Atlas Film Mfg. Co., of St. Louis, paid a flying visit last week. He was engaged in selling state rights for "The James Boys in Missouri," which he states is selling rapidly.

A. M. Kennedy, manager of the American Film Mfg. Co., is getting out some live and attractive circular advertising matter for the Flying A cowboy pictures. One of these circulars is entitled "A Glimpse of the Next Four Reels of Flying A Cowboy Pictures," and is very handsomely illustrated, the descriptive matter being brief.

The American Film Mfg. Co. has completed its negative developing plant in La Mesa, El Cajon Valley, in Southern California, at a cost of $10,000.

J. Allen, manager and part owner of the Canadian Film Exchange, with branches in Toronto, Winnipeg and Calgary, was in the city August 26, and departed for Calgary the same day. While here he placed an additional order for the Flying A cowboy pictures, which he reports are popular in Canada.

E. B. Miller, formerly business manager of the Essanay Co. and later connected with the Lubin exchange in Indianapolis, has been appointed manager of the Western Film Co. in Portland, Ore.

DANTE'S "INFERNO" AT THE PRINCESS, CHICAGO.

By Chas. Young.

Saturday, August 26th, the Milano production of Dante's "Inferno" was shown for the first time in Chicago at the Princess Theater, on Clark Street, one of the Shubert houses. The attendance was not all that could have been expected for such a magnificent film, but this was perhaps not unfortunate, as the projection at the first show was very poor. Some trouble was had about the operator's license, the man belonging to the producing company not holding a Chicago city license, and, as a result, the opening of the program was delayed until a Chicago operator could be secured. Finally, E. J. Halliday, who runs off the advance releases at the Vitagraph office every Monday morning, was called and put the picture on the curtain. Of course he was working under difficulties at a first show without a chance even to get acquainted with a new machine, and the picture was not what it should have been under favorable conditions. The throw was very short, about 55 feet, and as a large picture is a necessity for a house of the size of the Princess, a very short focus lens was required, not contributing toward good results.

However, Mr. Halliday set to wrk, and by Monday evening the projection was as good as could be had under the working conditions. A suitable lens was selected from among several of the required focal length, and the picture on the curtain very carefully brought to sharp focus, the lens covering the screen as well as could be expected, only the extreme corners showing any trace of blur.

Much of the beauty of the picture was marred by the presence of light striking the curtain, from the organ light behind it, as well as from several side lights in the balcony. Surely these ought to be dispensed with. There is no reasonable excuse for light on the stage behind the picture screen, especially when it is merely thin muslin, without preparation of any kind. Most of the films are tinted or toned to red tones, and the shadows suffer very much when light struck. In fact, the entire film is tinted, without a foot of it in black and white, and unless projected to the very best advantage, it loses very much of the value of the tinting. Moreover, it is very dense, which, though not due to under-exposure, renders it hard to light brightly.

The production itself is a magnificent conception of Dante and follows the poem with surprising accuracy. Yet it is handled so reverently that there is no room whatever for the carping critic to cavil. The acting of Dante and Virgil is so dignified that they compel admiration. And the so-called trick camera work is so well carried out that there is no sense of illusion; Pluto, Geryon, Minos, Lucifer—the three giants—all seem to be real, of the apparent dimensions, and the perspective is perfect.

The film is altogether marvelous, and the only possible criticism for it is that it is not for the ordinary picture show. It is indeed fortunate that this is so, as such a work of art deserves a better fate than to be "shown" for a dime or a nickel and run through the machine in forty or fifty minutes.

The weakest part of the entertainment at the Princess was the music and the sound effects. The music was furnished by an ordinary parlor organ, and the selections were by no means suited to pictures of the infernal regions. In fact, in one scene I caught a bar of "Nearer, My God, to Thee," which was scarcely appropriate for the infernal regions. The effects were very weak and half-hearted. Correct sound effects would make this picture a great success, where now it must depend upon its own intrinsic beauty to compel attention. Especially should the scene of the approach to the City of Dis be worked up, with its earthquakes and explosions, but they were mostly silent, at least at the two shows I saw.

QUALITY STANDS THE TEST.

Rarely has the picture of quality, representing higher ideals been subjected to a more severe test than was Dante's Inferno in the city of Providence during the week ending September 2. On the opening day the skies began to weep and continued for practically the entire week to pour. One of the local papers under date of August 31 printed the following:

The manager of the Providence Opera House, the oldest show house in town, where the production was put on, had no faith in the possibility of success. It was said, that the Inferno was too "high" for Providence, that it was a manufacturing town and demanded cowboys and melodrama. Everybody was agreed that no one would pay 50 cents to see pictures. To point out the superior quality of the picture, the added feature, such as lecture and music, was of no avail, the enterprise was condemned in advance as a hopeless failure.

Strangely enough, the public had the audacity to reverse all the Cassandra predictions. From the very first it showed that it liked the films and the dignified way they were presented. Business steadily increased and the total receipts for a house of about 1,400 capacity considerably exceeded two thousand dollars. W. Stephen Bush had been engaged by the lessees of the film, Messrs. Feighery and Place, to take entire charge of the presentation and to deliver the lecture. The effects used were all subdued and had been most carefully rehearsed by Mr. Thomas G. Gaffy, who is an advanced student in the psychology of effects. No attempt was made to turn this wonderful artistic production into a cheap masquerade or a menagerie.

WANT ORDINANCE ENFORCED.

The Cincinnati Operators' Local Union secured the passage of an ordinance by the Common Council of that city two years ago calculated to secure better protection to motion picture audiences against danger from fire or panic. Failure on the part of the city authorities to put the ordinance into operation has caused the union officials to address the following letter to the president of the council:

Cincinnati, O., August 30, 1911.

To His Honor, the President of City Council.

Dear Sir: Through the efforts of our local union about two years ago, the City Council passed an ordinance requiring all persons engaged in the occupation of moving picture machine operator to obtain a city license; operators to be examined according to age and ability or experience, before license would be granted, for the purpose of having competent men in charge of picture machines, operating in such places of amusement where the protection of lives and property are an essential consideration.

Council did not appoint a board of examiners as we supposed they would, but left this work to the building commissioner, who has no knowledge of the practical part of an operator's position or how he should be examined. The result is the ordinance some two years old, is of no use to any one and the business is flooded with incompetent men and boys. For the enforcement of the right meaning of this ordinance, we hold the City Council should appoint a board of examiners composed of one expert operator to serve the city gratis, and an assistant of the building commissioner, man who has charge of the electrical inspection in the picture machine booths; examinations to be held weekly or twice monthly and to consist of questions drawn up by the board, pertaining to the business as a whole, a percentage of questions answered correctly to be required before a license is issued.

This plan followed strictly and justly, we believe will eliminate entirely the dangers that confront the public of to-day, who are lovers of the motion picture show.

We therefore recommend that Council take such steps to better enforce the ordinance. Respectfully submitted,

MOTION PICTURE & PROJECTION MACHINE OPERATORS' LOCAL,
Per ARTHUR H. FIX,
Business Representative.

TAKING PICTURES UNDER DIFFICULTIES.

O'Kalems Brave Real Dangers and Endure Hardships in the Emerald Isle.

When the Kalem company of photoplayers, now widely known as the "O'Kalems," sailed away on the Baltic last June for a picture-making tour of Ireland, everyone was speculating upon the different kinds of a good time the chosen ones would have, and there were some heart burnings among those who were left behind. But the stories sent back by the Kalem players indicate that they have been reposing upon no bed of roses. Little stories of the difficulties they have been "meeting up" with at odd times have trickled through in occasional letters to friends, but the real adventure has just come across in a letter written to the World by Miss Gene Gauntier, telling of the hardships endured by four members of the company in securing some scenes for a fishing picture. We are going to let Miss Gauntier tell the story in her own words, written at Beaufort, County Kerry, August 4:

"I want to tell you about the most miserable seventeen hours four of us have ever spent. After a wild goose chase around the coast of Ireland looking for cliffs and primitive fishing villages, Mr. Olcott, Mr. Hollister, Mr. Donaldson and myself landed at Houth, just out of Dublin, where the herring are running now, and made arrangements to go out one afternoon on a little 50-foot fishing smack to take several scenes, among them the lowering of the nets at night and the raising of them in the morning. We went aboard and cast off at 3 o'clock p. m. It was a boat full of smells and fishscales, with a tiny little cabin with bunks filled with gunnysacking and a boiler to run the engine which draws in the nets, and which raised the temperature of the room to about 140 degrees.

"Fifteen minutes after leaving we were in the high seas, which rolled the little boat about like an eggshell. Before we were set up for the first picture Mr. Hollister, the photographer, contracted a severe case of mal de mer, which continued with increasing severity until we reached land seventeen hours later. The rest of us rather enjoyed it—for awhile. The boat shipped water continually and it was impossible to move without the assistance of the sailors. Mr. Hollister was too sick to sit up and lay groaning upon a sail while Mr. Olcott got the camera in position, then he would be carried and held up by two sailors while he turned the crank to the end of the scene, when he would fall white and fainting to the deck. It certainly was taking pictures under difficulties. Mr. Olcott was taken a short time later and then Mr. Donaldson. I was the only one who wasn't,but I felt mighty squeamish several times, I can assure you. The sailors said that if we had waited a whole season for a stormy sea we could not have picked out a better.

"Night came on bringing with it a driving rain. I refused utterly to go down into that furnace of a cabin, so the sailors rigged up a place for us as best they could on deck. Sails were spread on the after deck and I was laid between two spars which held me so I couldn't move or roll about. Mr. Olcott and Mr. Donaldson were planted also, and then canvas was spread on spars about a foot above our faces to keep the rain off. It was very uncomfortable and very wet. I was so tired that I fell asleep only to be awakened later by something wet pressing upon me. Putting out my hand I found the sagging canvas filled with several barrels of water, about an inch from my face. Just then a great wave dashed through the hawse holes in the stern and wet the canvas under us. The boys declared that they had enough and would go below, but not I. I was not seasick and had no intention of becoming so by going into that hot, malodorous room below deck. So we stayed and talked and dozed and woke up and prayed for morning. Finally we heard the fishermen coming up and knew that it must be time to raise the nets.

"'What time is it?' we asked. The answer was, 'One o'clock.'

"Well, all misery has to end somehow; at 8:30 o'clock we reached harbor, twenty hours without food or drink, though the carefully packed hamper of delicious food was there for us. But we got our scenes and when you know you have accomplished what you set out to do, you think it was worth while after all. We got two pictures which will be finished on the steamer coming home and in New York—trans-Atlantic pictures such as 'The Lad From Old Ireland.' Both are fishing pictures, but I think very different. One deals with herring fishing, the other with lobster fishing. We finish 'Arrah Na Pogue' this week and have only three more pictures to take. How heartily glad we will be to get back home."

Observations by our Man About Town

THE rainy weather last week in and about Greater New York made a big cut in the open air shows' receipts. Most of the places remained closed the greater part of the week.

* * *

During one of the wet nights I happened to be in the vicinity of an airdome on upper Broadway, Manhattan. Seeing the place was open I went in to see how many people thought enough of moving pictures to take a wetting in seeing them. As the neighborhood I refer to comprises the better class of residents, I thought the manager of the place was foolish in keeping it open on such a night. To my surprise I found an attendance covering considerably more than the expenses for the night; and to my still greater surprise found that, with but few exceptions, the audience was sitting under individual umbrellas brought from their own homes. "I've got them coming," said the manager, "and it takes a severe storm to make me decide not to give a show. Yes, you would think they had fear of catching cold from wet or damp seats, but you can see for yourself that many do not."

* * *

It is the intention of some open-air show people to erect a horseshoe metal canopy over the seats next season. The idea is to furnish shelter from the rain without sacrificing any ventilation. It is not expected that this will draw the people on rainy nights, although many people caught by the rain in the vicinity would in all probability most cheerfully give up a nickel or a dime to get combined shelter and entertainment until the passing of the storm.

* * *

One of the managers who has decided to erect a metal canopy stated that his chief object was to hold the people after getting them. If it looks like rain they will not go to an airdome because, without protection, they will be obliged to leave if it should rain and will get a wetting on the way home. Some of the storms this summer came up so suddenly that the rain fell before the first reel was run off, and a big rush for the exits followed.

* * *

A manager of quite a large airdome when asked if he intended adopting the canopy, said he did not; that he protected his patrons by giving rain checks. But that is not the desired protection. The checks will give the people their money's worth of entertainment, but will not keep them dry.

* * *

There is no more valuable connection with a picture show than a good worker of traps and effects. A good salary spent for such a man is never wasted. But a bum worker on that branch of the business is an abomination in the eyes of everybody, including the boy that climbs over the fence or under the tent. I saw some effects worked a few nights ago in a manner that almost made me fear they would incite a riot. They were so ridiculous as to appropriateness and time that a good picture was spoiled. It is absolutely ridiculous to work the cocoanut shells when a horse is galloping in sand half way up to its knees. Yet I saw it done. The party responsible for it was a young man who had probably never given much time to the study of effects and as a young lady sitting in one of the front seats attracted a good deal of his attention, he could not be expected to put up a high grade of accompaniments, but when he gave an imitation (and a poor one at that) of rappings upon a door after the visitor in the picture had entered the house I felt like shouting "Police!" Roars of laughter followed this break, and they were not occasioned by anything in the picture itself. I like to see enterprising, ambitious young men working hard to add to the attractiveness of the shows and I very much dislike to see the reputation of a place jeopardized by incompetent or careless work of employees.

* * *

I cannot understand why there should still be so many scratched and worn pictures on the market. We all know now that it is not because enough new subjects are not put out by the many manufacturers. An operator said regarding old timers that he took pride in going over his reels before the show and making new joints to make the films as presentable as possible, but he could not eliminate the scratches. Some of the reels he gets are subjects for a home for incurables and it hurts business. Only last night I passed two ladies in front of a picture house and heard one say to the other: "No, don't go in here. Somehow the pictures are not good. They appear old and have white lines running through them." I watched the ladies and saw them go into a picture place about three blocks away. The pictures there I found were in good condition and for that reason the exhibitor there made a gain on the other exhibitor's loss. It has been remarked many times that you can pull through easy with scratched subjects. You cannot do it now. Audiences are getting more wise and particular every day and they are quick to discriminate between places that run films in good condition and those that do not.

* * *

A man who knows nothing about the trade details of the picture business put this phase of the subject to me very pointedly: "There are few nights in a month that I do not go to see the pictures and you can't fool me as to quality. I know that when a picture is not in good condition that either the owner of the house is not paying enough money to get good pictures, or he is not dealing with people who can give him good ones, and I change my place of amusement. I pay the price of admission that is asked and for that price I expect to see the same quality of pictures that another house gives for the same amount."

* * *

The current event issues that have recently made their appearance on the screens are making hits with photoplay patrons. They are being most favorably commented upon. These issues bring before the people events of the day in a far more realistic and effective manner than can be done through the columns of newspapers. You get the real, lifelike action, devoid of any exaggeration, or padding. And what a boon it is to the poor beings whose illiteracy makes the reading of newspapers impossible!

* * *

An old timer in the picture business was asked to give his opinion as to the appreciation of the current event reels by the people patronizing motion pictures and he said he considered them better attractions for the exhibitors than any other line. Many places are featuring them. They seem to attract immediate and a lasting interest, and the people continue to talk about them, thus creating advertising for the exhibitors. No one will pretend to say that the newcomers are detracting attention from the story pictures, nor from the educational subjects. They are not. The latter still hold their ground, with the former making a distinct hit as a news dispenser entirely stripped of anything having a tendency toward fiction. People read of events and express regret that they have not been able to be upon the scenes and that the newspaper and magazine illustrations do not more satisfactorily convey the details of the occurrences. The motion picture reproductions of events of the day satisfy such desires, as well as adding something real, refreshing and instructive to the regular programme.

* * *

The conservative exhibitor will not allow himself to be carried away by the popularity attained by the news reels and make reckless demands upon his exchange for such reels. In this case especially there can be too much of a good thing. The people will continue to seek the films that give them the doings in real life outside of those told in story books, but they will also appreciate an intermingling of a little nonsense, even if it is a comedy, or a something more serious—about love, for instance. Travel and educational subjects are very much appreciated when they are good; but no matter how good they may be the spheres in which a programme made up of such subjects will give satisfaction are limited. If you wish to see any of the nickelodeon exhibitors cut loose their tempers give them two travel or two educational reels on one programme, or even one of each. A current event on a programme with one of the two subjects will go, but the better arrangement is to let an educational reel couple with current events and keep the latter and travel subjects on separate programmes, as they are to some extent closely allied. But, for goodness sake, let more attention be given to variety in the arrangement of each programme. A show I saw put on in a large picture house recently disgusted me. Two dramas were run in succession, followed by two comedies. That certainly was not the fault of the exchange. A much more satisfied audience would have left the house if the comedy had been interspersed with the dramatic subjects, which common sense should have dictated.

LETTERS OF AN OLD EXHIBITOR TO A NEW FILM MAKER.

Fifth Instalment.

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., 1911.

The progress of the moving picture meets one at every side, even here in this beautiful village. When I was here a few years ago, a miserable little store show of the typical order was attracting transient crowds in August—the show was just across from the entrance to Congress Spring Park—while today there is more than one well-appointed and well-conducted moving picture theater, all of them well-patronized too, especially on Saturday night. I tell you, they take their pictures very seriously indeed in the country.

I saw on the same day an Independent and a Licensed picture and it has set me thinking on a subject that should engage the attention of every film maker, the personnel of the company. In the independent picture, which was supposed to be a comedy based on the woman suffrage movement, every one of the ladies engaged in the production was like unto an Amazon in the front ranks of the spear carriers. Perhaps that was well under the circumstances; perhaps stout, extra stout ladies make the best and most typical suffragettes, although I have seen some mighty thin ones, notably Mrs. Pankhurst whose appearance according to newspaper reports and pictures was most sylph-like. One stout woman in a play, even a comedy is as a rule quite sufficient, but when all of them are rejoicing in a superabundance of adipose tissue the thing becomes bewildering and elephantine to the average audience. I should guess the average weight of the ladies at not less than 210. Nothing is more necessary in an actress than grace and ease of movement and some symmetry of shape, and it is but too well known that fat is the deadly foe of grace and beauty. While still under the influence of these reflections I went to see the Licensed show—a comedy picture and many ladies in it. Nature, while all too generous to the Independent ladies, showed herself a niggard with the Licensed charmers. They were obtrusively thin. One trembled for their safety in a sudden collision with a gust of wind. They were brave, desperately brave, in seeking to spin out an ounce of fun, as if it had been ten pounds, but it was a task utterly beyond them, the comic situation, exhausted in a hundred previous films, began to lag painfully after the first 200 feet, and the spectator had plenty of time for a careful study of the personal pulchritude of the girls. While in the other picture I had felt tempted to exclaim, "Oh that this too, too solid flesh would melt . . ," this one made me think of Caesar's wish, "Let there be fat men about me." A curve has been described as a compromise between a bulge and an angle; there were angles and bulges, but no compromises.

Woman is the most essential factor in life and in the play and men cannot dissociate thoughts of grace and beauty of rounded form and symmetry of figure from the fair sex. The woman on the stage is selected as a type, especially on the silent stage, where appearance counts for so much in a woman.

If you want to create a sensation among film makers, try to find a woman with perfect shoulders, not high, nor stooped nor round, but well put together, stately and with the perfect symmetry of the Greek statue. In all my moving picture experience I have not seen one such.

Let me end this rambling talk. The steamer Alice is to take us to a very recherché (do you get that in its entirety?) dejeuner in the charming Sans Souci surroundings of the White Sulphur Springs. I might be more explicit on that subject, but instead will let you do a little guessing.

O. E.

The management of the Auditorium Theater, Canonsburg, Pa., has been absolved from all blame, in the recent disaster at that theater, by Deputy Factory Inspector James R. Patterson, who conducted the State inspection.

PROPRIETORS NOT LIABLE.

If Thrown Out of Theater, Patrons Cannot Collect Damages Unless Owner Ordered Ejection.

Justice Schmuck, of the City Court of New York, has announced a decision of importance to the proprietors of moving picture shows to the effect that a patron of a theater, who was assaulted by the employees of the owner, cannot recover any money damages from the owner unless it is specifically shown that the assault was committed by direction of the proprietor.

Schlumbohn, a visitor to the Gotham Theater in New York, brought a suit against Proprietor Fox for damages, alleging that Louis Quint and Thomas Lynch struck and abused him.

A demurrer to the suit was interposed by attorneys for Fox, who maintained that there was no cause of action against Fox. This view was upheld by Justice Schmuck, who wrote an opinion on the point which is of vital importance to the trade. It is as follows:

The plaintiff, assaulted by the servants of the defendant, who conducts a theater known as The Gotham, endeavors to hold the defendant responsible for his injuries. The defendant, having denied responsibility for the assault, now applies for judgment, pursuant to the provisions of Section 547 of the Code of Civil Procedure, contending that the complaint fails to set forth a cause of action against him. The gravamen of the complaint is found in paragraph 4 thereof, which reads as follows: "That thereafter and while in said premises at said time this plaintiff, without any cause or provocaton whatever, was set upon by the servants and employees of the defendant, and among others by the said Louis Quint and Thomas Lynch, and violently assaulted with force and arms, and severely, seriously and permanently injured." To this allegation the defendant objects as not constituting a cause of action against him, and demands judgment upon the pleadings. Concededly to hold a master responsible for the torts of his servant the proof must show either some express direction or authority of the master, or indicate facts or circumstances from which his direction or authority may be inferred. Again, as a matter of pleading it is indispensable for a plaintiff to distinctly aver every fact which he must prove to maintain his suit. Therefore, unless the complaint in the case at bar contains averments from which he spelled an atrocious act of the servant for which the master is liable, i. e., an act done in carrying out the work for which the servant was employed or for the purpose of forwarding his master's interests, this motion must be granted. Giving the complaint under consideration a liberal construction, with a view to substantial justice between the parties, it is impossible to find a cause of action alleged against the defendant. Surely none will have the hardihood to contend that the complaint shows express direction or authority of the defendant to the servants to commit the assault. Again, the most liberal construction fails to justify the inference of implied authority: first, because no facts or circumstances are alleged from which the authority of the master to the servant to do the acts can be presumed, and, secondly, because the law does not vest the servant with implied authority to do that which the master, if present, would not be authorized to do. In consequence, since the law will not assume in favor of a party anything which he has not averred, the complaint herein, failing to indicate express or implied authority of the master, is defective. Motion granted, with $10 costs, with leave, however, to the plaintiff to amend within six days after notice of the order herein upon payment of $30 costs.

Portland (Ore.) parson refused to sign a petition against Sunday picture shows because it did not include professional baseball games. Is this the Light of Reason breaking in, or is it a case of "whole hog or none at all?"

Scene at Twelfth Street Theater, Kansas City, Mo.—Special Children's Performance of "The Crusaders," Aug. 23, 1911.

Music for the Picture

By CLARENCE E. SINN

PENNSYLVANIA asks: "What is the use of talking about applying intelligence to music for the picture when so often there is little or none applied to either the making or the showing of it? Some photoplays seem so utterly void of any kind of sense, either common or uncommon, that it is almost impossible to make or mar them by any sort of musical accompaniment; witness some of the Western pictures for example. I have resided in the Far West at one time of my life, and know something about both cowboys and Indians, and I can say that the actions and antics of some of these characters as depicted upon the moving picture screen are a long way from being representative of the real article. Some times it seems a waste of time to try to work them up; a lot of 'rag marches' is just about their calibre, and is all that they deserve anyway. Besides, I think that the person who enjoys that kind of picture would prefer it served with that kind of music, so what's the difference?

"The Western picture is not the only sinner of the cheap and silly class, though they seem to predominate. Some of the other kinds of melodrama are just as bad. A person does not have to be a playwright or an author to see the inanities of such pictures. If a piano player is expected to have enough intelligence to play appropriate music to the picture (and we are being constantly reminded that he is), he may likewise have enough sense to be disgusted with the childish stories and action he is compelled to look at night after night. And another thing: When we do get a good picture, what generally happens to it? When business is light we may hope to see the reel run at a normal rate of speed, but as soon as the house is full and a few people are waiting at the door—'Zingo!' Let 'er spin. A thousand feet in ten minutes if you can. Characters and titles whiz across the screen so fast one really cannot tell what it is all about. The manager's motto is 'pack 'em in—throw 'em out. A show every thirty minutes.' The manufacturer's motto is also: 'Throw 'em together any old way. A new picture every twenty-four hours.' Of course, it isn't always that way; if it were we wouldn't know the difference. Sometimes we do get a mighty good picture. And sometimes the pictures are run the way they ought to be. But how many times a fine picture is spoiled in the running and how often we get them that are not worth running at all! Sometimes I think people have a nerve to criticize musicians for playing inappropriate music. To follow the picture correctly, the pianist must keep his attention constantly fixed upon it, and that is enough to drive a fellow insane. A friend once asked me if playing in a picture theater makes musicians crazy, or if they have to be crazy before they tackle the job. I pass it up. What's the answer?"

Our pessimistic friend outlines a hard condition of affairs, though his peevishness is not wholly without reason. However, I don't know what there is for me to say or do about it? Neither the manager or manufacturer is in the business for philanthropy. If they have any mottoes at all, they are probably "make hay while the sun shines," or "a dollar in the hand is worth two in the bush," or something like that. All you or I can do is just do the best we can—make the best of it. Things will get better by and by. Why don't you take a vacation?"

Another, also from Pennsylvania, says: "I have two bosses; one of them likes the music very soft and slow, while the other claims I cannot get it too loud—even with the loud pedal on. Now I don't know how to play to suit both, but I think it horrible to deafen the audience with a constant bang. What can I do?"

You say you have two bosses. Find out which boss is boss of the other boss. Then put on the loud pedal.

Some time ago a letter appeared by Willard C. Beane containing the very excellent suggestion that manufacturers of films publish a more detailed description of their releases for the benefit of musicians—something which would be a real guide in the selection of accompanying music. A couple of years ago the Edison Company went further in this direction and published a complete musical synopsis with description of the various kinds of music required and "cues" for beginning and stopping each number. Whoever got out those "dope sheets" for them knew his business, but for some reason they were discontinued. I feel sure if they and other producers as well would give us some more of the same thing, at least for the more important films; their efforts would be highly appreciated. Such a proceeding would make it possible to add to the interest of the show and thereby add indirectly to the value of the picture.

I notice Friend Bush is interested in the Wagnerian motif idea as applied to moving pictures. You will remember P. C. H. Hummell started quite a little discussion on that subject last January. It brought forth several responses, if I remember right, but the interest died out. I am glad so able a writer as Mr. Bush has brought the subject forward again. My opinion is that the themetic idea (or leit motif) may be an important factor in the music for the picture of the future. It is possible to apply it occasionally even now (per Bro. Hummell), but a large part of present day pictures are so utterly devoid of motif or motive either that a little string of tunes seems about the only practical way out of it. By the way, we haven't heard from Brother Hummell for a long time. Maybe he can offer us something more on the subject.

Mrs. C., Washington, asks what to play for "cowboy" and Western pictures generally. About once a week I receive this question and have answered it to the best of my ability in this page or by letter. There is really little to say. I have suggested the "cowboy" songs and intermezzos, of which there is but a limited number on the market, as being the only things I know of which might answer for "local color," this being apparently the objective point. If the picture is of the comedy order, as many of them are, the principal thing in my opinion is to keep your music up lively. A fast moving comedy of any character, cowboy or otherwise, is best supported musically by lively, brilliant stuff. The pictures in question are usually of the slap-dash, rough-and-ready order, whether they are comedy or melodrama, and your music should be in keeping. Good, snappy marches are often useful. Melodramatic situations are treated as in any melodrama. But the horseplay and long chases and comedy scenes generally are fast and require little working up except lively music. The principal thing is, don't let it drop. If any little bit occurs which you think can be brought out better by using a song chorus, use it. You will not be apt to hurt the picture if you keep on playing. That is the important point. Keep it up lively. If the action subsides a little you can introduce a waltz or novelette, and in the sentimental scenes (when they do occur), you will often find a popular song to fit in very nicely. I think I have said all this before, and I am aware that it doesn't amount to much, but it is the best I can offer.

Ona Otto.—San Francisco writes: The absurdity of the music that is doled out as an accompaniment to the moving pictures in the smaller houses is even getting on the nerves of the local newspaper writers. In a recent issue of the San Francisco "Post" a clever reporter protested in the form of ridicule, to the extent of a column, the incongruity of the tunes that rend the air and pain the ear as one sits and watches what would be effective tragedy and comedy if it were not marred by the constant grinding out of maddening music. The article in the "Post" was headed with four big black headlines, which were as follows: "Cruel Persons Enact Cruel Scenes With Cruel Music;" "Mechanical Chimes—"Gee, It's Great To Be Married."—"As Widow Starves;" "Call Me Up Some Rainy Afternoon" as a man dies; "Why is it we enjoy these inharmonious things and call them good?"

The writer then goes on to describe several pictures, mostly serious, as illustrative and of the frivolous music that kept blissfully issuing from what he calls the "canned orchestra." Of course, as he says, the managers of nickleodeons are not as a rule either artistically, musically or esthetically inclined—they're out for the nickel (but who isn't these days?), but for the sake of the moving picture business as an art, a law ought to be made by somebody to either have no music at all or the kind that doesn't cheapen the pictures.

Comments on the Films

Licensed.

"A Second Honeymoon" (Vitagraph), August 19.—This picture, though set forth by first-class players and with a pretty heroine (her profile wouldn't be lonesome on a Grecian vase), isn't a true life portrayal. It isn't even a very well constructed comedy; it has no glaring faults in construction, so much as entire lack of it. Its scenes are very loosely connected and fail to give a concrete impression.

The story concerns itself with a bride and groom on their wedding trip who "fell out" because the husband saw another dress just like the wife's and thought she was flirting with another man, and the wife saw him acting foolishly because he was jealous. They get a divorce, though each still loves the other. They are reunited by chance and take up the honeymoon where it was left off.

If it had been made convincing it might have been a very amusing picture; but it has many shortcomings which sadly hamper it. In the first place, the heroine, Gladys, when she opens Mrs. Brown's invitation, throws the envelope on the parlor floor, which no woman would be at all likely to do. This little slip so early in the picture prepared us for others and they are plentiful. One of the picture's most noticeable slips is the scene where, let us call it his wife's dress, goes past the man in the ballroom at Judge Brown's. He was seated in a tete-a-tete with another girl. The room wasn't dark. Perhaps he only caught a glimpse of the dress, but that couldn't be, for he saw that she was very close to the other man. Under the circumstances, the false recognition doesn't stand up effectively. He got up to investigate, but the girl he was talking with stopped him and this also, seeing he was a newly married man, doesn't stand up. Such incidents are pictured thus because the scenario writer's memory is not good and he doesn't know psychology. If the two had been engaged, not married, pique in the man would have aided the little play of his companion, snake-like as it was, and might have kept him from investigating, might have broken the engagement. As it was, the little byplay would have been quite ineffective to hinder any married man. Also a man who was merely engaged might have retaliated with a little flirtation on his own part, a newly married man who loved his wife hardly would. We see it in pictures very often—married people acting as though they were merely engaged. What is more, it is surely abnormal when two people are dressed alike, especially at a private ball and it is not generally commented on. The misunderstanding would have quickly been cleared up at any average dance. There are, in all sincerity many arguments against the occurrence that is given here and this reviewer can find not a single one for it. The picture is ruined by "breaks." Judge Brown lived within automobile ride of his dear friends, near enough so that Mrs. Brown met Gladys on the street, yet hadn't heard that they were divorced. He, as a justice and a lawyer, probably read all court decisions, too. Such breaks as these ought not to happen.

"Through Fire and Smoke" (Selig), August 31. Several weeks ago the Selig Company released a melodramatic picture, "The Still Alarm." This was taken from a very popular play, with a well-knit plot and clearly contrasted characters, and the Selig producer pictured it in an artistic and pleasing way. It enjoyed, from all accounts, a deserved success. Between that picture and "Through Fire and Smoke" there is enough similarity to invite comparison. The former is a much stronger picture.

To begin, the characters of this picture are not sharply contrasted; it is, in one sense, a picture without either heroine or villain and without a hero, for this hero did what was his duty only. A melodrama, under these conditions, is sadly hampered at the very beginning.

It is, naturally, a love story. The fireman and the girl are shown in the first scene talking together in front of the fire engine house. It's a pretty picture and it is according to rule. It wakens our expectations. The girl continues on her way to work and meets the young floor-manager of the factory. They enter together. This player doesn't seem to the reviewer wholly convincing as a floor-manager. As a character he doesn't qualify as a villain at any time; he is merely a weak, contemptible fop. The girl is plainly attracted by him, perhaps by his good clothes. At noon, she goes out with the manager to luncheon in an expensive restaurant. The girl, under his influence, forgets the fireman, her first and truest friend. This is not commendable in the girl; it does not increase our respect or sympathy for her, or our interest in the story. She does nothing at any time worthy of a heroine.

The fire, as shown, is thrilling. It was caused not by the manager, although due to his stupidity and carelessness. In the panic, this weakling snatches the life line from the heroine. This merely means that he is to be first down to safety. During this struggle, the other players seem interested spectators. Did they forget the danger? If not, they were keeping cool heads, and in either case it seems to detract from the panic. The hero as a fireman rescues her; but it isn't personal, many others are being rescued also. Partly the picture is a melodrama with a purpose and as such is an anomaly.

It seemed to this reviewer that the scenes didn't hold the story in very well. The scene at the engine house, the meeting of the heroine and manager, the factory, including the starting of the fire, the rescue and the girl's home were absolutely needed. The other scenes were not absolutely needed. Some of them added very little to the picture. The scene showing the girl and the manager walking in the park seems merely to delay the action. There is nothing more weakening to an exciting story than to "drag in" scenery when not in accord with the action.

"In the Shadow of the Pines" (Selig), August 28.—A love story beginning with a soldier's wound received on the field of Waterloo. Upon his partial recovery the invalid was ordered to the pine forests and found his way to the Great Northwest, where he fell in love with a very handsome part Indian girl. The man's father disowned him for marrying beneath his station, as he termed it, but the gentleman showed his independence by never wavering in his devotion to the girl he married. It is a fair, but not an important film.

"The Ranch in Flames" (Pathe), August 28.—A Western picture with the holdup of a stage by a woman in man's clothes, who escapes by changing to woman's dress. Her husband finds the booty and is picking it up when the posse reaches him. Naturally they suspect him and explanations are of no avail. He is about to be hanged, when the ranch house is discovered in flames and Pedro is saved from execution. The fire scenes are realistic enough to keep the audience interested. The rest of the picture is not above the average.

"The Branded Shoulder" (Kalem), August 28.—A poor family is forced to part with its child, a girl, but before allowing it to go they brand its shoulder so they will know it in the years to come. Later there is a betrothal which is not looked upon with favor by a niece of this child's adopted parents. Her father has, in the meantime, become wealthy and when the jealous niece discovers that the girl was not legally adopted, she manages to prevent her inheriting her foster father's estate. The adopted girl's father sees an advertisement of the estate and, knowing that the disappointed heiress is a daughter, he decides to buy it. Her lover shows his manhood by reiterating his love for her just the same.

"Fountain of Youth" (Lubin), August 28.—In this comedy Satan is represented as visiting the earth and treating an irascible old gentleman to a vision which transformed him from a grouch into a very amiable person. He not only consented to his daughter's marriage, but he was ever after more pleasant and agreeable. That journey up over the rocks was about enough to cure any case of grouch.

"The Secret" (Lubin), August 28.—In this comedy a jealous husband is given a surprise when he attempts to discover who the rival in his wife's affections is, judging he had one because he smelled cigarette smoke. He watches and sees his wife take a box of cigarettes from her maid's hair and smoke as daintily as any confirmed cigarette fiend. He was cured and was so pleased to find that his suspicions were unfounded that he did not object to the cigarette at all.

"The General's Daughter" (Vitagraph), August 28.—Here is a picture of war in the desert. It is supposed to represent scenes from the fight of the English with the Mad Mahdi. The English general is captured and Mohammed Ahmed commands him to send for his daughter, Flower, whom he wishes to make one of his wives. Ahmed sends for her, however, in her father's name. She and her sisters come, but Flower is armed. When admitted to her father's cell she forces a veiled woman to change clothes with her. She easily passes the guard and, mounting a horse, gallops wildly across the desert for aid. She meets a regiment of Scotch Highlanders. They go with her and arrive just as Ahmed is battering down the door of the general's cell to get at him and his daughter. The film is exciting and is representative of the people about whom the story is woven.

"The Surgeon's Temptation" (Edison), August 29.—Pictures with this theme have been done before. It may seem well or not. That depends largely upon the point of view. A surgeon loves a girl, but she is taken from him by another man. The rival has his skull fractured in an accident and only the surgeon can perform the operation that will save his life. At first he hesitates, but eventually performs the operation which will save the life. He then renounces the girl and leaves the lovers to themselves. The players made the most of the theme and no fault attaches to them if the film is not all it ought to be. Where there is no foundation, the superstructure can hardly be up to standard.

"Jimmie to the Rescue" (Gaumont), August 29.—Here is a rather novel film representing two children as undertaking an elopement. They descend by a rope for three stories and otherwise behave in the most approved romantic fashion. They find some church dignitaries in Notre Dame, in Paris (a good picture), who are so visibly amused by the request that they give the children cakes, after which the good rector or some other fatherly priest takes them home. The end is amusing and pleasing. It's a commendable film.

"A New York Cowboy" (Selig), August 29.—The experiences of a tenderfoot in the Western country are always interesting and this tenderfoot gets his share of experience when he falls in love with the ranch owner's daughter, with two very determined cowboys as rivals. He manages at first to keep up his end fairly well. The girl learns that a lynching party is in progress and rides furiously, arriving in time to sever the rope with a bullet. This scene is effective, but is a repetition of others which have preceded it. The tenderfoot wins the girl.

"The Playwright" (Essanay), August 29.—Probably this photoplay was produced more because it is romantic than because it is based upon fact. There is truth behind it, but very little of it is true as shown. A playwright undergoes the usual romantic struggle, yet the manager who repulses him rescues the manuscript from the waste basket and realizes at once he has a remarkable production. By this time the author has found friends and a sweetheart.

"The Wrong Patient" (Vitagraph), August 29.—Considerable humor develops in this film through the situation's absurdity. The prescription of a veterinary surgeon is carried out on a man sick with rheumatism. There are hose baths, treating in the open and other vigorous treatment, all of which are applied with all the strength of three ablebodied men. But the prescription is so effective that the rheumatic gentleman shows his appreciation by rewarding the veterinary with his daughter's hand.

"Queer Folks" (Vitagraph), August 29.—A novelty is introduced in a long succession of romances in a side-show. All the freaks fall in love with each other, but at cross purposes. A curious battle royal follows, but eventually it ends happily.

"Betty's Buttons" (Edison), August 30.—"Rich man, poor man, beggar man, thief." All remember the children's game, but neither the children nor Betty realized the significance in her case, when her playmates found that her buttons ended in "thief." The father's conscience was not dead, even in misfortune when he was out of work. His honesty was so attractive to the owner of the lost bill that he was immediately given a position. The sympathy felt for Betty at the beginning turns to rejoicing at the close because of her father's good fortune, due, perhaps, to the child's sensitiveness partly.

"The Silent Tongue" (Edison), August 30.—This film presents an unusually attractive comedy. The story is of a young man who declares he will not marry until he finds a woman with a silent tongue. His cousin, for a joke, pretends to be deaf and dumb, but she is very pretty and attractive. The struggles with the ear-trumpet and the sign language are funny. But he discovers the trick and the discomfiture of the girl is a delicious bit of acting.

"For the Sake of the Tribe" (Pathe), August 30.—An Indian picture which represents three members of a tribe offering themselves as a sacrifice to pay the penalty of the thievery of some whites disguised as Indians. The tribe was told by the United States officers that no more provisions would be issued until they revealed the culprits. While the innocent Indians are digging their own graves the real thieves quarrel, the truth is revealed and the ending is satisfactory.

"Building the New Line" (Kalem), August 30.—This story is based upon a woman's objections to having an electric railroad cross her land. The son of the president of the company in charge of the constructive gang, succeeds in outwitting the woman after she has defied the law and his workmen, but becomes dissatisfied with the way it was accomplished, and at a later meeting succeeds in settling the matter more to his own satisfaction.

"Three Brothers" (Vitagraph), August 30.—The principal feature of this film is the representation of the cold and snow of the Klondike and the difficulties of three brothers who go there seeking for gold. Their dogs desert them or perish with cold. The struggle over the huge drifts and through the blinding snow is extremely realistic and exerts a strong fascination upon the audience.

"The Medicine Woman" (Pathe), August 31.—In this film is illustrated an Indian folk lore tale. A maiden is forced to marry a despised suitor. She appeals to a medicine woman, who gives her two feathers, one of life and one of death. Just before her wedding she uses the feather of death, dies, and is buried. Her real lover then uses the feather of life and restores her to life and himself. The settings assist in emphasizing the principal features of the story and add to its attractiveness.

"Romance of Pond Cove" (Lubin), August 31.—This picture tells the story of a young man who lost his wealth and with it his promised bride. The false girl had a younger sister, and after enduring his pain for a while he and the younger sister meet by chance. A very happy result follows.

"The Call of the Wilderness" (Melies), August 31.—In this film is told a strongly dramatic story. It is of a young London man, who seeks adventure in the American wilderness, marries an Indian girl and lives happily with her until he receives word that he is sole heir to his uncle's English estates. Leaving his wife he returns to England. For a time all goes well until remembrance of his Indian wife is suddenly forced upon him. Responding to the call of the wild he hastens back to America and arrives in time to have his Indian wife die in his arms. The story is told with skill and is stronger than some Indian dramas, and holds the interest of the audience to the end.

"The Baron" (Biograph), August 31.—Here is a comedy which presents as its principal feature the issuing of a dog license instead of a marriage license to a waiter who posed as a baron and would have succeeded in marrying an heiress but for that.

"The Villain Foiled" (Biograph), August 31.—The villain was thwarted in his scheme to do away with a girl's suitor by getting him drunk. She was so impressed by a friendly version of the occurrence that she consented to marry him immediately.

"The Carrot Caterpillar" (Pathe), September 1.—This is one of the most interesting and remarkable educational films that this reviewer has ever seen. It tells the whole story of this little animal. We see it changing into a crysalis and its convulsive throes at the time the butterfly is freed. The "leaders" are very happily worded.

"A Wedding Procession in Bavaria" (Pathe), September 1.—Among so many pretty girls and handsome young men, it is hard to be sure which is the bride and groom. Presumably the girl with the crown is the bride. The camera shows us all the faces of the whole wedding company, and it's a big one, impartially. The ceremonies, procession, dances and costumes are all very interesting. This is a very instructive and pleasing film.

"New York State Barge Canals" (Edison), September 2.—The interest in this educational film will center around the representation of the ponderous and unusual machinery in action. The matter of the canal itself and its commercial importance is lost sight of, or, at least, overshadowed, by the stupendous machinery which seems to carry on the work almost by itself.

Independent.

"Clouds and Sunshine" (Reliance), September 2.—Mr. William Walthall, by his strong, human interpretation of the unfortunate workman in this picture, places himself in the very front of moving picture players. He shows his intelligence by his carefulness all through the picture for the little, unnoticeable things, the hand to the hat, the slight gesture. He plays it like a man who makes a specialty of such parts, who has lived among workingmen and who knows them through and through; but he is not so limited. His faculty of interpreting character doesn't leave him when he is picturing personalities of very different experience in life. The workman in "Clouds and Sunshine" is, however, picturesque; the character gives him a fine chance and he makes good use of it.

It is not an American, not a Yankee workman that he pictures. Perhaps it's a Russian or a Polock; it is a peasant. This man with a family to support is deprived of his means of livelihood. A mistake had been made in the shop. It seems to have been not wholly the man's fault. Perhaps an ambiguous 7 or 9 on the drawings had been the cause of the trouble. It seems to have been open to discussion anyway; but the irritated manager discharges him. The scenes, through what may be called the first and second acts of the picture, are as true as sunlight and darkness are true, and go down into one of the bitterest pits of modern life. The man can't find work, seek where he will. The wife helps some, all she can. They still have bread and coffee; but the man waives the bread aside; the wife and child need it and there isn't overmuch. Despair is around his neck like a yoke.

In the last act the man becomes a burglar. We cannot help pointing out that this is a weakness in the play and though it does not wholly kill our sympathy for the man it maims it for a time until the man by a courageous act rehabilitates himself. The way this rehabilitation was effected was not easy to make convincing and the picture of it isn't able to convince us powerfully. The man downstairs has cut the telephone wires and is collecting the silver. The woman of the house, upstairs, discovers that her little girl has drunk poison medicine. She comes down to call the doctor. The telephone is useless. The burglar appears. The mother begs him to go for a doctor. To show him the trouble, she takes him to the nursery where the child lies unconscious. The burglar goes for help. This is convincing as far as the burglar is concerned; but it would have taken a great actress to make it convincing in the mother. The ending of the incident, after the doctor has come, is somewhat awkward. The burglar might have come with him into the nursery again, but more likely he would have remained at the door till he knew the outcome. The owner of the house, returning, would hardly have brought the suspected burglar again upstairs, at least not into the room. It was easiest to show it that way, though. It makes an interesting and commendable picture.

"A Straight Path" (Reliance), August 30.—In this domestic drama a husband's absorption in business and apparent neglect of his wife constitutes the principal theme. The wife is saved from ruin once by the entrance of a boy burglar, to whom she gives money, a photograph of her dead child and an admonition that the straight path is the only one. A year later she is on the point of eloping with a man who loves her, when the boy to whom she had once given money returns it and shows the photograph to explain his identity. Remembering her own admonition of a year before regarding the straight path, she is saved again. Events bring it to pass that her husband pays more attention to her and takes her upon a second wedding trip. The film is dramatic and acts powerfully upon the emotions.

"The Door Keeper" (Ambrosio), August 23.—No great strength is developed in this film. The doorkeeper neglects his duty because of the allurements of cards, and the tenants, unable to obtain entrance to the building, take forcible means to impress upon him the relative importance of his duties and card playing.

"Tweedledum's White Suit" (Ambrosio), August 30.—A series of adventures in the rain, which leave the comedian's suit anything but white. When he returns home, after proceeding to his destination regardless of consequences, he is in a serious condition and his suit is ruined.

"The Parson and the Bully" (Nestor), August 30.—The producer has released a film here which is destined to popularity. It is capitally acted, attractively staged and photographed with the individuality which is a feature of Nestor films. Further, it illustrates the defeat of a bully and the subjugation of all his friends by a parson who went to make a little Western town his home. The scrap in the ring is lively and thrilling, and the way the young man puts out the prize fighter and defeats the bully brings rounds of applause. There is plenty of good red blood represented and an audience cannot fail to fall under its spell.

"The Toss of a Coin" (Imp), August 31.—Fate was apparently unkind to the young man, but led him through devious ways into happiness. There is a pretty love story, with a jealous sheriff, whose discomfiture is complete when the young man captures two thieves and his conduct is made plain to the farmer. There is no objection to the wedding after the sheriff is disposed of. Thus a film that begins with a young man just released from prison and in despair ready to let a toss of a coin decide for him life or death, ends with the same young man happily surrounded with loving friends.

"The Foundling" (Great Northern), September 2.—In this story a young mother is forced to leave her child by the wayside and later engaged as its nurse in a wealthy family who had adopted it. She has another love story which causes her to leave the house. There is jealousy in the family and it is arranged that some gypsies steal the child, which is done. The mother informs John, her lover; a chase ensues, ending in the recovery of the child. The complicity of the jealous members of the family comes out and the babe's mother is happily married to John.

"Mutt and Jeff and the German Band" (Nestor), September 2.—These two comedians, seeing a possible source of wealth in a knowledge of music, invest in an old sliding trombone and a huge bass horn. There is some fun in it, but it is not up to the best in the series.

"Silver Tail and His Squaw" (Powers), September 2.—The feature of this film is the binding of a squaw to the back of her horse, which is then sent careening through the brush. Jealousy is responsible for this cruelty. The maiden's lover imagines mischief is afoot, overtakes the galloping horse and rescues the maiden from a horrible death. The race through the woods is very realistic, and the rescue is cleverly accomplished.

"The Sheriff's Love" (Bison), September 1.—In this film the principal feature is a sheriff's allowing a criminal to escape. To be sure, the posse which assisted in his capture, menaces the sheriff, but after a stormy scene forgives him for the fault of too large a heart. The sheriff loved the girl the criminal married and her pleadings were too much for him to withstand. The same fault which has been pointed out and criticized in other films is the principal shortcoming of this one.

"Bill as a Gamekeeper" (Lux), September 1.—A farce-comedy presenting this comedian in a new role. He has numerous exciting adventures ending in a plunge into the river, from which he is dragged by two anglers and promptly stood upon his head while they administer some very vigorous artificial respiration.

"The Invisible Wrestler" (Lux), September ..—A trick picture representing a wrestler, who appears and disappears in a very annoying way, eventually winning the bout. He is decorated with an elaborate gold chain for his prowess.

"The Haunted House" (Imp), September 4.—A miser holds a mortgage on a house and to prevent the poor owner, who cannot meet the obligation, from renting the place, dresses in a sheet and makes the passing throng believe the house is haunted. This works well until a young man falls in love with the unfortunate mortgager's daughter. He does a bit of investigating and succeeds in exposing the nefarious scheme to the crowd of horrified spectators below. The miser writes a release of the mortgage when threatened with bodily harm by the enraged crowd. The young man goes to the other's house, presents the release and explains the circumstances. Thanks do not pay him, but the pretty love scene with which the picture closes seems likely to square any account he may have against the place.

SEE ADVERTISEMENT ON PAGE 770.

Manufacturers Advance Notes

ESSANAY'S "SAVED FROM THE TORRENTS."

A Thrilling Railroad Drama Showing the Destruction of a Railroad Trestle.

A dramatic story with abundant thrills and a display of rare heroism is the Essanay Company's release of Tuesday, September 19th, "Saved from the Torrents." The "big scene," which provides a most thrilling climax to an excellent story, shows the destruction of a railroad trestle spanning a swollen mountain torrent, and the saving of a fast express train from dashing into the river. There is a fine vein of heart interest and many scenes of great dramatic intensity; for instance, the race of the station agent and his sweetheart on a handcar to reach the imperiled bridge in time to flag the train, and their perilous crossing of the tottering structure in the face of almost certain death.

Young Jack Carrington, so the story goes, is a worthless young fellow, given to drink and gambling, and utterly unmoved by the tender solicitude of his sister, Katie, who pleads with him to mend his ways.

Scene from "Saved from the Torrents," (Essanay).

Katie has an admirer in young Arthur Chester, the station agent, who heartily sympathizes with her in her trouble and has, on several occasions, remonstrated with Jack. Arthur finally proposes and is accepted by the girl, who has come to the conclusion that her efforts to reform her brother are futile.

Jack gets into trouble and, in an effort to save him, Katie bars Arthur from the station office, preventing him from transmitting a message which is to bring about Jack's arrest. While this is happening, it is reported that the trestle over which the express train is to pass is in danger of being swept away by high water. Awaking to the danger to her brother, who is on the endangered train, Katie and her lover race frantically to intercept it. There are some exciting moments before this is accomplished, but the train is finally brought to a standstill at the brink of the torrent.

The incident ends in Jack serving his short sentence and of his reform, and also in the marriage of Arthur and Katie.

Francis Bushman and Dorothy Phillips play the leading parts, while the others of the cast interpret their parts creditably. The photoplay is an attraction which should win the hearty applause of all who view it.

St. Louis Real Estate Exchange, according to report, will oppose the proposed new moving picture law prohibiting pictures or vaudeville in tents, sheds or pavilions constructed wholly or in part of canvas. Such a law is designed to kill off the airdomes, of which there are hundreds in St. Louis. The real estate men have decided that airdome rentals for empty lots are rather nice after all.

A PLEASING CHILD STORY.

"By Registered Mail" is the title of a child drama recently filmed by the Imp Company, which will no doubt prove a delectable little story with much appeal. It has all the elements of a heart interest drama and is unique in plot and splendidly staged. It depicts sorrow, parental love and the ingenuity of a precocious child. In brief it is the story of poor parents with a little girl whom they dearly love. They cannot give her the advantages they wish and when a wealthy aunt, who admires the child, offers to adopt her, they hesitate. It is a battle between love and plain duty, and they discuss the matter soberly and with misgivings. They finally decide to part with the child, and the leave-taking is pitiful in the extreme. Immediately she is gone they repent and are constantly reminded of their grief. The father is grief-stricken as he notices the happiness of his fellows when in the company of their children. The little girl tires of a life that is new to her. The aunt is all kindness, but it is not home to the child. The relative attempts to divert her mind from her grief, but all to no purpose. The child grieves until she decides to return home. How she finally reaches home through the kindness of the postoffice officials, to be carried into the presence of her parents by a kind man in a gray suit, is a pretty story, unique in conception and cleverly acted and staged.

Scene from "By Registered Mail" (Imp).

Our sympathies are all with the Brooklyn man whose wife did some of the things to her husband that she saw in the funny films. There must be something in the theory that moving pictures make bad impressions on weak minds.

WARNING TO PURCHASERS OF "RADIUM" SCREEN

As a result of communications received by the Sunlight Metallic Cloth Curtain Company, of Chicago, showing evidence of the operation of impostors, Mr. Wylie, manager of the company, has issued a warning to all exhibitors against any person or persons claiming to represent the "Sunlight" Company who are not provided with the proper credentials. He further advises that the company has no salesmen on the road at present, and that persons so representing themselves are impostors.

Mr. Wylie states that daily communications are being received from various parts of the West, stating that persons by the name of Warwick and Kane have been selling a curtain under the name of the "Radium Screen," and claiming it to be the same as the "Sunlight" curtain. They further claim that their offices are at 1100 Fisher Building, Chicago, the offices of the "Sunlight" Company, and have gone so far as to refer to the advertisement of the "Sunlight" curtain in the Moving Picture World.

The game is being worked so cleverly that several exhibitors have purchased the "Radium" screen on the installment basis, paying from $5 to $25 down.

For the welfare of exhibitors as well as for the company, Mr. Wylie requests that any information leading to the arrest and conviction of these persons be forwarded him, so that he may begin action at once and have the fakers prosecuted.

The description of the men now said to be operating this daring game, as given in letters received by Mr. Wylie, is as follows:

Warwick, who does the demonstrating and most of the talking, is about 45 years old, of sandy complexion and reddish brown, curly hair. He wears glasses and is about five feet eleven inches tall, weighing about 175 pounds.

Robert T. Kane is of slighter build, of light complexion and blue eyes. He has straight, thin black hair and is about 35 years old.

NEW SINGERS AGENCY FOR CHICAGO.

The Columbian Theatrical Exchange, a new booking agent specially for singers engaged in motion picture theaters, was opened last week in the Randolph Building, 145 North Clark Street, under the management of O. C. Philips. The aim of the new concern is to furnish singers, drummers, pianists and operators for picture theaters throughout the country. The officers are: P. S. Pappas, president; Geo. E. Moody, secretary and treasurer, and O. S. Philips, general manager.

Mr. Philips is widely known throughout the motion picture field, having owned and managed theaters in various parts of the country for the past eight years. The "Marvel," of Birmingham, Ala., one of the first motion picture theaters in the South, was one of his first ventures in the new field. Since then he has owned and managed "The Gem," of Meridian, Miss.; "The Gem," of Hattiesburg, Miss.; the Columbian, of Knoxville, Tenn., and "The Gem," of Memphis, Tenn. Mr. Moody, assistant manager of the company, is a musician of some note and has been a member of some of the leading bands and orchestras in the country.

SELIG'S DISCOVERY OF AMERICA.

What promises to be a great addition to the category of educational pictures is now under process of manufacture by the Selig Polyscope Company at Chicago. For some time past the combined energies of the various departments of the big Selig plant have been at work upon a production to be called the "Discovery of America." Mr. Selig is giving the work his personal and undivided attention and is bending every energy toward making it a most notable picture.

In this picture have been used the three caravels, replicas of the ships in which Columbus made his historic trip of discovery, which were presented to the United States Government at the time of the Columbian Exposition at Chicago and have since reposed in that city. These vessels have been refitted by the Selig Company at a considerable expense and taken out on Lake Michigan, manned by hundreds of motion picture actors, and the scenes incident to the discovery of America by Columbus reproduced as nearly as possible.

Mr. Selig has been at work upon this production for nearly three years and has had the co-operation of the various historical and educational societies, including the Knights of Columbus and other Catholic bodies in collecting and verifying the historical details. It is estimated that the cost of the completed picture will exceed $50,000.

THE DEVASTATION AT CHARLESTON.

I. M. P. Company Scores Beat On Competitors By Filming Event—Fine Picture Obtained.

With enterprise that is commendable the I. M. P. Company had a photographer on the spot to preserve in film the scenes of the recent hurricane and flood at Charleston during the closing days of August. The film is for release Monday, Sept. 18, and will be called "The Great Charleston Hurricane and Flood." Those who have read the newspaper accounts are familiar with the harrowing story. It is pronounced the most disastrous storm that ever invaded the east coast of the United States, and Charleston, S. C., was in the center of the storm.

When the first reports of the storm arrived the Imp management despatched a camera man and assistants to the scene of devastation, with instructions to spare no expense to photograph the event. How well the man with the camera succeeded is best told in the film secured. Working under a handicap that would have driven many men from the scene, the cameraman trained the lens on scenes while the rain poured in torrents and he was obliged to wade in water nearly to his waist. Nothing was missed and, notwithstanding the incessant rain, the negative secured is a splendid one, a triumph of photographer's skill.

Scene from Imp Charleston Picture.

Scene from Imp Charleston Picture.

The scenes depicted demonstrate that the half was not told by the writers for the public press about the real conditions in Charleston. The filmed evidence is scarcely believable. Water and wind combined to create suffering and loss of property. The damage to shipping is incalculable. The storm was not confined to the water front and the evidences of the destruction by the elements is apparent all over the doomed city. Waves are shown sweeping over the breakwater, while vehicles driven to save property, are hub deep in water on the streets. Houses are shown with the roofs caved in and every window blown out. Substantially constructed buildings were crushed like eggshells by the fury of the wind and toppled over, with the occupants fleeing for their lives. Huge trees were uprooted and fell crashing to the ground, large trunks remaining standing stripped of their limbs. Scenes in the railroad yards give one a very adequate idea of the severity of the wind. Heavily loaded freight cars were blown over, the cars split in twain and the contents strewn on the ground. A section of a train is shown in this plight. Tracks are torn up and deposited many feet from the original location, an occurrence that almost surpasses belief. On the water front wind and water worked in conjunction and the loss to shipping is apparent. Boats were tossed on shore and deposited on docks and on the beach many feet from the water's edge, masts by the board and the hulls stove in. The beach is shown strewn with wreckage and the docks demolished. The scenes of the rescue of the sailors from the wrecked vessels show the sufferings of those who navigate the deep. Many vessels were wrecked off Charleston and other disabled to such an extent that they barely made port by the aid of stancher boats which came to their rescue.

On the whole the scenes in Charleston are the most thrilling ever taken of the results of a storm and the pictures are the first ever taken of a calamity of like proportions by a camera for moving picture production . Words utterly fail to describe the scene of devastation or the loss to property and shipping.

DAVID COPPERFIELD IN THREE REELS.

An ambitious portrayal of Charles Dickens' popular story, "David Copperfield," has been undertaken by the Thanhouser Company. It will be a three-reel production, each reel giving a period in the life of "David," complete in itself, so that the series may be run as such if desired, or may be exhibited as separate stories. The reels will be entitled "The Early Life of David Copperfield," "Little Em'ly and David Copperfield" and "The Loves of David Copperfield." The first reel is scheduled for release on an early Tuesday in September, the others following on successive Tuesdays. Special literature and advertising matter will be provided.

TAKE YOUR OWN MOTION PICTURES.

Eberhard Schneider, manufacturer of the Mirror Vitae products, is making a proposition to managers of picture theaters that is quite likely to meet with some approval. Alive to the fact that there are many incidents and happenings of a purely local nature which never get into the pictures for the reason that it is impossible and impracticable for the regular manufacturers of pictures to take them, Mr. Schneider proposes that the theater managers equip themselves to do this work. He offers them an equipment suitable for this work at a reasonable price. See his announcement on another page or, better still, write to him for full particulars.

"SUNLIGHT" CURTAIN FOR LEGITIMATE HOUSES.

A. W. Wylie, president of the Sunlight Curtain Company, is planning an extensive selling campaign throughout the country. It is his intention to make of every legitimate theater a potential motion picture house, prepared for such special subjects as the "Inferno," or for exhibitors like Lyman H. Howe, by installing in each of them a "Sunlight" curtain. This curtain has the unique advantage of presenting a perfectly plane surface for the projection of the picture, and yet being light enough in weight to be flied like the ordinary drop. It was demonstrated at the Princess Theater in Chicago lately, with two reels of the Milano "Inferno," and commented upon very favorably. Mr. Wylie left for New York City on Friday, to make a special demonstration for Marcus Loew, and he expects, as a result of this demonstration, that the "Sunlight" curtain will be adopted as the standard for all the Marcus Loew houses.

FLYING "A" AS KENNEDY'S PEGASUS.

Mr. A. M. Kennedy, the general manager of the American Film Manufacturing Company, left Chicago, Saturday, September 2nd, for California. His trip is one of general supervision and inspection of the Western stock company of the American Film Manufacturing Company, now situated in La Mesa, El Cajon Valley, Southern California. The completion of a $10,000 studio and negative developing plant in La Mesa, by the American company, is another reason for Mr. Kennedy's trip, it being considered advisable that the plant be thoroughly inspected prior to actual pictures being taken therein. It is asserted that this plant and studio is one of the best equipped structures of its kind in the world. It is Mr. Kennedy's intention to visit the trade on the coast prior to his return.

SELIG BULLETIN.

Recently the Selig Company sent out a circular letter to some seventy-five hundred exhibitors throughout the country, requesting an expression of opinion as to their likes and dislikes regarding the semi-monthly manufacturers' bulletins, etc. The majority of answers received to this letter requested the single-sheet style of bulletin. So the Selig Company will hereafter issue theirs in this form.

Calendar of Independent Releases.

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 11, 1911.

AMERICAN—The Stage Robbers of San Juan (Dr.).. 1000
CHAMPION—Charley's Butte (Dramatic) .....
ECLAIR—How Poor Babies Are Reared in Paris (Educational) 630
ECLAIR—How Teddy Lost His Bet (Comedy)..... 235
IMP—By the House That Jack Built (Dramatic)..... 1000
YANKEE—Tangled Heartstrings (Dramatic) .....

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 12, 1911.

BISON—The Lost Letter (Dramatic) .....
POWERS—Gray Wolf's Grief (Dramatic)..... 950
THANHOUSER—The Buddhist Priestess (Dramatic)..

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 13, 1911.

AMBROSIO—Cain's Retribution (Dramatic).....
AMBROSIO—Tiny Tom Wins a Lottery Prize (Dr.)..
CHAMPION—The Red Devils (Dramatic)..... 950
NESTOR—At Perry's Ranch (Dramatic).....
RELIANCE—The Cobbler (Dramatic) .....
SOLAX—Her Uncle's Will (Comedy).....

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 14, 1911.

AMERICAN—The Mother of the Ranch (Dramatic).. 1000
IMP—The Brothers (Dramatic) 1000
REX—Faith (Dramatic) .....

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 15, 1911.

BISON—Lone Star's Return (Dramatic).....
LUX—Bill as a Bill Poster (Comedy)..... 573
LUX—Has Mania for Collecting Antiques (Comedy)... 357
SOLAX—The Altered Message (Military Drama).....
THANHOUSER—In the Chorus (Dramatic).....
YANKEE—Woman (Dramatic) .....

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 16, 1911.

ITALA—The Horse of the Regiment (Dramatic).....
ITALA—Foolshead—Removal .....
GREAT NORTHERN—The Conspirators (Dramatic)..
POWERS—The Horse Thief (Dramatic)..... 950
RELIANCE—Pals (Dramatic) .....
NESTOR—Mutt and Jeff and the Newsboys (Comedy).

TISDALE ENTERPRISES LOCATE IN CHICAGO.

The F. M. Tisdale enterprises, formerly of Columbus, O., have recently moved to Chicago, where they have taken offices in the Chemical Bldg.

F. M. Tisdale, manager of the concern, states that the company will promote its various enterprises from Chicago and will make a specialty of Daylight Curtains, the curtains to be given away free of charge, one in each town as an introduction, with an advertising drop curtain, the revenues of which will go to the Tisdale Company for the period of one year, after which time it will be turned over to the Company. The Tisdale Company will also manufacture slides and special advertising aids for use in lobby display.

COMPLIMENTS EXTENDED.

Brooklyn, August 6, 1911.

Editor of MOVING PICTURE WORLD.

Dear Sir:—Please accept my compliments in bringing to the front in your "Comments," the "atrocious example of commercialism" of a certain film concern. I happened to have read the ad referred to and the effect so moved me that I reread it with hopes of finding some redeeming points, for instance, that the receipts (or a portion) of the sale of the film would be donated to the widow of that faithful actor, or given to some charitable institution. But some people do not enjoy giving and, of course, stand in their own light and lose more in the end, of which this case is a notable example. Best wishes, L. GERMAIN.

EIGHT-SHEET FOR SELIG'S "TWO ORPHANS."

Among the line of posters prepared for Selig's three-reel production of "Two Orphans" will be an eight-sheet in four colors, which is said to be particularly striking. With this are two different three-sheet designs and a one-sheet design. This is probably the largest line of poster advertising ever designed for one subject.

SEMENT ON PAGE 770.

Calendar of Licensed Releases

CURRENT RELEASES.

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 11, 1911.

BIOGRAPH—The Village Hero (Comedy) 675
BIOGRAPH—The Lucky Horseshoe (Comedy) 321
KALEM—A Sheepman's Triumph (Dramatic) 1000
LUBIN—Divided Interests (Dramatic) 1000
PATHE—Eva Is Tired of Life (Comedy) 394
PATHE—Little Moritz and the Butterfly (Comedy) 295
PATHE—From Lourdes to Garvarnie (Scenic) 310
SELIG—Kit Carson's Wooing (Drama) 990
VITAGRAPH—Foraging (Dramatic) 1000

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 12, 1911.

EDISON—Off the Coast of Maine (Scenic) 265
EDISON—Under the Tropical Sun (Dramatic) 735
ESSANAY—Two Men and a Girl (Dramatic) 980
GAUMONT—How to Catch a Bachelor (Comedy) 836
GAUMONT—From Bordeaux to Pauillac, France (Sc.) 164
PATHE—Pathe's Weekly No. 37 (Topical) 1000
SELIG—Dad's Girl (Dramatic) 1000
VITAGRAPH—Her Crowning Glory (Comedy) 1000

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 13, 1911.

EDISON—The Escaped Lunatic (Comedy) 500
EDISON—For the Queen (Comedy) 500
ECLIPSE—The Hand of the Law (Dramatic) 665
ECLIPSE—Norwich and Vicinity (Scenic) 330
KALEM—The Express Envelope (Dramatic) 1000
LUBIN—His Girlie (Dramatic) 1000
PATHE—A Prisoner of the Mohicans (Dramatic) 1000
VITAGRAPH—The Child Crusoes (Dramatic) 1000

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 14, 1911.

BIOGRAPH—The Squaw's Love (Dramatic) 998
ESSANAY—The Puncher's Law (Western Drama) 980
LUBIN—Al Martin's Game (Dramatic) 1000
MELIES—A Shattered Dream (Dramatic) 1000
PATHE—College Sweetheart (Comedy) 720
PATHE—Art Industries in Kabylie (Ind.) 279
SELIG—The Wheels of Justice (Dramatic) 1000

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 15, 1911.

EDISON—The Lighthouse by the Sea (Dramatic) 1000
ESSANAY—The Burglarized Burglar (Comedy) 980
KALEM—The Alpine Lease (Dramatic) 1000
PATHE—Madame Tallien (Dramatic) 689
PATHE—Every-Day Life in Mallaca (Scenic) 310
SELIG—The Voyager (Dramatic) 670
SELIG—A Sightseeing Trip Through Boston (Scenic). 330
VITAGRAPH—Vitagraph Monthly (Scenic) 1000

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 16, 1911.

EDISON—The Sheriff (Dramatic) 1000
ESSANAY—The Millionaire and the Squatter (W. Dr.) 980
GAUMONT—The Cinematograph Fiend (Comedy) 575
GAUMONT—A Mountain Torrent in Austria (Scenic) .. 415
LUBIN—Cement Rock Blasting (Ind.) .....
PATHE—A Western Memory (Dramatic) 1000
VITAGRAPH—By Woman's Wit (Comedy) 1000
LUBIN—The Scheme That Failed (Comedy) 1000

ADVANCE RELEASES.

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 18th, 1911.

BIOGRAPH—Dan, the Dandy (Comedy) 998
KALEM—The Ranger's Stratagem (Dramatic) 1000
LUBIN—The Senorita's Conquest (Dramatic) 1000
PATHE—The Fright (Dramatic) 754
PATHE—Fire Brigade in Moscow (Scenic) 230
SELIG—Noted Men (Scenic) 180
SELIG—Lost in the Arctic (Dramatic) 880
VITAGRAPH—One Flag at Last (Military Drama) .. 1000

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 19th, 1911.

EDISON—The Sailor's Love Letter (Dramatic) 1000
ESSANAY—Saved from the Torrents (Dramatic) 980
GAUMONT—Jimmie on Guard (Dramatic) 710
GAUMONT—Crossing the Alps in a Motor (Scenic) .. 285
PATHE—Pathe's Weekly No. 38 (Topical) 1000
SELIG—McKee Runkin's "49" (Dramatic) 1000
VITAGRAPH—How Millie Became an Actress (Com.) 1000

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 20th, 1911.

EDISON—An Unknown Language (Comedy) 985
ECLIPSE—In Ancient Days (Dramatic) 1000
KALEM—Losing to Win (Dramatic) 1000
LUBIN—The Life Saver (Dramatic) 1000
PATHE—An Up-to-Date Squaw (Comedy) 754
PATHE—African Birds and Their Enemies (Edu.) 197
VITAGRAPH—Beyond the Law (Dramatic) 1000

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 21st, 1911.

BIOGRAPH—When Wifey Holds the Purse Strings (Comedy) 463
BIOGRAPH—A Convenient Burglar (Comedy) 534
ESSANAY—All on Account of the Porter (Comedy) ..
ESSANAY—Everybody's Troubles (Comedy) 980
LUBIN—The Human Torpedo (Comedy) 1000
MELIES—For $200.00 (Dramatic) 1000
PATHE—Starlight's Necklace (Dramatic) 951
SELIG—A Cup of Cold Water (Dramatic) 1000

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 22nd, 1911.

EDISON—The Battle of Trafalgar (Dramatic) 1000
ESSANAY—Live, Love and Believe (Mil. Dr.) 980
KALEM—The Cowboy's Bride (Dramatic) 1000
PATHE—Electric Boots (Comedy) 426
PATHE—Old Delhi and Its Ruins (Scenic) 285
PATHE—Surfing—National Sport in the Hawaiian Islands (Scenic) 285
SELIG—Title Not Reported .....
VITAGRAPH—Forgotten (Dramatic) 1000

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 23rd, 1911.

EDISON—The Big Dam (Western Dramatic) 1000
ESSANAY—An Indian's Sacrifice (W. Dr.) 980
GAUMONT—A Heart Breaker by Trade (Comedy) ... 710
GAUMONT—The Culture of Bulbous Flowers (Scenic) 290
LUBIN—Her Inspiration (Dramatic) 1000
PATHE—Gypsy Maids (Dramatic) 900
VITAGRAPH—Over the Chafing Dish (Comedy) .....
VITAGRAPH—The Tired, Absent Minded Man (Com.) 1000

FINE ENGAGEMENT FOR DONALDSON.

Arthur Donaldson, now playing in pictures with the Kalem stock company in Ireland, has signed a contract to appear for the coming year at the Oscar Theater, Stockholm, Sweden, the largest theater in that country and devoted to light opera and musical comedy. He will go there at once upon concluding his picture engagement in Ireland. Mrs. Donaldson left New York on August 31 to join her husband. She will engage in concert work in Stockholm during the period of her husband's engagement.

The "Child Welfare" Exhibit is still on the road, with moving pictures as the main drawing card.

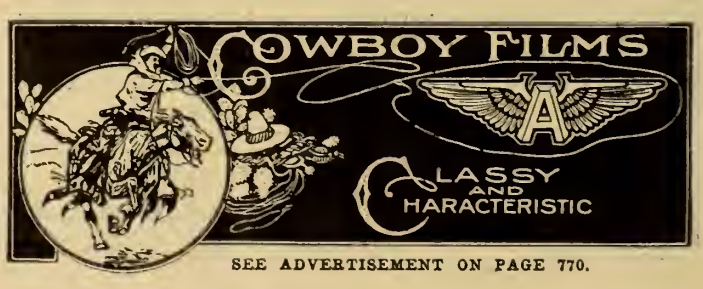
* * *

The Exhibitors' League of Pennsylvania is about to begin a publicity campaign to educate the people to the fact that a moving picture, or picture machine, cannot explode.

* * *

Let the Exhibitors' Leagues everywhere take up the movement and check the silly twaddle of cub reporters. Don't do it by trying to keep wrong news out. Get right news in ! ! !

Mr. J. H. Hallberg, "The Economizer Man," states that a great deal of interest is being evinced in the forthcoming 1912 Hallberg Motion Picture Catalogue and Reference Book. This will be ready for distribution October 1st, and no expense has been spared to make it complete in every detail. To managers and operators now engaged in the theater business, as well as to those intending to open theaters, this book is recommended as a complete guide for everything necessary for equipping an up-to-date theater.



SEE ADVERTISEMENT ON PAGE 770.

Projection Department

Edited by F. H. RICHARDSON

Fires. Asininity.—Recently the Oak Park Theater, Sacramento, burned, destroying much adjacent property. Fire originated in operating room. Manager claimed he did his own operating, but a 14-year-old "operator" was in charge when the fire started.

Facts have reached this department, thanks to President Woods, of the San Francisco union, and they are as follows: The Oak Park Theater, Sacramento, Cal., was the only one in Sacramento not employing a member of the Sacramento union as operator. With the employment or non-employment of union men as such we are not dealing, but bear in mind the fact that the Sacramento union is composed of grown men who are competent operators of experience and undoubted ability. The owner of the Oak Park house asserted before the Labor Council that he operated his own machine. It now appears, however, that the operating was left to a fourteen-year-old child—for a fourteen-year-old boy is but a child in judgment and experience—presumably to save the salary of a competent operator. How long will the authorities permit such things to be? To save a few dollars weekly this miscalled manager endangered the lives of his patrons, destroyed his own house and thousands of dollars' worth of adjacent property. This type of manager is a distinct menace and danger to the motion picture exhibition business as a whole. He is even worse than the newspaper idiot who rants about films "exploding," engendering in the minds of the public the idea that film fires are extremely dangerous, beginning invariably with a more or less terrific explosion, thus priming every man, woman and child in the thousands of audiences all over the country for a stampede the instant the slightest thing goes wrong. It is, of course, of no earthly use to again point out to the newspapers the fact that a block of wood explodes just exactly as readily as does a picture film. It is useless to tell them that a film never did and never will explode, for the simple reason that it isn't built that way. However, just to make it interesting, the Moving Picture World will pay any newspaper man a month's salary if he will explode a film for us, by fire or otherwise. We cheerfully give him leave to use a pile-driver, steam-hammer, fire, an arc light, or any old thing he wants to, merely stipulating that the explosion come from the film itself, and that it be an ordinary film such as is used for exhibition purposes. Now, Mr. Cheerful Idiot of the newspaper, get busy. If you can't, it is about time you stopped deliberately promoting panics by senseless, asinine assertions having not one iota of foundation in truth.

Automobile Power.—Mr. E. G. Kay, Payson, Ill., writes: "Some months ago I wrote you about the feasibility of equipping an automobile with a dynamo and using same for a traveling electric-lighted picture show. Your reply was not very encouraging, nor could I find anyone who thought it would be practical. However, I went ahead and worked out my own ideas and met with very flattering success. I installed a 2-K. W. dynamo under the front seat of the auto and extended a specially designed shaft out over the flywheel of the engine and belted from the fly wheel. When we want to show we throw the car in neutral, put belt on and start engine, run the wires from auto to hall and start the show. Get a fine, white, steady light and just as fine a picture as you can find anywhere. Have no governor on engine, but can start and run two hours or more and never vary ½ volt from the 60 or 70 volts that we wish to carry. In fact, it works just perfect. After equipping the auto, my family (wife, son and daughter) and I decided we would visit our old home in Illinois and pay expenses with the outfit. We left Snohomish, Wash., June 20, and arrived in Quincy, Ill., August 14, having traveled 3,137.6 miles, giving entertainments twenty-seven evenings. The lowest receipts any evening was $12.00 and the highest $39.95. The average was over $20 per show. The usual charge was 15 to 25 cents, showing four reels and thirty or thirty-five slides of Western scenery. We did not do any advertising ahead, but stopped about 3.30 or 4 o'clock in the afternoon of the evening that we wished to show and put out our bills. We then put banners on the car and went all over the town, attracting all the attention we could. We invariably met with success. In the particularly live towns we stayed two evenings and the second night always doubled the first night's receipts. The four of us were busy, my wife selling tickets, daughter playing the piano. The boy took care of the auto and dynamo, while I ran the picture machine and lectured on the slides, etc. We had a very enjoyable trip—no trouble with either auto or picture machine. In fact, our only troubles on the entire trip were three punctures, from the time we left home till we arrived here, and the pleasantest part of it was the fact that we more than paid all of our expenses while enroute.

After visiting here two or three weeks we will go back to the coast by another route, and expect that the entire trip will cover about 7,000 miles.

I am writing this, thinking it may interest you to some extent, for, if I remember rightly, you said that you thought of doing something of the kind yourself at one time.

Will be glad to answer any questions regarding the equipment."

Your letter is indeed of interest, Friend Kay, and we thank you for sending it in. I would not have believed you could have gotten satisfactory results from an automobile engine without a governor. We would like to know how many cylinders the engine has, and its H. P., if you know it; also exactly what kind of a generator you have and its approximate weight. No doubt your success will induce others to emulate your remarkable performance. I say remarkable, and so it is, for you have crossed the Rockies, traversed the semi-desert of Eastern Colorado, or the table lands of more northern states, and have "escaped" with nothing more serious than three punctures. Truly, this is something to boast of, regardless of the motion picture feature of the trip. I would like to have a photo, if convenient, of that car.

A Remedy.—Rockford, Ill., writes: "Notice many complaints as to losing lower loop on Edison machines. Have encountered the same trouble, but remedied same by using the new double-flange steel rollers and the longer lower idler bracket. Worn sprocket teeth will also operate to lose the lower loop on reverse splices. Remedied that difficulty by reversing the sprocket on one machine and buying a new one for the other. Bought a new Edison, Type B, with outside shutter, and it gave the same trouble until I noticed the lower sprocket idlers had the single steel flanges. On changing to the double flanges, losing the lower loop became but a memory, unless the splice is exceptionally bad."

Rockford speaks words of wisdom which it will be well for users of Edison machines to heed. We thank him for not hiding his light under a bushel, as too many operators seek to do. There are many who are quite willing to absorb any and all knowledge possible from the Department, but who make no attempt to aid others by sending in their own ideas. They seem to have the mistaken idea that anything they happen to know must be carefully guarded lest some brother operator or manager get hold of it and become as wise as they. Piffle! Such men are too narrow-minded to ever amount to much in the affairs of men. Broaden out, Brother. Do unto others as ye would that they do unto you. Only little two-by-four men adopt the mystery policy. Get away from the idea that dissemination of knowledge will injure you. Come forward with your ideas and join the procession for better projection. The operator is gradually breaking away from his apathy and self-satisfied mediocrity which enveloped him, as a class, until quite recently. He is just beginning to realize the importance and true dignity of his profession. He is becoming a self-respecting artist-mechanic instead of a self-satisfied, underpaid drudge. But the work is but just begun. We expect to see more and more operators come into the Department fold, and by setting forth their ideas, prove that they have shared in the general awakening. Losing the lower loop trouble is by no manner of means confined to the Edison machine. There are others.

Motor.—Pennsylvania (name of town suppressed) writes: "We are thinking of installing electric motor drive on our Edison machine. Will you be so kind as to tell me, through the Projection Department, about what size motor will be necessary for this work and about how much current it will use? If possible, I would like to have you give me an estimate of what such a motor would cost. Our current is 110 volt D. C. Can a motor be wound in such a way as to reduce the speed? I should imagine a slow-speed motor would be better for operating the machine. Where would you place the motor? If it is belted from the floor, how will you arrange it so that the picture can be framed up or down?"

A ⅛-H. P. motor will be ample in power. It will use current according to the pull and this will, of course, depend on how hard your machine runs. In any event, however, the current consumption won't amount to much in dollars and cents. In fact, it will be a negligible quantity in the weekly bills. If a slow speed motor were used, it would have to be considerably heavier. In fact, I don't think you could get so small a motor very low speed. You should have a regulating rheostat to govern speed in operating. The motor may be set on the floor or at any other convenient point unless you mean to belt directly to the flywheel of a machine which carries the flywheel on the framing carriage. In that event, the belt would have to reach the flywheel from a countershaft, and be horizontal. You do not say what make of machine you have, but most manufacturers furnish a motor drive attachment, which I would advise you to get. The Standard machine motor is carried on the table rods and belts directly to the flywheel. The Powers Six is provided with a motor attachment bolted to the mechanism base and meshing into the large idler gear on left side of machine. Cost of motor will depend on kind you buy. Correspond with the General Electric Company, Schenectady, N. Y., for information on cost. Tell them what you want the motor for. Personally, I would prefer the regular high-speed motor. Speed may be reduced by counter shafting or by reducing gears, but you must have a regulating rheostat.

Condensers.—Norfolk, Va., writes: "Will you please advise how to remedy condenser breakage? Am using a late model Edison lamp. The arc is too near the condensers and they break. Have used every make of condenser that I could buy. Will you please advise how I can arrange my lamp so that the arc will not be too close to the condenser? Does the size of the condenser have any effect in the throw from the head to the curtain?"

Norfolk, if I could "advise you how to stop condenser breakage," it would decidedly be something of a feat. I cannot, however, quite do that. I would advise you to read and study pages 65 to 71 inclusive, of the handbook, if you have one. The distance of your arc from the condenser is fixed by the focal length of the condenser taken as a whole. The shorter its focal length the closer must be the arc, and vice versa. Condenser breakage is influenced by many things. Kindly tell me what kind of a condenser mount you have, width of your picture and distance from screen to lens. I will then see what can be done for you. Meanwhile, if your lamphouse is closed all around, be sure the vents, particularly above, are clean, and that they allow free passage of the heated air. Never open your lamphouse door immediately after shutting off the arc, if it can be avoided. Don't allow your fan to blow directly on the lamphouse. If you have one of the old style, round condenser mounts, make very sure that the lenses fit in it loosely. If they fit snugly (diameter, I mean) they will most likely break every time. Send in the information requested, making reference to this article, and I may be able to advise you further. The focal length of the condenser lenses has a decided relation to the focal length of the projection lens.

Simplex Machine.—Philadelphia, Pa., writes: "Friend in New York City sent me a descriptive booklet of the Monopol Dante's Inferno. I notice the statement therein that the Simplex machine has been selected as the projector for that production and that "every copy of Dante's Inferno is projected by a Simplex." The quoted words are exactly as they appear in the booklet. Now what I wish to know is whether or not this is true. If it is, it means that we cannot run the production, since we have not that make of projector. It would seem to us that such an absurd restriction would operate to limit the showing of the films to very few houses."

You are correct in saying such a restriction would be absurd. I know of no such embargo on other machines, and if there is, the films will be shown in mighty few houses, since the machine in question is only on the market a month or two and under the most favorable conditions there could be but comparatively few of them in operation within a year at the least. As I understand it, the whole thing amounts to this: the Monopol people have themselves put out a number of Dante's Inferno shows and these companies carry Simplex machines. The Powers, Edison, Motiograph, Pathe, Standard or Edengraph machines are capable of doing full justice to Dante's Inferno, or any other production.

Blancearc.—Boston, Mass., writes: "Will you kindly supply me with name of manufacturer of Blancearc (motor-generator) described in article, page 539, August 26th issue?"

The machine is made by a company in Fort Wayne, Ind., presumably the Fort Wayne Electric Company. I wrote Atlantic City and they replied: "Name and place of business of Motor-Generator Company is Fort Wayne, Ind." You can doubtless make as much out of that as I can. I think, however, the Fort Wayne Electric Company is "it."

Fine House.—Mr. P. Kane, Crystal Theater, Victoria, B. C., writes: "In writing the Department this, my first, time, am not going to take up space saying how much I appreciate it. Will just say the one break in the clouds of the week is the arrival of The World and, needless to remark, the Projection Department is the first thing consulted. Am enclosing photo of operating room in Crystal Theater, with your humble servant there with the thoughtful look. Photo was taken by light of lamps and rectifier. Think this is about as complete, handy and up-to-date an operating-room as can be found in the Northwest. Am using an Edison Type B with a motor; slide, lamp and spot. Using 500 volt D. C. for emergencies—the emergencies crop up pretty often too. Room is large, about 12 x 8 x 7 feet high, and well ventilated. The only trouble is a short throw—45 feet—and a large picture—19-ft.—which takes a 2⅜ E-F lens. Am using from 34 to 42 amperes with variable resistance on 500 volts, and about 38 amperes through rectifier. The Crystal has a seating capacity of 600. It has six exits, is well lighted while pictures are on, and from an interior standpoint as well as exterior, is as good as the best. At present we are using 12 reels Independent, three changes. Yours for real projection.

Surely you have a nice house and an excellent room. Am sorry you did not describe resistance used on the five hundred volt current.

I note the back is out of your lamphouse. Glad to know the authorities up there have too much sense to compel you to keep back closed. I don't quite catch the idea of that lamphouse arrangement, however; having them side by side,

The following are some of the many prominent exhibitors using our

"SUNLIGHT"

METALLIC CLOTH SCREENS AND CURTAINS

JONES, LINICK & SCHAEFER COMPANY	CHICAGO
MARCUS LOEW	NEW YORK
SULLIVAN & CONSIDINE	BUTTE, MONTANA
M. SWITOW	LOUISVILLE, KY.
PENN SQUARE AMUSEMENT COMPANY	CLEVELAND, OHIO
ST. CHARLES AMUSEMENT COMPANY	ST. LOUIS, MO.

WARNING

Letters are daily reaching us showing that imposters are using our advertising and our copyright word "Sunlight" to promote the sale of worthless or inferior screens.

We have no travelling salesmen and our screens are never sold except with our "Standard" frames with their patented tightening device.

Any information that will assist us in protecting exhibitors against imposition will be appreciated.

"Sunlight" Metallic Cloth Curtain Co.

1100 FISHER BUILDING CHICAGO, ILLS.

No. E-405. List $10.50.
Ask discounts of your Electric dealer. If he does not carry, write us direct.
Engineering Reports Free.

"DAYLIGHT PICTURES"

WITH ANY CURTAIN OR MACHINE

AT SMALL COST WITH

The Eye Comfort System of Indirect Illumination

Since the first advertisement in this paper, a few months ago, theatres in all sections of the country have installed this system. All enthusiastic, and acknowledge that theatre lighting has been revolutionized.

Even illumination throughout your theatre can be obtained without a light in range of vision.

No glaring side lights to detract from the detail of your picture, and more perfect depth and perspective are assured.

Our engineering department will furnish you, free of expense, reports and recommendations on request.

BETTER LIGHT AT LESS EXPENSE

Investigate—Write today

NATIONAL X-RAY REFLECTOR CO., 235 Jackson Blvd., Chicago

Gentlemen:—Send full information regarding lighting of our theatre.

LENGTH ..... WIDTH ..... CEILING HEIGHT .....

NAME ..... ADDRESS .....

I mean. Apparently the one this way is just a single stereo. Seems to me I would raise up the one lamphouse, arrange for the other side to slide under it, rig up a dissolving shutter and have a dissolver. It wouldn't be much trouble to do it, unless you prefer the present arrangement.

From Arizona.—Arizona, name of town suppressed, writes: "Enclosed find $1.50 for handbook. Is it permissible to place a fan in vent leading out of operating room? In this case vent leads to open air. What is used in film cases to keep the film moist? I am using a Motiograph and project a 12-foot picture 93 feet. Use two 8-inch condensers. My trouble is that when I set the lamp to get rid of brown corners I get a blue spot in center of picture. By changing position of lamp in relation to condensers (moving it ahead or back) I can get rid of spot or brown corners, but one or the other remains. In closing will say that I have enjoyed the World and the Projection Department."

I have visited your little city and regard it as the best place in all the desert. You can probably get rid of your trouble by moving the entire lamphouse further back. There is no possible objection to placing a fan in vent-flue, provided it blows outward and is not of a type which can be reversed. I prefer a vent large enough that a fan is not required, however. Water is used—just plain water. If you happen to run across a post card picture of the Castle Grande, send me one, please.

Mystery Solved.—At last the deep, dark, dreadful mystery of the umbrella has been solved. Washington, D. C., sends another sketch and says, "Sorry the tent came in for so much notoriety. Explanation lies in accompanying sketch. Might add that amount of salary does not necessarily account for possession of a rain deflector. It is merely a matter of dexterity, restaurants, etc., affording ample opportunity for acquisition. No, I don't use it in operating except to obstruct view from door when my fair companion is grinding them out while I am getting the latest dope on the baseball situation for the day. The young lady at my left is the only girl in the Capital City who can operate and is able to assemble an Edison machine.

You have shown a charming outline of the young lady and put your shoulder square in the way, thus hiding the lady's blushes, stingy!

Send us the young lady operator's photo, please; you have aroused our curiosity.

"Explosion?"—Southampton, L. I., writes: "Kindly advise as to what part of M. P. machine exploded (see clipping enclosed) and why it blew up. If gas was used, do the editors, or others connected with the paper from which clipping is taken, mean the snapping out of the gas in the burner, due to poor mixture, was the 'explosion' which alarmed the audience? I was on the road in the old days with a Lubin machine having a hard rubber spool which jerked the film down into position, performing the duty of the present-day star and cam. There were no exchanges then and we had to buy films outright. One hundred to two hundred feet was a long subject. We used gas tanks in those days. We sprung an arc lamp on a local light plant in a little town on the north side of Long Island one night, I remember, and the plant shut down to see what was wrong with its machines. I guess, Brother Richardson, you remember some of those things yourself. I like The World very much, especially its Projection Department."

There was no explosion. The editors and those connected with the New York World, from which clipping was taken, neither know, or seem to in the least care, whether or not the old, shopworn, mouldy chestnut about films "exploding" has any foundation in truth or not. Sensation is what they want. Truth is entirely a secondary consideration. Gas was not being used. Yes, experiences of the early days of the business are interesting—as memories. They were the subject of prayerful interest then also, and some of the "prayers" contained words not found in printed books.

Shutter Trouble.—North Yakima, Wash., writes: "Have no very serious trouble this time, but can find no remedy for what I have. Have no travel ghost, but cannot get all the flicker out. Powers No. 6 machine. Have tried setting the shutter clear out on shaft, but it does no good. Flicker is worse on light films. Am using a Ft. Wayne compensarc, 60 cycle current. Am going to send for the handbook. Long life to The World."

If you have a three-wing shutter there should be no flicker at all at normal speed. If you have the two-wing shutter you will have some flicker except at high speed. All two-wing shutters produce some flicker. They only cut the light at the rate of 32 times per second at normal speed and this is not sufficient to deceive the eye into "seeing" continuous light, particularly when illumination of screen is quite bright. If you have a three-winger probably you are troubled with the shutter getting into synchronism with one side of the alternations. The remedy is a two-wing shutter, which I believe the Powers Company will supply on application. With 60 cycle current there are 120 alternations per second. The shutter makes sixteen revolutions per second at normal speed. This means that it cuts the light 48 times per second. Now if you increase speed until it cuts the light 60 times per second you will see that it is cutting at equal speed with one "side" (I use the term "side" from want of a better) of the alternations. At the instant of reversal of direction (alternation) the current is at zero voltage and the light is greatly diminished. If the shutter blade cuts the light so as to leave the lens open at the exact time of reversal the light will be dimmed. But it is not possible that the shutter will remain for any length of time in exact synchronism with the alternations so that the practical effect is a waving or flashing of the illumination on the screen. I have explained all this before, but perhaps not so fully. If I have still not made the matter clear will try again. I would advise you by all means to get the Handbook. Not because I am its author, but for the reason that it is a thing every operator and manager ought to have. We have hundreds of enthusiastic letters of recommendation from purchasers. We do not have any exaggerated idea of its value, but we do honestly believe it to be worth much more than its price to any operator or manager from the fact that it contains a mass of condensed, thoroughly practical information on projection, and all that pertains thereto, not to be had elsewhere. Out of almost 5,000 copies sold not one single purchaser has expressed dissatisfaction or voiced anything but kind words for the book, and that is a record that I, as its author, and the Moving Picture World as its sponsor, are both proud of.

Shadows.—Kalamazoo, Mich., writes: "We are having lots of trouble with films coming to us covered with oil. This is attributed by some to a certain make of machine, which they claim spatters oil on the film when run at a trifle more than moderate speed. Do you know whether or not this is true? I have a problem to place before the Projection Department, as follows: I have a new Standard No. 4 machine, three-wing, outside shutter. When the machine is in operation should not the square of light on the shutter be clear-cut, without shadows? Mine is not and we have set the carbons in every conceivable position, but still the center of that square of light is bright, then comes a shadow and

BIOGRAPH FILMS

Trade Mark

Trade Mark

RELEASED SEPTEMBER 11th, 1911

THE VILLAGE HERO

There is a call for volunteers for the village militia, while the young folks are assembled on the village green. Eugene, the village masher, is first to respond, much to the admiration of all the village belles, including Max's sweetheart, who would like to see Max imbued with the same spirit. The hero gag is not very much in Max's line, and it is only through his sweetheart's tears that he consents to become a soldier. He is tried out as a bugler, with laughable results, and when the battle starts he "beats it" and hides. The next morning, tired and hungry, he enters a house which has just previously been attacked by a gang of revolutionists, who, seeing him enter, and thinking a regiment behind him, flee in terror. The people of the house look upon him as their deliverer and he is made a hero in spite of himself. Decorated and promoted, he returns to the village, just in time to call down Eugene, who proved himself an awful coward, as he is bragging to the girl about his deeds of valor.

Approximate Length 675 feet.

THE LUCKY HORSESHOE

An irascible landlord while on his way collecting rents, picks up a horseshoe which changes his nature completely, particularly as he almost immediately finds a ring which appears to be a $3,000 diamond. He becomes excessively generous with his cash, expecting to make it up by the sale of the ring which he learns later is worth just exactly ten cents.

Approximate Length 321 feet.

RELEASED SEPTEMBER 14th, 1911

THE SQUAW'S LOVE

AN INDIAN POEM OF LOVE IN PICTURES

White Eagle is betrothed to Silver Fawn before leaving for a hunting trip. Gray Fox, his friend, loves Wild Flower, the chief's daughter, but when he asks her father's sanction, he is exiled for his presumption, the chief ordering him to be taken off to the wilds and deprived of his firearms. Starvation would have been his fate, had not White Eagle happened along. To aid his friend, White Eagle promises to bring Wild Flower to him, and when Silver Fawn sees White Eagle stealthily leave the camp with Wild Flower, she imagines her lover false. She follows, and creeping up behind, hurls Wild Flower over into the stream, from which perilous plight she is rescued by Gray Fox, who is escaping in a canoe from a gang of drunken Indians who have seized him. The chief, however, has ordered death to the fugitives, and after the meeting of the four and an explanation given, they make good their escape only after Wild Flower has swum under the canoes of their pursuers and ripped them with a knife, causing them to sink.

Approximate Length 998 feet.

RELEASES FOR NEXT WEEK

September 18th, 1911

Dan, The Dandy

A Father's Disappointment in His Son

COMEDY. Approximate Length 998 feet.

September 21st, 1911

When Wifey Holds the Purse-Strings

COMEDY

Approximate Length 463 feet.

A Convenient Burglar

COMEDY

Approximate Length 534 feet.

BIOGRAPH COMPANY,

11 East 14th Street, New York City

Licensees of the MOTION PICTURE PATENTS CO.

GEORGE KLEINE, Selling Agent for Chicago, 166 State Street, Chicago, Ill.

then again clear edges. My operator has worked with a Powers, Motiograph or Edison machine, but has had no experience with a Standard. I have been wondering if through your valuable department we could not find some way to eliminate the trouble. The same shadow also appears on the screen, in a modified form."

No, the square on the shutter will not usually appear evenly illuminated all over. Often there will be a pretty good photograph of the crater in the center of the square, or rather the rectangle of light. In order that I be able to form a decisive opinion as to what is the trouble, and offer intelligent advice in matters of this kind it is absolutely essential that I know the throw and width of picture. I can then tell you the proper condenser lenses to use. As it is I can only guess at the difficulty. I think you are troubled with a ghost in center of screen due to either condensing lenses of wrong focal length or lamphouse being too close to or too far away from mechanism. Try moving lamphouse back as far as you can and, if that doesn't clear up the screen, move it ahead. Be sure your lenses are clean, that the projection lenses are tight in their mounts and that the lens system is in line throughout (see page 119, July 22 issue). If the solution is not found in these suggestions kindly send more detailed information as to throw, size picture, etc. As to the oil: there has been some complaint regarding the machine named, but the fault lies in the fact that operators use too much oil. As has been pointed out time and again in this department, one drop of oil is ample for any motion picture machine bearing. More than that not only does no good, but is a positive detriment in that it runs off and makes a mess. The trouble with the machine named is excessive oil in intermittent and flywheel shaft bearings. The surplus runs down on the apron, and gets on the film to some extent. Speed has little to do with it. The matter is now being taken care of by the manufacturers, I understand, and some method will be devised to prevent the surplus oil reaching the apron.

Pertinent Poetry.—The editor just discovered, among his papers a poem given him by the Essanay Company's producer a couple of years ago. He would recommend it to the careful perusal of quite a number of operators he has met in the past. Particularly is the last line to be taken to heart. Cut it out, my brother, and paste it in your hat.

LOQUACITY.

The men who talk much and exceedingly well,
  Are numerous, courteous, affable, too.
One finds that they've always a story to tell—
  It may be one finds that they never get through.
They air every subject that's under the sun,
  To the wonder of whose who cannot get away—
Keep telling of deeds they've triumphantly done;
  But what are such wordy men good for to-day?

Grandiloquent talkers are everywhere found;
  They come in all models and classes and kinds.
The deeds they have done are of sorts that astound;
  Their stories oft fascinate innocent minds.
Still, talk's not expensive, as doubtless you've heard;
  It's easy to give to the fancy full play.
Oh, far, far away these adventures occurred—
  But what are such wordy men good for to-day?

The man who comes forward with something to say
  And stops when it's said to give others a turn,
Who has some fair samples of goods to display,
  May not have a carload of language to burn;
Perhaps he is silent on hazardous deeds
  Enacted on far seas, in tropical woods,
But still he supplies our immediate needs,
  For he is the man who is there with the goods.

Same Old Story.—On page 534, Aug. 26 issue, appears a lengthy description of the beautiful new Princess Theater, Denver, Colo. The house, says the article, cost more than $125,000. The charming interior, beautiful lobby, ventilation, walls and even the seats are praised. The one trifling detail omitted from the elaborate description is the operating room, from whence comes the entire show and upon which depends the return from every dollar invested. The singer and each member of the orchestra is declared to be an artist, but the operator, on whose work the whole thing depends, is not even so much as mentioned. Presumably he is a crank-twister. I say presumably for the reason that while all others are named as artists he is, as I said, not even mentioned. Why not have an artist in the operating room too? Surely a $125,000 investment dependent on what comes through the lenses would justify an artist there also. Maybe the operator of the Princess is an artist. I don't know; but if so why not also give him credit along with the rest? Anyhow in so elaborate a description of the house the fact that there really is an operating room might have been at least alluded to.

Two Prizes.—Loosen your machine head so it can be lifted off and out of the way. Before moving it, however, strike an arc and adjust same so that field on screen is clear. Now remove projection lens, lift head out of the way and hold lens in position it occupied when in machine (you can measure from wall before removing head). Now move lens toward the arc slowly, until it is right up close to condenser. Note carefully what takes place on screen, as you move lens toward condenser. Now place it in position again and move away from arc, noting what takes place on screen.

For the best description of phenomenon observed and best explanation of its cause, one year's subscription to The World will be given. If the winner be a subscriber, his subscription will be extended one year. For the second best, one copy of the handbook, or six months' subscription will be awarded. The two best replies will be published. This is confined strictly to those actually operating machines.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

(With apologies to our own Trouble Department.)

Perplexed Exhibitor: "What shall I do with a pianoplayer who played something like 'Carrie' and 'Marry' while Edward III was doing his best to shuffle off his mortal coil?"

Take him, dear P. E., the aforesaid pianoplayer to the nearest vacant lot with a fence around it, carefully examine the fence and then tie the pianoplayer to it and leave him there without further comment.

Sorely Puzzled: "You complain of your exchange because it refuses to give you what you want. When lately you asked for good educational and scenic reels they gave you large allopathic doses of fromage de brie comedy."

Sorely Puzzled, you surely are wholly unfamiliar with the principles on which exchanges are run. Wire immediately to your exchange that you must have strong Western stuff or go out of business, and be certain the next express will bring you a choice assortment of educational subjects.

Abraham Finkelstein, Chrystie St.—You inform us that you have accumulated $250 in the perambulatory trade and want it to go into "moving pictures." You have read an "ad." in a Sunday sporting paper: "First-class moving picture theater in city of 40,000, no competition, for sale at $250. No experience necessary. Reason for selling: Owner tired of counting small change."

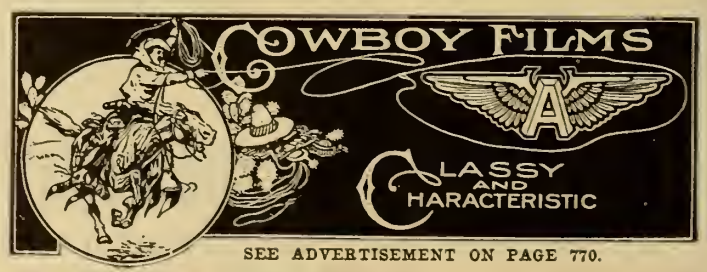
Really, Abraham, we ought to charge you for this advice. Keep your 250 oboli or use it to extend your distributing agency for suspenders, shoestrings, etc. Stop reading that kind of advertisements.

Thalia Temple, Podunk Corners.—You write:"My singer, a man, has just got married and wants a raise. Shall I give it to him?"

Emphatically—No. Presumably your singer was handsome, if not actually cursed with the fatal gift of beauty. By marrying he has alienated the affection and lost the nickels of the susceptible maidens, who heard him sing and maybe had hopes. Besides, a married man is in no position to ask for a raise. His wife will not let him leave his job. This may seem cruel, but business is business.

Disgruntled Exhibitor says: "I showed a film the other day which the manufacturers in their circulars said was the best ever made, but the people here say it's rotten. What shall I do?"

Sorry, but this is beyond us. We cannot assume that the manufacturer was mistaken; the modesty of manufacturers regarding their own products is too well known for that. You might get full affidavits from your patrons and we will print them for you, if that will do any good.



SEE ADVERTISEMENT ON PAGE 770.

FOUR-A-WEEK ESSANAY

PHOTOPLAYS OF MERIT

Release of Tuesday, Sept. 12th

TWO MEN AND A GIRL

(Length, approx. 980 feet.)

A high class sensational drama. A home-like rural picture which develops a sensational climax, bound to thrill every audience. Photographically, it seldom finds an equal.

Release of Thursday, Sept. 14th

THE PUNCHER'S LAW

(Length, approx. 980 feet.)

Against the background of a great Western cattle round-up, showing thousands of famous Texan steers, this delightful drama will please all who view it. The story is vital, the acting fine and the photography of the unusual high standard.

Release of Friday, Sept. 15th

THE BURGLARIZED BURGLAR

(Length, approx. 980 feet.)

Here is as funny a comedy as you will see in many a day. There is a decidedly novel twist in the plot of the fortune-hunter and the heiress and a finish you would never guess. It will prove productive of many good heart laughs.

Release of Thursday, Sept. 16th

THE MILLIONAIRE AND THE SQUATTER

(Length, approx. 980 feet.)

A Western drama with a fine vein of heart interest, cleverely worked out. The picture is rich with magnificent Western scenery and is intensely dramatic. Ask your exchange for an early booking.

The Essanay Posters Are "Something Different"—the best you can obtain. Don't fail to get one with every picture

GET ON OUR MAILING LIST

Essanay Film Mfg. Company

521 First National Bank Building, CHICAGO, ILL.

5 Wardour Street, London, W.

Three and Five Reel Pictures
Have Proved to Be Moneymakers

I can book you the Finest 3-Reel Drama

IN THE HANDS OF IMPOSTERS

3050 Feet Great Northern

CLEAN IN STORY
BEAUTIFULLY STAGED
SPLENDID ACTION

Bookings by the Day, Week or Month.
Terms Reasonable.

G. H. WALKER
P. O. BOX 226
Madison Square New York

Dante's Inferno

Milano Five Reels

Greatest money making film ever produced.
Write or wire offers for exhibition rights for states of

CONNECTICUT
and
NEW JERSEY

D. J. Cotter, 1458 SECOND AVE. NEW YORK

EDISON FILMS

TRADE MARK

THOMAS A. EDISON, Inc.
72 Lakeside Ave., Orange, N.J.

SCTNE FROM "THE SAILOR'S LOVE LETTER"

Tuesday, September 19th

"The Sailor's Love Letter"

CAST.

Jack .....Herbert Prior
Nora .....Mabel Trunnelle
Mary .....Laura Sawyer

How two lassies loved the same sailor lad and how the jealousy of one caused her to commit a wrongful act. A picturesque story of the sea.

SCENE FROM "AN UNKNOWN LANGUAGE"

Wednesday, September 20th

"An Unknown Language"

CAST.

The Young Man .....Edward Boulden
The Girl .....Elsie McLeod
Two Learned Professors, Their Fathers .....William West, Harry Linson

A little practical joke brought two learned professors almost to blows and separated two fond lovers. A comedy of action.

Saturday, September 23rd

"The Big Dam"

CAST.

George D. Bedford, a Young Contractor .....Herbert Prior
His Wife .....Mabel Trunnelle
John Dillon, his rival in love and business .....James Gordon
Department Head .....Charles Sutton

A story of a big construction work in Colorado taken on the spot. It tells how villainy almost prevented the contractor from finishing on time, when his wife saved the day.

SCENE FROM "THE BATTLE OF TRAFALGAR"

Friday, September 22nd

"The Battle of Trafalgar"

A big feature Film

CAST.

Lord Nelson .....Sydney Booth
Lieutenant Prescott .....Herbert Prior
Captain Hardy .....James Gordon
The Ship's Surgeon .....Charles Ogle
Lieutenant Prescott's Affianced.Laura Sawyer

The death of Lord Nelson on board his ship, "The Victory," forms the climax of this powerful historical drama. It is a superb production from every standpoint.

SCENE FROM "THE BIG DAM"

THE ONE BEST BET

IN THE RACE FOR FILM SUPERIORITY

PATHÉ'S WEEKLY

A COMPENDIUM OF THE WORLD'S EVENTS SO SET FORTH THAT, ONCE SEEN, THE SPECTATOR DEMANDS EACH ISSUE WEEK BY WEEK.

MAKES PERMANENT FRIENDS FOR YOUR HOUSE.

ISSUED EVERY TUESDAY

INQUIRIES

Correspondents are advised that no attention will be paid inquiries which do not give the name and address of the writers. For the purpose of reply, initials or nouns de plume may be used.

Inquiry as to the private affairs of photoplayers will not be answered. This includes the question as to whether or not they are married.

No inquiries of a general nature will hereafter be answered by mail and only in special cases when a stamped self-addressed envelope is enclosed. Many correspondents ask the same question and we have initiated this department to save our own time and yet help out our readers when we can.

Alice:—Miss Marion Leonard is still abroad. We have no advice as to her future intentions.

B. E. P.:—We cannot supply personal addresses. Since the name of the player is known, why not address him in care of the office of his company.

"Author":—The addresses of the film companies are published every week in the advertising pages.

W. M. B.:—There is no set salary for photoplayers. The pay runs from $3 a day for extra people to as many hundred per week for the stars. We would not advise you to come to New York in the hope of connecting with a company.

Reader:—There is no reason why a picture cannot be more than one thousand feet in length except that reels and machines are made to carry that length. It is easier to handle three 1,000-foot reels than one 3,000-foot reel. A reel is about ten and a half inches in diameter. In some states photoplays may not run more than twenty minutes, but this is not the entire reason for the 1,000-foot film.

H. J. C.:—The report is a fiction. It is more or less current the year round, but Miss Turner is still in the employ of the Vitagraph Company and is a most robust luvalid although she has been ill.

Edgar:—We cannot tell you when the Inferno films will be seen in your town, but it is probable that they will be seen there before the end of the season.

H. H. Y.:—You are not alone in your bewilderment. The two Vitagraph actors who look so much alike are Maurice Costello and Leo Delaney. They are not related in any way.

T. R. J.:—The Melies Company is located in Ventura County, California. Miss Storey is now with the Vitagraph.

J. P. E.:—The Edison "Battle of Bunker Hill" was fought on Lake Champlain, where a place was found that very closely approximates the topography of Bunker Hill. It would be a physical impossibility to remove the monument from the actual Bunker Hill and the small park is now entirely surrounded by modern houses.

Memory:—Gaston Melies is not the producer of "A Trip to the Moon." That was George Melies, a brother.

Lina:—F. X. Bushman and Dorothy Phillips played the leads in "Her Dad the Constable." Mr. Bushman is a comparatively recent addition to the Essanay staff.

S. L. P.:—Miss Tayne was the second girl in Lubin's "Higginses vs. Judsons." We have no information that Miss Lawrence is leaving the Lubin Company. Such reports generally are based on the small talk of photoplay theatres.

Admirer:—There are several players who have appeared with more than one company. When you see them in two makes of film it does not indicate that they divide their services, but that you are seeing old pictures of one firm and late ones of another. Miss Fuller, for example, has worked with Vitagraph and later, Edison, while Miss Storey went to Vitagraph from Melies, and for a time was seen in new releases from both companies.

Violet:—The I. M. P. studio is located in New York City. We cannot tell you "how they compare with other companies." This is purely a matter of opinion. Your other questions are barred. Marriage is purely a personal matter.

W. O. Y.:—We believe that both of the subjects you suggest would make good film subjects, but do not advise that you write them, as arrangements of standard literature are more easily made by someone who knows the capacity and limitation of the company's studio.

U. S. M.:—Lawrence Trimble is owner and trainer of the Vitagraph's Jean.

Fan:—Most companies supply photographs of their players at prices ranging from 20 to 50 cents, according to style. We do not believe that you can purchase scenes from the photoplays though many of these would be well worth framing. Perhaps in time this will be possible. Write the companies direct for information, and name the players whose portraits you desire.

Y. R. U.:—We cannot tell you how trick pictures are made in a department such as this. We have printed several articles on this subject, but each trick picture presents its own angles.

D. C. S.:—The leading woman with the Essanay Western Company is Miss Gladys Field. We do not know whether she is Mrs. Anderson or not. It is Gilbert M., not George Anderson, by the way.

Sitting Bull:—Frank Lanning, of the Kalem players is not an Indian or a fractional part of one. He's a paleface who knows how to make up.

Adra:—George Melford played the title role in "Big Hearted Jim" (Kalem). The same company's "The Badge of Courage," was the work of the California company. William Shea is the Vitagraph's Intrepid Davy.

L. N. B.:—The Kinemacolor screens are red and blue. The film is not tinted to help out the effect, but is pure black and white. We do not know where samples of the film are to be obtained. You might write the company.

T. M. B.:—Miss Alice Joyce was not connected with the stock company you name. She was an artist's model. Miss Gauntier is still in Ireland. The plays produced by the Irish section of the Kalem Company are now coming through. See their advertising. Carlyle Blackwell and George Melford are the players you mean. See answer to Sitting Bull.

Y. B. C.—Henry Walthall is not now with the Pathe Freres but with the Reliance. Address him in care of the company.

T. P. O.—It will require several weeks to obtain an answer to your inquiry.

V. Y. W.:—Call the bet a draw. The title was used by both companies.

A. P. R.:—Albert McGovern has played in stock with your company. He was also with Robert Edesou in Strongheart.

Interested:—Miss Turner has no sister who occasionally plays her parts for her. Mr. Costello's supposed double is Leo Delauey. Charles Kent has played with many of the leading stars. He has made brief appearances in vaudeville but not for several years. He will be more surprised than you were to learn that John Bunny is his brother.

O. M. F.:—We do not know whether Nat Wills played in other productions than "The King of Kazam." Write the Powers Company.

G. E.:—The player of the Indian girl in "The Spirit of the Gorge" (Edison), is not an aboriginal. It is merely a clever make-up.

The best is the cheapest in the end

Don't economize at the wrong end. Don't save a few dollars by using a poor lens and lose big profits because your audience doesn't come back. Flickering, spotty, eye-irritating pictures are certainly going to drive them away. ECONOMIZE by paying a little more for a

Bausch and Lomb Projection Lens

Our name, backed by over half a century of experience, is on all our products.—lenses, microscopes, field glasses, projection apparatus, engineering and other scientific instruments.

It gives you clean-cut, clear, bright, pleasing pictures—pictures that will hold your crowds and keep increasing them. You will be surprised at the improvement the Bausch & Lomb Lens will make in showing your films.

Write for special Projection Lens Booklet OO.

Bausch & Lomb Optical Co.

NEW YORK WASHINGTON CHICAGO SAN FRANCISCO LONDON ROCHESTER, N.Y. FRANKFORT

Largest Paper! Best Value! Largest Circulation!

WRITE FOR OUR NEW ADVERTISING RATES TO-DAY

MOVING PICTURE WORLD, 125 E. 23rd St., N. Y. City

"Non Pareil" Condensers

Pure White—Clear as a Crystal.

$2.00 Pair. Postage 40c. extra.

S. B. Leland, Montpelier, Vt.

ALWAYS THE LATEST IN SONG SLIDES

By using our slides you are sure of Prompt, Efficient and Courteous Service.

Install our service immediately and see the results.

GET THE LEAD on your competitors by getting your week's supply in one shipment.

Particulars upon request.

UNITED SLIDE ADVERTISING CO.

61 West 14th Street New York City

SEE ADVERTISEMENT ON PAGE 770.

The Leading Motion Picture Producer of the World

SELIG SELIG SELIG SELIG

FOLLOW THE FLAG

Released Sept. 15th

"THE VOYAGER"

A Tale of Old Canada

Length about 670 Feet. Code Word ANKITTELN.

On the same reel with

"A Sight Seeing Trip Through Boston"

The first of a series of sight seeing trips to the principal cities of the world.

Length about 330 Feet. Code word "ANT."

"Lost in the Arctic"

Released Sept. 18th

A thrilling tale of the Far North. Pictured by the Natives themselves in far off Labrador.

Length about 820 Feet

Code word "ANTISSA"

On same reel "Noted Men"

Showing intimate views of James S. Sherman, Joseph W. Bailey; Champ Clark, and Joseph G. Cannon.

Length about 180 Feet

Code word "MEN"

COMING COMING

COMING

To be released

Sept. 25th, 26th, 28th

"THE TWO ORPHANS"

Selig's Immortal Masterpiece in Three Reels

The story that never grows old. A Noteworthy advance step in the onward and upward march of Selig's achievements for picture play betterment. Beyond all doubt the most elaborate and expensive picture play ever produced. Produced under personal direction of Miss Kate Claxton from her own version. Special De Lux one sheet poster. Beautiful eight sheet poster. Two styles of three sheet posters.

BOOK THIS MASTERPIECE AT ONCE

Code word, first part, "AQUEJANDO." Second part, "ARC." Third part, "ARN." Combined length about 3200 Feet.

—ON THE WAY—

"Lost in the Jungle"

TRADE MARK

RELEASED SEPT. 19th

RELEASED SEPT. 19th

McKee Rankin's "49"

A Relic of By Gone Days. A Drama written and played by McKee Rankin for many years. Produced under his personal direction in the exact locations of the famous story.

Length about 1,000 Feet. Code word "ANTOJEIS."

"A Cup of Cold Water" RELEASED SEPT. 31st

A picturesque love story of Old California.

Length about 1,000 Feet. Code word "APPEACH."

FOLLOW THE FLAG

Selig Polyscope Co. TRADE S MARK Chicago U.S.A.

EUROPEAN OFFICES

LONDON — BERLIN — ST PETERSBURG.

THE CHARLESTON EVENING POST

SEVENTEENTH YEAR — CHARLESTON, S. C., MONDAY, AUGUST 28, 1911. — PRICE FIVE CENTS

CHARLESTON SWEPT BY STORM

HEAVY DAMAGE WROUGHT HERE BY HURRICANE

Seashore Residents Undergo Some Terrible Experiences But No Lives are Lost

THE UPPER END SUFFERS WORSE THAN THE LOWT

Many Have to Trudge Through th. Water in Going to Places of Greater Safety [illegible] no lives were lost on Sullivan [illegible] during the hurricane and deluge of [illegible] night caused more and more [illegible] as fuller reports of the storm [illegible] the sea islands [illegible] are brought in. [illegible] W. C. hundreds of people [illegible] men, women and children [illegible] to leave their wrecked and [illegible] and venture out into the [illegible] hour [illegible] plunging through water [illegible] deep in many places, seeking refuge [illegible] the more substantial houses that [illegible] lost their footing and were drowned in the racing flood that covered the island [illegible] incredible.

When day broke over the island Monday morning a scene of destruction [illegible] was disclosed such as those who viewed it never wish to see again. [illegible] of men who had looked after the safety of their own families were [illegible] as soon as there was light enough [illegible] to go among the ruined houses and [illegible] fear that persons might have been [illegible] under their overturned [illegible] and killed [illegible] in need. And when the [illegible] search showed that everyone [illegible] either reached a refuge in [illegible] or weathered the storm in their own [illegible] that relief was felt.

As soon as it was really daylight a pitiful procession of homeless families started through the water to the point where the refugees were made as comfortable as may be under the circumstances by the officers and hospital corps. Some of the sad men carrying children and large bundles of household belongings followed by weary and exhausted women struggled along the roads through inches of water and sloughs with the still violent wind.

SEVEREST ON THE UPPER END.

Most of the people who were obliged to leave their houses suffer during the night

THE THIRD WORST HURRICANE HERE

Damage Estimated at $1,000,000, Wind Reaching Velocity of Ninety-four Miles

Charleston experienced probably the [illegible] storm in her history in the [illegible] which took [illegible] yesterday

OTHER SEVERE STORMS HERE

Weather Bureau Records on the the Most Severe Hurricanes at Charleston

HEAVY LOSSES HAVE BEEN CAUSED BY DISTURBANCES

to the piling up of the water in the harbor.

April 13, 1901, a maximum velocity of fifty miles from the southeast occurred. No damage resulted from wind or tide although the latter exceeded the normal high tide by 2½ feet, the southeast wind being especially favorable for it.

March 29, 1903, a wind velocity of fifty-five miles, from the northeast, occurred, causing damage of a minor character. High tide was 1.8 feet above normal. May 9 of the same year a wind velocity of fifty-three miles per hour occurred, blowing from the northeast. This storm was productive of a tide 2.9 feet in excess of the normal high tide, but no damage resulted from the wind or tide.

July 2, 1904, a forty-eight mile gale blew from the south. September 14, 1904 a fifty-mile gale from the north occurred.

December 8, 1905, a forty-eight mile wind from the northeast. September 17, a [illegible]

HAVOC IS PLAYED ON WATER FRONT

Much Damage Has Been Wrought by the Hurricane—Boats are Badly Hurt

The storm played great havoc on the water front, especially the lower part. The storm was marked by a high tide

2 WOMEN DROWN MAN BEING SAVED

Ernest Hodge Spends Night on Roof Top and Will Survive the Experience

After a perilous night clinging to a roof top, Ernest Hodge, a middle aged man, was rescued this morning at day-

TWO ARE KILLED AND THREE HURT

Tragedy at Ticket Office at Mount Pleasant During the Hurricane

After lying all night at the Mt. Pleasant dock, the ferry boat Lawrence made her way across the harbor this afternoon at 1:30 o'clock, bringing about 400 people from Mt. Pleasant. Most of the passengers spent the night on board the Lawrence. Reports from this little city across the bay indicate that the hurricane was not as severe there as in Charleston. The trestle adjoining the wharf was blown down and about 11 last evening when the elements raged at their worst the ticket office blew over, instantly killing Mr. Smith, of Columbia, and Motorman Cutter, of Charleston, severely injuring Mr. L. D. Wentworthy, of St. Stephens, and Mr. E. T. Hill. The injured were rushed to the hospital upon the arrival of the Lawrence.

Passengers aboard the Lawrence were unanimous in their praise of young Alfred Von Kolnitz, who, with a hawser around his waist carried a line out to the boat. The details of the heroic act were conflicting, but everyone gave Mr. Von Kolnitz the title of "hero."

An account of the tragedy at the Mount Pleasant wharf comes from an eye witness, Mr. William L. Perry, of Columbia, a friend of Mr. Smith. The two gentlemen, accompanied by Mrs. Smith and her niece, Miss Annie McDougal, arrived in Charleston yesterday morning at 9:30 and proceeded to the Isle of Palms. After enjoying the surf, the party heeded the warnings of the Consolidated officials and took the cars for Mount Pleasant. On arriving at the Mount Pleasant wharf at about 7:30, where it was found that the heavy sea and gale would not permit the trip and a large crowd of passengers left the steamer and took the waiting cars for the most promising place of safety, the car barn on Mount Pleasant. One train returned to the wharf to take the passengers back to the barn, but before it had proceeded any distance the current was off and the passengers walked to the shelter in safety.

About one hundred persons on the Lawrence heard the bridge to the wharf from the mainland give way with a crash and then it was realized that the boat was the only shelter that could be had in the raging tempest. Accompanied by his wife, her niece, Miss McDougal, Mr. Perry, Mr. Clear, and another Columbia gentleman whose name is not known, Mr. Smith succeeded in making the mainland before the bridge went down. After reaching safety it was discovered that one of the ladies had lost her pocket book and then left the ladies on the land and start-

THE "IMP" WAS THERE!

The Camera Man Right on the Spot During the Terrible

HURRICANE AND FLOOD AT CHARLESTON

Secured Wonderful Moving Pictures of the Frightful Event. Will be thrown on the Market as a Regular Release Sept. 18th. Make arrangements with your Exchange for Earliest Possible Booking. Get it even if you have to pay a Premium! Handle it like a Feature, for that's what it is!

ABOUT 600 FEET AND EVERY FOOT A BIG SCOOP FOR YOU INDEPENDENT EXHIBITORS!!

Another triumph added to the Imp's long list! Another world-scoop for the most hustling, enterprising and ambitious moving picture concern on the map! The "Imp" was the only moving picture company in the world which had one of its camera men right on the spot in the midst of the most terrific hurricane and flood that has occurred in years. True, we must admit it was through pure luck that he was there, but he made the most of his opportunity, risked his life and

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD

MADE HIS PICTURES RIGHT WHILE THE STORM WAS AT ITS VERY WORST!

He snapped exciting street scenes, thrilling harbor scenes, all sorts of wild pandemonium raging about him as he ground away on the crank of his camera. Pictures taken AFTER the storm can't be compared with what the "Imp" man got right in the very heart of it! Instead of making this a special release or selling state rights, we are going to make you a present of it as a regular release! Your part, Mr. Exhibitor, begins this minute and consists of this:

WIRE YOUR EXCHANGE AT ONCE FOR EARLIEST DATE!

RELEASED SEPTEMBER 18th

LENGTH 600 FEET FEATURE IT!

COPYRIGHT 1911 BY THE I. M. P. COMPANY

INDEPENDENT MOVING PICTURES CO. IMP OF AMERICA

OTHER IMP RELEASES

"By Registered Mail." One of the most perfect bits of work we ever produced. A gem of a story produced and staged and acted in a masterly manner. Ready Thursday, Sept. 21st. Copyright 1911 by I. M. P. Co. Also "The Bicycle Bug's Dream," a comedy trick film that is a scream. Sequel to our great roller skating fool film. On the same reel with the "Charleston Hurricane and Flood" picture, Monday, Sept. 18th. Copyright 1911 by I. M. P. Co.

Independent Moving Pictures Co. of America
102 W. 101st St., New York, Carl Laemmle, Pres.

effect of the damage was done. Many houses there were completely overturned the porches of big resi mans more were torn off as if by a house wrecking crew and scarcely a home was not damaged, either by the wind or water.

All the smaller buildings, servants' quarters and fences were uprooted in the yards, and in some cases carried a couple of stations down the island by the sweeping tide. Roofs of wrecked houses, telegraph poles, fences, detached piazzas and all manner of wreckage was scattered all over the island and in the roads.

On Monday morning the beach was swept as clean as a floor. No vestige of the sand dunes remained and the surface was level from the edge of the salt water to the first row of houses. The telephone and light poles on the beach were all snapped off even with the sand and had been carried up to the houses.

HOUSES BLOWN FROM BEACH

The front row of houses at station 23, which are built nearer to the water than any others on the island, had fortunately been abandoned when the water first began to rise on Sunday night and several of them were swept clear of their foundations and blown against the houses behind them. Nearly all of the front row from that point to the end of the island were left by their owners who sought refuge in the cottages farther from the water, and the more substantial houses were filled with people who had made their way to them from their own threatened dwellings.

In one of these havens which was turned over to the sheltering of refugees, over twenty people were gathered, and spent the night in momentary expectation of the tide rising high enough to carry away the house. Many such parties were gathered at different places, and none of the people who spent the night in such conditions will ever forget the experience.

It was in getting the people from endangered houses to the stronger and farther removed ones that the greatest danger was encountered, and many of those engaged in the work proved themselves worthy of the name of hero.

While many deeds of daring and brave endurance were accomplished during the wild night, one case in particular has come to light. At station 25, the water came up with a rush, rising in a few minutes from the beach to a depth of from two to four feet under the houses in the front row. It was then that many of the people decided to leave their homes and go to the cottages farther from the beating surf. But to make one's way against a gale which was breaking off telegraph poles was obviously impossible to say nothing of the knee-deep water swirling down the paths like a mountain torrent. For the men of any family to help the women to a safe place through the wind and water and drifting wreckage would have been a terrific task, and without the help of two young men of Charleston, Mr. A. O. Halsey and Mr. M. S. Hertz, the death record of Atlanticville might not have been clear, as it so providentially is, and many of the residents of that portion of the island would have spent a much more dangerous and trying night.

RESCUE WOMEN AND CHILDREN

Mr. Halsey and Mr. Hertz first got their own families safely to the cottage of Mr. A. Barton Miller, a substantial bungalow rather higher than the majority, and then started to help other distressed cottagers to this refuge. The wind was blowing harder each minute, and it was an exhausting and perilous task to venture out into the storm at all. But these two men, both of them blessed with extraordinarily strong physique, made trip after trip to the neighboring cottages, and returned with drenched and exhausted women and children, in some cases having carried the women for a hundred yards against the full force of the hurricane. On one trip they had been blown off of the road and into the deep ditch, and it was only with the greatest difficulty that they had been able to get back to the house. Yet after a short rest they were out again bringing in more people from three card houses and carrying treasure to neighboring cottages.

Storm increased in fury and the island was completely inundated in many places. The houses rocked like cradles, some left their foundations; people had to stand on tables and with the furniture dashing all about the inside of the houses and logs battering the outside, the smashing up of the houses seemed to be imminent and the stress of mind and body can not be described. Splendid work of rescuing individuals and families was done by the soldiers, the rescued people being taken to safe places over its splendid plant to its afternoon neighbor.

The management of The Evening Post is grateful for this assistance and sincerely appreciates the succor given in a time of distress.

The newly constructed Peoples office building also suffered in the storm. The big steel and stone building probably did not sway and shake as most buildings did last night, but it was damaged to the extent of having a good deal of the bronze cornice work wrenched off.

The metal was carried in several instances for a considerable distance showing how the breezes flew at that elevation above the street.

their activity toward saving life and property from dangers due to the hurricane. The officers have roped off a number of places which are hazardous and which should not be approached. By so doing the department is doing a meritorious work.

Several of the policemen during the storm performed brave deeds in assisting those who were in distress. The officers did not balk at the danger to themselves, but acted promptly and effectively.

mile shorts before the bridge gave way. Seeing their danger the party started for the land, but it was impossible to make it, and only Mr. Perry reached the Lawrence. The others taking refuge in the office of the ticket office. About five minutes after Mr. Perry reached the Lawrence, he was joined by Mr. Clear and the other Columbian, and was told that the ticket office had blown down and Mr. Smith had been killed instantly, and also one of the motormen of the Consolidated company. Mr. Cutter. It was impossible to reach the wharf until early this morning.

Mr. Perry left yesterday afternoon for Mount Pleasant, where he will take charge of Mr. Smith's remains after the coroner's inquest has been held. Mr. Smith was thirty-five years of age, and lived in Columbia for about two years and a half. He had only been married about two years. The deceased has no children surviving him.

STORM AT NAVY YARD.

Baltimore Broke Loose From Her Moorings—125 Miles Per Hour.

Although the hurricane seemed to develop force in the suburbs, the Charleston Navy Yard suffered no serious damages, as far as could be learned.

The training ship Baltimore got loose from her moorings during the storm, but, fortunately, the officers and men were looking out for just such an emergency, and before she had broken away from the piers twice she was again lashed with steel hawsers and made fast. The strong pier never moved and the big ship remained afterwards fast. If the Baltimore had not so promptly been tied again she would have broken up and a great damage would have been done to the wharf.

It is said that the wind reached a force of one hundred and twenty-five miles an hour at the Navy. It was harder than anything of the kind that the officers and men generally had encountered, and they do not want to see another.

CONSOLIDATED SUFFERS.

Company Intends to Restore Service as Soon as Possible.

Mr. P. H. Gadsden, president of the Consolidated Company, stated this morning that the property of the railway and lighting departments suffered great damage in the city. It is thought that the Seashore Division loss will greatly augment the damage. Lines in several section were blown down, poles uprooted and generally the entire system demoralized, battered up. Wrecking crews were sent out at once to clear up the debris. Mr. Gadsden said the trolley circuit of the company would be in the best shape as to car service when it was completed, until a thorough examination of the new bridge and trestle were made. No definite time was given for the resumption of the electric cars, but it will be made later.

FIRST TRIP ACROSS BAY

Gasoline Launch Eagle Bird Brings Tidings From Mount Pleasant.

The steamer of the gasoline launch Eagle Bird belonging to Mr. Patten braved the rough sea of the bar early today and successfully made the trip from Charleston to Mount Pleasant.

The steamer of the Eagle Bird is one of the first boats to the city and her ...ones crossed the bay in good ...ditions. Later in the day the Eagle Bird with its brave crew started for the Isle of Palms.

CORRESPONDENCE

CLEVELAND.

Of the many new theatera recently opened in thia city, the Doane, at St. Clair and East 105th Streets, ls the largest. With a commodious balcouy, It seats over 1,200 people. On its openiug night, August 19, the capacity was taxed to the limit and then some. It ls owned in part by H. E. Edel, manager of the Alhambra, and ls capably managed by his brother, Mr. F. Edel. Licensed service is used, shows as picked for the Alhambra and Globe being offered. It is lu an unusually favorable location, and its success ls assured.

The Cameraphone Theater, at 736 Euclid Avenue, opened to the public, to the public's gratification, on Saturday, Aug. 26. Although it has been remodeled from a vacant atore lnto a modern and tastefully decorated photoplay houae in record time, no details in appointment have been overlooked. It seats about 300 persons and is the first Cleveland theater to adopt the indlrect lighting system. The room is brightly illuminated, but with no harm to the picture. The system of ventilation is aiso worthy of especial commendation.

For the past three months several thousand employees of the cloak factories of this city have have been on strike. On August 23, Max Marcua, manager of the Globe Theater, gave a benefit performance for the strikers and their families. The Globe is iu a locality where a considerable number of the strikers and their friends live, and the attendance at the benefit was far above normal. The Essanay strike photo-play, "The Fight For Justice," which replaced "The Temptress" was furnished for the evening's performance and was very generously applauded at each show.

The Feature and Educational Film Company has been incorporated with a capital of $10,000, and E. Mandelbaum, the prominent film renter and exhibitor of this city, is the president aud general manager. Nearly a thousand reels of feature and instructive film is already on hand, and that number is being regularly added to—the most prominent recent purchases being the Great Northern "Temptations of a Great City" and "The Crusaders." The new company purposes to supply high class features to exhibitors as applementary to the regular program. Catalognes of subjects available are now on the press, and will be supplied to all who request copies.

Dnring the recent races at Randall, what is thought to be the only motion picture record of a horse breaking a world'a record, was secured by C. C. Spinks, a local motion photographer. Uhlan, owned by C. K. G. Billings, was the horse which hung up a new record before the camera.

The Bronx Theater has been offering some feature reels, owned by the manager of the house, F. L. Smith, recently. Ambrosio's "MacBeth" and "Burning of Rome," Essanay's "Sensational Logging," and "The Duippe Auto Races" are some of the extra reels shown. Mr. Smith will probably go on the road with these and other subjects during the fall and winter, booking independently and lecturing each reel.

Humphrey's Elysium will be first in Cleveland to exhibit "The Crusaders." It will be shown there all the week of September 4, with exceptional musical setting, and a private exhibition for the benefit of the press and clergy is announced for Saturday, Sept. 2. Doubtless the two thousand seats in the Elysium will all be in use again this week.

The new theater to seat over a thousand persons, which S. Bolasky is building on East 55th Street, near Central, is nearing completion and will open about October 1. Mr. Bolasky has advertised a prize of $20 for the best name submitted, and out of the scores of names received will select the one by which the theater will be known. He has under preparation plans for another theater, to be built at East 105th and Superior Streets, which will seat 1,800—the largest photoplay theater in Cleveland.

R. G. DRUMMOND.

SAN FRANCISCO.

Perhaps the destruction by fire of a nickelodeon in Sacramento, Cal., Aug. 3rd, will be a lesson to managers who employ under-aged operators. The theater, by name, "Mikle," located in Oak Park. The fire started in the operating room, which was in charge of Lawrence Herb, a fourteen-year boy. The blaze caused a panic, and a score of people were injured in making their escape. Not only the theater was burned, but the adjoining hotel, a saloon, an ice-cream parlor, besides damaging a furniture store considerably. The loss will reach $35,000. And then exhibitors wonder why they make stringent fire rules and laws.

The California and Miles Bros. film exchangea (Independent) are profiting quite a bit by the popularity of the Mutt and Jeff pictures. They are charging the exhibitors $5 extra for each reel, which reminds me of how one little theater slipped one over on another small theater across the street. The latter has had first run of the Mutt and Jeff films ever since their advent here. They are released on Saturday. Last Friday, the manager of the first-run house, as usual, advertised with posters and handbills, the latest Mutt and Jeff reel, for the next night. He did a few acrobatic stunts, both vocally and physically, when he saw in front of the other house (also on Friday), an array of Mutt and Jeff posters, past, present and future, that made a circus nd look mild and puny in comparison. The announcement read: "Mutt and Jeff tonight." The unsuspecting public didn't dream that the picture waa a month old, and that night they not only crowded but overflowed the theater many times.

The "Electric," a small nickelodeon on Fillmore Street, has been closed, and marks another step in the passing of what was formerly known as "Nickelodeon Row." Out of a dozen or more houses, only two are left and it is but a matter of a short time when they will go the way of their predecessors.

There's nothing like jollying the audiences. The Bell (5-cent house), has adopted the old scheme to lure patrons. The manager snaps pictures of people around the neighborhood, then advertises that each day one of the snaps will be thrown on the screen, and if the original is in the audience at the time, he or she will receive a cash reward, 50 cents for the girls and boys and $1 for the grown-ups. It has worked like a charm in drawing the crowds,

Probably the most unusual nickelodeon in the city is donw in Chinatown. The entrance is purely Oriental, the cashier and door-keeper are both Chinamen and the majority of the patrons are Chinese. It is owned by Benny Michaels, who also owns the Silver Palace, on Market Street.

It is rumored that Miles Bros.' film exchange has formed a moving picture company and will take pictures in this vicinity. When I asked Jim Saroni, manager of the exchange, and also famous as being able to talk faster and smarter than anyone on record, about moving picture laws, pro and con, about the rumor, he looked as innocent as a babe (you ought to see him—he looks like the naughty vilyun in the melodrama), and swore by all the Independent gods that he never had and never would have anything so thrilling as a moving picture company. Nevertheless, he's been out of town for nearly a week, and what he is doing is something of a mystery. He can keep a secret surely.

The Market Street Theater is an example of what fine pictures can be projected at a great distance, when in the hands of an expert operator. W. G. Woods, in charge of the operating room at the Market, also president of the Operator's Union, throws his pictures 120 feet, probably the longest throw in San Francisco. The pictures are remarkably distinct, free from ghosts and brown corners, and the light is perfect. A Powers No. 6 machine is used.

ONA OTTO.

SEATTLE, WASH.

The "Black Cat" Theater of this city has secured through its energetic manager, Mr. H. J. Brown, another big "scoop," the "Morris-Shreck" fight pictures. The pictures will be shown one week, at an advanced admission fee of 10 cents. The pictures are very good, showing the training quarters of both fighters and the knockout declaring Morris the winner.

The Pastime Theater of this city, owned by Mr. Frank Stebbings, has closed for the want of business and heavy expenses. The Pastime was opened about six weeks ago and is one of the prettiest photoplay theaters in the State, and will no doubt be opened again this week under new management.

Mr. Sam B. Cohen arrived in Seattle, August 19, after a tour throughout the State with the Wolgast-Moran fight pictures. Mr. Cohen will leave shortly for Spokane, Wash., to take the management of the Spokane Theater for Mr. Gene Levy, of the Levy Amusement Company. The Spokane Theater will open September 15, 1911, with vaudeville and motion pictures.

The "World's" representative received a letter from Mr. H. C. Rawlings from Bellingham, Wash., who is making a tour throughout the State with his celebrated pictures of the Japan-Russia War and is doing very good. Mr. Rawlings also reports that the Rex Theater, which opened about August 1, 1911, at Mount Vernon, is playing to packed houses every night and Mr. Dunham is satisfied that the people realize that they have a good show, service being secured from the Seattle brauch of the General Film Company.

The Star Theater at Anacortes, Wash., has closed. It will be remodeled throughout and will install opera chairs and will no douht be open in a month.

The Dream Theater, of Anacortes, Wash., have changed their film service from the Pacific Film Exchauge to the Western Film Company, of Seattle, Wash.

Mr. Oren F. Woody, road representative of the Seattle branch of the General Film Company, has left for Spokane, Wash., and will be gone about two weeks.

The fight in Tacoma, Wash., has finally come to a settlement between the Licensed and Independent exhibitors and exchanges. The agreement is two reels to the show and three changes per week, and the General Film Company to have jurisdiction on Pacific Avenue, which includes the Palace, Lyric, Coast, Shell and Scenic theaters.

Mr. A. S. Kane, general manager of the Seattle office of the General Film Company, has purchased a 48-horse-power, 8-passenger Winton touring car; also Mr. Mel Simmons, assistant manager, will soon take his vacation, and will make a visit to Lake Eskimo, situated fifty miles in the wildnernesa of the big pine woods of the Grays Harbor conntry. Mel is determined to shoot a bear and says he will bring the hide of a brain back or bust.

Mr. W. W. Ladd (the border king and slide maker) will on August 28, 1911, open his new and commodious offices at 307 Majestic Building, over the Empress Theater, and will hereafter be known as Ladd & Co.

Mr. J. S. Woody, of this city, has organized a company of prominent business men and will be known as the Rainier Valley Feature Film Company. The object of the company will be to handle State rights for all feature films.

The Grand Opera House secured the first showing of Vitagraph's Monthly Bulletin, and it proved a success, showing the different events of the month and the collison between two locomotives, which was great. The Graud played to good houaes all week.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Q. Clemmer, of the Dream Theater of this city, has returned from his honeymoon trip, after a very pleasant trip through California.

Mr. Sol. Baum, of the People'a Amusement Company, of Seattle and Portland, arrived in Seattle August 15, 1911, to look after the interests of the Odeon Theater, which he has closed. The Odeon Theater, one of the oldest theaters in the city, dating back about four years, and one of the best locations in the city, for the want of a lease was forced to close. Mr. Baum stated: If any length of lease could have been procured, the house would have been remodeled and opened for business.

The huge government dry dock at Bremerton, Wash., the Puget Sound Navy Yard, was used August 19, 1911, as a theater in which the crew of the cruiser "Colorado" entertained their friends with moving pictures of the Nelson-Moran fight. Fully 2,000 enlisted men of the navy yard and their friends enjoyed the entertainment. The picture machine, which is the property of the Colorado's crew, was placed on a platform at one side of the dock, and the spectators arranged themselves on the altars on the west side of the amphitheater. The cruiser's band furnished appropriate music for the occasion.

L. L. GOLDSMITH.

IN THE MISSIISSIPPI VALLEY.

Noah Stivers, of Farmer City, Ill., bas purchased the Gem Theater at Clinton, Ill., from George Myers.

Miss Sarah McDowell, of Mason City, Ill., is the new piano player and singer at the Varsity Theater, Havana, Ill., which has just opened for the winter season.

Charles Gardner, a Cairo, Ill., negro, has leased the old skating rink at 328-330 Twenty-ninth Street, Cairo, and opened a moving picture and vaudeville house for negroes. It has a capacity of 600 persons. This is the second attempt, it is said, to establish an amusement place exclusively for negroes in Cairo. The first, by St. Louis negroes, was a failure.

Mrs. William J. Mullen and Mrs. Horace Mulvey, of Aurora, Ill., are said to be making plans to open a moving picture theater at 21 South River Street in that city. Remodeling the building will call for an expenditure of $3,000; a new front is to be installed if the deal is made and the lighting scheme will be featured.

A. C. Woodyatt, of the Lyric, Moline, Ill., has installed an electric orchestrion.

Poor children were admitted free by Manager Guiteau, of the Majestic, Freeport, Ill., when he showed the Biograph's "The Ruling Passion."

The Curts Theater, Savannah, Ill., is advertising "Special One Music."

The manager of the Olympia, Arcola, Ill., announces that vaudeville will be a regular feature at his theater.

The Illinois State Highway Commission is planning to have moving pictures taken of the premier hard roads in the State.

Joseph Westwood, of Livingston, Ill., is constructing a moving picture theater at Taylor Springs, Ill. The place will be conducted as an airdome for several weeks, the sides being constructed of wood and galvanized iron. Later a roof and floor will be added. Shows will be given Thursday, Saturday and Sunday nights, it is announced.

Gallagher Brothers, of Litchfield, Ill., began work on remodelling the Picto, announcing that in its new dress it would be known as the Royal.

Manager Hopper, of the Lyric, Freeport, Ill., recently was the host to a bunch of "fresh air kids" who were made happy by a good program of well-selected pictures.

The Quincy, Ill., Herald in a column-long editorial commending the moving picture as it is shown in Quincy, treats of a phase commonly ignored by writers—the passing of the flicker. This speaks well for Quincy shows.

Charles Vance, owner of Dreamland, Streator, Ill., offered a diamond ring for the best name for his new theater at 322 East Main Street.

F. H. M.

(Continued on page 812)

Q stands for Quality
Powers means Quality

Q

Powers on a Picture means Q; that's your cue

Look for a corking split reel Tues., Sept. 19
The first half of it is a Daffydil entitled

LOST IN A HOTEL

Being the story of a stage-struck damsel who finally got an engagement with a road show and did the best she knew how.

If she had known enough to have stayed in her room the picture might never have been made; but she did not, and there you are.

On the second half is the real sensation

An Oldtime Nightmare

Did you exhibit "The Babes in the Woods?" Here is another treat like it for the children. Produced by Mr. Fred Walton

What will please the children will please the old folks—put that down as a safe rule. This is a picture that will please all. A delightful story of Birdland and Boyland. The producer of this picture has a remarkable insight into the heart of a child, and in this picture a standard is set that will not be easily attained by other film makers.

Make a noise like an Indian, Sat., Sept. 23

RED STAR'S HONOR

The story of a gentle friendship between two rough men of the frontier; one a white man, the other an Indian. A better and stronger tale of friendship than Damon and Pythias.

A picture that shows the wrong of lynching, and teaching that it is better to judge not, that we be not judged ourselves. A man's story. One of war rather than love.

Not forgetting on Tuesday, September 12

GRAY WOLF'S GRIEF

To be followed Saturday, Sept. 16, with

THE HORSE THIEF

POWERS PICTURE PLAYS

145 W. 45th Street New York

NESTOR

"The Worth-While Film"

BIG BUSINESS GETTERS!

"We get every Nestor release and wish there were more of them, as NESTORS certainly are BIG BUSINESS GETTERS".

Harry D. Mapes,
Fairyland Theatre,
Waterloo, Iowa.

ONE of the biggest business getters ever produced will be

Released Wednesday

Scene from "At Perry's Ranch"

CLEAR AS A BELL!

"My patrons and myself appreciate Nestor Pictures very much. They are at the head of the very very best and are as CLEAR AS A BELL".

W. H. Wilt,
Starlight Theatre
125th and St. Clair Ave.,
Cleveland, Ohio.

ONE of the clearest and best ever produced will be

Released Wednesday

September 13th, 1911

"AT PERRY'S RANCH"

1000 feet of delightful film telling a beautiful story—a story having for its basis mother's infinite love and her great influence for good—it "touches the right spot" and pleases beyond measure.

GET IT and at the same time BOOK

COMING! A Big Thriller "Across the Divide" RELEASED WEDNESDAY SEPT. 20th, 1911

EVERY SATURDAY
MUTT & JEFF
EVERY SATURDAY

CLAUDE ANIOL, an exhibitor from San Antonio, Texas, tersely says:

"There is no film that can beat the NESTOR MUTT AND JEFF FILMS".

EVERY SATURDAY
MUTT & JEFF
EVERY SATURDAY

The Release of Saturday, September 16th, 1911, Beats Them All

"MUTT and JEFF and the NEWSBOYS"

A Concoction of Delightfully Funny Nonsense! The Laugh Germ on the Warpath!

Be Sure

to get this most ludicrous of foto-farces and see for yourself the steady and marked improvement shown in the MUTT AND JEFF PICTURES.

Take A Look

at the synopsis and gather a faint idea of the immensity and diversity of fun contained in the release of Saturday, Sept. 16th, 1911,

MUTT and JEFF
AND THE NEWSBOYS

2
Worth - While Films
Each and Every Week

Be Firm

with your exchangeman. Tell him, you've got to have (see that you get it) the Release of Saturday, Sept. 23rd, 1911,

MUTT and JEFF
AND THE DOG CATCHERS

The Best Monkeyshines
Ever Filmed

2
Worth - While Films
Each and Every Week

NESTOR

David Horsley,

147 Fourth Avenue
NEW YORK

MOTION PICTURE DISTRIBUTING AND SALES COMPANY

Sole Distributors

NESTOR

NEW ENGLAND.

Parson's Theater, Hartford, Conn., is undergoing considerable changes; and both decoratora and painters are busily employed in the auidtorium of this house. Labor Day will mark the opening of this house.

E. F. Keith's Theater, Portland, Me., which is at present playing stock company attractions, will turn toward "pop" vaudevllle and pictures, beginning on Labor Day. Manager J. W. Moore stated that he had made up his mind to experiment once more on this sort of entertainment. "Pop" vaudevllle and pictures were tried by this theater some time ago, but without any success. Under the new policy two shows are to be given daily. The prices will be: Matinee, 5 cents and 10 cents; evenings, 10 cents and 20 cents.

The New Theater, to be devoted to "pop" vaudeville and pictures, at Haverhill, Mass., is nearly completed, and it is expected that Oct. 1 will surely see its opening. This house is a beautiful structure, on the ground floor, with every modern improvement embodied in its construction. The house has been named the Merrimac Street Theater, and is owned by M. Mayer, a well known local theatrical operator. Mr. Mayer is also the owner of two other Haverhill theaters. His Orpheum Theater has opened for its season of "pop" vaudeville and pictures, while his Academy plays "legitimate" attractions.

The Congress Hall Theater, Portland, Me., will open its new season on Labor Day, with its usual attractions of "pop" vaudeville and pictures. Since Manager Emil Gerstle left the Congress, Mr. Lynch, owner of the theater, has been unable to decide as to whom he wishes as his manager; and the question is still unsettled.

William Manning, who has been with Messrs. Sheedy and Cook, the well known theatrical men of Fall River, Newport, etc., has left this firm, to manage a theater at Woonsocket, R. I. Mr. Manning knows the business, and should be successful in his new undertaking.

Charles Sheafe, owner of the Majestic Theater, Keene, N. H., and who until recently was managing the Relay Theater, Nahant, Mass., for the summer, has left the Relay, in order to make his own theater ready for its opening, which is billed for Labor Day. Mr. Royce, who managed the Casino Theater, Providence, R. I., during its last winter's season, is now at the head of the Relay Theater for the W. E. Green Film Exchange, of Boston. HENRY.

BOSTON.

The Columbia Theater, under its new name, the South End Theater, opened on Monday, Aug. 21, under the direction of Marcus Loew, with the same policy of "pop". vaudeville and moving pictures, which has brought such phenomenal success to Mr. Loew's Orpheum Theater in this city. Mr. Loew's experience with the Orpheum has convinced both himself and the public that he and his policy have been needed here, and with him will go the best wishes for the success of his South End Theater. The house has been thoroughly renovated and rearranged to give the greatest possible comfort to patrons. Its interior, which has been seen by the writer very recently, presents an appearance that is even more artistic than when the house was first opened as a $2 house. A gala bill of "pop" vaudeville and picturea was billed for the opening day. Mr. Loew changes his programs bi-weekly.

The Kinemacolor exhibition of colored motion pictures of the Coronation of King George and Queen Mary, as presented at the Tremont Temple, is growing rapidly in popularity. The reels are shown twice a day, at 2:30 in the afternoon, and 8:15 in the evening. The entertainment continues for two hours, interspersed with orchestral music, and a descriptive account of the Coronation, delivered by Eugene Farnsworth, the well-known traveler and lecturer. Boston people are realizing that the wonderful Kinemacolor process enables them to see the spectacular events of the Coronation exactly as they appeared in London two months ago, and are availing themselves of their opportunity. Suffice it to say that the S. R. O. sign is "on the job" daily, and that seats are on sale one week in advance.

Austin and Stone's Theater, Tremont Row, which features moving pictures as a portion of the program, opened its season Monday, Aug. 21. The house was re-modeled in part, and thoroughly overhauled.

The Scenic Temple, one of the William Bradstreet Theaters, is finding business brisk. Lenna Howe's Union orchestra is one of this theater's features. This orchestra has been at the Scenic Temple many months; and "forks up" the pictures in fine fashion.

The Automatic Vaudeville Company, of New York, operating the Comique, Palace, and Premier theaters, in this city, are now giving the preference to their new Palace Theater. First-run reels are first shown at that house, and then go to the Comique. This is just the reverse of the old way of placing the pictures. Since the Palace has been presenting pictures and songs only, and has cut out its vaudeville features; it needed strengthening, and is getting it in the shape of first-run service. Independent service from the W. E. Greene Film Exchange are in use by the three houses.

Owing to the fact that so many of the Licensed manufacturers have increased the quality of their weekly releases, it has been found impossible to exhibit the entire output, for the benefit of Licensed managers at the Boston office of the General Film company, at two sittings, as was formerly the case. Consequently, managers using first-run Licensed pictures must be at the Boston office of the General Film Company, on Monday and Thursday afternoons, as well as on Tuesday and Friday mornings, as formerly.

It is now practically assured that the new National Theater, Tremont Street, will open for its first performance the second week in September. This house was idle nearly one whole year, due to faulty construction, whereby the rear wall was in danger of collapse. With its seating capacity of 3,700, this house exceeds by several hundred, any other theater in this city. Its area is nearly 1,800 square feet. High class vaudeville and pictures are to be offered by the B. F. Keith interests, with a range of prices from 5c to 15c. It is stated that should the public favor the house, that real high-priced vaudeville will be presented. This, of course, is due to the large seating capacity. Already State and city officials have been invited to attend the opening performance. Prominent theatrical men from many larger cities are to be present to note how so large a house as is the National succeeds. Mr. G. W. Ryder has been appointed manager. HENRY.

LOUISVILLE, KY.

Louisville photoplay interests are just awakening to the fact that a very profitable field of endeavor lies open to them along the line of theater advertising. That is, exploitation of the sort which can be utilized by any advertiser, and which finds its expression in slides which are flashed upon the screen previous to the regular program. Considering the fact that the "circulation" of a downtown theater approximates something like 5,000 or more people per day and slides are comparatively low, this advertising proposition proves mighty attractive to many merchants, as the experience of Louisville theater managers is proving.

One of the biggest moving picture deals ever formulated in Louisville, which will result in the establishment of the most costly house in the city, is now in the hands of Louis J. Dittmar, president of the Majestic Amusement Company, and associates. The Majestic company now operates The Majestic, on Fourth Avenue, and The Royal, at Eighteenth Street and Broadway, in Louisville, and a foundation is being laid for a considerable addition to the Majestic, which is directly across the street from the Custom House. However, Mr. Dittmar, and other capitalists, are planning to erect a $75,000 exclusive motion picture house on the site of the present Majestic and its addition. The theater is to seat 1,200 people, and will be one of the finest houses in the country, fire-proofed throughout and containing every modern accessory to photoplay. Plans for its construction are now in the hands of Joseph & Joseph, prominent local architects.

It has been announced that, between Sept. 1 and 15, a handsome new motion picture theater is to be opened in Bowling Green, Ky. The Crescent Amusement Company, of Nashville, Tenn., is putting the deal for the new Bowling Green house through, and will operate it in connection with the present Columbia in that city. A five-year lease for a prominent site in the down-town district of Bowling Green has been secured by the Crescent Company, and work of construction upon a theater with seating capacity of 500 persons, fireproof construction, will be begun at once. J. P. Masters, manager of the Columbia Crescent show in Bowling Green, will also superintend the new establishment.

George A. Bleich, a well-known photoplay man of Hopkinsville, Ky., who has been associated with various successful showhouses in Western Kentucky, announced last week that he has completed arrangements for the erection of a theater of his own in Hopkinsville. Mr. Bleich has leased a fine location in that city for five years and has awarded a contract to the Forbes Manufacturing Company for the erection of a strictly up-to-date establishment, seating nearly 700 people. Mr. Bleich is now operating The Princess, in Hopkinsville, but says that he will probably dispose of this theater when the new building is ready for occupancy in October.

William Mainwaring, a well-known moving picture man, of Newport, Ky., recently figured in arrangements whereby the first "commercial use" of photoplay in the Bluegrass was demonstrated. The head of a prominent Newport family, under the direction of Mr. Mainwaring, recently took his household with him to Chicago, Ill., where each member of the family was photographed by one of the big film manufacturing concerns of that city. The productions are to be preserved for future portrayal before the family, and constitute the first films of this character ever brought to Kentucky. The idea of the Newport man occasioned a good deal of discussion, editorially and otherwise, throughout the State. One of the Louisville newspapers took the rather unique stand that such adaptation of moving pictures was "grewsome in the extreme," alleging that in the event of such pictures being shown after the death of the subject, it would certainly be a harrowing experience for those onlookers interested in the person. However, the concensus of opinion favors the new use of the film product, on the grounds that a life-like representation is vastly more satisfactory and consoling, even after death, than a stiff and unnatural oil portrait.

It is reported in Nashville, Tenn., that W. P. Ready is having plans drawn for the construction of an up-to-date moving picture theater of considerable capacity. G. D. G., Jr.

WHEELING, W. VA.

By Eddie Wheeler.

Wheeling, W. Va., has a population of about 60,000, and has fourteen theaters and thirteen banks. Wheeling is what is termed an open town, but not until two weeks ago have moving picture houses been open on Sundays. The initiative was taken by the Sunshine Theater, and although it was closed by the city authorities the first Sunday, they at least broke through the ice. It wasn't easy going for a couple of weeks, and a number of exhibitors had to pay fines, but things are going along smoothly at present, and the exhibitors show to capacity houses unmolested.

The Home Theater, on Jacobs Street, has opened its doors to the awaiting public. The Home is a very cozy little theater and Licensed service is being used.

The Wheeling Film Exchange, under the capable management of Mr. Ben F. Jones, is doing exceedingly well, although this may not be surprising, for Mr. Jones is just the sort of man to make good in this territory. They are at present supplying only twenty houses, but it is expected that a number of exhibitors will flock to their ranks as soon as fall sets in.

Mr. James Velas is one of the foremost moving picture magnates in Wheeling. He began five years ago, with the Bijou Theater, and by thriftiness and good management, has added two more to his list of moving picture houses. The Bijou is located at 1406 Market Street, and has a seating capacity of 250. The operating room is equipped with two No. 6 Powers machines, projecting on a special silvered curtain. The throw is 72 feet, on a 13 x 15 curtain. The lobby is very attractive and compares favorably with those of its competitors. A large arch, with a large peacock, and the name Bijou above it is illuminated by a myriad of Tungsten lights and forms a very attractive feature of the house. The program consists of three good run Independent films from the Independent Film Exchange. The orchestra consists of violin, trap-drums and piano.

The Lyric, at 1190 Market Street, is also one of the Velas enterprises. The house seats 350. Two No. 6 Powers machines are used for the projection of Licensed films. The throw is 95 feet, on a 13 x 15 feet curtain. The ventilation consists of two 34-inch exhaust fans in the rear, and about six revolving fans along the wall. The musical department consists of a five-piece orchestra.

The Lyceum Theater, at 132 Market Street, is the last of the Velas enterprises. The seating capacity is 275. The operating room is built of concrete and is considered one of the best in the State. The equipment consists of two No. 6 Powers machines. The throw is 97 feet on a 14 x 15 curtain, and the projection is worthy of praise. A five-piece orchestra furnishes the music.

The Amuseu Theater, at 30th and Jacob Streets, has a seating capacity of 350. The ventilation is beyond criticism. The lobby is very attractive and is built in the shape of a half-moon and very brilliantly lighted. The ceiling is about 16 feet high and the throw of the picture is 85 feet. The projection department is properly equipped in every detail. Three Licensed films, with playing-to-the-picture music by a capable piano player, furnishes a program worth the price. Mr. Bernard Belinsky is the manager and proprietor.

The Photoplay Theater, on Market Street, has a seating capacity of 300. Two exhaust fans in the rear, and a number of revolving fans on the sides, make this house very cool in the warm days. This house has been playing to capacity business since the day of its opening. The projection battalion consists of two No. 6 Powers machines in a fireproof booth. The man behind the battery seems to know his business, for he turns out projection of the worth while class. The throw is 72 feet. The program consists of 4 reels Independent Films, from the Wheeling Film Exchange, to the accompaniment of a violin, drums and piano.

The Victoria Theater, at 13th and Market Streets, is one to be proud of, and Mr. Geo. Shaffer, the manager and owner, is certainly proud of it. It has 800 seats and standing room for about 100. The ventilation and projection are almost perfect. The program consists of vaudeville and two Licensed films.

The Virginia, at 14th and Chaplain Streets, has a seating capacity of 1,800. A legitimate house, using pictures in the summer. Mr. Finler is the owner and manager.

The Hippodrome seats 150. Equipped with a fireproof booth and two one-pin Edison machines, it shows a performance that equals its larger competitors. Licensed films are used. Mr. H. G. Hoffman is the manager of this neat house, which is located at 37th and Jacob Streets.

(Continued on page 816.)

WE INVITE YOUR ATTENTION

On September 13th Champs Release Sidney Drew's Novel Western Drama

"THE RED DEVILS"

Have you booked it for your theatre? We have the advertising display sheets, therefore it is essential that you write us.

SAY! FREE SHEET MUSIC GOES WITH THE RED DEVILS

SHENANDOAH
Released September 18th
A film with all the stir of martial strife with an interesting climax. Period of civil war.

The Stolen Horse
Released September 20th
Our hero is about to be strung up for horse stealing but for his sweetheart's ready wit.

A Champion Master Stroke
The Black Horse of Culver
Put down the date,
Monday, September 25th

ALWAYS SOMETHING NEW IN CHAMPS! BARBARA FRIETCHIE IS COMING!

Sold Through Motion Picture Distributing & Sales Co.

CHAMPION FILM COMPANY
MARK M. DINTENFASS, General Manager
12 EAST 15th ST., NEW YORK, N. Y.

GREAT NORTHERN

THE OLD RELIABLE

Release for Saturday, September 9th

An Exceptional Dramatic Subject

A DREAM WITH A LESSON

A strong moral story, more powerful than a sermon. Don't miss it.

Release for Saturday, September 16th

THE CONSPIRATORS

A sensational drama of the Sherlock Holmes type.

All First-class Independent Exchanges Handle Our Product

Sold Only Through Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company

GREAT NORTHERN FILM CO., 7 E. 14th St., N.Y.
(NORDISK FILM CO. OF COPENHAGEN.)

SCENERY PAINTED FOR MOVING PICTURE THEATERS
P. J. DONIGAN SCENIC STUDIO, 416 S. Kedzie Ave., Chicago, Ill
Phone, Garfield 2710
Write for our prices on Picture Curtains

In answering advertisements kindly mention The Moving PictureWorld.

A GOOD SIGN!

The fact that I am selling more machines than ever is proof that the moving picture business is going to have one of the most tremendously prosperous seasons on record this Fall and Winter. If you want quick service on ANY MAKE of MACHINE or quick service on the best films in the world, send me word in a hurry. Immediate deliveries are my special delight!

Carl Laemmle, Pres.

The LAEMMLE FILM SERVICE

New number
204 W. Lake St., Chicago, Ill.

Sykes Block. Minneapolis, Minn. 1517 Farnam St. Omaha, Neb.
515 Mulberry St. Des Moines, Iowa. 1110 Wyandotte St. Kansas City, Mo.
The biggest and best film renter in the world

In answering advertisements kindly mention Moving Picture World.

Make your own local Moving Pictures

For the theater manager, for the lecturer, scientist and for the manufacturer at large. New Moving Picture Cameras, Printers, Perforators, Developing outfits, Tripods, Tilts, large and small, Winders, Rewinders, Measurers, Menders, latest Projecting machines and single arc dissolvers, negative and positive film stock, perforating, printing and developing done, special lenses—best equipped laboratory and machine shop in the world. Send for descriptive catalogues why you should makefilms,

EBERHARD SCHNEIDER

219 Second Ave. near 14th Street. New York

MORE ECLAIR FILMS AMERICA SPLITS

and of the kind you have liked so well in the past

Coming September 18th

When The Leaves Fall

A Touching Story of Autumnal Heart Throbs

The Robber Catching Machine

A Rough-House Comedy

AMERICAN ECLAIRS OCT. 3

GET IN LINE NOW

MOTION PICTURE DISTRIBUTING AND SALES COMPANY

ECLAIR FILM CO.
Factories and Studios — — FORT LEE, N. J.

THE BIGGEST SCOOP OF THE YEAR

BIG ED. WALSH, the most popular hero of the diamond, accompanied by little Cleo, the wonderful three-year-old cow-puncher, captured by camera while viewing the Cow Boys' Convention at Lander, Wyo., the most thrilling and exciting Western celebration ever witnessed.
Vividly portrayed in that wonderful wild Western production, OLD WYOMING DAYS. Absolutely the livest State rights proposition on the market.

WRITE OR WIRE AT ONCE

THE WESTERN FEATURE FILM CO. 3843 Indiana Ave. CHICAGO

CHEYENNE FRONTIER DAYS

The S. R. O. Film

CHEYENNE FRONTIER DAYS

You Must Not Neglect
to Order This Motion Picture Triumph
The Acme of Western Realism

Cheyenne "Frontier Days"

THE ONE AND ONLY AUTHORIZED REPRODUCTION
OF THE

Fifty Thousand Dollar Cowboy Tournament

AS PRESENTED AT

Cheyenne, Wyoming
Aug. 23, 24, 25, 26, 1911

Without Doubt the Greatest Wild West Carnival Ever Staged

GENUINE

Hundreds of Daring Cowboys
Mounted U. S. Cavalry
Herds of Wild Horses
Bands of Sioux Indians
Scores of Dashing Cowgirls
Wagon Trains, Chuck Wagons and Prairie Schooners

GENUINE

In a Death Defying Maze of Sensational Horsemanship and Military Maneuvering Unparalleled in the World's History. A Commanding, Thrilling, Instructive and Truthful Picture of Frontier Life.

State Rights For Sale By

THE TOURNAMENT FILM COMPANY
TOLEDO, OHIO

CHEYENNE FRONTIER DAYS

The Box Office Winner

CHEYENNE FRONTIER DAYS

MONTREAL.

Conditions in the moving picture business here are, so far, as good as can be desired. The number of theaters exhibiting films is on the increase, which is a very excellent indication as to the soundness of this sort of enterprise. By giving the public reliable, sensible and instructive films—no matter who the producer is—will reap the harvest.

Our friend, Lyman H. Howe, and his travel pictures occupied the Srubert Theater for several weeks, and again renewed the popularity of his films. So much so, indeed, that he has promised to return to Montreal again before the year is through. Then we had the Coronation film furore, which filled the coffers of the exhibitors very much after the style of ancient Pandora. Incidentally we had Mr. McLeash, the manager of the Princess Theater, giving the sole reproduction of the Kinemacolor films of the Coronation, and other pictures, which were a revelation to all. As for the general run of things in the other houses nothing need be added except that many of them cut out vaudeville, and hope to leave it in the "lurch" even in the fall aad winter seasons.

The "Inferno," as produced by the Italian manufacturers, is slated to appear in the biggest theater in this city next week. There is no saying to what extent this series of pictures will reestablish the worthiness of moving pictures in the minds of the prejudiced. Advance press notices report on it favorably, and the Monopol people, who are presenting the films, are assured of a paying investment.

The legal phase of the moving picture business is disquieting. They are after them again. Summonses have been issued against seventeen proprietors to force them to pay up the municipal tax of $500. A delay has been asked in this matter, but it appears that a legal battle will ensue before payment is made. The authorities state that the large establishments have paid their taxes and that the smaller ones will have to do likewise or go out of business. A new regulation is having posters approved by the chief of police before being placed in the lobby, is now in force. This law is giving the proprietors no end of trouble, especially those who have their places at a great distance from police headquarters. One poster case was snatched from the jaws of law recently by Mr. A. Garneau, K. C.; but subsequent charges will have to be faced unless the allied proprietors make a stubborn fight to have a better system put in practice.

Mr. Ratisbonne, of the Gaumont Company, Limited, has left for Winnipeg.

Mr. and Mrs. Lefebre are in charge of the Gaumont office during Mr. Ratisbonne's absence.

The National Theater has been renovated and enlarged.

The Mark Broek Enterprises, operating the Theater Francais, have opened their vaudeville and moving picture season. They have seating capacity for about 2,000 in their establishment. Popular prices prevail, and their receipts would make any manager happy.

A new photoplay house is nearing completion. It will be operated by the Wonderland Amusement Company.

The "Nationoscope" is at present undergoing alterations, which will when complete, afford seating space for 1,650 people—twice its former capacity.

One of the most popular west end houses—the Gaiety—is seriously contemplating buying out adjoining premises at a big expenditure, in order to enlarge their place. This is one of the few houses in this city that charges 10 cents for admission for an exclusive picture show. Mr. Renaud, the manager, is a strong exponent of the legitimate photoplay business.

The Moulin Rouge, Mr. Robert Bell, manager, has decided to eliminate vaudeville from its programme.

The Prince of Wales, the Nickel and the Starland report capacity business.

Films, anti-British in spirit, are finding their way here. Moving picture manufacturers and Canadian renters please take notice that such are not wanted.

Montreal exhibitors, in particular, must subscribe to the World, in order to get good information for their business.

DAVID LIVINSON.

CANTON, OHIO.

Canton is an open town and all amusements are open on Sundays. The photoplay enterprises of the town compare favorably with those of neighboring towns.

The Odeon, Bender & Abrams, owners, at East Tuscarawa Street, is playing to good business. The seating capacity is 500, and the floor is sloped toward the curtain, so that any one of the audience may see the pictures with ease. The operating room itself is a model of excellence, and is considered one of the best in the State. It is equipped with two latest type Edison machines. The projection is exceptionally good and the screen has a special silver coating, which undoubtedly aids in the clearness of the picture. The Odeon runs three acts of vaudeville and two pictures in the fall and winter, to an admission of five cents to children, and ten cents to adults. The lobby of this fine photoplay house is worthy of comment, for it can favorably compare with the lobbies of the high-priced "legit" theaters. It is roomy, and the walls are arrayed with mirrors, so dear to the heart of the lady patrons, while along the sides are placed settees and cushioned seats, where the patrons may rest while waiting for their friends. A nicely furnished ladies' room, and also a smoking room, add many patrons to this popular theater. Taking this theater as a whole, it is one of the nicest houses in the State and judging from the attendance it may also be termed one of the most profitable. Licensed pictures from Cleveland are used. Mr. A. H. Abrams is the manager.

The Dreamland, at 338 E. Tuscarawa Street, is under the ownership and management of Bender Bros., and is the oldest photoplay house in Canton. The seating capacity is 200, and the curtain is raised about six feet from the floor, so that all may see with ease. It is well ventilated and equipped with the necessary exits. The operating room is equipped with an Edison machine and the projection is fairly good. The Dreamland is at present running four reels of old Licensed films from Cleveland, but it is contemplated to shorten the program to three as soon as matters can be arranged with the opposition. The musical feature consists of an electrical piano. The lobby of the Dreamland can be made more attractive if real signs, instead of amateurish efforts were displayed.

The Orpheum, also on E. Tuscarawa Street, has a seating capacity of (800) eight hundred. Gus Sun Co. are the lessees and are booking high class vaudeville to an admission of ten, twenty and thirty cents. Old Independent films are used as a part of the program.

The Auditorium is considered the largest one-floor seating capacity house in Ohio, for it has a seating capacity of 1300 persons. Legitimate drama is used in season. The Opera House, on Market Street, is also a legitimate house and has a seating capacity of 1400.

The Majestic Theater, opposite the Dreamland, is under the management and ownership of Mr. M. E. Hanley. He is not a novice in the business, having played on the vaudeville stage since he was twenty. The Majestic has a seating capacity of 400. Mr. Hanley believes in giving his patrons their money's worth, so his program, in the winter, consists of two vaudeville turns and 4 reels of pictures, and a four-piece orchestra—for the single admission price of five cents. At present four reels of good Independent films from the Pittsburg Photoplay Co., with an electrical piano accompaniment is being used for the same price. Two one-piu Edison machines are used in the operating room, so that a continuous performanee is made possible. The lobby of the Majestic is effectively used for the display of posters.

Mr. A. H. Abrams, general manager of the Odeon Theater, attended the Motion Picture Exhibitors Convention at Cleveland, Ohio. Mr. Ed. F. Bender has purchased the Trinity Reformed Church and contemplates erecting a high-class moving picture house on its site.

EDDIE WHEELER.

ST. LOUIS.

Selig's latest release, entitled "Saved from the Snow," is appearing at the St. Charles Theater this week, as is the "Vitagraph Monthly," showing the head-on collision of two huge locomotives, which is drawing extraordinary crowds daily. Mr. Harry L. Smith has been signed as singer.

The Garrick Theater, which several weeks ago was showing the Coronation films, announced that "Dante's Inferno" is to start a week's engagement, commencing Saturday matinee, Aug. 26. This film is an acknowledged feature of the Monopol Company and is sure to prove a hit, and this will be the first presentation in St. Louis. Two shows were put on daily, at 2:15 and 8:15 P. M.; the admission, 25c. and 50c.

The Lyric Theater has installed a Bell telephone for the convenience of its many business patrons, who greatly enjoy it for business transactions.

The Suburban Garden Theater, which has been showing the nation's theatrical stars, will for the rest of the season show moving pictures and vaudeville. Lack of patronage is said to be the cause of the change.

A general crusade has been begun by the State Factory Inspectors on all show houses employing performers under the required age. The first one to be affected by this law was Mr. Samuel L. Solomon, president of the Independent Amusement Company, and also manager of the Lafayette Theater. Mr. Solomon had engaged Irene Reilly, 9 years old, and her sister Violet, who is 6 years old. These youngsters do a song and dance and were drawing a hearty applause August 27, when Deputy State Factory Inspector Haskell, after seeing them perform, notified Manager Solomon that he would not be allowed to let them perform any more because they were under age. On the following day he issued a warrant for Manager Solomon on face charges of violating the age law. Irene and Violet are their mother's only support. It is reported that these children have been performing for the past 6 months without detection. The age limit is 16 years and will be strictly enforced, according to the authorities.

Manager Cornelius, of the Lyric Theater, announces that he has booked one of Selig's features for the coming week, entitled "Lost in the Jungle." Several other interesting films have also been booked.

A new film company has been organized in St. Louis. A factory and studio have already been remodeled and equipped with all the modern devices and conveniences for the manufacture of moving picture films. This factory and studio will be the most completed and up-to-date establishment ever erected in this locality. G. P. Hamilton, a moving picture man of experience and large following, will be the chief producer of this new organization. Mr. Hamilton also announces that he has begun to hand together a stock company of players who have an extensive following in local photoplay houses. He has succeeded in landing several local stars. Rehearsals are in progress daily and as soon as all the performers have been signed, preparations will be made for the taking of the first film. Most of the plots will be laid in the surrounding country, as plenty of beautiful scenery is available. It is said that St. Louis capital is largely interested in this company, which is called the St. Louis Motion Picture Company.

Wm. Burton, who proved a success at the Aubert Airdome with his "Illustrated Storiettes," has been signed to appear at the Gran-Park Airdome August 25-26. Mr. Burton's pictures are very interesting. One of the features is the reproduction of the first picture ever taken and developed.

D. M. Hazlett, of local repute as a lecturer, has been booked to appear at the Juniata this week as a special feature. He has some very interesting views that were taken by himself while on an extensive tour several years ago, and will commence his series with a lecture on the Panama Canal, which will be completed in 1915. Mr. Hazlett obtained some very good views of the construction of the canal and will change his subjects nightly. Select motion pictures will be shown in conjunction with the views.

Negotiations have been closed whereby the building at 107 North Broadway will be remodeled into a motion picture house. It will probably be opened in about a month. The policy of the house has not yet been made known.

The Astor Theater, at Broadway and Market Street, is making a feature of Western plays. They are becoming a large drawing card.

The new photo playhouse being erected at Sarah and Olive Streets by the Pipe Realty Company will be opened soon, if the present speedy work continues.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

It is announced that the H. Lieber Company, of this city, has disposed of its moving picture film business to the General Film Company, of New York City, expecting to devote its attention exclusively to the manufacture and sale of picture frames and art goods. The film business of the local company has been one of the largest, west of New York City. A local office will be established by the General Film Company and Robert Lieber will be in charge temporarily. Indiana and surrounding States are furnished with films from this city, which is one of the most important distributing centers in the Middle West.

An important ruling has been handed down in the city police court by Acting Judge Averill in the case brought to test the child labor act passed by the Indiana legislature this year. Under this law the police refused to allow children to compete for prizes in amateur vaudeville performances in moving picture theaters. J. M. Rhodes, treasurer of the Moving Picture Managers' Association, allowed a seven-year-old boy to compete for a prize in his moving picture theater, then submitted to arrest. The court ruled that such a performance by a child could not possibly be construed as a violation of the child labor act.

The Gayety Theater, operated by the Dixie Amusement Company, and showing pictures and light vaudeville, has opened for the season.

Mayor Shank has announced that he will ask the city council to enact an ordinance fixing the annual license fee of moving picture theaters at a rate higher than the present fee of $25 annually. He says the proposed fee will be not less than $100 nor more than $250 a year.

CUMMINS.

SPOKANE, WASH.

Six hundred feet of moving pictures of scenes in Spokane will be taken the latter part of this week, if the weather conditions are favorable, by George Gronbacher, manager of the Spokane Film Exchange. Within a few weeks these pictures will be displayed simultaneously in the 6,000 houses in the United States and Canada, controlled by the Seigel Company, of Chicago, to estimated audiences of 10,000,000. Commissioner Z. E. Hayden has given permission to snap the Spokane fire department in action. Downtown street scenes, showing the Paulsen Building, as the product of the Hercules mine; the Hutton Building, for this reason, and as the home of the Chamber of Commerce; the Revier Building, the Sacred Heart Hospital and other structures, will be taken.

REPUDIATION OF PAST ANNOUNCEMENT AND DECLARATION OF RIGHTS

MILANO
"DANTE'S INFERNO"
HELIOS

WE, the undersigned, the MONOPOL FILM COMPANY, 145 West 45th Street, New York City, wish to call the attention of the entire free reading public's notice that after having investigated both the rights of B. E. CLEMENTS on the Helios "Dante's Inferno" and Charles E. Kimball, I. W. Ullman, Israel J. Ablowich and the NATIONAL FILM DISTRIBUTING COMPANY, as represented by the above parties on the Milano "Dante's Inferno," we have found their rights, titles and interests valid, and wish to announce that all former advertisements and press notices contrary to same shall remain null and void.

(Signed) MONOPOL FILM CO.

Sale -- Valid Rights Both Milano and Helios "Dante's Inferno"

WE, the undersigned, Charles E. Kimball, I. W. Ullman, Israel J. Ablowich and B. E. Clements, do hereby announce and wish to inform the public that we protect, aid and assist and deliver to the Monopol Film Co., its associates and assigns, all our rights, titles and interest for sums of money or other good and valuable considerations, that we may have had or owned on both Milano and Helios "Dante's Inferno" picture for North American rights.

(Signed) CHARLES E. KIMBALL, I. W. ULLMAN,
I. J. ABLOWICH, B. E. CLEMENTS.

Announcement! "Dante's Inferno" Milano & Helios Make

WE, the MONOPOL FILM COMPANY, wish to announce that we are now prepared to sell EXCLUSIVE rights to either or both of the productions, "Dante's Inferno" Milano film or "Dante's Inferno" Helios make, or to exhibit same, and absolutely guarantee and protect any and all contracts which they may make for either of the above films.

EXCLUSIVE STATE RIGHTS NOW SELLING

NOTICE.—We own the copyrights on both Milano and Helios "Dante's Inferno" and in addition have acquired all rights and titles to "Dante's Inferno" (Dramatic Version), copyrighted and produced in 1906. THIS COPYRIGHT covers all rights to the title "Dante's Inferno" for any and all manner of public exhibition.

WE WILL PROTECT THESE TITLES and hereby issue a WARNING that any person infringing on either of our copyrights in any way whatsoever will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law, a violation of which is a criminal offense.

MONOPOL FILM COMPANY

145 West Forty-fifth Street :: :: :: New York City

Licensed Film Stories.

VITAGRAPH.

ONE FLAG AT LAST (Sept. 18).—The war between the North and South raged just as hitterly in the heart of the civilian as it did in the soldier on the battlefield. Judge Stark, a typical Southern gentleman, whose son Robert is a captain in the Confederate Army, entertains the strongest hatred against the Federals. When he hears of the capture of his son Bob, he is inconsolable and swears eternal enmity against his captors. Betty, his daughter, tries to pacify him until she leaves him alone in his meditations. She wanders through the glen near her home and there meets Captain Jack Meyers, of the Northern Army, wounded and almost helpless. Betty has pity upon him and leads him to a cave nearby, where she shelters and assists him, binding up his wounds, sending him bedding by her old servant Mose and visiting him with food.

A few days later, the newspapers announce that General Sherman will march through that section of the country with 50,000 men. Judge Stark sees this article, and trembles with rage, calling down maledictions upon the incursion. He throws the paper down in disgust. Betty secures it and sends it to Captain Meyers. Jack writes a note and instructs Mose to give it to General Sherman when he reaches the vicinity. Mose is afraid to do this and Betty carries it herself; Jack is soon rescued and on his way to Washington.

After regaining his health, Jack calls on President Lincoln and asks for a pardon for Betty's brother. President Lincoln grants the pardon. Captain Jack delivers it in person, telling Robert of his love for his sister, at the same time requesting Bob to give Betty the miniature which she had given him in the cave as an evidence of his profession and promises. Bob reaches home, to the surprise and delight of his father and Betty, tells of the pardon secured by Captain Meyers, and of the Captain's love for his sister. Judge Stark is beside himself and refuses to listen to the pleas of his son and daughter in behalf of Jack.

Peace between the North and the South is declared. Jack returns to visit the cave where he first met Betty. While he goes inside, Betty takes a notion to visit the old trysting place, and there she meets Jack, whom she takes to her home and introduces to her father. He denies him a friendly greeting until old Mose goes into the house and returns with the American Flag. As Bob points to it and says, "We all stand united under the one flag at last," the old judge, taking the hand of his daughter, places it in that of Captain Meyers, blessing them and surrendering his prejudices to the "Union."

HOW MILLIE BECAME AN ACTRESS (Sept. 19).—Millie Becker, a struggling young actress, gets a letter of introduction from her friend, Dick Graham, for an interview with the leading theatrical manager, Howell Conn. She calls at his office, is treated with impertinence by the office boy, and is kept waiting until he gets ready to call his boss, who at last grants Millie an interview, if his contemptuous treatment of her can be called such. She perseveres in procuring a promise from him to attend one of her performances to see her work. He does so and after witnessing her performance, writes her a letter, telling her that she is not an actress and never will be. At first she is discouraged and then she makes up her mind that she will prove him wrong.

She learns that he has gone away for the summer and goes to the hotel where he is stopping, makes up, and secures a position as a chambermaid in the hotel. She has to wait on Conn and takes every opportunity to make his life miserable, by upsetting his ink, spilling his coffee, sweeping dust on him and making herself a general nuisance. He never suspects who she is, but complains to the landlady about Millie, who takes the proprietress into her confidence, and at last, when Conn is in a furious rage, he seeks quiet in the garden. Millie gives him a shower bath from the sprinkling pot with which she is watering the flowers, and he is now quick to make overtures to her. She then reveals her identity and asks him if he does not think now that she is a good actress.

He is indignant at first, but confesses that she is, and the humor of the situation strikes him so forcibly he gives Millie his card, making an appointment with her at his office in the city, where he gives her a contract at a large salary and acknowledges that she has the ability to make a name for herself and a fortune for him.

BEYOND THE LAW (Sept. 20).—Anse Langdon, whom Jennie Williams accepts, incurs the hatred and enmity of Lee Hayes, another suitor for Jennie's hand. Anse and Jennie are married. Lee waits his opportunity and tries to inveigle Anse into a fight with him. Anse resents his aggressiveness. Lee draws his gun, but Anse is too quick for him, takes his gun away from him and gives him a severe thrashing. Lee has another gun concealed, follows Anse and from a point of vantage shoots and mortally wounds him. Anse drags himself to the door of his cabin, where he falls dead. His wife finds his body and a note which Anse has written on a piece of birch bark, stating that Lee Haines shot him. The sheriff is notified of the shooting and is on the track of the guilty man.

Filled with that primitive and inborn idea of justice, Jennie determines to interpret the law according to her own judgment, and if possible, bring the slayer of her husband to a full reckoning of his deed. She follows his trail, and with the unerring aim of a skilled mountaineer's daughter in the use of firearms, she gets a line on her husband's slayer; he receives the full penalty of Jennie's self-imposed sentence.

The sheriff of the county meets Jennie as she is returning to her home with her rifle in her hand. He inquires of her for news of Lee Hayes. In reply, she takes the sheriff to the silent form of the fugitive, nodding her head in answer to his questions. He understands. He discharges the cartridges from the dead man's gun, places the weapon in the cold hand and tells Jennie to go to her home, that he will answer for the man's death; necessary in the discharge of his duty as sheriff, being sworn to capture his man dead or alive.

FORGOTTEN (Sept. 22).—Mrs. Earle dies at the birth of her child. Max, her husband, is so overcome with grief that he cannot bear to look at the child, foolishly attributing his wife's death to the innocent little one. He determines to get away from the scene of his sorrow and leaves his little daughter Helen in charge of his sister, Mrs. Strong, who has two children of her own. Mr. Earle goes to Paris and throws himself into the gayety of the French capital.

During his absence, his little daughter, now six years old, learns about her father; his photograph, which stands on her aunt's table, is the shrine at which she pours forth her childish prayers that her father will come back to her again. She seems to be like an odd sheep with her little cousings, who have the attention and kind caresses of loving parents, while she is without either. She feels alone and forgotten, and longs for parental sympathetic love. She has overheard her aunt speak about her father, and her little heart aches and pines the more for him to come home to his lonely little Helen.

Mrs. Strong gives a party for the children. They all seem happy but Helen, who is possessed with that self-consciousness and shyness which is born of the thought inspired by her father's evident neglect. She goes into another room alone, meditative and sad, and is soon forgotten by everybody. When the prizes from the umbrella are chosen, Helen is not remembered.

After the little guests have gone home, bidding a fond good-night to all but little Helen, and Mrs. Strong has put her two children to bed, Mr. Earle, who has received Helen's letter, comes back, is ushered into his sister's presence, and asks her where Helen is. Mrs. Strong cannot tell him and has to admit that she has entirely forgotten her. Helen is soon found and brought to her father, who clasps his child to his bosom again and again, and promises that he will never leave her any more, and judging from the many gifts he brings her and the kindnesses which he showers upon her, we are convinced that she is now his one thought and his greatest joy in life.

OVER THE CHAFING DISH (Sept. 23).—This is an extraordinary novelty, telling the story of love, courtship and marriage, simply through the actions of the hands and feet, without displaying the features. Just imagine, if you can, the actions of the hands and feet alone thoroughly and perfectly telling the story of a young couple making love, becoming engaged, going through the "lovey-dovey" period of courtship, getting married, keeping house, and the demonstration of that ecstatic bliss of their first born to bless the little home and fill their lives with the wellspring of future hope and ambition.

THE TIRED, ABSENT-MINDED MAN (Sept. 23).—"The Tired, Absent-Minded Man" makes up his mind to get married, forgets to propose to the girl he had in mind, and who is already engaged to another, very much to the surprise of the absent-minded man, who goes to sleep and forgets all about her. He proposes to another young lady, buys an engagement ring, forgets what he has bought it for, gives it as a tip to a messenger boy, and then wonders what he has done with it.

Suddenly waking, he gets down to business, and on the night of the wedding, he is overcome by that "tired feeling," goes to sleep and suddenly wakes up, happens to remember that he is to be wedded, arrives at the church at the last moment, is married, and after the wedding, starts on his honeymoon trip with his bride so preoccupied in other thoughts that he gets on the railroad train without her. She is lost in the crowd of embarking passengers, and all oblivious of his obligations as a husband, he makes his way to the smoker, where he goes soundly to sleep and is lost to the world, while his newly wedded wife is left weeping alone on the station platform to retrace her steps to home and mother.

PATHE.

THE FRIGHT (Sept. 18).—An actress returning from the theater finds that during her absence a burglar has gained entrance to her room and is hiding under her bed. Before retiring for the night, she throws herself upon the bed and lights a cigarette. The match sets fire to the carpet, and seeing the smoke she leans over the bed to find out whence it comes. From beneath the bed she sees a hand stealthily putting the fire out. Terrified, she manages to get out of the room and lock the burglar in. The police come, but cannot find the intruder. After they have gone, the actress hearing cries for help looks out of the window, sees the burglar hanging on a leader and drags him in from his perilous position with one of the window curtains. In return for his rescue the burglar leaves the jewels he has stolen and departs.

AN UP-TO-DATE SQUAW (Sept. 20).—A party of tourists visiting an Indian reservation turn one poor squaw's head with the beauty of their wearing apparel. This Indian woman steals away from camp and decks herself out in the most remarkable finery. She is followed by her husband through the streets of the town, causing consternation everywhere. Ultimately she is followed by an English dandy, who mistakes her for a beautiful white woman, but they are caught in each other's company by the brave and the Englishman is scalped. The fact that his head is covered with a wig makes the scalping painless.

STARLIGHT'S NECKLACE (Sept. 21).—An Indian leaves his squaw to hunt and meets a beautiful Indian maid, who fascinates him. When they part she gives him a necklace, which is subsequently discovered by the brave's squaw, and this leads to unpleasantness and trouble. The squaw follows her brave the next day and sees him leave his new love. She follows the girl and in a tragic fight is almost killed. She is rescued by her husband, who seeing her in this condition, finds his old love returns.

ELECTRIC BOOTS (Sept. 22).—A shoe store dispenses shoes which are electrically charged and which enable people to do their work in double. The action resulting from this is funny in the extreme.

GYPSY MAIDS (Sept. 23).—Two gypsy girls playing for money in the streets are seen by a susceptible fellow, who follows them and finally engages one in conversation. He takes her out on the lake for a row and is discovered by the girl's father on their return to shore. The father in his terrible rage drags the girl to the bridge and picking her up bodily throws her into the waters beneath. The lover sees the deed, calls the police and has the gypsy arrested, and plunging into the stream from the bridge rescues the girl of his dreams.

ESSANAY.

SAVED FROM THE TORRENTS (Sept. 19).—Young Jack Carrington has fallen into bad company and one day he runs away from home to a neighboring town, where he gets into trouble. His sister is loved by Arthur Chester, the station agent, and through him Katie receives word from her brother that he is eluding the police and will endeavor to take the through express back to his home town. The girl goes to the station, where Arthur is handed a message by the sheriff to the police officials in the other town to arrest young Garrington at the station, and the girl, in order to save her brother, persuades Arthur to leave the telegraph office for a moment after which she bolts the door and prevents him from entering. It is just a moment or two before the express is scheduled to leave the other town when Arthur receives word that the railroad trestle over the Chippewa River is in danger from the torrents and to stop the express at the other station. Despite his mad entreaties to the girl to let him in she refuses to do so until the train has left, after which she learns to her horror that she has only sent her brother to his death. There follows a race on a hand-car by the girl and Arthur, between the fast approaching express train, which ends successfully in the two passing over the trestle and stopping the train just as the structure collapses.

ALL ON ACCOUNT OF THE PORTER (Sept. 21).—An amusing comedy showing how fate took a hand in bringing the right young man and young lady together in spite of parental plans. Two old friends, one having a son and the other a daughter, plan to pair them off. On the sleeping car another young man, a salesman, gets on leaving instructions to be up in time to leave the train at Rockwell City, while the young Lochinvar asks to be left off at Villa Rosa, the home of the girl. The porter puts them off at the wrong stations and consequently the salesman spends a pleasant day, during which he woos and wins the daughter, she and her father thinking him to be the old friend's son. This latter arrived too late to persuade the young lady to change her mind, as she is perfectly satisfied with her choice.

EVERYBODY'S TROUBLES (Sept. 21).—This delightful little comic is a novel production. It shows the troubles of dwellers in flats and is overflowing with laughable situations from the first floor to the top.

LIVE, LOVE AND BELIEVE (Sept. 22).—Harry Ainsworth, a young man who has fallen through drink and is drifting about in the slums of the city, is influenced to mend his ways by the influence of Dorothy Chalmers, a mission worker. Through her good influence he becomes a man, but finding that he has fallen in love with her and knowing he can never be her equal, socially, he leaves the settlement, after penning her a line, thanking her for the good she has done for him and informing her of his intentions of joining the army. After several years of service in the army,

ANNOUNCEMENT No. 6

A Public Statement is a Public Trust

MY associates have urged me to inject more matter into my "Ads"; thus we have found ourselves in conflict with our own judgment as to the needs of the situation; but after calm deliberation we have stood firm on the point that only in demonstration could the great question of quality be satisfactorily answered. You know the temptation to break into extravagant language in selling one's wares; we do not advocate departing from our first decision to embody only the chronological steps in our work; in other words, simply to show you week by week our progress until such time as you will have seen the goods for yourselves. You may ask our reason for this position and we answer you that we recognized the magnitude of this proposition at the outset; in fact the scale force and attractiveness of all its elements almost bewildered one; for this reason we determined upon the utmost conservatism in every step. We want your support, and because we mean to have it, we have worked with caution and have conservatively in our Ad. Matter announced our progress. Would you have us do more than to bring results of this long period of organization to demonstration as against talk, or do you feel that the quality of our programme suffers for want of description? We hazard the view that you support our course, that your interest was consequent upon our show of conversation and that your loyalty to our cause is induced by this fact. We shall at the proper time take up with you the numberless issues of the trade. In the meantime you are being shown the goods. We rest our case on your judgment of the goods, confident that but one verdict is possible, and that we have earned your congratulations.

As stated in our former Ads., September 7th our goods will be on the market and every day thereafter. Each and every exchange that serves an exhibitor receives EXCLUSIVE goods from the NATIONAL FILM DISTRIBUTING COMPANY and cannot show or allow our goods to be shown in any other territory than the one assigned to him to supply your wants.

SPECIAL NOTICE

WE ARE NOW RELEASING AND THE EXHIBITORS AS WELL AS PATRONS ARE ENJOYING THE MUCH NEEDED EXCLUSIVE PROGRAMME.

MONDAY—"Plantation," "Clarendon," "Mono."
TUESDAY—"Rose" "Deutsches Biograph," "Helios."
WEDNESDAY—"Federal," "Mondia," "Latium."
THURSDAY—"Washington," "Hepwix," "Film d'Art."
FRIDAY—"Mohawk," "Cricks and Martin," "Acquilla."
SATURDAY—"Oklahoma," "Deutsches Bioscope," "Savoy."
SUNDAY—"California," "Messters," "Comerio."

NOTE: Our special appointed representative, Mr. B. E. Clements, is now showing the above mentioned 21 different makes of goods and has shown same in Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Indianapolis and will show in Cincinnati, Nashville, Memphis, Atlanta, New Orleans, St. Louis, Kansas City, Topeka, Oklahoma City, Dallas, San Antonio, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Portland, Seattle, Salt Lake, Denver, Omaha, Des Moines, Watertown, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Milwaukee, Chicago, and he announces to us that everyone after seeing our pictures are agreeably satisfied, and the demand for our service is so great that we are compelled to request of each and every one to be patient and we will see that you are served as we have stated.

THE TIME OF ACTION IS NOW ON

A National Exclusive Programme is Now in Operation

Wire Or Write Your Wants Now Is The Time To Act

NATIONAL FILM DISTRIBUTING CO.

NATIONAL FILM DISTRIBUTING COMPANY

34-36 West Houston Street New York City

NATIONAL FILM DISTRIBUTING CO.

and mainly through his sobriety and integrity, he is prompted to second lieutenant. At a military ball Lieutenant Ainsworth meets Colonel Chalmers, the father of Dorothy and learns that she is at the ball. He seeks her out and in good time, for Dorothy has been approached by another admirer, whose ardent wooing which is not returned, soon turns to violence. Lieutenant Ainsworth sends the man away and then learns that it is his old friend of the mission he has defended. All the pent up emotions of the past years swell up in his bosom and he tells her of his love. Needless to say, the girl who has always loved him goes to his arms, when they are found by Colonel Chalmers, who congratulates them.

AN INDIAN'S SACRIFICE (Sept. 23).—Sam Madden and his daughter Emily run a general store in a small Western town. One of their frequent visitors and one who Madden especially admires is Grey Deer, an educated Indian, and on his deathbed, at the opening of the story, he exacts a promise from Emily that she will wed Gray Deer when he dies. Knowing that Grey Deer really loves her and desiring to respect her father's wish she plans to marry the red man, despite the strong prejudice in her heart against his race and color. Things change, however, when an Eastern cousin, a fine, strapping fellow arrives and endeavors to persuade her to break her promise. On the day of the wedding—Emily still endeavoring to make good her promise to her father—Willoughby, the cousin, incites the cowboys to interfere and the marriage takes place under great difficulties, Willoughby and the cowboys doing all they can to break up the match. Grey Deer and his wife live together a year and in spite of her attempt to make it appear that she still loves him she always welcomes the secret visits of her cousin from the East. One day Grey Deer returns and finds them together in each other's arms. Realizing that the girl no longer loves him he consents to a separation, but exacts a promise from Willoughby that he will love and cherish Emily upon the pain of a great punishment if he does not.

GAUMONT.

A HEART BREAKER BY TRADE (Sept 23).—The four Wilson girls being of marriageable age and of a romantic disposition have set their hearts upon winning ideal husbands and the most strenuous efforts upon the part their numerous admirers fail to touch their hearts to the slightest degree. Neither artist, soldier, lawyer, nor merchant is able to impress them, thought each of these eligibles presents his case with more than ordinary persuasive ability. These are days of progress and nothing holds the imagination of the romantic girl as strongly as does aviation.

The Wilson sisters all wish for aviators. They think of them by day and dream of them by night, and no one but an aviator interests them in the slightest degree. The rejected suitors now get together and plan revenge. They find a traveling comedian who thoroughly enters into the spirit of the plot and suitably disguised is introduced to the girls as Mr. Mokin, the famous aviator.

His role of lady-killer proves more than satisfactory to him and after a cheerful chat with all four of the girls together he seeks interviews with them separately. Each interview developes into a desperate flirtation and in each he is uniformly successful. The sentimentalist is soon won by his poetic conversation, the romantic girl falls deeply in love because of the mystery with which he surrounds their meetings, the flirt finds he is more than a match for her at every stage of the battle and the fourth completely loses her head. Each presents him with a ring and a lock of her hair, and they all promise their undying love.

Now comes the unwelcome news that he must leave to keep an important engagement, and as he departs the four sisters group themselves upon the balcony and wave him tearful adieus. But suddenly their grief is turned to consternation, for at the gate he is met by his wife who vents her displeasure upon him in no uncertain manner. The consternation in its turn gives place to rage when one of their former suitors returns all their rings and locks of hair upon a tray, and they learn at the same time of the true state of affairs. Fortunately they are all philosophical and realizing there is no profit in crying over fallen aviators they do their best to enjoy the humorous side of the situation.

THE CULTURE OF BULBOUS FLOWERS (Sept. 23).—Showing the culture of hyacinths, tulips and narcissuses from the planting of the bulb to the blossoming plant. We are first shown the preparation of the earth, and the planting of the bulb, next the re-potting, then the bedding out. The next scene shows us the hothouses and the appearances of the bed two months afterwards. This is followed by views of the grown plant just beginning to bud, then the flowers completely open. In a number of scenes, we now see different types of hyacinths, tulips and narcissus, and finally the film is closed with a view of a conservatory filled with these flowers in every color.

JIMMIE ON GUARD (Sept. 19).—He is left in charge of the farm during his parents' absence at market.

During the morning, Toto, a gypsy girl, calls and becoming friendly, is shown around the farm by its guardian. They play with numbers of the animals, chasing them about the barnyard, but it is the little pigs that interest the girl, and Jimmie presents her with one as a memento of her visit. She now returns to her parents and tells them all about her visit, and they in their turn go to the farm and try to obtain admission. Jimmie, however, does not like their looks and refuses to allow them to enter, though it is necessary to resort to harsh measures in order to accomplish this end. It so happens that Jimmie's parents on their homeward trip pass the gypsy girl, Toto, they recover the small porker, and tell Jimmie to leave the pigs alone in the future. Meanwhile, the gypsies leave the district with great speed.

CROSSING THE ALPS IN A MOTOR (Sept. 19).—Starting from Thones, a small town in district "La Haute Savoie," situated at an altitude of two thousand feet at the junction of two small rivers, we follow a road cut out of the mountain side.

We have an excellent view of a beautiful excursion in the Alps, some waterfalls and torrents, rocky cliffs and luxuriant forests.

ECLIPSE.

IN ANCIENT DAYS (Sept. 20).—John Burkell, a proud collector of Egyptian antiquities, receives word from an old explorer, Jefferson by name, that a mummy of one of the famous Pharaohs of Egypt has just been unearthed and is offered for sale. Burkell gets in touch with Jeffersou with a view to purchasing the antiquity and their dickerings lead to Jefferson's coming to Burkell's residence, where the old mummy hunter becomes fascinated by Burkell's daughter Cleo. Burkell is such a fiend in his love of all things Egyptian that he bargains to exchange his daughter for the mummy—that is, he promises to give her to Jefferson in marriage.

The mummy is delivered with this understanding and on the evening of its arrival Jefferson is introduced to Cleo and Sullivan, a fine youug Englishman, whom she really loves. After the introduction Burkell tells Cleo of his plan that she marry Jefferson, and positively forbids any further friendship between her and Sullivan. Later in the evening after the departure of Jefferson and Sullivan, as well as several other guests who had been invited to view the mummy, he makes a careful examination of the specimen, then tired from the excitement of the day falls asleep and dreams of its probable history.

He dreams of himself as one of the ancient rulers of Egypt aud is very proud of his own greatness and power. His favorite daughter Cleo is in love with one of the young men of his court, while one of his court favorites, a miserly old man resembling his living friend Jefferson, has his consent to wed her. Cleo, however, detests the elderly suitor, and after she has plead with her father to change his decision and has been refused her request, she retires to her room and dismisses her handmaidens with the exception of one whom she knows is faithful, orders a goblet of wine, and after emptying a vial of poison into the beverage she drains the contents of the glass and falls back upon her couch dead. Her servants find the body and rush panic stricken to her father with the evil news. He hastens to her chamber to find that his heartlessness has placed her beyond the knowledge of his penitence.

At this point Burkell awakes, and using all haste goes to Cleo's room, and finds it vacant. From there he hurries to her mother's chamber and not finding her there tells his wife of her disappearauce. Together they begin searching and later find her in a spare room of the house. She is under the influence of some drug which she has taken and soon is brought back to her natural self and objections to her fiance Sullivan are withdrawn.

KALEM.

THE RANGER'S STRATAGEM (Sept. 18).—The settler's child in stolen by Indians. Twelve years later White Bird, the stolen child, who has been raised by the Indians, is befriended by Baker, a young ranger. The Indian chief calls a council to plan an attack on the stockade. White Bird goes to warn Baker. Baker send White Bird to the stockade with the following note: "Indians meet in council this afternoon to plan an attack against us. Call in the settlers at once. Care for this girl until I return. I will impersonate a visiting chief and attend the council and learn their plan."

Baker, disguised as an indian visits the camp, but is discovered. Knocking down those who impede his way, he succeeds in reaching a nearby lake. He hides in the water breathing through a reed. The Indians think him drowned. The Indians gather their forces to attack the stockade. The settlers are safely within its walls, and Baker returns in time to help them make a successful defense, Baker's ultimate reward is the hand of White Bird.

LOSING TO WIN (Sept. 20).—Bob Prentiss wagers ten thousaud dollars against Jack Carlyle's five thousand dollars that Caryle cannot work his way arouud the world in twelve months without revealing his identity. Carlyle leaves New York as a sailor on board the steampship Baltic bound for Liverpool. A few days out from shore Carlyle gets a glimpse of Diana Grant, a young heiress who is sailing with her father and an aspiring suitor, Count Znroff, and proceeds to fall in love. Count Zuroff is a persistent suiter, but as he is about to propose to the fair heiress Carlyle upsets a bucket of water and interrupts the proceedings. The following day Diana meets with an accident and again comes in contact with Carlyle. From now on Cupid gets busy and the wager is forgotten in the pursuit of love. Diana rebuffs the count and is ordered home by her father. Carlyle is still on the job. On the return journey he succeeds in meeting Diana several times and Diana consents to elope, still ignoraut of Carlyle's real identity. Reaching New York a license is secured, the marriage takes place and Diana and her papa learn she has drawn a prize.

THE COWBOY'S BRIDE (Sept. 22).—Dan, a young cowboy, is in love with the rancher's daughter Ruby. The father does not like his daughter's sweetheart and orders him to keep away. Notwithstanding the difficulties, however, Dan is persistent and the young lovers fix up a plan to elope. Ruby prepares a note advising her father of her intention and leaves it on the table for him to read, but before she can get away he enters the house and quickly discovers the situation. Ruby evades her father and makes her escape joining her lover in a nearby clump of trees where he is waiting with two horses. The mishap with which Ruby's father meets as he is about to start off in pursuit of his daughter and the succeeding events which follow are cleverly portrayed by the Kalem players.

LUBIN.

THE SENORITA'S CONQUEST (Sept. 18).—When Ralph Duncan was elected sheriff of a small Texas town, he determined to wipe out a notorious gang of Mexican brigands. He offered a reward of $500 for the capture of the gang's chief. When news of this was brought to the gang, Dolores, a young Mexican girl, in a spirit of dare-deviltry offered to bring the sheriff a captive to the Chief Juan. When she departed on her mission Juan sent Pedro to follow her.

Arriving at Juarez, Dolores went to a festive gathering where she learned the sheriff was. There she was annoyed by the attentions of one of the cowboys, against whom she was protected by the sheriff. The cunning little Mexican girl was quick to take advantage of the opportunity and pretending faintness, asked the sheriff to escort her from the place, which the sheriff was by no means reluctant to do. Moreover, he proceeded to fall violently in love with her. Dolores, for the first time, felt a strong turbulence in her own heart. Never before had she experienced the frank admiration of a man like this, handsome, open-hearted and unsuspicious. He offered to accompany her home, which was just what she had come to make him do and Dolores refused and departed alone. Arriving at the Mexican village, she reported that the sheriff would not come, but Pedro was there to tell the real facts.

Juan, wild with rage, compelled Dolores to write a note to the sheriff asking him to come to her house. The sheriff came promptly and was captured. He was placed in a room on the second floor under guard. Poor Dolores tried in several ways to help him to escape. Finally she went to her own room, which was above the sheriff's prison, and descended to his window by means of a sheet. Then after she had convinced him of the trueness of her love, she urged him to escape by means of a lariet which she had brought, pointing out that their only chance was for him to go and come back with aid. The next morning Juan found her in place of the sheriff. Death was decreed for her, but just as the fatal blow was about to be struck, the sheriff galloped up with a bunch of cowboys and laid low the chief with a shot through the window.

THE LIFE SAVER (Sept. 20).—Jack Ronald is known as the dare-devil of the life saving corps at Cape Elizabeth. His sweetheart, Jessie Storm, is the daughter of the captain of the life savers.

One day the district inspector's son, James Calvin, and a party of friends arrived to view the station. One of the guests, Miss Vera Stanhope, became much interested in Jack and he became her cavalier for the day. Young Calvin was very much interested in pretty Jessie, though she didn't care for him until she noticed Jack's attention to Miss Stanhope. Then she started a vigorous flirtation to arouse her lover's jealousy. In this object she succeeded. He deserted Miss Stanhope utterly and had eyes only for his sweetheart and Calvin. After the party had gone, the two met and separated after a quarrel.

A few days later Calvin again returned hoping to see Jessie. While seeking her on the cliff, he lost his footing and fell headlong to the water's edge. His foot becoming jammed in a crevice there, he lay at the mercy of the incoming tide. His cries for help were heard by Jessie, who immediately summoned Jack, but Jack's hatred for his supposed rival overcame him and he refused to assist Calvin. Jessie's pleas, however, prevailed and Jack finally performed the rescue at the risk of his own life.

Jessie took Calvin home and Jack sat down on the cliff to brood over the loss of his sweetheart. Then word came that he was wanted at Captain Storm's home. When he arrived there Calvin told Calvin how contemptible she thought he was to offer money to a brave man. Then she ran from the house, found Jack and there certainly was a reconciliation.

LUX FILMS

Finest on the Market

Released Friday, Sept.15,1911

Bill as a Billposter

Comedy Length 573 feet

His Mania for Collecting Antiques

Comedy Length 357 feet

This Is Better Than the Best! Take a Tip and Don't Miss It!

R. PRIEUR

10 East 15th St. New York City

Telephone Call 3427 Stuyvesant

Sold Only Through

MOTION PICTURE DISTRIBUTING and SALES COMPANY

ONLY EASTMAN RAW STOCK USED

WHITE WALL ALUMINUM CURTAIN 40 AMPERES

MIRROR SCREEN 20 AMPERES

WE can improve your pictures this much, and save one-half your light. Mail us a postal and we will send one of our salesmen to demonstrate with your light and equipment, that We Speak the Truth. Write to-day.

Motion Picture Screen Company

Shelbyville, Ind.

W. E. GREENE FILM EXCHANGE, Inc.

The Oldest and Largest Independent Film Exchange in New England

Notice to Exhibitors

We are prepared to take care of any amount of summer business in New England. You don't have to worry about your film service when you are trading with us; we do the worrying for you. The pick of the output of the Sales Co. is at your service. Write, wire or call at

W. E. Greene Film Exchange

INCORPORATED

228 Tremont Street, Boston, Mass.

Telephone 3790 2187 Oxford

As the government stamp on a coin gives it a value in the commercial world, so the

YANKEE Trade Mark

on a film gives a refined atmosphere to the house wherein it is to be seen.

MONDAY

SEPTEMBER 18

THE STAR REPORTER

An exciting story of a newspaper "scoop," showing a complete newspaper plant and one of its gigantic presses in full operation.

FRIDAY

SEPTEMBER 22

The Girl and The Chauffeur

"Love, like death,
Levels all ranks, and lays the shepherd's crook
Beside the scepter."
—Lytton.

YANKEE FILM CO.

344 E. 32nd St., New York City

THE HUMAN TORPEDO (Sept. 21).—Steve liked maple syrup, so he took a can full of it before starting on a trip. While at a saloon, having a drink, he forgot the can, but did not remember it until several miles from the place. He sends word to the bartender that the can contains nitro glycerine.

So, when the bartender receives the message, the can is carefully conveyed to the cellar, and orders are given that no noise must be made, as it might affect the can. A hobo who is given a position as porter around the saloon, happens to see the can. He takes a good drink of it, and everybody thinking that he would explode, treates him with care. He gets into a scrap with an ex-prize fighter, who delivers him a stunning blow in the solar plexus. Everybody finding that no explosion occurred, thanks the pugilist, and start in pursuit of the fleeing hobo.

HER INSPIRATION (Sept. 23).—Love and ambition struggled in the heart of Ruth Cameron, a mountain girl. Love bade her be the wife of Jack, a sturdy backwoodsman; ambition bade her go to the great art centers of the world and when Dick Latham on a hunting trip saw her and asked her to be his wife, she finally consented, leaving Jack heart-broken. They eloped and Ruth send back a note telling where she had gone, tied to the neck of her faithful collie.

Within a year Latham had tired of his young wife and her ambitions. He was the kind of fellow that didn't try to conceal his aversion. After he has deserted her, Ruth had visions of the happy days in the mountains with Jack. With this inspiration she painted a picture which took first prize at a great art exhibition and made her famous. She immediately started for home. On the train she read a newspaper account of the death of her husband.

At the old homestead she was received with open arms by her parents. Faithful Jack forgave her and received her with the fulness of his manly heart.

SELIG.

THE VOYAGER (Sept. 15).—Sir Harold Drayton and his sister, the Honorable Jessica, were on a visit to Canada in the days of Lord Simcoe's rule over the fortunes of the great Hudson Bay Company, in the early part of the nineteenth century, and there she met a voyageur, romantic and wonderful in her young eyes, and became so much interested in him that her brother begged the interference of the factor, Nigel Hardie, who was in command of the post at Selkirk House, where they were stopping, and Francois, the voyageur was sent away. Sadly he took his departure, wearing in his heart a flower given him by the girl, and in his stout canoe, paddled through the vast primeval forest. Soon after, a letter came to Hardie bidding him speed his guests back to Quebec to sail in the last ship for England, and they started off accompanied only by two canoe men as the trapping season was on and Hardie was short handed.

Landing one evening for camp, they were captured by a band of Indians, and one of the men was killed, the other escaping back to Selkirk House where he warned Hardie; but in the meantime, Francois saw the empty canoe and body of his old companion, and suspecting the fate of the party, he crept up to where they sat tied to trees while their captors caroused, and cutting their bonds, bade them wait for night and sleep to effect their escape.

His plans were overthrown by the chief waking and going to take a look at his captives. A melee ensued, in which aided by Sir Harold and even the brave little Jessica, Francois was able to account for all his stupified foes, and makes good his rescue. The party from the Stockade met them in their flight and Jessica bravely told her brother and the factor that her life belonged to the man who had risked all to save her, and that now she was his beyond recall.

"LOST IN THE ARCTIC" (Sept. 18).—We see a tribe of Eskimos starting on a hunt, they come upon the hut of a young orphan girl, she is ill and without food. The natives immediately go into council and the orphan is given a choice of death—to be turned out to be devoured by wolves and bears, or to be cast adrift in an open canoe. She prefers the latter, and with many strange and curious ceremonies, the death penalty is imposed. She is led to the open water, placed in a canoe and set adrift. By the "Ceremony of the Walrus Skull," the natives invoke the good spirits to protect the orphan on her journey into darkness.

Next we see Davis, an explorer, the only survivor of a lost polar expedition. He is spearing seals through the open ice, when to his horror, he discovers that the ice upon which he is standing has broken off from the main body, and he finds himself floating out to sea, obviously for the purpose of the story to be met by the orphan girl who has been cast adrift. Their meeting at sea and their rescue, the trials and suffering of Captain John Smith, the Arctic explorer, who has gone to the North Sea in search of Davis, the thrilling picture of the Eskimos harpooning a polar bear, their strange ceremonies at the end of the hunt and the meeting on the ice between Captain Smith and the lost explorer go to make up a picture which will outrival "The Way of the Eskimo," recently released by Selig and declared by the reviewers to be "one of the season's notable offerings."

McKEE RANKIN'S "49" (Sept. 19).—The story begins in St. Louis where, as a young man, "Forty" failed in business and found that poverty had no attractions for his wife, who separated from him. In the quarrel that ensued, Dennison accidentally cut his little son's forehead and fled, not knowing how serious the injury was. He determined to hide his shame in the mining camps and the year drifted on leaving him a bit of flotsam on the shores of that vast human stream that surged through the mighty canyons of the Sierras.

Lonely and sad, he had taken to his bosom a little waif of the diggings who had come from Heaven knows where, and she had nestled her little red head against his shoulder and brought him peace.

Back in St. Louis a search had been instituted for a young lady who had sprung into interest through having become an heiress most unexpectedly. She had been stolen by gypsies, it was surmised, and taken West, and Col. James, the lawyer, sent his clerk, young Arthur Dennison who had taken his mother's name of Stanley to look for her. Tom Bradshaw, a fellow clerk, overhearing the Colonel's instructions to Arthur, changed the description given him, and getting to the ground first, married a girl he was sure was the heiress, only to find that poor little "Carrots," freckled and ragged, but good and true, was the missing child, that old "49" was Arthur's father, and had struck it rich at last in the claim he had worked for twenty years, and that his action brought happiness to every one but himself.

"A CUP OF COLD WATER" (Sept. 21).—Many years ago, just after California became a part of the Union, and before the American influence had exerted much power over the old and splendid Mexican families, the Senora Inez de Miguel lost her beautiful little daughter Juana at the hands of the notorious bandit, Jose, who stealing the child as it played away from the side of a careless duenna, carried it to the mountain fastnesses, in order to obtain a heavy ransom.

He was pursued by the rurales of that time, a sort of Mexican Vigilantes, and was compelled to flee so far away that finally he took refuge in the ravines of the Sierra Madres, above the little Indian and Mexican mission of Paia, where the good and self-abnegating Padre, Antonio ministered to the wants, spiritual and temporal of his little flock, and was waited on by the gruff but kindly old Nita, his housekeeper.

Hard pressed and nearly starved, Jose begged the padre for food, and was given both food and shoes from his slender store, escaping to the brush just in time to avoid the rurales who rode up and asked the Padre if he had seen the bandit. He gave a non-committal reply, but Nita, not so charitable, pointed out the way he had taken, and the riders were soon on the track of the hunted wretch. Dashing through the sage they overran the wife of Jose, who gave her life for that of the stolen child, and Jose was captured as he tried to take shelter with the Priest who had shown him such kindness.

The leader of the band told how they had run down the woman, and Antonio and Nita hastened to find her. Beneath her torn and crushed body lay the little Juana, and the Padre supposing her to be Jose's daughter, took her to his home and heart.

The years passed by and Juana had given her love to a young American, who was looked upon most favorably, too, by the now aged and weak Padre. Her beauty had won for her another and less favored suitor, a passionate young Mexican, Garcia by name. At this time, the Senorita Inez was traveling to the north, and stopped at San Luis Rey, where she heard that her old friend and father confessor, Antonio, was near by at Pala. She wrote him that she would visit him and Varney, the American, volunteered to guide her. In his absence, Garcia attacked Juana, but the old Priest came to her rescue by threatening him with the anathema of his church, and soon after, the party arrived from San Luis, and Senora Inez recognized in Juana the lost child of her youth by a cross she had worn.

EDISON.

"THE SHERIFF" (Sept. 16).—The sheriff is a youngish man devoted to his wife but of such unyielding integrity that he has no patience with his brother-in-law who is a young man more weak than vicious, putting in most of his time at gambling. Being absolutely without funds, this young man conceives the desperate idea of holding up a stage-coach, thinking probably as all gamblers do, that if he can only get some money to start with he will have no trouble in re-establishing his finances. The actual hold-up of the stage is not shown on the screen, but it is made evident that the coach has been robbed and that the robber got away with the mail bags after receiving a wound in the arm. As the sheriff is out on the trail of the robber the latter comes to his home and his sister meeting him, is not long in getting at the facts. Repentant, he promises, if allowed to escape, to lead a better life and she aids him unknown to her husband, who she is perfectly certain would never allow a guilty man to escape, even though he were a relative. So, with a woman's art, she keeps the sheriff in the house by suddenly arousing his jealousy so that for the moment all thoughts of his duty go out of his head.

Suddenly the sheriff's riderless horse comes back to his house with a note from the brother saying that he is returning all that was stolen from the stage-coach and that with God's help he will lead a better life henceforth. The wife is forgiven for her innocent deception.

"THE SAILOR'S LOVE LETTER (Sept. 19).—Jack, a sailor, comes ashore and falls in with two pretty girls. One girl tries to outdo the other, and win his love. One night he visits the girl of his choice, Mary, and makes love to her. Fate brings Nora there, too, and she tries to win his love. Nora asks him to see her home, and this he reluctantly consents to do. Here fate again intercepts, and Jack leaves Nora in the hands of one of his friends, whom he meets. Then he hastens back to his true love.

Jack is suddenly called away. He has no time to say "good-bye" to his little girl, so he writes a letter and entrusts it with a friend to be delivered. Here Nora again intercepts and agrees to deliver it herself. She encounters Mary and she shows her the letter. Nora does not divulge the fact that it is for Mary and not for her, as the envelopes are addressed "Dearest," so Mary goes away heart-broken.

Her sorrow brings on brain fever. Jack returns in a week, and Nora confesses her guilt.

"AN UNKNOWN LANGUAGE" (Sept. 20).—Two young people, plighted lovers for many years past, play a joke on their fathers, who are old linguists, by writing a letter in a reverse hand. One old man claims it to be archaic Greek, while the other says it to be old Hebrew. A quarrel ensues which terminates by both vowing that his child shall not marry the other's. The young people are forbidden to call upon one another, so they resort to the phonograph. The young man dictates a message into the machine, telling his fiancée to elope with him. He has the record delivered with all possible speed. At the proper time they meet at their trysting place. Both fathers start in pursuit in automobiles only to reach the river to see their children far away. The old men take another boat, which capsizes, giving the two a good ducking. The lovers come to their fathers' aid, and everything is explained.

"THE BATTLE OF TRAFALGAR" Sept. 22).—We show Lord Nelson leaving the admiralty room where he makes his famous speech and then introduce him with his captains giving the details of that wonderful plan of attack which was carried out to the letter at Trafalgar, the inspirations of the captains and their enthusiastic toast. We are then carried along to the day before the battle when the men are writing their last letters home. Here a beautiful scenic and photographic effect is introduced as the vision of the sweetheart of one of the lieutenants fades into view. This gives an opportunity to introduce that famous episode of the letter in which Lord Nelson called back the mail ship for a single message and which is endeared to the hearts of all those who sail the sea.

We are then carried along to the morning of October twenty-first, Eighteen Hundred and Five, when the fleet of the enemy is sighted. The decks are cleared for action and the hoisting of the colors is portrayed with all the solemnity of the occasion before entering the battle. The correct incident of the hoisting of the famous signal "England expects every man to do his duty" is splendidly portrayed and carried out in every detail, and we note the pathetic touch in Nelson's life in bidding farwell to his captains having at the time a presentiment of his own death.

We now get to the little human touch in his life and learn the true character of the man; for, in his last entry in his diary before the battle, he makes peace with his maker. And now we come to that wonderful spectacular picture of the real battle of Trafalgar. We see the ships in action, the firing of the guns, the ships caught on fire and then the camera switches to a close view of the deck of the Victory where human life is sacrificed by the hundreds, the fighting top of the Redoubtable, the fatal shot and Nelson's fall. We then see that wonderful character in his death, the solemnity, the beauty and the pathos of it all being carried out by the Edison players in all its grandeur; his farewell to Captain Hardy, the last kiss, the news of the victory and finally his death.

"THE BIG DAM" (Sept. 23).—Young Bedford is accepted by a girl who loves and marries him, thereby making Dillon, the rejected suitor, an enemy for life. Both men are contractors, and put in a bid for a large dam to be completed within a year, under a forfeit of $25,000. The contract is awarded Bedford, which makes Dillon more vindictive. We are shown scenes of the work in progress. Bedford is getting worried as to whether he will be able to get the work through on time. At this juncture Dillon disguises himself, and gets Bedford to hire him as a foreman. As soon as he gets to work he does his best to keep the men from working as hard as they did.

Time goes on until it is but two days from the expiration of the contract. Dillon writes a fake telegram to Bedford, saying that he can get a number of men from a neighboring town, by making personal application. Bedford hurries there immediately. While away, Dillon succeeds in getting the men to stop work. All cease with the exception of one man who informs Mrs. Bedford of the situation.

CINES CO. of ROME

Studios and Factories, Rome and Padova

CAPITAL { Preferred Stock Lire 2,000,000
Ordinary Stock, 3,750,000
Fully Paid-up Lire 5 750.000

EXCHANGE MEN WRITE TO US FOR PARTICULARS OF OUR FIRST RELEASE

Branch for the United States of America
445 Broome St., cor. Broadway
New York City

TELEPHONE, SPRING 9232

TELEGRAPHS, CINES NEW YORK

Your Business TO US Means Dollars to You

Because we can save you MONEY on every foot of Positive and Negative Stock you use.

LUMIERE
Cinematograph Film
IS GUARANTEED

Perfect in Manufacture
The Acme of Perfection
Uniform and Reliable

3½ cents per foot (unperforated)

¼ cent. per foot extra for perforation

All Orders Filled Promptly. Send us yours.

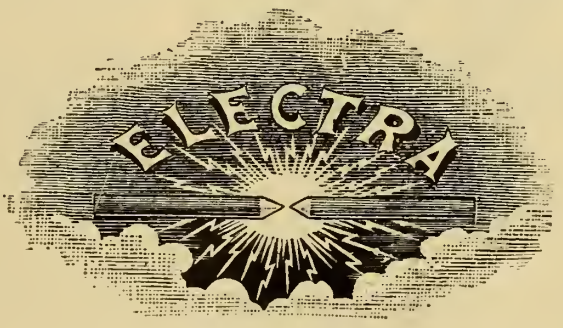
Lumiere Jougla Co.
75 Fifth Ave., (Between 15th and 16th Sts.)
New York City

PHONE 531 STUYVESANT
Chicago Branch - 30 East Randolph St.

NOW BOOKING
EASTERN STATES ONLY
LOUISE M. MARION
IN HER OWN NOVELTIES
PATRIOTIC AND ILLUSTRATED POEMS
REFINED ENTERTAINING
TERMS REASONABLE

LOUISE M. MARION
PRESENT ADDRESS
29 South 12th Street Newark, N. J.

Great Novelty and Drawing Card



•TRADE MARK•

"ELECTRA" Pink Label CARBONS

cost more than others, but when taken into consideration with the superior service they give, they are more than worth the difference in price.

Don't experiment with the so called "equal to ELECTRA" kind, but specify the genuine "ELECTRA," Pink Label CARBONS.

The immense superiority of "Electra" Pink Label Carbons lies in the absolute mechanical and scientific perfection of their manufacture in conjunction with the high grade materials with which they are made.

They are always uniform, and prompt shipment can be depended on.

Sole Importer

HUGO REISINGER
11 Broadway New York City

Changeable ILLUMINATED Program Sign

Easily operated, quickly changed, inexpensive. : :

Interchangeable letters stenciled in metal, specially arranged for any program. Illumination of each subject controlled individually.

Write for descriptive matter and money making particulars.

Zenith Manufacturing Co.
P. O. Box 252 CINCINNATI, OHIO

Dillon on being addressed by Mrs. Bedford, tears off his disguise, thereby disclosing the whole plot. She holds up Dillon at the point of a revolver, until the men go back to work. The work is finished within the contracted time; Dillon gets his just deserts, and everything ends happily.

BIOGRAPH.

"DAN, THE DANDY" (Sept. 18).—The opening of the picture impresses one that the family is expecting the arrival of a most important personage, and such is the case, for the father expects the return of his only son from college in whom he had set great hopes, only to have them crushed into absolute digust upon the entrance of his son who has become a pronounced mollycoddle. The father at once sets about to cure the son of his present milksop nature by engaging the services of a tramp to taunt manhood into his son. This tramp proves to be a wealthy club-man disguised, in quest of new sensations, and enters into the spirit of the game with vim. This, however, proves fruitless. Still, the son's interest in a wealthy young heiress arouses hopes in the father for he sees another plan —jealousy. To bring this about he gives a house party and the pretended tramp monopolizes the girl's attention. Jealousy is aroused, but Dan reasons he hasn't the sufficient sand to back his rage up, so he repairs himself to a gymnasium where later we see him entirely transformed, and so, when next he encounters the quasi tramp, the father has reason to be proud of him.

"A CONVENIENT BURGLAR" (Sept. 21).—Mrs. Gay planning to visit mother, Gay feels a good time with the boys in sight. Wifey, however, is prevented from going just as she arrives at the railroad station, and catches Gay just as he is about to leave for the roof garden. He enters, though, in time to prevent one of Gay's friends from escaping. This friend pretends to be a burglar and Gay gets out by taking the supposed burglar to the police (?). Roof gardea now for theirs. However, Gay stays away too long and gets in bad.

"WHEN WIFEY HOLDS THE PURSE-STRINGS" (Sept. 21).—Mr. Goodhushand is forced to hand over every cent of his salary to wifey. He is allowed fifty cents for spending—how generous. He meets some of his friends and they stick him for a large bar-bill, for which he gives an "I O U." He later plans to pay this by "losing" his wife's watch and having her advertise and offer a reward for its return. The scheme would have worked if his accomplice hadn't been disloyal.

MELIES.

FOR $200 (Sept. 21).—Scotty's only daughter, Ethel, was becoming gradually blind. Doctors made an examination, and concluded that an operation was necessary to save the girl's sight, the cost of which would be two hundred dollars. Scotty had not the required sum and to make things worse, lost his job at the factory.

At this state of affairs, Scotty, determined to save Ethel from a bitter life, set out into the world to find work. His wanderings led him to an oil well, where a goodly foreman pressed him into service.

It was not long before Scotty was sent out on a special job near the wells. Meanwhile, the foreman's little girl had started from her mother's side and wandered to dangerous ground near a cliff. Scotty saw the little one and risked his own life to rescue her. He climbed the treacherous precipice and carried the child safely to the wells. His heroic act was witnessed by the frantic mother through a surveying instrument.

At the wells Scotty fell, exhausted, and was carried to the foreman's house. On regaining consciousness he told of his own little girl back home becoming more and more blind every day, and to save whom he was struggling. His tale struck deep into the hearts of the men, all of whom had witnessed his valliant deed. It was voted to take a collection, and, with the foreman as the largest contributor, Scotty was enabled to save his daughter from a calamity shortly worse than death.

Independent Film Stories

NESTOR.

AT PERRY'S RANCH (Sept. 13).—Weary and disheartened, Jack Roberts sank down upon the steps of their little cottage—the sole support of his widowed mother, and for weeks he had been out of work. Suddenly, as he glanced over the "want column," his eyes brightened: "Wanted men for Western railroad; good wages; free transportation." Jumping up, the young man hurried to the address given, and there, although the agent demurred at his size, he was finally commanded to report within the hour.

Upon his arrival in the West, however, the timekeeper, after looking Jack over, sarcastically informed him that they wanted men, not kids. Thereupon an argument arose, for what Jack lacked in inches he made up in pluck. Ranchman Perry's timely interference, however, put an end to what might have ended uncomfortably for the young man —after which Jack very gladly accepted Perry's kind offer to try his luck on the ranch.

As the months flew past, the new cowboy grew to like his work more and more, and ere the year was over, he had sent for his mother. But before she arrived—on account of his attentions to the ranchman's daughter, Jack had been challenged by the foreman to fight a duel. Knowing himself to be but a poor shot, the young man retired to some distance from the bunk-house, put up a target, and started to blaze away; and although each shot went wide of the mark, Jack had become thoroughly interested. Suddenly he heard a cry of pain from the bunk-house—it proved to be Bert Rankin, the foreman, whom the young cowboy had accidentally shot, and notwithstanding the fact that Bert knew the shot was accidental, he angrily accused Jack of shooting him down like a dog, as soon as the boys appeared, and insisted that they send at once for the sheriff.

So it was upon her arrival that Mrs. Roberts found her son in the hands of the sheriff. Hurrying to Bert, she implored him to vindicate her boy; this he at first stubbornly refused to do, but as he drank in her sweet gentle voice, he suddenly beheld, as in a dream, his own mother, listening to his evening prayer. With a mighty effort, the foreman dragged himself to where the boys were assembled—and there, in the presence of all, he brokenly confessed the truth.

MUTT AND JEFF AND THE NEWSBOYS (Sept. 16).—What is the use of having a bunch of real money if one cannot invest it and make the pile rise? Mutt and Jeff take their fortune—ten dollars—and buy stocks; their gambling spirit comes to the surface, and they madly plunge into the abyss of speculation.

The market rises, and the ten spot soon earns two hundred dollars. Jeff, who is not such a sport, is eager to stop right here—two hundred plunks look good to the little fellow. Mutt, however, is not so easily satisfied; his Oliver Twistian trait makes him holler for more. So it happens that more stocks are bought; but Dame Fortune is fickle, and but one solitary dollar remains to be divided between the luckless twain.

Jeff, furiously angry at Mutt, severs partnership and goes his own way alone. Mutt, crushed by the loss of his chum, meanders away in the opposite direction.

From a big newsboy Jeff receives the gladsome information that little fellows coin money at selling papers. Jeff enters this promising field, and ere long becomes the owner of a busy news-stand.

Meanwhile Mutt encounters a small newsie who is so prosperous as to be able to make an occasional present of his wares. Mutt takes a free paper; he also takes a cue; and, in knickers, we soon see him with a bundle of papers shouting "Extra! Extra!" His efforts, however, are not crowned with success, and later he is obliged to take a job peddling papers for Mr. Jeff.

Things go fairly well with the big fellow, until he attempts to buy a drink at one of the corner emporiums. Being a boy, they refuse to serve him; he remonstrates, and a crowd gathers. A truant officer saunters upon the scene and pinches Mutt. When Jeff hears of the sad predicament in which his elongated companion finds himself, he promptly decides to take care of him. He goes to court to reclaim his "son," and after a series of highly complicated scenes, the climax is reached amid an uproar of laughter.

YANKEE.

THE STAR REPORTER (Sept. 18).—When the police, coroner and the public in general had decided that the nephew of Captain Sanford was guilty of his death, it took the sharp eyes of Bess Reynolds, the star reporter of one of the daily newspapers, to detect a flaw in the chain of circumstantial evidence which would probably send an innocent man to the death chair.

Receiving permission from the editor to sift the death of the captain to the very bottom, she follows a plan common among reporters and more often acknowledged as superior to the tactics of the detective force and clears the young man from the charge of murder. But the editor not only wanted to clear up the mystery, but was also looking for a beat; he holds a press in readiness and when Miss Reynolds brings in her copy it is immediately set up by the waiting compositors, then locked up in a form, rushed to the press room, and two minutes later the cry of EXTRA is heard on the street, in the shrill voices of the Metropolitan newsboy.

THE GIRL AND THE CHAUFFEUR (Sept. 22).—The summer residents of a famous seaside resort were shocked out of their aristocratic skins one morning by the news of an elopement of one of their pampered daughters with her handsome chauffeur, not to mention the fact that the girl had taken her prize winning bulldog with her.

The parents of the eloping bride had been arranging for a marriage of their daughter with a nobleman who possessed an empty title and did not for a moment consider that their daughter would be flattered by such a union. But the love of her liberty loving and democratic ancestors flowed in the veins of the young lady and when she found that the handsome chauffeur was a thoroughbred, well educated and a well-bred American, she upset her parents' well-laid plans and promptly fell in love with him.

With the encouragement of the little woman who braved all to be his wife, the young husband soon became a wealthy man and when his father-in-law is on the verge of ruin, he, in a frank and manly way offers him all his money to tide him over his difficulties.

The father then realizes the worth of his son-in-law and freely forgives the elopers and takes them to his heart.

POWERS.

LOST IN A HOTEL (Sept. 19).—A stage-struck young lady joins a theatrical company and finds out that on the seamy side of the curtain is also the seamy side of life. Being much frustrated by the exciting nature of her new calling she finds it impossible to sleep, so in her kimono she visits the room of one of the show girls in the same hotel. Long after midnight the nervous maiden starts back to her own room through the halls of what appears to be a great wilderness of a hotel. She has lost her way or forgotten her number. It seems that she gets into nearly every other room before she finds her own. There are many queer games going on in country hotels after midnight and the abrupt way in which she interrupts some of them is what furnishes the comedy.

Being a young lady of some "Home Training" she decides that the "road" is no place for her, and leaves the troupe flat on its back as she departs for home and mother.

AN OLD-TIME NIGHTMARE (Sept. 19).—A group of boys are fishing by a pond. One of them was more thoughtful than the others in providing himself with a large wedge of pie. In the laws of Boyland possession is 99 points of the law. A piece of pie in the stomach is worth two in the hand. The pie is stolen by Tommy and his chums, who establish their right to it by running faster than the loser of the pie.

The pie did not set well on the stomachs of the youngsters who fell asleep at the foot of a tree, weary after their long run. The pie causes Tommy to dream; and a wondrous dream it is. Being somewhat of a robber, he dreams that he robs a bird's nest. He quarrels with his chum over a division of the eggs and they part company. Walking through the field Tommy is confronted by a sparrow his own size, who accuses him of robbery and calls a bird policeman who arrests the frightened lad and locks him up in a large bird cage.

The trial of Tommy is a very solemn affair. The birds of the forest have assembled in the court room of the feathery kingdom and the caiprit faces old Judge Eagle, stern and forbidding. The bird jury brings in a verdict of guilty and Tommy is sentenced to die. The solemn procession to the block begins, where the lad is to be beheaded. Slowly the Dove minister leads the death march followed by a committee of wise owls. The Rook, the Linnet, the Stork, the Robin and the Wren and the bluebird, all are there for this serious case. Behind Tommy walks Mr. Crow, the executioner. They arrive at the block and just as the axe is about to descend Tommy wakes up. His chum wakes, too, and proposes that they rob a bird's nest, but Tommy has seen things from a bird's point of view and never again will he so heartless as to rob a bird's nest.

RED STAR'S HONOR (Sept. 23).—Red Star, an Indian brave, and Jim Johnston, a cowpuncher, become fast friends and vow eternal friendship. Their friendship is known to those on the ranch, who do not regard it as anything but a queer fancy on Jim's part. Like most white men in the cow country, the ranchmen have no use for an Indian and Jim is like them except in his regard for Red Star. There is a mutual admiration between them that needs no explanation or analysis.

On the ranch were many hands of many kinds: greasers, half-breeds, Chinamen, negroes and Indians. In a mixed crew of that kind there is sometimes danger and it requires a stout heart and an iron hand to rule them all in peace. The ranchman was a fearless man, but no man is proof

MANAGERS! AND SINGERS! READ!

We can supply you with the best singers, musicians and operators in the business. I personally try out each applicant. I have had nine years' experience in this line. Write or wire if in need of good people

The Columbia Theatrical Exchange

O. C. PHILIPS, Gen. Mgr. Randolph Bldg., 145 N. Clark St., Chicago, Ill.

"La Cinematografia Italiana ed Estera"
IS ITALY'S LEADING PAPER FOR THE ANIMATED PICTURE
PUBLISHED FORTNIGHTLY.
32, 36 and 40 large pages, 8 shillings per annum ($1.60).
Editor-prop'r: Prof. GUALTIERO I. FABRI,
Via Cumiana, 31 (Barriera S. Paolo) Torino, Italy

Films For Sale

500 Second-Hand Films
All Makes : $5.00 up
Send for Catalogue
GEO. W. SEIXAS
Film Broker
32 Union Sq., East NEW YORK
Phone 905 Stuyvesant

FIRST OPPORTUNITY
To Rent or Lease
The Great Feature Films of the
21st Confederate Reunion and Parade
3 REELS — 2,300 FEET
These are the original, official pictures and only ones ever taken of a Confederate Reunion
FOR TERMS, WRITE THE SOLE OWNERS:
Southern Historical Views Co., Inc.
Little Rock, Arkansas

Motion Picture Handbook
FOR
Managers and Operators
Price $1.50
Postage Prepaid
MOVING PICTURE WORLD
125 E. 23rd Street : New York City

Ornamental Theatres
PLASTER RELIEF DECORATIONS
Theatres Designed Everywhere
Write for Illustrated Theatre Catalog. Send us Sizes of Theatre for Special Designs
The Decorators Supply Co.
2549 Archer Avenue :: CHICAGO, ILL.

When Your Picture Machine Needs Repairing
Why don't you send it to us?
We have the best equipped machine shop in the country and can repair any make of machine. Write us and get acquainted.
We buy second hand machines.
GEO. M. HOKE SUPPLY CO., 176 N. State St., Bet. Lake & Randolph Chicago, Ill.

In answering advertisements kindly mention
THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD

HALLBERG, "THE ECONOMIZER MAN" Exchanges NEW MACHINES FOR OLD!

Stop Tinkering Your Old M. P. Machine. Write me, stating Make, Factory Number, and Condition of your machine, also what make of new machine you desire—I WILL DO THE REST!
Any Old Machine Will Project a Picture. Any OF the Latest Models Will Give You a Good Picture. When Used in Connection with the Hallberg Standard Economizer, You Get the Best that Money Can Buy, Not only in Saving on Your Electric Bill, but in Quality of Light on Screen. If You Are Using any Other Make of Current Saver, Write for my Exchange Proposition for the "Hallberg," Stating Make You Have, and Particulars of Your Current.
All makes Moving Picture Machines, Supplies, Electra Carbons Etc., always in stock.
Electric Fans for either A. C. or D. C. - $7.50 and up
Exhaust Fans for either A. C. or D. C - $15.00 and up
Complete line of Opera Chairs and all supplies for M. P. Theatre
I EQUIP YOUR THEATRE COMPLETELY -:- WRITE FOR CATALOG W. 6
J. H. HALLBERG, 36 East 23rd St., New York

against a coward's bullet. After a quarrel over a trivial sum a half-breed in a sullen, revengeful mood kills his employer from ambush and slinks away.

Trouble begins to brew. The cowboys are determined that somebody shall suffer for the outrage, and it does not require very much evidence to convince them. In the absence of any apparent motive, they jump to the conclusion that it must have been Red Star because he was the last dark-skin to be seen around the spot of the murder.

Red Star is seized and accused of the crime. It is more necessary for him to prove that he did not commit the crime than it is for the cowboys to prove that he did. At this point Jim Johnston intercedes in behalf of his friend, Red Star. He delivers an eloquent plea for the man he believes is innocent. The cowboys listen respectfully, but Jim's argument cannot bring a dead man back to life and they decide to string Red Star up to a tree. Jim again pleads with his companions to allow the redskin an hour's leave to go and bid his squaw good-bye. He agrees to give himself as a hostage and to die at the rope's end if his Indian friend does not return. Jim's strong faith at this critical time impresses the cowboys that there must be something to the redman and decide to parole him an hour with the understanding that if he does not return Jim Johnston shall expiate the crime with his own life. Jim's faith is that strong in Red Star that he does not hesitate to stand responsible.

On the way to his tepee, Red Star is waylaid and captured by the half-breed murderer, who has been taking in matters as an innocent bystander. He wants to hold the unfortunate Indian until the cowboy is hanged, thinking perhaps that will end the affair. In his plan he is frustrated by an Indian boy who witnessed the murder. This boy hastens to the tepee and informs Red Star's squaw how things are going. Together they proceed to where Red Star is bound and helpless. Releasing him, all three proceed to the scene of the intended lynching, where the intimidated boy tells of witnessing the crime and how he had been threatened into silence by the half-breed. Red Star is exonerated and all hands join in a still and determined hunt for the guilty man, who is captured and made to dance his last jig at the end of a rope.

IMP.

THE GREAT CHARLESTON HURRICANE FLOOD (Sept. 18).—This is a timely film showing the havoc wrought on the east coast of the Atlantic Ocean, the latter part of August, when the waves rolled mountain high and the loss of life and the damage to shipping was great. The views were taken in Charleston, S. C., and show the fury of the storm vividly. The damage to docks, streets and buildings was almost beyond belief, trees being uprooted by the force of the wind and wharves being dashed to pieces by the fury of the waves, with freight cars overturned and buildings wrecked. It was the severest storm experienced on the coast for years and many vessels lost at sea. The views were taken in the rain and wind by an Imp photographer, who was hastily despatched to the storm center and succeeded in getting some fine views of the wrecked city. (Copyrighted, 1911, by Independent Moving Pictures Company of America.)

"THE BICYCLE BUG'S DREAM" (Sept. 18).—A convict is visited by a minister who offers him consolation. The prisoner conceives the idea of escaping in the garments of the dominee, pounces upon him and exchanges clothing.

Making good his escape from prison, he appropriates a bicycle and a funny chase ensues. There is an exhibition of trick riding that is marvelous, the prisoner being chased. He performs all sorts of seemingly impossible antics to return to prison and again take up a position on his rude bunk. He awakes to discover it has all been a dream and his astonishment is genuine. (Copyrighted 1911 by Independent Moving Pictures Co. of America.)

"BY REGISTERED MAIL" (Sept. 21).—Amos Grantly is a poor mechanic with a wife and child to support. Fortune does not favor him in the way of steady work and the family purse is depleted. About this time he receives a letter from a wealthy aunt offering to adopt his only child, little Ethel. Grantly and his wife seriously consider the offer. They love the child but the prospect of having it reared in comfortable circumstances with advantages, they find is impossible to give her, is taken into consideration. They weigh the matter carefully and finally, after many misgivings, they consent to the plans of the aunt. There is a tearful parting with the child. Parental love is strong, but by a heroic effort they decide to bear up under the sorrow.

After the child is gone the home is desolate; the parents are truly bereaved and their grief is intense. Grantly goes to work and he sees the children of other workmen bring them dinner, happy and contented. He returns home from work to find tots waiting for their parents and he is grief stricken. The mother misses the child and the parents weep in sorrow with arms clasped about each other.

At first Ethel is delighted with life at the home of her wealthy aunt, who is kind to her. She is surrounded with every luxury, her slightest wish gratified—but it is not home. She misses her parents and grieves for them. At last she can bear it no longer and determines to return home. She has no money and cannot let her relatives into the secret. She considers the matter and then remembers the kindness of the mailman who delivers letters at her old home.

In her childish ingenuity she conceives the idea of mailing herself home. Securing a stamp she writes her home address on a paper and pins it on her breast. How she is eventually returned home by the men in the mail service is a pretty story. She is finally carried into the presence of her father and mother by the postman and their surprise and joy repays her for the return. (Copyrighted 1911, by Independent Moving Pictures Co. of America.)

ECLAIR.

A JUST GENERAL (Sept 25).—George, a brave and honorable young soldier, sends tidings to his father that on the morrow he will encamp with his regiment, near his paternal roof, and begs father to announce the news to his sweetheart. After arriving home, and greeting his parents, the young soldier sets out to meet his sweetheart, whom he knows he will find at work not far distant. He sees her in the distance, awaiting him on a little bridge. At the same moment, however, he sees his lieutenant, Desvalles, approaching the girl. The lieutenant, struck by the girl's beauty, endeavors to make an impression, but she resents his advances, and as she tries to pass him, he reaches out his hand to detain her. George rushes to the scene, and placing himself between them, "upsets" the lieutenant. Instantly, he realizes the gravity of his offence, and upon reaching home, whither his sweetheart has preceded him, makes known the facts of the incident. As anticipated, the lieutenant makes a complaint, and that evening George is arrested and thrown into prison, for breach of discipline.

The father, a blacksmith, who years ago has nobly served in the Army of the Empire, is disconsolate. At last he conceived a plan to present his son's cause to the Commanding General. Dressing with infinite care, and decorating his broad breast with medals won on the battlefields of glory, the old man with proud, soldierly bearing, presents his case to the General. The Just Commander salutes the old soldier, and after a careful hearing, summons the bold lieutenant and orders him to withdraw his complaint. The father himself carries the Order of Release to the Military Prison, and the son is restored to liberty and to his faithful sweetheart.

AMERICAN.

"THE STAGE ROBBERS OF SAN JUAN" (Sept. 11).—One day after a successful holdup, Slippery Jim is dividing the haul between Tom Haley, his partner, his wife, and himself, when Tom objects to Slippery's wife sharing in the plunder. Slippery thinks otherwise as the risk is as great for his wife as it is to them. Tom becomes abusive and Slippery resents it with a blow. Tom departs in anger, and riding toward town, he comes upon a sign recently posted by the Sheriff, offering $1,000 reward for information leading to the arrest of the San Juan stage Robbers. A plan forms itself in his mind to be revenged on Slippery, and also obtain the reward money. Riding to the Sheriff's house he tells him that he will take him to the stage robbers. The Sheriff calls a posse and led by Tom they ride to the old adobe ruin that has been the robbers' rendezvous.

Slippery's wife is tired of the life of crime and she pleads with him to go to Mexico and live straight. They have just decided to do so, when looking up they see the posse approaching. Taking up their spoils they ride away, hotly pursued by the posse. Slippery is shot in the arm, but they manage to elude their pursuers in the dense thicket, and the posse search for them vainly, and then return to town. Tom Haley knows that his partner must be in one of the hiding places, frequently used by them when hard pressed, and continues his search alone. He comes upon Slippery in a secluded dell, his wife having gone for water to cleanse his wound. He forces the wounded man to mount, and takes him to the Sheriff. Slippery is placed in jail, and Tom becomes the town hero. Aside from the reward offered the boys take up a collection for the treacherous partner.

When Slippery's wife returns to the hiding place, she finds her husband gone and knowing that he must be captured turns her horse toward town to attempt his rescue. En route she passes a hut and sees Tom Haley come out with a shovel and start furtively down the road. She follows him and sees him bury the reward money, and then she goes to the jail to find Slippery busy filing at the bars of his cell. He forces them out and climbing through the window, he writes a note for the Sheriff. They go to the adobe ruin and securing the mail bag ride to where Tom cached the reward money and substitute the mail bag for the gold. Then they start on their journey to Mexico to begin life anew.

The Sheriff visits the jail to find his bird has flown, and seeing the note he opens it and reads:

"Sorry I could not stay for breakfast. Keep your eye on the stage robber that brought me in.

"Slippery."

Taking the note to the stage driver, he shows it to him and asks him if he can identify the other robber that was with Slippery when they held him up. They find Tom at the hint, follow him, and watch him dig up the mail bag that Slippery placed there in place of the gold. His angry cursing is interrupted by the Sheriff and the stage driver, who make him prisoner and lead him away.

Safe across the border, Slippery and his wife pause and look back, then set their faces resolutely forward to a new home and an honest life.

"THE MOTHER OF THE RANCH" (Sept. 14).—James Collins leaves his dear old mother and goes West, where he becomes connected with the Bar Diamond Outfit. He finds the life of a cowboy arduous and the pay meager. The possibilities of owning a herd of his own by blotting brands or branding calves, occurs to him, as it has to many others, who desire quick results from very little effort, and six months later he is a full-fledged cattle thief, branding cattle, under his own registered brand, while ostensibly an honest cowboy in the employ of the Bar Diamond Ranch.

He writes his mother of his success and she, never dreaming of the hazardous occupation her son is following, plans to join him in the West.

Jim grows reckless in his branding and starts blotting his employer's brand. It is soon noticed by the cowboys and they keep a sharp watch for the cattle thief.

At last the ranchman himself discovers the rustler branding cattle and riding over alone, he is surprised to find one of his own men engaged in the nefarious work. He bitterly rebukes him and Jim, drawing his gun, shoots his employer, and then attempts escape. The shot is heard by the cowboys and they come riding over to find their employer dead.

They start after the rustler, and after a long chase they run him down and he is shot. Ed. Neville, the foreman, finds a locket hanging around the rustler's neck and removes it, and the boys carry the body away. Soon a heap of dirt on the prairie marks a murderer's grave, and the cowboys put the last spade of dirt on the mound and hurry back to the bunkhouse.

They are discussing the rustler's crime when a livery rig drives up to the bunkhouse, and a dear old white-haired lady alights and asks for James Collins, explaining that she is his mother.

All the chivalry in their nature is aroused, and the boys determine that this innocent mother shall never know that her son died a criminal and a murderer.

They take her into the bunkhouse, and then hurry away to the rustler's grave, and cover it with flowers.

On their return Ed Neville gently informs her that her son had died an heroic death, and had begged that the locket he wore be returned to his dear mother. They escort her to the rustler's grave and there leave her, that she may be alone with her grief. As she has no ties in the East, the boys ask her to remain with them and be the mother of the ranch.

LUX.

BILL AS A BILL POSTER" (Sept. 15).—Bill gets a job as a bill poster. His zeal in placing his advertisements in every nook and cranny creates much merriment. He finally gets blown sky-high, but, unlike Humpty-Dumpty, he soon gets put together again.

"HIS MANIA FOR COLLECTING ANTIQUES" (Sept. 15).—He and she are engaged on a day's shopping, when they espy a curiosity shop. He, who cannot resist the antique, immediately dashes in and commences to barter with the proprietor for a very handsome suit of armor, which has captured his fancy. The price being agreed upon, the enthusiastic collector must needs have it tried on, and eventually resolves to walk home in it, covered by his overcoat from the gaze of the vulgar. Many amusing incidents take place as the result of the journey, for the suit of armor renders its wearer quite impervious to the assaults of those whose wrath be arouses on the way, and he is even victor in an exciting combat with a professional strong man. Arrived home, however, his exasperated wife, who has been much annoyed by his behavior, discovers that his head is still vulnerable, and consequently commences to belabor him with less consideration than vigor.

CHAMPION.

"SHENANDOAH" (Sept. 18).—In this story of the Shenandoah Valley, a truthful incident of that beautiful region is narrated. It occurred at a time when General Milroy was in the valley. This officer was hated by the people of that section for the reason that his soldier's committed more depredations than any other command in the army.

One day the home of a respectable family was invaded by three drunken soldiers, who among other vile things they did, attempted to desecrate a Confederate flag, which adorned a picture of the lady's deceased husband. She attempted to defend it against the miscreants with her late husband's sword, when at the moment a Union officer rushed in, kicked out the brutal soldiers and restored the insulted flag. By doing this, he won the admiration of the lady and her beautiful daughter.

In revengeful spirits, the soldiers traitorously gave information to the Southern camp which brought a host of Confederates on the scene. Their leader was not liked by either of the ladies of the household. In the presence of the Union officer, the young daughter was given the alternative of marrying the Confederate leader or seeing the Union officer shot in an hour.

Before the hour arrived, however, the bird had flown, and the volley fired into the room where he had been "trussed up" found lodgment in his old

MOVING PICTURE MACHINES SOLD ON EASY PAYMENTS

Write us for full particulars. Here is your chance to start in the moving picture business on a small investment, or if you are already in the business you can buy yourself a new machine without missing the money. We are moving picture specialists. Write us regarding anything pertaining to the business.

Muncie Film and Supply Co.
202 1-2 E. MAIN ST. MUNCIE, IND.

American Moving Picture Machine Co.

MANUFACTURERS OF THE

STANDARD

Automatic Moving Picture Machine

101-102 Beekman Street New York

FIGHT FOR IT

BIDS are invited for the American exhibition rights of the film depict ng the fight between Bombardier Wells and Jack Johnson in England for the championship of the world. This film will be a box office winner. $100,000 was paid by the company that will film the fight for the privilege.

Address B. M. P., care of M. P. World

H. F. HOFFMAN

Lecturer of Special Releases
New York City and Vicinity

Now booking engagements for

Enoch Arden Dante's Inferno

and other feature pictures,

Care MOVING PICTURE WORLD
TELEPHONE, 1344 GRAMERCY

MOTION PICTURE MACHINES

EDISON MOTIOGRAPH POWERS

Stereopticons, Post Card Projectors
Lantern Slides, Repair Parts, Supplies
Carbons, Tickets

Catalog Free on Request

AMUSEMENT SUPPLY COMPANY
105 No. Dearborn St. - - CHICAGO

FEATURE FILM CO., 412 Superior Street Toledo, Ohio

OFFER BOOKINGS ON THE

Temptations of a Great City
Great Train Robbery
Fall of Troy

AND TWENTY OTHER GOOD FEATURES
PLENTY OF PAPER, HERALDS. : : : SUMMER RATES
WRITE TODAY

NOW READY Bound Volume No. 8 JANUARY TO JUNE, 1911

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

Price, Two Dollars EACH

Postage or Express Charges EXTRA

Supply Limited Order Now

MOVING PICTURE WORLD
125 East 23rd Street : : : New York City

WOOD FOLDING CHAIRS

All styles, hard maple. Seats fold independent of legs. Best and cheapest chair on the market for Moving Picture Shows.

Columbus Awning & Furniture Company
832 Ninth Avenue New York City

NEW FIELD
BIG MONEY
EASY WORK

Why don't you think up plots for Motion Picture plays? It's easy, and pays well. We teach you by mail how to write and sell your plots. Many successful graduates.

DEMAND UNLIMITED. FULL DETAILS FREE.

ASSOCIATED MOTION PICTURE SCHOOLS
911 Chicago Opera House Building CHICAGO

MAKE 'EM YOURSELF SLIDES

Make them yourself. Written with pen and ink or typewriter. Three minutes to make a slide. Used for advertising slides, to announce future or feature programmes, for chorus slides when chorus slide is missing. We send four colors of gelatin. The slides look well and any one can make them. They are handy also for announcing vaudeville acts. In fact they may be readily used for anything you may wish to say to your audience.

For the sum of three dollars ($3) cash with order, we will send by express, charges not prepaid, the following:

24 cover glass, 1 package binder strips, 1 dozen mats, 1 instruction sheet, 1 form sheet and 50 strips assorted colors gelatin—enough for from 300 to 400 slides. Order now. Address

UTILITY TRANSPARENCY CO.
1733 West 9th St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

ECLIPSE

KOSMIK FILM

Gaumont

Featuring the Best European Films
A Gaumont Every Tuesday and Saturday
an Urban-Eclipse Every Wednesday

Current Releases

Gaumont Release, Sept. 19th, 1911
About 995 feet.

Jimmie ON Guard

He takes care of the farm, although it proves strenuous for a time.

Comedy-Drama - - About 710 feet.

CROSSING the ALPS IN A MOTOR (Colored)

Nothing greater can be said than "It is a typical Gaumont scenic."

Travelogue - - - - About 285 feet.

ECLIPSE Release, September 20th, 1911
About 1000 feet

IN ANCIENT DAYS

CAST OF CHARACTERS.

Messrs. Bacque,	of the Odeon Theater,	as Burkell.
Gretillat,	of the Odeon Theater,	as Sullivan.
D. d'Ines,	of the Odeon Theater,	as Jefferson.
Mesdames Colonna Romano,	of the Odeon Theater,	as Cleo Burkell.
Grumbach,	of the Odeon Theater,	as Mrs. Burkell.

All stars from this well known theater of Paris.

The story is of a thoughtless father who dreams of Ancient Egypt and learns a valuable lesson from his dream.

"GAUMONT" Release, September 23rd, 1911
1 Reel about 1025 feet

A Heart Breaker by Trade

Telling how four rejected suitors obtain a delightful revenge upon the girls who have jilted them.

Comedy. About 710 feet.

The Culture of Bulbous Flowers

Colored Film

Showing the growth of Hyacinths, Tulips and Narcissuses.

Travelogue. About 290 feet.

REGULAR ADVANCE ANNOUNCEMENTS MAILED FREE

WRITE TO

ECLIPSE

George Kleine

166 N. State St., Old No. 52 State St.

CHICAGO, ILL.

Licensed by the Motion Picture Patents Co.

Gaumont

clothes, which had been stuffed to deceive the wily guards. A negro and his "lady love" play important parts in the unfolding of the plot and their grotesque actions are laughable.

THE STOLEN HORSE (Sept. 20).—In a Western town, a cowboy dashes up at break-neck speed heralding the arrival of the new school ma'am. A large crowd gathers. Her coming with the buckboard loaded with grips and trunks is hailed with delight. Every male of age in the village falls head over heels in love with her; but in a few months only two remain at her heels. Of the two, one was a mean fellow who could brook no interference.

It happened when Rose, the teacher, slipped on the rocks and was slightly injured, that Hank Peters, one of the rivals, chanced along. He immediately dispatched his man, who was riding with him, for a doctor. Then came along Ned Lester, the girl's favorite. "Quick," he cried to Hank, "Ride for a doctor; my horse went lame." But Hank sneered at him and would not even tell him that a doctor had been sent for. Then Ned rushed for Hank's horse, but Hank pulled his gun and prevented him. Ned dashed away for a near-by barn, which chanced to be Hank's, seized a horse and rode off.

Rose recovered sufficiently to go her way without replying to Hank. The latter soon discovered the loss of the horse, and that Ned had stolen it. Of course he knew for what purpose Ned used it, but it didn't matter to him. Hank wanted to get "even." And so Ned was rounded up in short order by the cowboys, charged with horse-stealing, and the offense meant a rope and a telegraph pole. It looked real bad for the moment.

Rose was clever. She simply placed Ned's horse in Hank's barn, then going to Ned's place of confinement, slipped him a note informing him of what she did, and for him to say that he had merely swapped horses with Hank. Hank of course denied this, and stated that Ned's horse had never seen the inside of his barn. Several cowpunchers went to investigate, and sure enough there was Ned's horse.

Hank saw he had been outwitted and at last took his medicine like a man. And when Ned and Rose became "one" he gallantly presented her with the horse that had been "traded on him."

RELIANCE.

"HIS DREAM" (Sept. 9).—A young man celebrates his engagement to a beautiful girl by a drinking bout at the club. Thoroughly intoxicated, he is put to bed and has a terrible dream in which he sees his own wedding. His bride revolts against his drinking habits, and one of his friends makes love to the unhappy girl. The husband, in drunken jealousy, shoots down the man and is about to destroy himself when the police rush in and overpower him. He awakens to find that his cries have attracted the clubmen, who shake him. The dream makes so vivid an impression that he vows never to touch liquor again. In contrast, the girl is shown in her bedroom talking to her mother of the approaching marriage, and before retiring kneeling down in her night-robe and thanking God for her happiness.

"THE COBBLER" (Sept. 13).—The cobbler wins a lottery prize of $10,000. He sends his daughter to boarding school and relaxes into idleness, leading to dissipation. The girl visits her chum's home and falls in love with her brother. The young man's father investigates the character of the father of his prospective daughter-in-law and commands his son to break the engagement. The cobbler's money is soon exhausted and he returns to the old life in the dingy shop. The youth, loyal to his sweetheart, finds them there, and wins the girl.

BISON.

LONE STAR'S RETURN (Sept. 15).—Lone Star, in search of adventure, comes upon another tribe of Indians. He makes presents to the Chief and falls in love with the latter's daughter, Laughing Eyes. Young Deer, in love with the girl, seeing himself supplanted, abducts her, and Lone Star pursues him. In his flight Young Deer meets Lone Star's tribe, and, with the girl, is captured and bound. Lone Star, following the trail, comes to his village and orders the girl released. A conference is held and it is decided to forfeit young Deer's life, and he is taken away by the executioners.

"THE LOST LETTER" (Sept. 12).—In a jealous rage, Borden picks a fight with his rival, Moran, and shoots him. Jumping on his horse he gallops away, thinking he has killed Moran. The latter, up, angrily declaring he will get revenge, following however, has been grazed by the bullet and gets Bordeu. The sheriff, to prevent trouble, goes after them. Borden hears the galloping horses, and being hemmed in decides to destroy himself rather than be strung up. He scribbles a satirical note and shoots himself. The wind blows the letter aside, and Moran's anger vanishes as he sees the lifeless body. The sheriff and posse coming up find Moran bending over Borden, and arrest him. He protests his innocence, but is tried and convicted. His sweetheart finds the letter in the roadway and by a sensational ride saves him from hanging.

AMBROSIO.

"CAIN'S RETRIBUTION" (Sept. 13).—Two peasants love the same girl. The rejected suitor drugs

THE EDENGRAPH
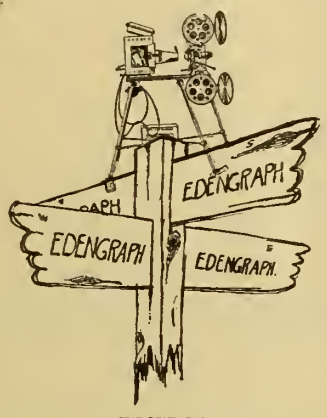
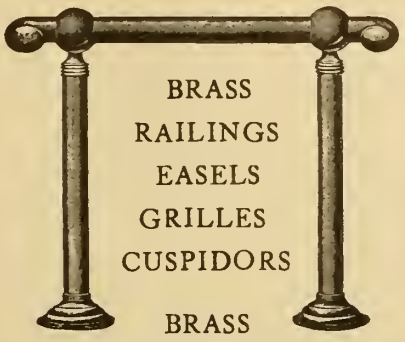
1911 MODEL
LICENSED BY M. P. P. CO.
Gives complete satisfaction in every quarter—North, South, East and West.



WRITE TO
The Edengraph Manufacturing Co.
135 W. Third St., New York, N. Y.
For Sale by All Authorized Dealers

McKENNA



BRASS
RAILINGS
EASELS
GRILLES
CUSPIDORS
BRASS
KICK PLATES
STAIR TREADS. DOOR SILLS

McKenna Bros. Brass Co.
PITTSBURGH, PA.

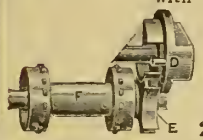
If you are in the Market for
SECOND HAND FILMS
Write to the largest and most reliable Dealers and Importers of these goods in the U. S.

International Film Traders
Incorporated
5 West 14th Street, NEW YORK CITY

"SILVERLIGHT"
Aluminum Motion Picture Curtain
Extraordinary Features Are: Permanent Brilliancy Economy, Flexibility
Non-cracking, Safety, Strength. Send for circular. Dept. M
Ralph J. Golsen Supply Co. 84 Wabash Ave., Chicago

SPECIAL TRIAL OFFER ON AROMA FOAM
The Powerful Perfumed Disinfectant
Immediately upon receipt of your remittance of $1.96 for a four quart order of assorted Geranium, Luxuran, Azuran and Viodor, we will ship you FREE a large compressed air sprayer and an artistically colored glass slide.
Sanitary Service Corporation
82 Wall Street, New York City
Address all communications to Laboratory,
1293 FULTON STREET, BROOKLYN, N. Y.

100 POINTERS ON FILMS
Intermittent and Head Adjusting, together with price of operator's handy tools, etc.



PRICE 50 CENTS
Be an expert and demand good wages.
LAVEZZI MACHINE WORKS
2940 Herndon Street CHICAGO

SPECIAL OFFER!
Four Spiegel Motion Announcement Slides and One Patented Slide Carrier for $5.00
All Theaters must have the Spiegel Patented Slide Carrier to run the Spiegel Motion Slides. National Advertisers are using the Spiegel Motion Slides extensively
Be prepared for the business by having the Spiegel Slide Carrier in your theater. Write for catalogue to your nearest dealer, or to
The American Motion Slide Co., Exclusive Manufacturers in the United States
611 First National Bank Building, Chicago, Ill.

WILL BUY OR LEASE
prints of the following famous works by
CHARLES DICKENS
"Old Curiosity Shop"
"David Copperfield"
"Oliver Twist"
"Tale of Two Cities"
Also POWERS CAMERAGRAPH
Send all particulars in first letter. Otherwise no attention paid.
Address
W. L., Room 903, 507 Fifth Ave., NEW YORK CITY

THE EXHIBITOR'S LIBRARY
Lectures for Feature Films
THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD has prepared for the special benefit of the exhibitors of feature films a pamphlet, "HOW TO PUT ON THE CRUSADERS OR JERUSALEM DELIVERED." This pamphlet contains: A synopsis of the story; a complete set of suitable press notices; a complete lecture (written by W. Stephen Bush); suggestions as to musical program and effects. Price of booklet One Dollar.
SECOND EDITION of "How to Put on the Passion Play," by W. Stephen Bush, now ready for distribution. Price One Dollar per copy. The value of this book is well known throughout the moving picture field and has been enlarged in the second edition.
"Key and Complete Lecture for Dante's Inferno." Indispensable to every exhibitor who wishes to use the film of the Milano Films Company. Contains press notices of suitable and various sizes, a synopsis of the story, a special key good for reprinting and general distribution, and a most complete and exhaustive lecture by W. Stephen Bush, running evenly and smoothly with the action on the screen. Price $2.50.
MOVING PICTURE WORLD
125 East 23rd St. N. Y. City

ON VELVET
The first Orpheum Collection of Moving Picture music (dramatic and descriptive) was issued July 18, 1910. It paid for itself in five months.
"No. 2" Orpheum Collection was issued August 17, 1911. Its only advertisement so far has been a circular mailed to former patrons. Did anybody respond? The first week's sales paid for the engraving and printing. At this rate, by the time this ad appears, No. 2 will also be
ON VELVET
Can you beat it? Don't that show that "The Orpheum Collection" is a winner? This issue (No. 2) is published for piano only, contains a Chinese and several good Indian numbers, two pages of U. S. Army bugle calls and lots of fine dramatic music. Twenty-four separate leaves, same as the first issue. Send for free sample page No. 2. For the next 90 days this music will be sent post paid for 58 cents. Both issues $1.15. Don't wait too long.
Clarence E. Sinn
1501 Sedgwick St. Chicago, Ill.

steep cliff. As time goes on the culprit wins the favor of the girl, but his conscience conjures up accusing visions of the dead man until, mad from fear, he leaps off the very cliff from which his rival met his death.

"TINY TOM WINS A LOTTERY PRIZE" (Sept. 13).—A delightful story, acted by the tiniest actor in Europe. The winning of a rich prize transforms him into a rich man, and he starts out to enjoy life. He has some gallant adventures, including a fierce duel with a jealous husband.

SOLAX.

HER UNCLE'S WILL (Sept. 13).—Ethel Newcomb, a pretty Southern girl, is engaged to Frank Marlow, and they are about to be married. A few days before the wedding she receives news that her uncle, John Waring, has died and left her a large fortune, under the condition, however, that she marry the overseer of her uncle's plantation, Duncan Hale. Should she refuse to marry Hale, she is to lose the money, but should Hale refuse to marry her, she is to get the money.

She talks the matter over with her sweetheart, and they are very much perplexed as to what is best to be done. Ethel's young brother, Bob, however, comes to the rescue by suggesting that he dress himself as a girl with an unattractive wig, etc., and make love to the overseer, Duncan Hale. This plan is successfully carried out, and Bob makes himself such an unattractive female that the overseer abandons the money and escapes in disgust. They ultimately get him to sign a paper, refusing to marry Ethel Newcomb under the conditions of the will, after which they are happily married, and all ends merrily.

THE ALTERED MESSAGE (Sept. 15).—Nellie Graut, the popular daughter of the commanding officer at Fort Reno, has singled out Captain West as the successful suitor. She happens in the telegraph room just as the sergeant has received a message commanding her father to put his entire regiment in the field to capture a band of smugglers. The message directs the Colonel to leave Captain Dean in command of the post. Nellie realizes this will take her lover away, and in a spirit of mischief, she alters the message, to leave Captain West at the post, instead of Captain Dean.

Later the Colonel receives a telegram asking the name of the officer he left in charge of the post. He realizes a serious mistake has been made, and sends an officer back to the post to place Captain West under arrest and return with him at once. Nellie, horrified at what has occurred, insists upon accompanying the officer and her lover back to the field headquarters. On the way the trio is attacked by Mexican smugglers and Nellie departs post-haste for aid. She makes a thrilling dash for the field camp, and on the way meets her father and Captain Standing. The Colonel directs the Captain to return to his troop and immediately proceed to the rescue of the two imperiled officers.

REX.

FAITH (Sept. 14).—The Rev. Barton loses faith in the gospel he preaches, and determines to continue his hypocrisy no longer. He resigns from the church, and leaving a note to his wife and child, he goes out into the world, choosing its wide path of thorns and throes, of sneers and tears. He drifts West and once again resumes man's old battle with the earth, not for its life-sustaining fruits and foods, but for the yellow gold which through the ages has made hearts yellow, hands red, souls black.

Days—and human hearts—break; days—and human hopes—wane; five years elapse. The barren battle is won. He finds gold, but it does not bring him the happiness he bartered for it, and he determines to return to civilization and find contentment in the cities. In making the trip across country, he falls from his horse and injures himself, and he is compelled to seek shelter in a miner's hut. The country round about is famous—or infamous—for the daring desperadoes that infest it, and Barton, suspicious of his host, is on the alert to discover any treachery, or deceit. He does not partake of the food offered him, and when the miner and his family retire, he prepares to stay awake and watch his gold. Sitting moodily before the fireplace, he hears the miner's little daughter reciting her prayers. At once his fears vanish, his suspicions disappear. "They are people of God!" he cries. "They are pure!" Then—he asks himself the question that has harassed man since the first of him saw the dim light, the answer to which we can find nowhere but within ourselves. Why, because they read the Bible, did he lose fear? And the answer comes to his heart; he hears "the small still voice," the wandering music of the world, the echo of infinity, and the realization comes to him—when faith comes, fear goes. The next morning he departs, and returns to the scene of his former life. His wife and child had strayed away; he seeks them, and some Power causes him to find. Fate itself is conquered by Faith.

GREAT NORTHERN.

THE CONSPIRATORS (Sept. 16).—Mr. Wilson, a solicitor, receives a wire from a client who is a confirmed invalid, asking him to call upon him and arrange for the disposal of his stocks and shares. When the wire arrives, Mrs. Wilson is at the office. Bidding adieu to her, her husband accompanies her to the street. His clerk, who is a member of a noted gang of scoundrels, during his absence reads the telegram and hastily prepares a message to the gang, apprising them that there is a good haul to be made. His first epistle does not suit him, and he crumples this up and throws it on the floor. This ultimately brings about his undoing. The clerk leaves the office and joins his confederates, and soon their plans are matured. As Mr. Wilson is hailing a cab preparatory to calling on his client, the gang overpower him and confine him in a dungeon at old Mother S's. Armed with his employer's bag, the clerk then proceeds to call on the client. At the solicitor's office, however, a trusted servant has picked up the incriminating note which says that Wilson must be robbed. He informs Mrs. Wilson, and then Sherlock Holmes is called in. He speedily determines on a course of action, and going to the client, takes that gentleman's place, and is disguised to represent the infirm old man. When the clerk calls, Sherlock Holmes overpowers him, and makes him a prisoner. He then disguises himself as the clerk, and goes to the place where Wilson is detained, and liberates him. The other members of the gang rush in, but are covered by the detective's pistols. Suddenly one of them pulls a cord by the window and Sherlock Holmes disappears into space below. But the police arrive and overpower the ruffians. They are forced to disclose Holmes's whereabouts, and eventually the robbers are consigned to durance vile, and Wilson is restored to his family.

THANHOUSER.

THE LIE (Sept. 19).—A young artist and a business man he thought his best friend, were both suitors for the same girl, and the artist won. The broker concealed his rage under the mask of friendship, and the happy couple never dreamed that he was secretly planning revenge.

The broker had a stenographer, an orphan girl, who was the sole support of her little sister. The stenographer was in financial difficulties and the broker by accident discovered it.

So he proposed to the girl that she aid him in a "little joke," promising that if she did so he would give her, what to her was a large sum of money. Her share in the plot was that she be in the artist's room at a certain hour when the artist would be there, he not knowing of her presence. To strengthen his scheme, the broker induced the stenographer to write a fervid love note, presumably meant for the artist.

The broker's plot worked to a charm. He managed to secure a wax impression of his rival's doorkey, made a duplicate of it, and gave it to the stenographer. Then he waited his time.

While calling at the girl's house, ostensibly to play chess with her father, he heard the artist tell his sweetheart that he would have to go home early as he had important work to do. A telephone message enabled the broker to instruct the stenographer to reach the house ahead of the artist, and she concealed herself in an inside room. The note, dropped on the reception room floor was found by the engaged girl, as the broker had planned it, and she hurried off to confront her supposedly recreant lover.

The stenographer was found in the room and the explanations of the mystified artist were disbelieved. The girl haughtily broke her engagement and the man who had wrecked two lives was happy over the success of his infamous scheme.

But there is generally some little thing that a criminal overlooks that spells defeat in the hour of his apparent triumph. The stenographer and her sister were passengers on a boat, and the artist, broken-hearted and dispirited, was there, too. The little sister fell overboard and the plucky artist, risking his own life, dived over and saved her.

The stenographer realized that the man she had wronged had dared death to help a child, and one that was very dear to her. She did not dare to tell him what she had done, but visited the other woman. To her she confessed everything, blaming the broker, who was present, as the author of the plot.

The artist sat in his studio, too unhappy to work. Life held but little for him, he thought. But in the hour of his darkest dejection, the woman he loved best in the world entered, confessed that she had misjudged him and promised that if he forgave her, they would go through life together, hand in hand, loving, loyal partners. And the efforts that had been made to part them, in the end, only brought them more firmly together.

THE HONEYMOONERS (Sept. 22).—A celebrated man who was married five times said on one occasion, "the most trying thing about getting married is the fool tricks one's fool friends play." And he knew what he was talking about.

A young couple, found to their horror that their kind acquaintances, not content with the usual rice and old shoes, had captured their wedding coach, and decorated it so that everyone would be "wise" to the newlyweds. So the young couple decided to foil them.

While the groom chatted with the guests, the bride cautiously made her escape by the back door and rolled off to the station in an auto, her husband having agreed to meet her there. And the wedding guests were surprised when the groom rushed out alone, and they saw that the laugh was on them and not on the young couple.

But fate sometimes plays unexpected tricks. The bride was on the platform when the train pulled in, but the bridegroom tarried. His taxi broke down and he had to sprint all the way to the station. He arrived in time to motion his bride to get on the train. She did so, but he turned a graceful somersault and when he regained his feet the train had pulled out.

The bride, carried away, finds her woes increasing. She has no money, no tickets, nothing but sorrow. The conductor listens to her gravely, and then puts her off at the next station. Knowing that her husband will undoubtedly take the next train, the bride tramps over the ties, hoping somehow and in some way to reach the city and join him.

In the meantime the unhappy bridegroom finds that the next train will not come along for hours. There is nothing to do except to wait and he does so. Then when the train is a few miles out it is held up by a freight wreck, and the young man decided that a honeymoon is sometimes worse than a nightmare.

The wreck was cleared away in time and the train continued along. The husband in the car was telling a sympathetic acquaintance of his unhappy lot. Suddenly he looked out of the window and saw a little woman crouched by the side of the track, tear-stained and miserable. He recognized her as the bride he had vowed to love and cherish.

Under the circumstances there was only one thing that he could do, and he did it. He pulled the bellrope and stopped the train regardless of the indignation and horror of the crew. Then rushing madly down the track, he picked up his bride and they vowed they would go through life hand in hand, because when they were not together, something awful was more than likely to happen.

SLIDES that ADVERTISE
Particulars on request
EXCELSIOR SLIDE CO.
61 West 14th Street New York City

FOR SALE.—Moving picture theatre, Waukesha, Wis., $600, $20 month rent; 10,000 population; also one at Watertown. Any make of film $5 a reel; song sets, $1; Model B, gas outfits, $15, $20, $25; plush opera chairs, $2; light reducers, $15; used machines, Lubin, Edison, $40; new, $100; new Powers No. 6 and Motiographs, the $225 priced ones, our price, $175. For Rent—Any make film, $1 per reel weekly. Will buy, machines, Passion Play, Johnson-Jeffries Fight, Tale Two Cities, Life of Moses, Uncle Tom's Cabin and others. H. Davis, Watertown, Wis.

BEST FILM SERVICE
at Lowest Prices
Standard Makes of all Machines
Supplies and Machine Parts.
PREMIER MOTION PICTURE SUPPLY CO.
804 Cherry St., PHILADELPHIA, PA.

WANTED by a Film Exchange, energetic, hustling Solicitor for Chicago and also surrounding country. Good opportunity for a man who can get the business. Address,
GLOBE FILM SERVICE COMPANY
H O

READ!
We Rent Films. We Rent FEATURE Films. We Rent All Kinds of Films.
Watch This Space
For Future FEATURE Films.
Feature Film Co.
108 East 12th St., New York

G. W. Bradenburgh

Cinematograph Films

233 North Eighth Street, Philadelphia, Pa

Phone, Market 334

Cable: Brad-Films, Phila.

Code: A. B. C., 5th Edition

Independent Film Service

We are not limited to our buying by any combinations. We can refuse any subject that is poor, other exchanges cannot. We buy films from twenty foreign makers. Others from three. We buy all the feature films for which state rights are sold afterward. We do not rent duped films, and do not be duped by fake combinations of manufacturers and exchanges. They do not combine for the good of the exhibitor, they are not philanthropists.

First class service, 18 reels weekly, $15—3 daily change.

First class service, 24 reels weekly, $24—4 daily change.

First class service, 30 reels weekly, $40—5 daily change.

First class service, 36 reels weekly, $50—6 daily change.

Write for list of Special releases, the very best films obtainable. We provide one sheet, three sheets, and banners for these exclusive releases. Write for lists and prices.

Bargain lists of films from $8 to $50 per reel, ready September 8.

Titles made to your order, 5 ft. minimum, 45c. each, colored.

Ajax Film cement, $1.00 per doz. bottles, works both films.

"High Speed" Professional Rewinders (no toy), $3.00 each.

"Pearl white" condensers, 70c. each.

Leader stock, red or blue, one cent per foot.

Independent Film Service
231 North 8th Street
Philadelphia, Pa.

EXHIBITORS :

We have contracted for the EXCLUSIVE AMERICAN RIGHTS for a series of film productions conceded to be the GREATEST NOVELTIES EVER ATTEMPTED IN MOTION PHOTOGRAPHY, BAR NONE. Correspondence solicited from first-class houses only, as the prices of these features will be prohibitive for the smaller exhibitor.

Motion Picture Supplies

To get the right goods at the right prices call or write

H. A. MACKIE

Wholesale Dealer

853 BROADWAY
Cor. 14th St., New York

Jobber for Edison, Powers & Motiograph Machines.

All Others kept in Stock.

Call and see all makes of machines demonstrated on the mirror screen.

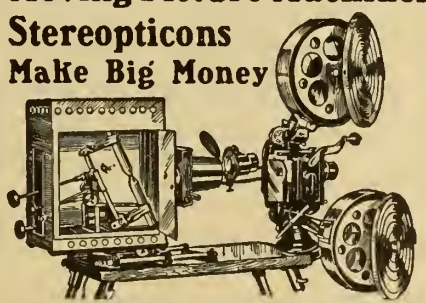
Bargains Bargains

Motion Picture Machines $35 up. Lubin 1906 only $65. Powers No. 6, Edison Model B and Standard a specialty. Model B Gas Outfit. All Opaque Machines. Send for Sup. No. 33 list of Bargains in used Machines, Stereopticons, etc.

MOTION PICTURE MACHINES WANTED

Harbach & Co., 809 Filbert St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Moving Picture Machines
Stereopticons
Make Big Money



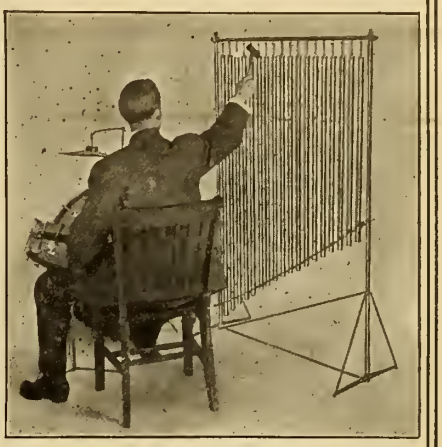
Motion Picture Theatre Supplies

We carry on hand at all times the largest and most complete line of Repairs and Supplies for all Standard Machines, also Tickets, Carbons, Screens, Chairs, etc. Can ship at once. Special Slides made to order. We also handle Motiograph, Edison and Powers Machines. Write today for THEATRE CATALOGUE.

CHICAGO PROJECTING CO.

219 S. Dearborn St. Dept. A. Chicago, Ill.

Small Chimes



Altbough these Chimes are light enough to be used on transient work, tbey are not toys by any means. but a complete set of 18 tones, one and a half octaves chromatic (C to F), with sufficient volume and power to fill any size auditorium.

LEEDY MFG. Co., Indianapolis, Ind.

Gentlemen: I received the Small Chimes O. K., and must say that they are the finest addition I have ever made to my line of traps.

I used them the same week I received them and made a big hit with the audience. No drummer in a Picture House can afford to be without them; they really are a valuable instrument.

Yours truly,
O. J. POWELL,
Theatorium, Mt. Carmel, Pa.

Chimes are not a fad—they have come to stay, and any drummer who intends to keep up with the procession will find our Small Chimes a valuable addition to his equipment.

Try a set—your money back if you are not entirely satisfied.

Price $60

LEEDY MFG. CO.

Indianapolis, Indiana.

ATTENTION

Non-subscribers

Send $1.00 Today

For four months'

Trial Subscription

Sept. 1st to Dec. 31st, 1911

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

Box 226 Mad. Sq. P. O., New York City

Licensed Release Dates

BIOGRAPH.

Sept. 4—The Stuff Heroes Are Made Of (Dr.).. 998
Sept. 7—The Old Confectioner's Mistake (Dr.) 998
Sept. 11—The Village Hero (Com.)..... 675
Sept. 11—The Lucky Horseshoe (Com.)..... 321
Sept. 14—The Squaw's Love (Dr.)..... 998
Sept. 18—Dan, the Dandy (Com.)..... 998
Sept. 21—When Wifey Holds the Purse Strings (Com.) 463
Sept. 21—A Convenient Burglar (Com.)..... 534

EDISON.

Sept. 1—The Declaration of Independence (Hist.) 1000
Sept. 2—New York State Barge Canal (Sc.).1000
Sept. 5—The Three Musketeers (Part I) (Dr.).1000
Sept. 6—The Three Musketeers (Part II) (Dr.).1000
Sept. 8—Jones Ferry (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 9—That Winsome Winnie Smile (Com.). 500
Sept. 9—No Cooking Allowed (Com.)..... 500
Sept. 12—Off the Coast of Maine (Sc.)..... 265
Sept. 12—Under the Tropical Sun (Dr.)..... 375
Sept. 13—The Escaped Lunatic (Com.)..... 500
Sept. 13—For the Queen (Com.)..... 500
Sept. 15—The Lighthouse By the Sea (Dr.)....1000
Sept. 16—The Sheriff (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 19—The Sailor's Love Letter (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 20—An Unknown Language (Com.)..... 985
Sept. 22—The Battle of Trafalgar (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 23—The Big Dam (W. Dr.) 1000

ESSANAY.

Sept. 1—Miss Chatterer's Experience (Com.).. 980
Sept. 2—A Western Girl's Sacrifice (Dr.)....1000
Sept. 5—The Diamond Gang (Dr.)..... 980
Sept. 7—The Dark Romance of a Tobacco Can (Com.) 700
Sept. 7—Never Believe In Signs (Com.)..... 300
Sept. 8—The Wrong Glove (Com.)..... 990
Sept. 9—Broncho Bill's Last Spree (W. Com.) 980
Sept. 12—Two Men and a Girl (Dr.)..... 980
Sept. 14—The Puncher's Law (W. Dr.)..... 980
Sept. 15—The Burglarized Burglar (Com.)..... 980
Sept. 16—The Millionaire and the Squatter (W. Dr.) 980
Sept. 19—Saved from the Torrents (Dr.)..... 980
Sept. 21—All On Account of the Porter (Com).——
Sept. 21—Everybody's Troubles (Com.)..... 980
Sept. 22—Live, Love and Believe (Mil. Dr.).. 980
Sept. 23—An Indian's Sacrifice (W. Dr.)..... 980

GAUMONT.

(G. Kleine.)

Sept. 2—Giving the High Sign to Woman Haters (Com.) .....
Sept. 2—African Sharp-Shooters (Sc.)..... 210
Sept. 5—A Society Mother (Dr.).....1030
Sept. 9—Mated by Chess (Com.)..... 660
Sept. 9—Farming—Old and New Methods (Ind.) 377
Sept. 12—How to Catch a Bachelor (Com.).... 836
Sept. 12—From Bordeaux to Pauillac, France (Sc.) 164
Sept. 16—The Cinematograph Fiend (Com.)... 575
Sept. 16—A Mountain Torrent In Austria (Sc.).415
Sept. 19—Jimmie on Guard (Dr.)..... 710
Sept. 19—Crossing the Alps In a Motor (Sc.).. 285
Sept. 23—A Heart Breaker by Trade (Com.).. 710
Sept. 23—The Culture of Bulbous Flowers (Sc.) 290

KALEM.

Sept. 1—On the War Path (Dr.)..... 955
Sept. 4—Rory O'More (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 6—When Two Hearts Are Won (Com.).1000
Sept. 8—When the Sun Went Out (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 11—A Sheepman's Triumph (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 13—The Express Envelope (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 15—The Alpine Lease (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 18—The Ranger's Stratagem (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 20—Losing to Win (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 22—The Cowboy's Bride (Dr.).....1000

LUBIN.

Sept. 2—The Easterner's Sacrifice (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 4—A Gay Time in Washington (Com.)
Sept. 6—A Question of Modesty (Dr.)..... 600
Sept. 6—Pardon Me (Com.)..... 400
Sept. 7—The Story of Rosie's Rose (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 9—The Ranch's New Barber (Com.)... 600
Sept. 9—Bill's Ward (Dr.)..... 400
Sept. 11—Divided Interests (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 13—His Girlie (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 14—Al Martin's Game (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 16—Cement Rock Blasting (Ind.).....
Sept. 16—The Scheme That Failed (Com.)....1000
Sept. 18—The Senorita's Conquest (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 20—The Life Saver (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 21—The Human Torpedo (Com.).....1000
Sept. 23—Her Inspiration (Dr.).....1000

MELIES.

Sept. 7—The Hobo Cowboy (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 14—A Shattered Dream (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 21—$200.00 (Dr.) 1000
Sept. 28—The Mission Waif (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 7—The Hobo Cowboy (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 14—The Shattered Dreams (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 21—For $200.00 (Dr.).....1000

ECLIPSE.

(G. Kleine.)

Aug. 23—Condemned for Treason (Dr.)..... 980
Aug. 23—The Wool Industry of Hungary (Ind) 135
Aug. 30—Sights of Berlin (Sc.)..... 423
Aug. 30—A King for an Hour (Com.)..... 572
Sept. 6—Clever Beyond Her Years (Dr.).... 675
Sept. 6—Lake Thun in Switzerland (Sc.).... 325
Sept. 13—The Hand of the Law (Dr.)..... 665
Sept. 13—Norwich and Vicinity (Sc.)..... 330
Sept. 20—In Ancient Days (Dr.).....1000

PATHE.

Sept. 1—The Carrot Caterpillar (Ed.) .....
Sept. 1—A Wedding Procession in Bavaria (Sc.) 1000
Sept. 2—A Daughter of the South (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 2—Silver Tail and His Squaw.....
Sept. 4—The Hermit (W. Dr.).....1000
Sept. 5—Pathe's Weekly No. 36 (Top.).....
Sept. 6—Honoring a Hero (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 7—The Red Man's Dog (Ind. Dr.) 675
Sept. 7—Japanese Dice and Butterflies (Sc.).. 328
Sept. 8—Culture of the Dahlia (Ed.)..... 550
Sept. 8—Arabian Types and Customs (Sc.).... 425
Sept. 9—A Tragedy at Sea (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 11—Eva is Tired of Life (Com.)..... 394
Sept. 11—Little Moritz and the Butterfly (Com.) 295
Sept. 11—From Lourdes to Garvarine (Sc.).. 310
Sept. 12—Pathe's Weekly No. 37 (Topical)..1000
Sept. 13—A Prisoner of the Mohicans (Dr.)....1000
Sept. 14—College Sweethearts (Com.)..... 720
Sept. 14—Art Industries In Kabylie (Ind.)... 279
Sept. 15—Madame Tallien (Dr.) 689
Sept. 15—Everyday Life in Mallaca (Sc.).....310
Sept. 16—A Western Memory (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 18—The Fright (Dr.) 754
Sept. 18—Fire Brigade in Moscow (Sc.)..... 230
Sept. 19—Pathe's Weekly No. 38 (Topical)....1000
Sept. 20—An Up-to-Date Squaw (Com.)..... 754
Sept. 20—African Birds and Their Enemies (Ed.) 197
Sept. 21—Starlight's Necklace (Dr.)..... 951
Sept. 22—Old Delhi and Its Ruins (Sc.)..... 285
Sept. 22—Electric Boots (Com.) 426
Sept. 22—Surfing: National Sport in the Hawaiian Islands (Sc.)..... 285
Sept. 23—Gypsy Maids (Dr.) 900

SELIG.

Sept. 4—How Algy Captured a Wild Man (Hist. Com.) 1000
Sept. 5—The Totem Mark (Hist. Dr.).....1000
Sept. 7—A Tennessee Love Story (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 8—The Heart of John Barlow (Dr.)....1000
Sept. 11—Kit Carson's Wooing (Dr.)..... 990
Sept. 12—Dad's Girls (Dr.) 1000
Sept. 14—The Wheels of Justice (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 15—The Voyager (Dr.) 670
Sept. 15—A Sight-Seeing Trip Through Boston (Sc.) 330
Sept. 18—Lost In the Arctic (Dr.) 880
Sept. 18—Noted Men (Sc.) 180
Sept. 19—McKee Rankin's '49'' (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 21—A Cup of Cold Water (Dr.).....1000

VITAGRAPH.

Sept. 1—The Thumb Print (Dr.) 1000
Sept. 2—The Prince and the Pumps (Com.)..1000
Sept. 4—Jealousy (Dr.) 1000
Sept. 4—A Friendly Marriage (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 6—The Willow Tree (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 8—Cherry Blossoms (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 9—Jimmie's Job (Com.).....1000
Sept. 11—Forging (Dr.) 1000
Sept. 12—Her Crowning Glory (Com.).....1000
Sept. 13—The Child Crusoes (Dr.) 1000
Sept. 15—Vitagraph Monthly (Sc.).....1000
Sept. 16—By Woman's Wit (Com.).....1000
Sept. 18—One Flag At Last (Mil. Dr.).....1000
Sept. 19—How Millie Became an Actress (Com.) 1000
Sept. 20—Beyond the Law (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 22—Forgotten (Dr.) 1000
Sept. 23—Over the Chafing Dish (Com.).....
Sept. 23—The Tired, Absent Minded Man (Com.) 1000

FIREPROOF BOOTHS

According to Act passed July 25, 1911 in State of New York.

Upon application, will call and give estimate for construction work at lowest figures.

GUARANTEED TO PASS INSPECTION

H. J. DIXON, General Agent

1510 Broadway - - - Brooklyn.

Classified Advertisements

[Classified advertisements, three cents per word, cash with order; 50 cents minimum; postage stamps accepted.]

. . .SITUATIONS WANTED. . . .

AT LIBERTY—Moving picture operator and electrician would like position. Massachusetts license. Address, B. O. LEUCHT, 280 Oak Street, Clinton, Mass.

AT LIBERTY—Manager, vaudeville, experienced, salary and commission. Recently sold my own theater. Address, George Bowley, care Moving Picture World, 125 East 23rd St., New York City.

AT .LIBERTY—Vaudeville .pianist .and .trap-drummer. References furnished. Salary, $47.50. Can join on wire. One way fare paid. Address, "Leader," care Moving Picture World, New York City.

In or near New York, good address, wants position as assistant operator or doorman. Is first-class sign painter and poster writer. Understands electricity. Terms moderate. Address, C. D. Wood, 210 South Third Avenue, Mt. Vernon, N. Y.

. .THEATER WANTED. . . . .

Wanted to buy or lease Moving Picture Theater in or near New York. H. C. Barrington, 148 Greenpoint Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

WANTED—Will buy or lease moving picture theater in Middlewest. Address, Box 94, Sterling, Mass.

WANTED—Black tent for road photoplay purposes; size about 25 by 60. Must be guaranteed in good condition. Address C. O. Moss, Petersburg, Va.

THEATER FOR RENT.

FOR RENT—The Columbia Opera House, of North Adams, Mass.; population 22,000; capacity eight hundred. Large stage and suitable scenery. Opera, vaudeville and moving pictures. Address, 100 Holden St., North Adams, Mass.

. . THEATERS FOR SALE. .

Moving picture theater for sale or lease, well located. 366 seats. Two No. 6 Powers machines. Full description. Terms and reason for selling on application. Box 713, Jacksonville, Fla.

FOR SALE OR LEASE—A complete up-to-date moving picture theater with a seating capacity of about 200. First-class neighborhood. Selling on account of other interests. Reasonable terms. Call between 10 and 12 at 156 Van Buren Street, near Sumner Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

FOR SALE—Moving picture show. Everything new. No. 6 Powers machine. 175 opera chairs. Capacity 300. Other business. Best location. Will sell at bargain. Address, M. I. Sapiro, Whitewater, Wis.

. .EQUIPMENT FOR SALE. .

FOR SALE—One 1909 Model 1 Motiograph. New York approved, used as sample, splendid condition. Price $145.00 .Will ship C. O. D. on approval, on deposit sufficient to guarantee express charges. Address, Amusement Supply Company, 107 N. Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

FOR SALE—Powers No. 5 and Hallberg economizer, A. C. In perfect condition. Price $125.00. Address, F. Peunino, 525 Grand St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

FOR SALE—Edengraph picture machine. As good as new. Used only two months. Price $110.00. Grand Opera House, Dubuque, Iowa.

FOR SALE—Fort Wayne motor and generator. New. Sell for half cost. Address, P. J. Concannon, Emporia, Kansas.

. . . MISCELLANEOUS. . . .

WANTED—200 second-hand opera chairs for moving picture theater. Address, William Gauthier, Gouverneur, N. Y.

ST. LOUIS CALCIUM LIGHT COMPANY
Established 1887
Oxygen and Hydrogen Gas furnished in tanks for Stereopticon and Moving Picture Machines. All orders to any part of the United States filled promptly.
516 Elm Street, ST. LOUIS, MO., U. S. A.

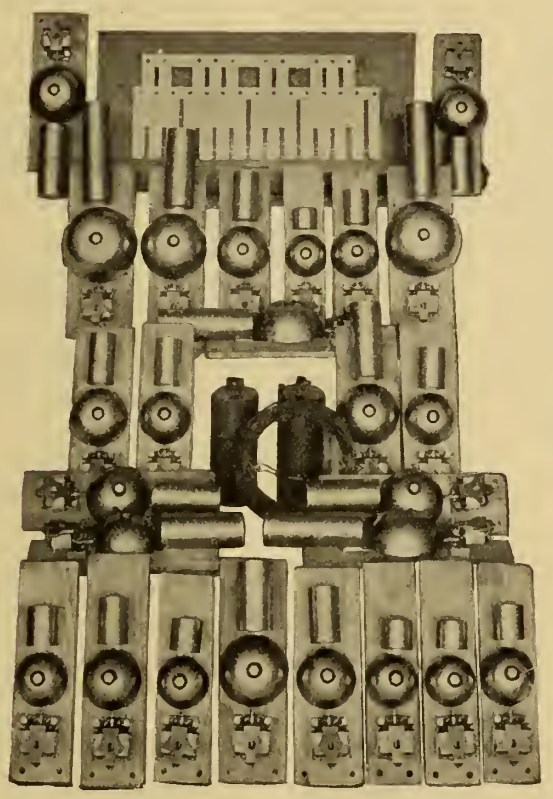
H. F. HOFFMAN
Lecturer of Special Releases
New York City and Vicinity
Care Moving Picture World
Tel. 1344 Gramercy

EAGLE FILM EXCHANGE
WE BUY the entire output of the Independent manufacturers. Ask about our Three-locked reel system.
Prompt service. Day and night service Write, wire or phone
23 NORTH NINTH STREET, PHILADELPHIA, PA.

Deagan Bells

Are a real attraction for Moving Picture Theatres.
So hundreds of satisfied exibitors write us.

ALL PROMINENT SHOW HOUSES USE OUR BELLS, OR OTHER MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS OF OUR MAKE.



Complete set ready to ship.

Be progressive and go one better than your competitor.

A set of Deagan Bells will give distinction to your theatre and increase your patronage at once.

Deagan's Musical Electrical Bells are made of finest bell metal, as per our own formula, and are fitted with our Patent resonaters which add fully 100% to the tone of the Bells as well as making the sound sweet, clear and silvery.

The Bells are played from a key board, same as a piano, and any one can play them with a few minutes' practice. They are correctly tuned to your piano, and can be played as a solo instrument, with or without piano accompaniment, as an accompaniment to songs, during intermission, etc.

The key board can be placed in any desired location and the bells be mounted in any part of the house, on the ceiling, side walls, under seats, corners, odd places, etc., producing the most startling effects to endless surprise and delight of the audience.

Any person can install a set of these Bells in a few hours; no experience is necessary, as complete instructions are included with each set.

We can supply you a complete outfit of these marvellous Bells for $40.00 and up.

Don't miss this opportunity. Write to day for terms and catalogues.

J. C. DEAGAN, 3810 N. Clark St., Chicago

Independent Release Dates

AMERICAN.

Aug. 24—Anna Harris In the Swimming Marathon 500
Aug. 24—Aunty and the Cowboys (Com.).....
Aug. 28—The Western Doctor's Peril (Dr.)...1000
Aug. 31—The Diamond Smugglers (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 4—The Cowboy and the Artist (W. Dr.)..1000
Sept. 7—Three Million Dollars (W. Com.)....1000
Sept. 11—The Stage Robbers of San Juan (Dr.) 1000
Sept. 14—The Mother of the Ranch (Dr.)....1000
Sept. 18—The Gun Man (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 21—The Claim Jumper (Dr.).....1000

CHAMPION.

Aug. 21—When North and South Met (Dr.).... 950
Aug. 23—The Confessional (Dr.)..... 950
Aug. 28—A Daughter of Dixie (Dr.)..... 950
Aug. 30—How Tony Became a Hero (Com.)... 950
Sept. 4—Grant and Lincoln (Dr.)..... 950
Sept. 6—When the Law Came (Dr.)..... 950
Sept. 11—Charley's Buttle (Dr.).....
Sept. 13—The Red Devils (Dr.)..... 950
Sept. 18—Shenandoah (Dr.)..... 950
Sept. 20—The Stolen Horse (Dr.)..... 950

ECLAIR.

Aug. 21—The Edelweiss (Dr.) .....
Aug. 21—How They Work in Cinema (Com.)..
Aug. 28—A Marriage in the Stars (Com.)..... 755
Aug. 28—An Obliging Young Man (Com.)..... 235
Sept. 4—All On Account of a Coat (Com.).... 886
Sept. 11—How Poor Babies Are Reared in Paris (Edu.)..... 630
Sept. 11—How Teddy Lost His Bet (Com.).... 235
Sept. 18—Magic Music (Trick)..... 330
Sept. 18—When the Leaves Fall (Dr.)..... 665
Sept. 25—A Just General (Military Dr.).....1000
Oct. 2—Hearts and Eyes (Dr.)..... 630
Oct. 2—For Your Hats, Ladies! (Edu.)..... 370

GREAT NORTHERN.

July 29—The Engagement Ring (Dr.).....
July 29—A Happy Home.....
Aug. 5—The Burglar and the Girl (Dr.).....
Aug. 12—The Mother's Mark (Dr.).....
Aug. 12—Teddy Trained By His Mother (Com.)
Aug. 19—The Victory of Love (Dr.)..... 950
Aug. 26—A Traitor to His Country (Dr.).....
Sept. 2—The Foundling (Dr.).....
Sept. 9—A Dream with a Lesson (Dr.).....
Sept. 16—The Conspirators (Dr.).....

IMP.

Aug. 14—A Boy's Best Friend (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 17—Behind the Times (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 21—Battle of the Wills (Dr.) 500
Aug. 21—Love In a Tepee (Dr.)..... 500
Aug. 24—As a Boy Dreams (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 28—His Royal Highness (Com.).....
Aug. 28—Hot Springs, Arkansas (Sc.).....
Aug. 31—The Toss of a Coin (Com.).....
Sept. 4—The Haunted House (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 7—Duty (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 11—By the House that Jack Built (Dr.) 1000
Sept. 14—The Brothers (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 18—The Great Charleston Hurricane Flood (Scenic) 500
Sept. 18—The Bicycle Bug's Dream (Com.).. 500
Sept. 21—By Registered Mail (Dr.).....1000

LUX.

Aug. 11—The Cripple (Dr.)..... 462
Aug. 18—Bill Tries To Make Bread (Com.).... 406
Aug. 18—A Child's Courageous Act (Dr.)..... 540
Aug. 25—Bill Follows the Doctor's Orders (Com.) 450
Aug. 25—What a Pennyworth Did (Com.)..... 450
Sept. 1—Bill as a Game-Keeper (Com.)..... 504
Sept. 1—The Invisible Wrestler (Com.)..... 340
Sept. 8—Bill Buys a Lobster (Com.)..... 350
Sept. 8—A Romance of a Wager (Dr.)..... 642
Sept. 15—Bill As a Bill Poster (Com.)..... 573
Sept. 15—His Mania for Collecting Antiques (Com.) 357

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO.

BISON.

Aug. 15—A Sioux Spy (Dr.).....
Aug. 18—An Indian Love Story (Dr.).....
Aug. 22—A Cowboy's Loyalty (Dr.).....
Aug. 25—Pioneer Days (Dr.).....
Aug. 29—An Indian Legend (Dr.).....
Sept. 1—The Sheriff's Love (Dr.).....
Sept. 5—Little Dove's Romance (Dr.).....
Sept. 8—A Western Tramp (Dr.) .....
Sept. 12—The Lost Letter (Dr.).....
Sept. 15—Lone Star's Return (Dr.).....

AMBRISIO.
(By N. Y. M. P. Co.)

Aug. 16—The Dread Of Microbes (Com.).....
Aug. 23—Guinara (Dr.).....
Aug. 30—The Door-Keeper (Dr.).....
Aug. 30—Tweedledum's White Suit (Com.)....
Sept. 6—Tweedledum and the Adventuress (Com.) .....
Sept. 6—Italian Artillery (Scenic).....
Sept. 13—Cain's Retribution (Dr.).....
Sept. 13—Tiny Tom Wins a Lottery Prize (Com.) .....
Sept. 16—The Horse of the Regiment (Dr.)..
Sept. 16—Foolshead—Removal (Com.).....

ITALA.

Aug. 19—The Blunt Sword (Com.).....
Aug. 24—Modern School of Italian Cavalry (Scenic) .....
Aug. 26—Foolshead—Chauffeur (Com.) .....
Aug. 26—For a Straw (Com.).....
Sept. 2—Clio and Phyletes (Dr.) .....
Sept. 7—Infinite Ways of Providence (Dr.)
Sept. 9—Foolshead Hypnotizer (Com.).....
Sept. 9—Toto Has a Purse (Com.).....

NESTOR.

Aug. 16—Hands Across the Cradle (Dr.).....
Aug. 19—Mutt and Jeff In the Banking Business (Com.) .....
Aug. 23—Alias Yellowstone Joe (Dr.).....
Aug. 26—Mutt and Jeff and the Country Judge (Com.) .....
Aug. 30—The Parson and the Bully (Dr.).....
Sept. 2—Mutt & Jeff and the German Band (Com.) .....
Sept. 6—The Flower of the Tribe (W. Dr.)..
Sept. 9—Mutt and Jeff and the Escaped Lunatic (Com.) .....
Sept. 13—At Perry's Ranch (Dr.).....
Sept. 16—Mutt and Jeff and the Newsboys (Com.) .....
Sept. 20—Across the Divide (Dr.).....

POWERS.

Aug. 8—Cheyenne Days (Scenic).....
Aug. 8—A Harmless Flirtation (Com.).....
Aug. 12—Lone Eagle's Trust (Dr.).....
Aug. 15—Babes In the Woods (Dr.).....
Aug. 19—The Squaw's Devotion (Dr.).....
Aug. 22—Black Cloud's Debt (Dr.).....
Aug. 26—The Indian's Love (Dr.).....
Aug. 29—The White Chief (Dr.).....
Sept. 2—Silver Tail and His Squaw (Dr.)....
Sept. 5—Red Feather's Friendship (Dr.)..... 960
Sept. 9—The Twins Squaw (Dr.)..... 975
Sept. 12—Gray Wolf's Grief (Dr.)..... 950
Sept. 16—The Horse Thief (Dr.)..... 950
Sept. 19—Lost In a Hotel (Dr.).....
Sept. 19—An Old Time Nightmare (Dr.).....
Sept. 23—Red Man's Honor (Dr.).....

RELIANCE.

Aug. 2—The Broken Vows (Dr.).....
Aug. 5—His Son (Dr.).....
Aug. 9—The City (Dr.).....
Aug. 12—The Pitfall (Dr.).....
Aug. 16—Out Of Darkness (Dr.) .....
Aug. 23—A Little Child (Dr.).....
Aug. 26—The Godfather (Dr.).....
Aug. 30—A Straight Path (Dr.).....
Sept. 2—Clouds and Sunshine (Dr.).....
Sept. 6—Temptation (Dr.) .....
Sept. 9—His Dream (Dr.) .....
Sept. 13—The Cobbler (Dr.).....
Sept. 16—Pals (Dr.) .....

REX.

May 25—Called Back (Dr.).....
June 1—The Monogram "J. O." (Dr.).....
June 8—From Death To Life (Dr.).....
June 15—The Twins (Dr.).....
June 22—On the Brink (Dr.).....
June 29—Securing Evidence (Dr.).....
July 6—Fate (Dr.) .....
July 13—The Vagabond (Dr.).....
July 20—Sherlock Holmes, Jr. (Dr.).....
July 27—Her Way (Dr.).....
Aug. 3—The Artist Financier (Dr.).....
Aug. 10—The White Red Man (Dr.).....
Aug. 17—The Colonel's Daughter (Dr.).....
Aug. 24—Castles in the Air (Com.).....1000
Aug. 31—The Torn Scarf (Dr.).....
Sept. 7—Picturesque Colorado (Scenic).....
Sept. 14—Faith (Dr.) .....

SOLAX.

Aug. 11—An Enlisted Man's Honor (Military)
Aug. 16—The Phoney Ring (Com.).....
Aug. 18—Let No Man Put Asunder (Dr.).....
Aug. 23—A Gay Bachelor (Com.).....
Aug. 25—The Stampede (Military).....
Aug. 30—The Patched Shoe (Com.).....
Sept. 1—The Hold Up (Military).....
Sept. 6—Hector's Inheritance (Com.).....
Sept. 8—The Best Policy (Mil. Dr.).....
Sept. 13—Her Uncle's Will (Com.).....
Sept. 15—The Altered Message (Mil. Dr.).....
Sept. 20—Oh! You Stenographer (Com.).....
Sept. 22—Nellie's Soldier (Mil. Dr.).....

THANHOUSER.

Aug. 8—Back To Nature (Dr.).....
Aug. 11—Cupid the Conqueror (Dr.).....
Aug. 15—Nobody Loves a Fat Woman (Com.)..
Aug. 18—The Train Despatcher (Dr.).....
Aug. 22—The Cross (Dr.).....
Aug. 25—The Romance Of Lonely Island (Dr.)
Aug. 29—The Moth (Com.).....
Sept. 1—Romeo and Juliet (Dr.).....
Sept. 5—Count Ivan and the Waitress (Dr.)
Sept. 8—Romeo and Juliet—Part 2 (Dr.)....
Sept. 12—The Buddhist Priestess (Dr.).....
Sept. 15—In the Chorus (Dr.).....
Sept. 19—The Lie (Dr.) .....
Sept. 22—The Honeymooners (Dr.) .....

YANKEE.

Aug. 4—Truth Shall Prevail (Dr.).....
Aug. 7—Kathleen Mavourneen (Dr.).....
Aug. 11—Grey Wolf's Squaw (Dr.).....
Aug. 14—A Good Natured Man (Com.).....
Aug. 14—A Children's Paradise (Scenic).....
Aug. 18—Her Father's Secretary (Dr.).....
Aug. 21—Colleen Bawn (Dr.).....
Aug. 25—Retaliation (Dr.) .....
Aug. 28—The Power of Devotion (Dr.).....
Sept. 1—A Great Wrong Righted (Dr.).....
Sept. 4—Inshavogue (Dr.).....
Sept. 8—Mesmerizing Moe (Com.).....
Sept. 8—Faded Roses (Dr.).....
Sept. 11—Tangled Heartstrings (Dr.).....
Sept. 15—Woman (Dr.) .....
Sept. 18—The Star Reporter (Dr.).....
Sept. 22—The Girl and the Chauffeur (Dr.)....

Get Simpson's Celebrated Song Slides
OF ALL THE POPULAR SONGS
Perfection of Artistic Coloring
ALFRED L. SIMPSON
113 W. 132d St. N. Y. City

Money Makers for you. Think of the people passing by or out of your place that would drop another nickel or dime. Many styles Catalog No. 24 tells all.
KINGERY MFG. CO.
CINCINNATI, O.

FILM FOR SALE
Over 1000 reels in stock at all times, from $2.50 up.

Three Musketeers	2 reels	$50.00
Dame of Montsereau	2 reels	50.00
Fall of Troy	2 reels	75.00

Send for catalogue.
A. J. CLAPHAM
12 E. 15th St., New York, N.Y.

Operators!
I guarantee quick and satisfactory repair work on all machines. Only genuine parts supplied. Get my prices on ONE DROP OIL and BULL DOG CEMENT the best articles of their kind on the market
H. A. MACKIE
853 Broadway, Cor. 14th Street New York
'Phone: 2478 Stuyvesant

SPECIAL ROLL TICKETS The Big Ticket. Any Printing Any Colors

5,000	$1.25	20,000	$4.60	50,000	$7.50
10,000	$2.50	25,000	$5.50	100,000	$10.00

Get the Samples Stock Tickets, 6 Cents
NATIONAL TICKET COMPANY - - - Shamokin, Pa.

REMEMBER THE PAST IN SHAPING THE FUTURE

A YEAR ago the Sales Company was shipping three hundred reels and Patents Company fifteen hundred reels weekly. To-day Sales Company over eight hundred and Patents Company twelve hundred and fifty.

In one short year the Independent cause has been firmly established on a good substantial and legal basis. The Independent manufacturers have not only brought their plants up to a high mark of perfection, doubled the quality and quantity, but have put aside many thousands of dollars to wage a legal war to surround your interests and theirs with the security and protection which was so much required. Eighteen months ago no Independent Manufacturer, Exchange or Exhibitor knew whether his investment was going to be wiped out over-night. To-day all are protected; your business is your own. You are getting a regular supply of film at uniform prices and favorable conditions.

All this has been brought about by Manufacturers, Exchanges and Exhibitors WORKING TOGETHER and the further success we all so earnestly look forward to can BE ACCOMPLISHED only by all of us standing shoulder to shoulder and assisting one another in every possible way.

Quality may not have advanced as rapidly as all desire but consider the tremendous expense manufacturers have been under and the many other things they have done. Quality, however, is now having first attention. The same grit and determination shown in the past will soon bring our quality up to the required standard.

Only however if we all stick together.

WEEKLY PROGRAM

MONDAY
Imp Eclair Yankee American Champion

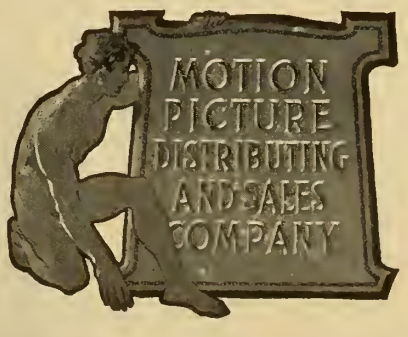
TUESDAY
Thanhouser Bison Powers

WEDNESDAY
Champion Solax Reliance Ambrosio Nestor

THURSDAY
Rex American Itala Imp

FRIDAY
Yankee Solax Lux Thanhouser Bison

SATURDAY
Powers Itala Gt. Northern Nestor Reliance



111 East 14th St., New York City

Mirroroide

The World's Greatest and Best Moving Picture Curtain and Screen

Cheapest in Price, Best in Quality, Greatest in Results. It Rolls, It Won't Crack or Peel, It Lasts a Lifetime. Permanent Brilliancy. Not Aluminum, but a Pure Mercury Amalgamation. You Don't Need a Tightening Frame, Simply Buy the Curtain that Is Used in the Best Theaters from Coast to Coast. 20 Curtains Shipped to England, 8 to Germany. Factory Shipments Last Week, 140 Screens and Curtains. (2) Factories (2) Working Day and Night to Meet Demand.

Shipments in Three Days
AFTER RECEIPT OF YOUR ORDER

Mirroroide has the world beat.

Over 100 Testimonials Prove This. Test It with Any Curtain or Screen on the Market.

This Is Fair, Is It Not? Demonstration Sample, ¼ Yard, 50 Cents, Ordinary Size, 4 Cents Stamps.

New York City Dealers. Where you can see Demonstration Tests and leave your Orders:

Harry A. Mackie, 853 Broadway; American Moving Picture Machine Co., 101 Beekman St.; Nicholas Power Co., 115 Nassau St.; Western, Middle West, Southern and Canadian Dealers next week.

Just One From Many Hundreds

If I bought a Glass Screen or any other screen and my competitors bought yours, I would be sick. Greatest pictures I ever saw.

DWIGHT BAKER,
Pastime Theater, Ottumwa, Iowa.

Just one a week. Watch for them.

Benjamin - Genter Co.
NEWBURGH, N. Y.

Film Exchanges Take Notice

We can buy your entire FILM EXCHANGE or part, and will pay spot cash for same.

PROSPECTIVE MONEY MAKERS

Will sell you a complete line of films, machines, slides, etc., to open a first-class FILM RENTAL OFFICE, or can sell you any films you may want. Send for our latest BARGAIN LIST.

GENERAL FILM BROKERS, 23 E. Jackson Blvd., Chicago, Ill.

COMPENSARC

This Machine cuts ⅔ from your Light Bills

Mr. Manager

If you are on a 110 or 220 volt circuit and you are using a rheostat to reduce the voltage to 35 at the arc in your lamp, you are paying for ⅔ more "juice" than you are actually using. Can you afford to waste all this energy supplied from the line, over and above what you really need?

The Fort Wayne Compensarc saves all this waste by reducing the voltage without losing any: makes a clearer, whiter, steadier light, and eliminates all danger of fires caused by overheated rheostats.

We have a little 22 page booklet "Compensarc vs. Rheostat" that we want to send you. It will tell you plainly how you can make a big saving and a better light. Send us your name and address.

FORT WAYNE ELECTRIC WORKS
of GENERAL ELECTRIC COMPANY.
1408 Broadway
Fort Wayne, Indiana

Send TODAY for our FREE descriptive booklet

ANOTHER ENTERPRISE TRIUMPH

TOGO CALCIUM GAS OUTFIT

Complete with Rubber Tubing and Keyless Jet

SUPERIOR WORKMANSHIP and HIGH GRADE MATERIAL combined with SAFETY and SIMPLICITY place the TOGO far ahead of any other cheap outfit.

PORTABLE and ready for instant use - $25.00.

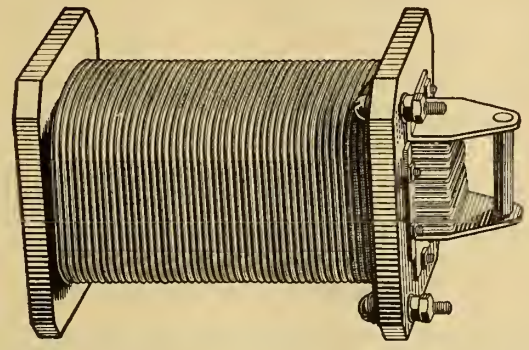
Anyone can operate it

MANUFACTURED BY
The Enterprise Optical Mfg. Co., 564 W. Randolph St., Chicago
FOR SALE BY ALL DEALERS

DE LUXE COILS

PRICE $30



Weight, 48 lbs. Dimensions, 7"x7"x11"

GUARANTEED for ONE YEAR

The only Coil for Controlling Arc Lamps of Moving Picture Machines

The "DeLuxe" coil operates from the usual commercial alternating current lighting circuits and delivers 35 volts at the arc and any value of current from 20 to 60 amperes. Moreover, it requires no previous experience or instructions to install or operate the "DeLuxe."

Send for our illustrated catalogue and price list for "DeLuxe" coils, carbon holders and Transarcs together with full line of Electrical accessories.

THE ST. JOHN CORPORATION

180 BROADWAY :-: NEW YORK CITY

Sole distributers MOHAWK ELECTRIC CO., ALBANY, New York.

OF COURSE YOU WANT ONE

for the simple reason that the up-to-date and live exhibitors know a good thing when they see it and always take advantage of something that will increase their receipts.

THE TIME IS UPON US

when vacation time is about over and people are settling down to the regular grind, and exhibitors of motion pictures are planning for a busy season and are looking around for new and up-to-date methods of displaying their programmes so as to get the best returns on their money invested.

YOU CAN NOT GO WRONG

if you invest in our system of displaying programmes, as the results in your case will be the same as the results in the cases of several hundred satisfied exhibitors who have taken advantage of our liberal offer and have adopted this, the most modern and up-to-date system of displaying programmes.

ORDER NOW

Exhibitors Advertising Company

Suite 604-605-606, 117 North Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

SILVO KURTAIN KOAT

Makes a complete silvered screen for the small sum of $6.00 (sent C. O. D.)
We also make the only Film Cement which works without scraping on either inflammable or non-inflammable film and holds tight.

Ask your dealer for TIGER CEMENT

KURTAIN KOAT CO. 2107 W. Lake St. CHICAGO, ILL.

SINCE the film exchanges of Chicago have abandoned their slide departments, we are better equipped than ever to meet your requirements along the lines of a SUPERIOR SLIDE SERVICE.

¶ Larger quarters, more employees and a correspondingly large stock, makes of our exchange the greatest and largest clearing house for illustrated songs in the United States.

¶ Our guarantee, to furnish only one theatre in each city (Chicago excepted), should not be overlooked. The orders we are receiving on the above proposition are astounding and overwhelming. Don't delay, write to-day, get an exclusive service and be ahead of your competitor on at least one part of your programme.

¶ Our September catalogue now ready, together with rental rates. We ship your weekly supply of slides and music in one consignment every week.

"THE PIONEER SLIDE RENTERS"

CHICAGO SONG SLIDE EXCHANGE

6th Floor, Powers Bldg. Dept 1. 37 SOUTH WABASH AVE., CHICAGO, ILL.

THERE IS ONLY ONE

BIO RECOGNIZED STANDARD CARBON

Try it and you will forget the names of all other brands. Then it will be

"BIO" FOR YOURS

CHARLES L. KIEWERT CO.

NEW YORK 165 Greenwich St. MILWAUKEE 114-116 Huron St. SAN FRANCISCO 19 Sutter St.

AND ALL LIVE FILM EXCHANGES

Taylor's Theatrical Agency

51 West 28th Street
NEW YORK

—MAKING A SPECIALTY OF—

BOOKING MOVING PICTURE THEATRES

VOCALISTS, PIANISTS, VIOLINISTS, TRAP DRUMMERS, INSTRUMENTALISTS
OPERATORS, PICTURE DEMONSTRATORS, ETC.

OUR SONG SLIDE SERVICE

We buy all new releases of Song Slides and are strictly up to the minute
WRITE US NOW and get the BEST SLIDE SERVICE IN NEW YORK

Film Perforating Dies

The A. Dewes Co.
249 Center Street
Tel. 2351 Spring New York

Free Plans To Increase Your Attendance

A POSTAL WILL BRING PARTICULARS
TAKITO OGAWA & CO.
156—W— Lake St.—M—. Chicago, Ill.

Machines and Films For Sale

3 Second-hand Power's Machines, $90 to $170
1 Newly Rebuilt Head - - - $50
6 Second-hand Edison Machines, $85 to $110
Lot of Films For Sale Cheap
MAYER SILVERMAN
105 Fourth Ave., Pittsburgh, Pa., U. S. A.

We Offer 300 more to the Trap Drummers

Get your order in at once. At our special offer price—$10.0

This high-grade Orchestra Drum, 10 thumb screw rods, transparent drum heads, solid shells, maple, rosewood, walnut.

Size, 3 x 14—3 x 15—4 x 15—4 x 14. This offer for September and October.

E. P. Zeidler Drum Co., Cleveland, O.

MAKE YOUR LOBBY BRIGHT AND ATTRACTIVE BY USING

PAYNE'S SHOW CARDS

Write for circular
PAYNE SHOW CARD CO.
17 Dwight St. Springfield, Mass.

WANTED: FILM showing transporting Siberian Exiles to prison Give price, condition, etc.
MOORE, HUBBELL & CO.
36 N. Franklin St. Chicago, Ill.

ATTENTION!

Anyone who is in possession of a film that is scratched, dirty, flickery or poor photography, send it to the ORTHO FILM CO., 40 East 12th St., to be redeveloped, cleaned and softened and see the improvement that can be done by the HOCHSTETTER ORTHO PROCESS. Demonstrations given free.

SCENARIO WRITERS!

If your scenarios do not sell find out why. Perhaps your manuscript can be rewritten and made saleable, and your mistakes may be corrected in future manuscripts. The author of "Technique of the Photoplay," etc., will give your manuscript personal criticism and revision for a fee of only $2. Approved manuscripts marketed for a fee of 10 per cent. A reading fee of 50 cents must accompany each script. Unavailable scripts will be immediately returned.

Exhibitors!

Bad Business?

Submit your difficulties to the author of "The Photoplay Theater," and other articles on management, for advice and suggestion, the result of twenty years' experience in amusement enterprises. Simple questions $1 each.

Manufacturers!

Manuscripts developed, $10 each. Send in that scenario that has your staff puzzled and a practical working script will be returned.

Epes Winthrop Sargent
21 East 20 Street : New York City

THAT'S THE STUFF!!

THE ORIGINAL BIOGRAPH
CARBONS

THE SPECIAL BRAND FOR PICTURE MACHINES
See that your packages and labels are as shown on cuts

L. E. FRORUP & CO., Importers
232-234 GREENWICH ST. NEW YORK

Opera and Assembly Chairs

Most popular priced chairs on the market for picture show use.
Prompt Shipments. Write for Catalogue
PEABODY SCHOOL FURNITURE CO.
North Manchester - - Indiana
New York Agents: ROBERT J. EHLERS CO
Lexington Ave. and 43d St. - New York, N. Y.

Moving Picture Machines
Bought, Sold and Exchanged

I Have Several Calls For Second Hand Machines What Have You To Offer?

H. A. MACKIE
853 Broadway New York City
'Phone: 2478 Stuyvesant

THEATRE SEATING—Send for Moving Picture Chair Cat. "V4," Upholstered Chair Cat. "V5."
AMERICAN SEATING COMPANY
Chicago New York Boston Philadelphia

CHEAP
STEEL FRAME THEATRE CHAIRS
ABSOLUTELY NON-BREAKABLE

Suitable for small Theatres and Moving Picture Shows. We carry these chairs in stock and can ship immediately
Second Hand Chairs
Also seating for Out-of-door use
Address Dept. W.
STEEL FURNITURE CO., GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.
New York Office: 150 Fifth Avenue

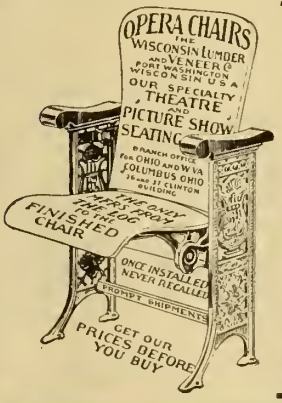
OPERA CHAIRS

For EVERY PURPOSE
1,000 STYLES
ESTABLISHED 1865
WRITE FOR CAT. No 31
The A. H. Andrews Co.
174-176 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill. Branches in all leading cities

OPERA CHAIRS

GEO. W. BENNETT
744 W. 5th Street
CINCINNATI OHIO

THEATRE SALES CO.
211 Dearborn Street, opposite Post Office
CHICAGO, ILLINOIS
Long Distance Phone, Harrison 341
Dealers in Theatres anywhere in the United States and especially Chicago. Write or Call. Make Known Your Wants



OPERA CHAIRS
THE WISCONSIN LUMBER AND VENEER CO. PORT WASHINGTON WISCONSIN U.S.A.
OUR SPECIALTY THEATRE AND PICTURE SHOW SEATING
THE ONLY SANITARY FOLDING CHAIR
ONCE INSTALLED NEVER RECALLED
PROMPT SHIPMENTS
GET OUR PRICES BEFORE YOU BUY

The Wisconsin Lumber and Veneer Co.
Port Washington, Wisconsin, U.S.A.

FOLDING CHAIRS

For Moving Picture Shows, Grand Stands, Assembly Halls, etc. In sections if wanted.
Write for Catalog No. 2
The Kauffman Manufacturing Co.
ASHLAND, OHIO

M. P. MACHINES SOLD ON INSTALLMENT

WRITE AT ONCE FOR PARTICULARS
OUR FEATURE FILMS will DOUBLE your BOX OFFICE RECEIPTS. Send for list now. DON'T DELAY
Chicago CHICAGO FILM EXCHANGE Omaha

MURDER. CRIMINAL NEGLIGENCE.

Sure it is not criminal negligence to put your theatre patrons in stalls that they can't get out of in case of fire, but, Mr. Exhibitor, don't you think you would feel better to have your theatre seated with an Automatic Folding, All-Aisle Chair?

LISTEN.

Our chair is a friend to the Public.
It advertises your theatre and makes your business grow.
It is a space-saver, life-saver, money-saver. Gives 25% more seating.

IT IS THE ONLY SANITARY CHAIR.

It will make your theatre all aisles.
It is the world's greatest theatre chair, perfected to the highest degree.
12 years' experience and scientific study of the theatre seating problem is embodied in the construction of this wonderful chair. PATENTED.

WRITE TODAY FOR CIRCULAR A THE HARDESTY MFG. CO., Canal Dover, Ohio, U. S. A.

WURLITZER

55TH YEAR 55TH YEAR

Wurlitzer Piano Orchestra built in the front of the Gaither Theater, Cincinnati

The Leading Picture Theaters are Installing

Wurlitzer Automatic Musical Instruments

They furnish better music than musicians and cut out that great expense. 50 different styles. Call at nearest branch or write for big 84-page catalog

THE RUDOLPH WURLITZER COMPANY

CINCINNATI	CHICAGO	NEW YORK	PHILADELPHIA
117 to 121 E. 4th	266 & 268 Wabash	25 & 27 W. 32nd Bet B'way & 5th Av.	1835 Chestnut
ST. LOUIS	CLEVELAND	BUFFALO	COLUMBUS, O.
912 Pine	206 Prospect	701 Main	57 E. Main

W. Stephen Bush

Has prepared and may be engaged to deliver special, complete LECTURES on

"Dante's Inferno"

(5 REELS, MILANO FILMS COMPANY)

"The Crusaders or Jerusalem Delivered"

(4 REELS, WORLD'S BEST FILM COMPANY)

These films mark a new epoch in moving pictures. They will bring the best audiences and the highest prices, provided they are properly presented with suitable music, lecture and effects. Careful rehearsals are necessary. Mr. Bush will, if desired, direct the rehearsal, provide music and of course deliver complete lecture during the running of the reels. In addition suitable reading matter for advertising the films in the daily press will be supplied.

Address

W. Stephen Bush

Care of Moving Picture World

125 East 23rd Street New York City

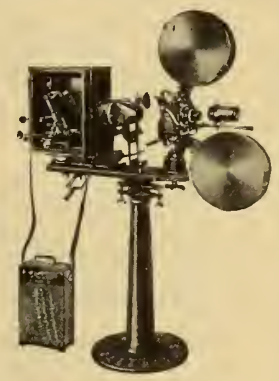
BUILT RIGHT RUNS RIGHT IS RIGHT



THE Makers of THE MOTIOGRAPH have been manufacturing Motion Picture Machines for MORE THAN THIRTEEN YEARS and everybody that is anybody in the Motion Picture world knows that our motto is QUALITY NOT QUANTITY.

QUALITY IN PRODUCTION IS OUR WATCHWORD

We are manufacturers in the true sense of the word. We make in our own factory EVERY GEAR—SCREW—SPROCKET—BUSHING and part that goes to make up THE BEST CONSTRUCTED MOTION PICTURE MACHINE IN AMERICA. REMEMBER—We do not depend on other factories.

OUR GUARANTEE covers the FREE REPLACEMENT OF ALL PARTS broken through defective material or workmanship.

BEWARE OF THESE FACTS ADVERTISED BY OTHERS. THEY ARE NOT ALWAYS TO BE DEPENDED UPON.

It is a well known fact that the Motiograph is fast replacing Machines of all other makes. It is also a well known fact that the Motiograph Lamp House and Arc Lamp are being fitted to all other makes of mechanisms. Why? Because it is the Largest, Heaviest and Best.

THE ENTERPRISE OPTICAL MANUFACTURING CO.

564-572 WEST RANDOLPH ST. :: :: :: CHICAGO, ILL.

For Sale by every wide-awake dealer in North America.

EDISON

Economy Transformer

(For alternating current)

110 volt—60 cycles; price $50.00
220 volt—60 cycles; price $55.00

DIMENSIONS

Height over regulating lever, 14 inches.
Floor space required, 10 x 12 inches.
Approximate weight, only 65 lbs.

A highly efficient Transformer, designed to meet a universal demand for some form of satisfactory current saving device at low cost. Prompt shipments.

TRADE MARK

Thomas A. Edison, Inc.
72 Lakeside Ave., Orange, N. J.

The Nimble Kimble M. P. Machine Motor

Leaves Your Hands Free

There's no sense in turning that crank by hand when you can get a motor that will do it BETTER and leave your hands free.

A LITTLE ⅛ H. P.

KIMBLE

Variable Speed Motor

(For Alternating Current Only)

hitched to your picture machine permits you to do "stunts" that will puzzle the "talent" and delight the audience.

ONE LEVER starts, stops, reverses or varies speeds, from 300 to 3,000 r.p.m.—not by steps or jerks, but by imperceptible gradations, under your absolute control.

This leaves hands, eyes and brain free for other work that will count with the audience.

Installation is simple and easy.

Operating cost is less than the cost of one 16-c.p. light when the machine is going, and nothing when it is not.

Prices, f. o. b. Chicago

⅛ H. P. KIMBLE A. C. MOTOR with Grooved Pulley—110 volts, $27.00; 220 volts, $28.50; Countershaft, $10.00

(Countershaft is not necessary when you belt direct from pulley on motor to pulley on fly-wheel of machine)

Put one in NOW. It will pay for itself the first week in increased patronage.

Kimble Electric Company

1118 Washington Boulevard
CHICAGO

Kimble Electric Company, Chicago.

How soon could you ship a ⅛ h.p. picture machine motor.....volts.....cycles, to operate a No. .....machine, and which method of connecting it do you recommend?

Name .....

P. O..... State.....

Moving Picture World (Date)

G.MÉLIÈS

Scotty Gets Work at the Oil Wells

FOR $200

AN OPERATION to restore Scotty's little girl's sight would cost two hundred dollars. Scotty had neither the money nor a job, but set out into the world with a firm determination to "make good". Success came in an odd manner, far different than he had expected. Scotty obtained work to be sure, but it was an unselfish act of heroism that gained for him the reward of the grateful, and indirectly his daughter's happiness.

G. MELIES, 204 EAST 38th ST., NEW YORK CITY

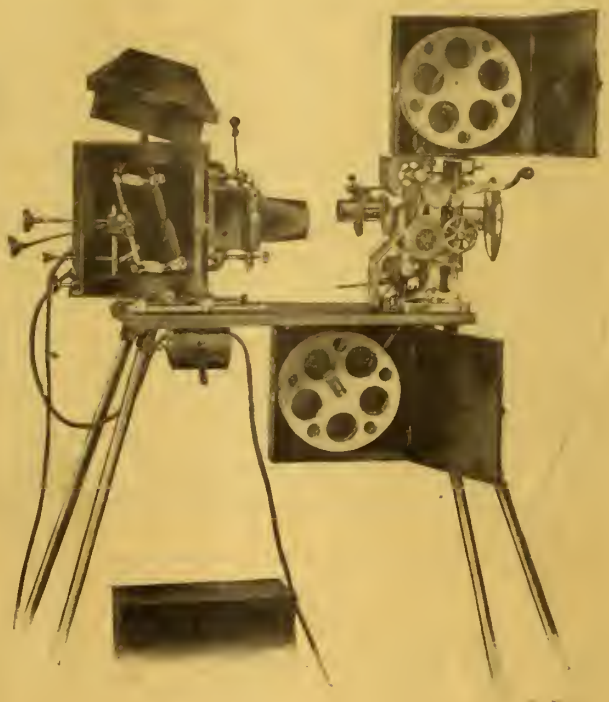
APPROX. 1000 FT 9-21-11

POWER'S CAMERAGRAPH No. 6

The Perfect Motion Picture Machine

Absolutely Flickerless Pictures

No Pinwheel



Rugged Construction

No Star-wheel

Easy to Operate

Noiseless

In use throughout the civilized world

Every Powers Cameragraph Mechanism No. 6 is guaranteed for one year against natural wear and tear as well as defects in material and workmanship.

Write at once for our special proposition G, which makes it easy for any reliable established exhibitor to own one.

NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY

115 NASSAU ST., NEW YORK

For fourteen years the leading makers of Motion Picture Machines

CAREY PRESS, N. Y.

Vol. 9, No. 11 September 23, 1911 Price, 10c.

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

THE FILM INDEX

EXHIBITORS' GUIDE

DANNY'S CONFESSION. Scene from "Colleen Bawn"—(Kalem).

125 East 23rd Street New York–Chicago 169 W. Washington St.

A TON of FREE ADVERTISING MATTER on request for the big work of the year.

ON TUESDAY, OCTOBER 16th, WE RELEASE

"THE EARLY LIFE OF DAVID COPPERFIELD" [Complete]

The first of the series from the novel by Chas. Dickens. To be followed on consecutive Tuesdays by two big productions, each complete in itself, showing the career of David Copperfield, as conveyed by Chas. Dickens in his novel of that name.

AND IT'S ALL FOR THE GLORY OF

THE THANHOUSER WO-A-WEEK

Released Tuesday, September 26 "YOUNG LOCHINVAR"

This is the original "man who took a chance," made immortal by Sir Walter Scott, who in the more esthetic lexicon of his period has impressed on us the fact that he knows a good sport when he sees one. This chap Lochinvar wanted a certain lady to be his partner for life. Things didn't break well for him, and the night of her marriage to another man arrived. Did Lochinvar figure that it was all over? No, Siree! Did he just give up and lose? No, he took a chance at the last second, and—be dum-squizzled if he didn't win out, at that! Read the synopsis. No. 249 Code Word, Loch

RELEASED FRIDAY, SEPT. 29

Love's Sacrifice

If some folks on this planet weren't so eternally hasty there'd be a powerful lot of domestic strife avoided—with the emphasis on the "mess" part of it. In this corking drama you see another, but unusual case; not a young fellow doing the wrong thing, but an elderly scientist who ought to have known better. And if it were not for that all-consuming flame of devotion that beats in the good woman's breast, this story would leave a dark brown taste around our palates—but that is bee-u-ti-full-y avoided, because it's a Thanhouser.

No. 250 Code Word, Sacri

THE NEW THANHOUSER PHOTOFRAME

consisting of five original photos, 11 x 14 inches, of the leading Thanhouser players framed in solid oak, mission finish, complete with glass, GOES TO YOU FOR $2.50 with order. This is the prize outfit that tickled-to-death exhibitors the country over are calling THE GREATEST LOBBY DISPLAY BARGAIN EVER KNOWN. Address Exhibitor's Dept.

THE THANHOUSER LOBBY PHOTOS

consisting of five splendid individual photographs (11 x 14) of Thanhouser principals; sent postage prepaid for $1.00 with order. Address Exhibitor's Dept.

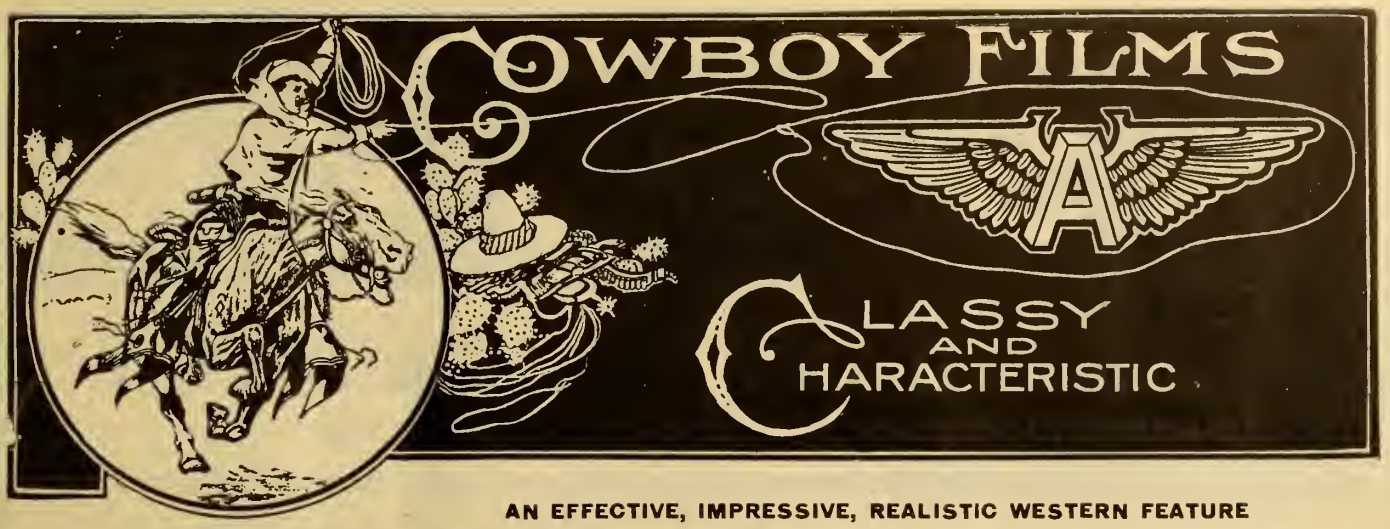
THE THANHOUSER NEWS

the "Exhibitor's Guide," containing the Thanhouser Lobby-Decorator, sent FREE OF CHARGE to all who can show connection with the Moving Picture business. Address Exhibitor's Dept.

Thanhouser Company

NEW ROCHELLE NEW YORK

SALES COMPANY AGENTS FOR U. S. AND CANADA



AN EFFECTIVE, IMPRESSIVE, REALISTIC WESTERN FEATURE

"THE RUSTLER SHERIFF"

Produced in El Cajon Valley, Southern California.

A Flying A Cowboy Feature

Containing the most effective climax ever pictured in a Western film

A realistic drama of the West as it used to be. True to life—teaching a strong moral lesson—and ending in one of the most unexpected, thrilling, and impressive climaxes ever presented to the gaze of the general public, through the medium of the moving picture camera. A feature from all angles, and in every respect. Different from the "Usual Thing."

ALL INDEPENDENT EXCHANGES BUY TWO REELS OF FLYING A FILMS EACH WEEK RELEASE DAYS MONDAYS AND THURSDAYS

IF YOU ASK THEM FOR THIS FEATURE AND MAKE YOUR REQUEST EXPLICIT YOU WILL GET IT.

REMEMBER THE RELEASE DATE—THURSDAY, SEPT. 28th

NOTE.—There are two Flying A Cowboy features released each week. Some of these features are better than others, but they are all good. The release days are MONDAYS AND THURSDAYS.

Your Exchange will give you both, each week, if you ask for them.

Our regular releases are described in the Film Synopsis Department of this publication.

American Film Manufacturing Company, Producers of Flying A Cowboy Pictures
BANK FLOOR, ASHLAND BLOCK, CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

Motion Picture Dis. & Sales Co., Sole Agents for the U. S. and Canada.

Solax

WEDNESDAY
MILITARY AND WESTERN

FRIDAY
COMEDY

"Nellie's Soldier"
(Military)

Released September 22nd

Great Big Military Picture With a Charming Girl as Heroine.

"How Hopkins Raised the Rent"

Released September 27th

One of Those Side-Splitting Comedies Full of Fun From Start to Finish.

"An Italian's Gratitude"
(Drama)

Released September 29th

Splendid Life-Like Drama of Love and Gratitude.

"A Breezy Morning"
(Comedy)

Released October 4th

Here is an Especially Good Comedy, Full of Bright Laughable Humor.

THESE 4 PICTURES ARE ALL ESPECIALLY GOOD

We Think Them the Best We Have Ever Made

Solax Company

Congress Avenue. Flushing. L. I.

REMEMBER—ALL OUR FILMS ARE TINTED AND TONED.
SOLD THROUGH M. P. D. & S. Co.

Criticisms and Suggestions

ALL our manufacturers and importers are bending every effort to improve their quality. You exhibitors come in close contact with the public and hear their criticisms. Won't you please write us whenever you have anything to say that will help us in improving the quality of future releases? We believe it is of a good average quality now, but we want it better. Let us hear from you.

WE ARE PROUD OF THIS

WEEKLY PROGRAM

MONDAY
Imp Eclair Yankee American Champion

TUESDAY
Thanhouser Bison Powers

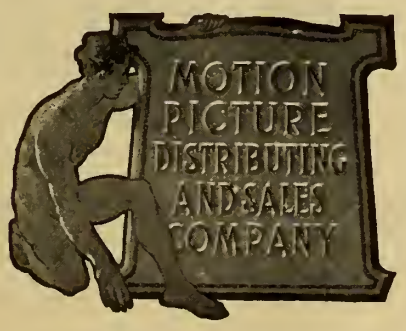
WEDNESDAY
Champion Solax Reliance Ambrosio Nestor

THURSDAY
Rex American Itala Imp

FRIDAY
Yankee Solax Lux Thanhouser Bison

SATURDAY
Powers Itala Gt. Northern Nestor Reliance

WE INTEND TO SELL OUR FILMS ON QUALITY.



111 East 14th St., New York City

A THERMOS BOTTLE PICTURE!

It will keep enthusiasm warm!

ADVENTURE, LOVE, PASSION, CONQUEST, HOPE, JOY, SORROW, FAILURE, SUCCESS

all woven together in the greatest silent drama since Two Ate One Apple. And there is room left for a healthy gasp and a well-built gape—you'll contribute the last two items. This particular picture-achievement is called

"The Rose and the Dagger"

Released Thursday, September 21st.

A plain title, like the truth we are telling about it. A woman who finds herself in the power of a bandit flirts and dances to divert his mind and obtain possession of his dagger. If your reason isn't rocky, you'll speak up! This is frank fact, not mere blabber.

"The Rose and the Dagger" is a three-bagger for speed and strength. We sincerely advise you to get it!

REX MOTION PICTURE MASTERPIECE CO.

makes one each week at

573-579 Eleventh Ave., New York City

(Although a million and eighty people are begging for two)

The Planet Earth is talking about "REX"

NOTICE !

—I herewith announce the installation of a Free Employment Bureau in the Laemmle Film Service offices. No charge will be made for the employment of Managers, Operators, Pianists, Singers, Ticket-takers, etc. The very highest references are required and the benefit of the entire Laemmle organization is now at your command, either in getting help or work. Write or call, tell what you want and let us do the rest, with our compliments.

NOTICE !

—If you desire to sell, let, purchase or lease a theatre or site in any part of the United States or Canada, get in touch with any of the Laemmle Film Service offices at once. We shall be glad to be of assistance and will make no charge for services.

NOTICE !

—If you are not satisfied with Independent films, it is because you are not getting the right sort of service. Why not hook up with the biggest and best film renter in the world? It doesn't cost you any more and it brings you the kind of program you ought to have. This very day is the best day to take your step toward prosperity.

Carl Laemmle, Pres.

The LAEMMLE FILM SERVICE

New number

204 W. Lake St., Chicago, Ill.

Sykes Block. Minneapolis, Minn. 1517 Farnam St. Omaha, Neb.
515 Mulberry St. Des Moines, Iowa. 1110 Wyandotte St. Kansas City, Mo.

The biggest and best film renter in the world

Important Notice

CONCERNING ECLAIR FILMS AMERICA RELEASES

Beginning Tuesday, Nov. 7

AMERICAN ECLAIR FILMS

WILL BE ISSUED TO THE TRADE.

Disregard All Previous Announcements

The French Eclair releases will be made every Friday, beginning November 10, instead of Monday as at present.

Release September 25

A JUST GENERAL

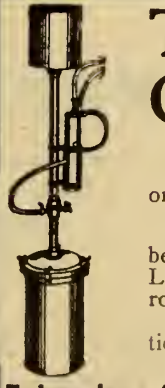
8x10 Photos of Eclair Stage Favorites

are ready for distribution. Complete Set, $1.50

IN THE FIRST INSTANCE ADDRESS

ECLAIR FILM CO.

FORT LEE — — — NEW JERSEY



THE ENTERPRISE (Portable) CALCIUM GAS OUTFIT

Price with carrying case, $35.00

Is the only Substitute for Electricity for projecting Motion Picture or Stereopticon Views and is the

ONLY SATISFACTORY PORTABLE OUTFIT

because it operates by WATER PRESSURE, IS CONSTANT, REGULAR AND RELIABLE and has no complicated spring valves to corrode, choke up and otherwise get out of order. Is patented.

"OXONE" in SQUARE CAKES is most satisfactory for the production of oxygen gas.

For Sale by Dealers Everywhere.

Enterprise Optical Mfg. Co. MANUFACTURERS 564-572 W. Randolph Street, CHICAGO, ILL.

GREAT NORTHERN

THE OLD RELIABLE

Release for Saturday, September 16th

THE ADOPTED SON

Dramatic feature film. This film will take the place of "The Conspirators" which will be released at a later date.

Release for Saturday, September 23rd

CAUGHT IN HIS OWN NET

A well acted realistic production of the rural type. Book it now.

All First-class Independent Exchanges Handle Our Product
Sold Only Through Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company

GREAT NORTHERN FILM CO., 7 E. 14th St., N.Y.
(NORDISK FILM CO. OF COPENHAGEN.)

THE BLACK HORSE TROOP OF CULVER

Champion release for Monday, Sept. 25th, 1911

An academy at Culver, Ind., having a wonderful body of (boy) horsemen,—mere lads—who execute marvelous feats of horseback and Roman riding, in accurate imitation of Uncle Sam's Regular Army Cavalry.

NOTE CHAMPION RELEASE

BARBARA FRIETCHIE

October 2nd, 1911

The Cook of the Ranch

Champion release for Wednesday, Sept. 27th, 1911

A real, live Champion Western Comedy. The cook's stout cowboy lover had victimized her in a huge joke. Everybody laughed but their smiles froze when no dinner appeared.

Exhibitors write for magnificent lithograph sheets

ASK TO SEE EVERY CHAMP

SEE SYNOPSES IN THE BOOKLETS

Sold Through Motion Picture Distributing & Sales Co.

CHAMPION FILM COMPANY

MARK M. DINTENFASS, General Manager

12 EAST 15th ST., NEW YORK City

NESTOR

NESTOR

NESTOR

"The Worth-While Film"

GET THEM! :-: :-: EVERY WEEK 2 NESTOR FILM FEATURES :-: :-: GET THEM!

Release of Wednesday, September 20th, 1911

"ACROSS THE DIVIDE"

Scene from "Across the Divide"

985 feet of swift, exciting film punctuated by big, thrilling moments—a stirring Nestor Western Foto-Drama overflowing with giant incidents that startle, satisfy and stick to one's memory—rush of action, superb acting and inimitable photography. GET IT!

BOOK THIS NOW!

Release of Wednesday, September 27th, 1911

"THE YOUNG DOCTOR"

A sure cure for poor business
Will make good business better

"Bully" is the only word that describes your release "The Parson and the Bully." You are to be congratulated on the class of pictures you are putting out. Keep the good work up."
C. D. Gillespie, Manager of Superba Theatre, Elwood, Indiana.

GET THEM! :-: :-- EVERY WEEK 2 NESTOR FILM FEATURES :-: :-: GET THEM!

The Grandest Noise in Comedy Split Reels Begins Saturday, September 23rd, 1911

"MUTT AND JEFF AND THE DOG CATCHERS"

AND "OBLIGING A FRIEND"

Two concoctions of delicious fun that will make you delirious with joy. A double bill without an equal. GET IT!

BOOK IN ADVANCE!

"MUTT AND JEFF AS REPORTERS" AND "GETTING EVEN"

Capital Comedy Split Reel

Released Saturday, September 30th

From Hogan & Jensen, Props., of the Isis Theater, Los Angeles, Cal. "Mutt and Jeff have broken all records for attendance at this popular place of amusement. We have had many special releases including 'Buffalo Jones Lassoing Wild Animals,' 'Automobile Race,' 'Fight Pictures,' 'Cheyenne Cowboy Celebrations,' etc., but 'Mutt & Jeff,' which we receive from the Miles Bros., Los Angeles office, have reached a record which we think will never be equalled in this theater. Taking in consideration that these films were used during the hottest days in August, we feel more than justified in sending our best wishes to the Nestor people for their successful pictures. Hope to receive some more 'Mutt & Jeff' pictures at an early date."

GET THEM! :-: :-: EVERY WEEK 2 NESTOR FILM FEATURES :-: :-: GET THEM!

NESTOR

David Horsley,

688 Avenue E
BAYONNE, N. J.

MOTION PICTURES DISTRIBUTING & SALES COMPANY

Sole Distributors

NESTOR

REMOVED TO 688 AVENUE E. BAYONNE. N. J. 'PHONE. BAYONNE 940

Gotch Hackenschmidt Match Films

Perfect motion pictures of the greatest event ever chronicled in the history of wrestling, showing each and every move of each contestant from the moment he left his dressing room until the match was over and the multitude of fans had dispersed—Press, critics and public pronounce these absolutely the most wonderful, phenomenal, exciting and perfect films ever secured—these pictures will absolutely settle beyond any doubt every dispute which has arisen concerning this marvelous event—they show intimate, unobstructed, close up, complete views of every movement and incident, including both falls.

STATE RIGHTS FOR SALE

The entire country went wild over this match—the entire world will go wild over the pictures. It is the one big, safe, sure fortune-winning opportunity of the century for those who secure state rights—select your territory and wire today for prices and information—don't delay one second—it may prove fatal—don't let your rival beat you to it—already requests are pouring in from every corner of the globe—get in line—buy your state now.

BE SURE TO WIRE TODAY

A word to the wise is sufficient

ADDRESS

Gotch Hackenschmidt Picture Co.

20 East Randolph Street, :: Chicago, Illinois

BIOGRAPH FILMS

Trade Mark Trade Mark

RELEASED SEPTEMBER 18th, 1911

DAN, THE DANDY

A Father's Disappointment in His Son

The opening of the picture impresses one that the family is expecting the arrival of a most important personage, and such is the case, for the father expects the return of his only son from college in whom he had set great hopes, only to have them crushed into absolute disgust upon the entrance of his son who has become a pronounced molly-coddle. The father at once sets about to cure the son of his present milksop nature by engaging the services of a tramp to taunt manhood into his son. This tramp proves to be a wealthy club-man disguised, in quest of new sensations, and enters into the spirit of the game with vim. This, however, proves fruitless. Still, the son's interest in a wealthy young heiress arouses hopes in the father for he sees another plan—jealousy. To bring this about he gives a house party and the pretended tramp monopolizes the girl's attention. Jealousy is aroused, but Dan reasons he hasn't the sufficient sand to back his rage up, so he repairs himself to a gymnasium where later we see him entirely transformed, and so, when next he encounters the quasi tramp, the father has reason to be proud of him.

Approximate Length 998 feet.

RELEASED SEPTEMBER 21st, 1911

A CONVENIENT BURGLAR

Mrs. Gay planning to visit mother, Gay feels a good time with the boys in sight. Wifey, however, is prevented from going just as she arrives at the railroad station, and catches Gay just as he is about to leave for the roof garden. She enters, though, in time to prevent one of Gay's friends from escaping. This friend pretends to be a burglar, and Guy gets out by taking the supposed burglar to the police (?). Roof garden now for theirs. However, Gay stays away too long and gets in bad.

Approximate Length 534 feet.

WHEN WIFEY HOLDS THE PURSE-STRINGS

Mr. Goodhusband is forced to hand over every cent of his salary to wifey. He is allowed fifty cents for spending—how generous. He meets some of his friends and they stick him for a large bar-bill, for which he gives an "I O U." He later plans to pay this by "losing" his wife's watch and having her advertise and offer a reward for its return. The scheme would have worked if his accomplice hadn't been disloyal.

Approximate Length 463 feet.

RELEASES FOR NEXT WEEK

September 25th, 1911

The Revenue Man and the Girl

In the Kentucky Mountains

DRAMATIC

Approximate Length 999 feet.

September 28th, 1911

Her Awakening

The Punishment of Pride

DRAMATIC

Approximate Length 997 feet.

BIOGRAPH COMPANY,

11 East 14th Street, New York City

Licensees of the MOTION PICTURE PATENTS CO.

GEORGE KLEINE, Selling Agent for Chicago,
166 State Street, Chicago, Ill.

LUBIN FILMS

4 LUBIN FILMS A WEEK

Released Wednesday, September 20th — Length about 1000 feet

The Life Saver

Scenes laid on the Maine coast. A powerful drama. Includes drill of the U. S. Life Saving Corps. The fall down a precipitous cliff is especially thrilling. Considerable comedy of a high order as well as some very dramatic situations. Be sure to book it.

Released Thursday, September 21st — Length about 1000 feet

The Human Torpedo

Oh, what excitement! The hobo drank the contents of a can which a joking miner declared was nitro-glycerine. The "human torpedo" was closely guarded by the constables. A slight jar would explode him! But the hobo "got funny" with an ex-prize-fighter who handed him a stiff one in the solar plexus. But he didn't explode. The can had not contained anything stronger than syrup. This one will certainly give the "come-again" feeling to all who see it.

Released Saturday, September 23rd — Length about 1000 feet

Her Inspiration

A charming story of ambition and love, picturing a beautiful mountain girl, her sturdy lover, a smooth-tongued stranger whom she marries, and the final happy union with her real lover. It has strong heart appeal.

Released Monday, September 25th — Length about 1000 feet

The Matchmaker

Decidedly out of the ordinary. Love moves in criss-cross lines, and no one can tell at the beginning or in the middle who is going to marry whom. Three men and two women are principal characters.

4 LUBIN FILMS A WEEK

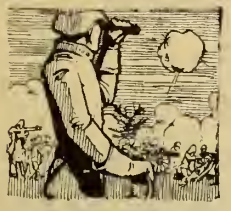
LUBIN MANUFACTURING COMPANY

Model New Studios, 20th and Indiana Avenue, Philadelphia, Pa.

Chicago: 208 N. Fifth Avenue — London: 45 Gerrard St., W. — Berlin: 35 Friedrich Str.

VITAGRAPH

LIFE PORTRAYALS



"ONE FLAG AT LAST"

Monday, September 18th

"All's fair in love and war." Especially so when everything turns out happily, as it does under "One Flag at Last."

"HOW MILLIE BECAME AN ACTRESS"

Tuesday, September 19th

A broad and brilliant comedy of bright and piquant action that keeps the fun scintillating from start to finish.

"BEYOND THE LAW"

Wednesday, September 20th

This brings us next to Nature, where we breathe the free air of the universe, away from the restraints of society, and every man is a law unto himself.

"FORGOTTEN"

Friday, September 22nd

Unmindful of his motherless child, a father is awakened to a sense of his responsibility by his child's faith and prayers for the awakening of his love. A picture long to be remembered.

"OVER THE CHAFING DISH"
"THE TIRED, ABSENT MINDED MAN"

Saturday, September 23rd

The first is a novel portrayal of love, courtship and marriage. It is a Vitagraph originality, therefore different from all others. The second gives us a splendid chance to laugh and—laugh.

FIVE A WEEK

Next Week Next Week

"BY THE CAMP FIRE'S FLICKER"—A war drama of the Philippines. Monday, September 25th.
"HIS SISTER'S CHILDREN"—A refined comedy..... Tuesday, September 26th.
"A WESTERN HEROINE"—Wild West drama..... Wednesday, September 27th.
"THE NINETY AND NINE"—A picturesque homily..... Friday, September 29th.
"HER HERO"—Another "Bunnygraph"..... Saturday, September 30th.

The Vitagraph Company of America

NEW YORK, 116 Nassau St.
CHICAGO, 109 Randolph St.
PARIS, 15 Rue Sainte-Cecile
LONDON, 25 Cecil Court

PATHÉ FRÈRES.

NEW YORK

A CRACKER JACK
INDIAN STORY

Driven from the Tribe

Fast Riding --- Furious Shooting --- Thrilling Episodes

About 1000 ft. Released Sept. 27th

A GREAT HUMAN INTEREST STORY

A Convict's Heart

The story of the one redeeming act of a hardened criminal's career. A thrilling story well told.

About 1000 ft. Released Sept. 30th

NEVER PASS UP

Pathe's Weekly

ISSUED EVERY TUESDAY

THE REASON FOR THE POPULARITY OF

PATHÉ'S WEEKLY

Because: The Weekly has put a girdle around the world.

Because: It records things as they are, and because, in it the public in their millions can study contemporary history --- can view the most important events of the week as they actually occurred.

BOOK IT

ISSUED EVERY TUESDAY

The Leading Motion Picture Producer of the World

SELIG — FOLLOW THE FLAG

Released September 22nd

SHIPWRECKED

A POWERFUL TALE OF DEEP-SEA PERILS

Pictured during the famous Santa Rosa Wreck at Surf, California
Length about 1,000 feet. Code Word "Aptable"

KATE CLAXTON'S TWO ORPHANS

Selig's Immortal Three Reel Masterpiece

The World's Greatest Play Made Into the World's Greatest Moving Picture

Absolutely the most Elaborate and Expensive Motion Picture Play Ever Produced

COMING — COMING

The Two Orphans will be the talk of picturedom for years to come—a noteworthy advance step in the onward and upward march of Selig's achievements for picture play betterment—elaborate costumes, specially engaged augmented cast of actors, beautiful productions—marvelous scenic settings, wonderful effects—from Kate Claxton's own version—

TWO ORPHANS SPECIAL SIZE POSTERS

The National Litho. Co. have prepared for the Selig Co. two different styles of three-sheet posters and one beautiful eight-sheet poster for exhibitors' use in conjunction with the Two Orphans production. These are real business getters. Order from our poster dept. or from your exchange. Also special de lux one-sheet posters.

TRADE MARK

RELEASED SEPT. 25th

TWO ORPHANS

First Reel

Louise and Henriette, the two orphans, meet with many mishaps in Paris—are separated, Louise falling into the hands of the Frochards, while Henriette fares better. Exciting.

Length about 1,075 feet. Code Word "Aguejando"

RELEASED SEPT. 26th

TWO ORPHANS

Second Reel

Henriette arrested. Louise forced to beg on streets. The story is clear, and filled with pathos and excitement.

Length about 986 feet. - - Code Word "ARC"

Released TWO ORPHANS Sept. 28th

Third Reel

The Two Orphans are finally reunited after many thrilling experiences.

Length about 1,090 feet. Code Word "ARM"

FOLLOW THE FLAG

Selig Polyscope Co. — TRADE S MARK — Chicago U.S.A.

EUROPEAN OFFICES

LONDON — BERLIN — ST PETERSBURG.

FOUR-A-WEEK ESSANAY

Original stories, fine acting and matchless photography combine to make Essanay Photoplays the most popular

A Great Railroad Melodrama

Released Tuesday, Sept. 19th

SAVED FROM THE TORRENTS

(Length, approx. 980 feet.)

Many thrilling scenes and situations, and a display of heroism that is rare in pictures, makes this film a sure winner with every audience. A fine production, in every detail.

Two Snappy Essanay Comedies

Released Thursday, Sept. 21st

ALL ON ACCOUNT OF THE PORTER

RELEASED WITH

EVERYBODY'S TROUBLES

(Total length, approx. 980 feet.)

These are two characteristic Essanay comedies, brimful of fun.

A Drama of Mission and Army Life

Release of Friday, Sept. 22nd

"LIVE, LOVE AND BELIEVE"

(Length, approx. 980 feet.)

The story of a young man's struggle from the city slums to a commission in the U. S. A. There is a pretty love story running through it, excellently acted.

Another Splendid Western Subject

Released Saturday, Sept. 23d

AN INDIAN'S SACRIFICE

(Length, approx. 980 feet.)

Interpreted with that fine, careful treatment that has made "Essanay Westerns" distinctive from all others; this subject is one of great power, and far above and entirely different from any Indian story ever produced before. It is one of our best recent contributions.

COMING! Another Funny "Snakeville" Comedy "TOWNHALL, TO-NIGHT"

Essanay Film Mfg. Company

521 First National Bank Building, CHICAGO, ILL.

5 Wardour Street, London, W.

The following are some of the many prominent exhibitors using our

"SUNLIGHT"

METALLIC CLOTH SCREENS AND CURTAINS

JONES, LINICK & SCHAEFER COMPANY	CHICAGO
MARCUS LOEW	NEW YORK
SULLIVAN & CONSIDINE	BUTTE, MONTANA
M. SWITOW	LOUISVILLE, KY.
PENN SQUARE AMUSEMENT COMPANY	CLEVELAND, OHIO
ST. CHARLES AMUSEMENT COMPANY	ST. LOUIS, MO.

WARNING

Letters are daily reaching us showing that imposters are using our advertising and our copyright word "Sunlight" to promote the sale of worthless or inferior screens.

We have no travelling salesmen and our screens are never sold except with our "Standard" frames with their patented tightening device.

Any information that will assist us in protecting exhibitors against imposition will be appreciated.

"Sunlight" Metallic Cloth Curtain Co.

1100 FISHER BUILDING CHICAGO, ILLS.

SO FAR--SO GOOD

The First Half of 1911 "Looks Good" to Us and Reasonably So to Our Esteemed Competitors

ON THE SAME STREET WHAT IS THE ANSWER

Two neighboring houses in an excellent location. Both are equal as to exterior. One is making a splendid success—the other cannot make good and complains about location and business.

The successful house spares no expense on equipment and has installed 2 1911 MODEL MOTIOGRAPHS and is projecting a beautiful picture, while the unsuccessful one is still using a cheaply constructed machine bought years ago, when the picture did not matter—"just something on the screen" was good enough.

Now, if you are a wise manager, you can guess the answer—INSTALL ONLY THE BEST MOTION PICTURE MACHINE MONEY CAN BUY—THE MOTIOGRAPH, and improve quality of your pictures, and, naturally, the amount of your gate.

The 1912 MODEL MOTIOGRAPH will be ready for shipment October 1, 1911—Advance orders will be accepted by all Motiograph dealers for shipment on and after that date—IN THE ORDER RECEIVED.

Full details as to prices, etc., will be furnished upon application to us.

THE ENTERPRISE OPTICAL MANUFACTURING CO.

564-572 WEST RANDOLPH ST. :: :: :: CHICAGO, ILL.

For Sale by every live dealer in the country.

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

THE WORLD PHOTOGRAPHIC PUBLISHING COMPANY — 125 E. 23d. Street NEW YORK
(Beach Building) — J. P. CHALMERS, Editor and Manager. — Telephone call, 1343-1344 Gramercy

SUSCRIPTION RATES: $3.00 per year. Post free in the United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and the Philippine Islands. Canada, $3.50. Foreign Countries, $4.00, Post Paid.

DISPLAY ADVERTISING RATES ON APPLICATION.
CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS (No Display), Three cents per word; minimum charge, 50c.

WESTERN OFFICE: 169 W. Washington St. (Post Bldg.), Chicago, Ill. Telephone, Main 3145. Automatic Phone 32732.

Entered at the General Post Office in New York City as Second-Class Matter.

Address all correspondence "Moving Picture World, P. O. Box 226, Madison Square, New York," and not to individuals.

Vol. 9 — SEPTEMBER 23, 1911 — No. 11

INDEX TO CONTENTS.

ADVERTISING FOR EXHIBITORS.....876
AMONG THE EXHIBITORS 902-903

BOSTON 901

CALENDAR OF INDEPENDENT RELEASES...897
CALENDAR OF LICENSED RELEASES 898
CAMERA PRESS MAN, THE.....868
CHICAGO LETTER 880
COMMENTS ON THE FILMS (Independent)..892
COMMENTS ON THE FILMS (Licensed).....889
CORRESPONDENCE 901

DEALERS AND BROKERS IN MOVING PICTURE REALISM (Inc.).....868

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE.....883

FACTS AND COMMENTS 864
FRAMING THE SCREEN.
by George B. Rockwell.....874

HARRISBURG, PA. 902

INDIANAPOLIS 902
INDEPENDENT FILM STORIES 908
INDEPENDENT RELEASE DATES.....918
INQUIRIES 900

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.....899
LICENSED FILM STORIES.....904
LICENSED RELEASE DATES.....916
LOUISVILLE, KY. 901

MANUFACTURERS ADVANCE NOTES.....894
MORAL OF THE FILMS, THE.....865
MUSIC FOR THE PICTURE.....872
"MY POLICIES," by Henry.....867

NEW ENGLAND NOTES.....901
NEW INCORPORATIONS 914
NEW MONTGOMERY THEATER, THE.....877

OBSERVATIONS BY OUR MAN ABOUT TOWN 875
OES RETURNS 882

PICTURESQUE COLORADO (Rex).....870
PITTSBURG 902
PRESS AGENT AND THE EXHIBITOR, THE..866
PROJECTION DEPARTMENT 884
PATHE WEEKLY, THE 871

REVIEWS OF NOTABLE FILMS.....869

ST. LOUIS 901
SALES COMPANY EMPLOYEES' BALL.....879
SEATTLE, WASH. 901
SO. BETHLEHEM, PA. 902
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Licensed).....904
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Independent).....908

THOSE SOUND EFFECTS, by E. C. Hall.....873
TRUTH OF THE JEST, THE, by E. C. Hall....881
TWO ORPHANS, THE (Selig).....869

WHY IS A CENSOR?
by Louis Reeves Harrison.....866
WORKING THE SOUND EFFECTS.
by Clyde Martin 873

INDEX TO ADVERTISERS.

CARBON IMPORTERS.
FRORUP, L. E.....923
KIEWERT, CHAS. L.....922
REISINGER, HUGO 911

ELECTRICAL SUPPLIES.
FT. WAYNE ELECTRIC CO.....923
HALLBERG, J. H. 917-923
KIMBLE ELECTRIC CO. 926
MACKIE, H. A. 914
SCHNEIDER, E. 912
ST. JOHN CORPORATION.....913

FILM BROKERS.
GENERAL FILM BROKERS.....925

FILM DEALERS.
INTERNATIONAL FILM TRADERS.....914

FILM EXCHANGES.
ACME FILM CO. 917
CHICAGO FILM EX. 925
CLAPHAM, A. J. 914, 918, 925
FEATURE FILM CO. 920
GREENE, W. E. 911
LAEMMLE FILM SERVICE 850
WESTERN FEATURE FILM CO. 921

INDEPENDENT FILM MANUFACTURERS.
AMERICAN FILM MFRG. CO.....847
CHAMPION FILM CO. 851
ECLAIR FILM CO. 850
GREAT NORTHERN FILM CO. 851
IMP COLORED INSERT.....
LUX FILM CO.....915
M. P. DIS. & SALES CO.....849
NESTOR FILM CO.....852-853
POWERS PICTURE CO. 919
REX MOTION PICTURE CO.....849
SOLAX CO. 848
THANHOUSER CO. 846
YANKEE FILM CO. 900

LECTURERS.
BUSH, W. STEPHEN 915
HOFFMAN, H. F. 920
MARION, LOUISE M. 922

LICENSED FILM MANUFACTURERS.
BIOGRAPH CO. 855
EDISON, THOS. A. 907
ESSANAY FILM CO. 861
KALEM CO. COLORED INSERT.....
LUBIN MFR. CO. 856
MELIES, GASTON 927
PATHE FRERES 858-859
SELIG POLYSCOPE CO. 860
VITAGRAPH CO. OF AMERICA.....857

MISCELLANEOUS.
AMERICAN MOTION SLIDE CO. 921
AMUSEMENT SUPPLY CO. 920
ASSOCIATED M. P. SCHOOLS.....920
COLUMBIA THEATRICAL EXCHANGE.....917
COLUMBUS TENT & AWNING CO.....920
CORCORAN, A. J. 922
DAVIS, H. 902
DEWES, A. 916
DONNIGAN, P. J. 924
EXHIBITORS ADV. CO. 907
EXHIBITORS POSTER SERVICE.....913
GUNDLACH MANHATTAN CO. 920
HARBACH CO. 923
HOKE, GEO. M. 925
JENKINS, J. W. 902
JOHNSON TICKET CO. 916
KINGERLEY MFR. CO. 918
KNACK STUDIOS 925
LAVEZZI CO. 921
LUMIERE-JOUGLA 911
LELAND, S. B. 921
McKENNA BROS. 912
MUNCIE FILM & SUPPLY CO.....922
NATIONAL TICKET CO. 918
NATIONAL X-RAY REFLECTOR CO.....911
ONE DROP OIL CO.....912
PHOTO PLAY SYNDICATE 902
RINER, L. E. 921
ST. LOUIS CALCIUM LIGHT CO.....902
SANITARY SERVICE CORP. 924
SARGENT, E. W. 923
SILVERMAN, MAYER 912
STEBBINS, CHAS. M. 923
STERLING NOVELTY CO. 912
STERN MFR. CO. 921
TAYLOR, F. C. 921
THATCHER, JAMES 925
THEATER SALES CO. 916
VONNEGUT HARDWARE CO. 920
W. L., c/o M. P. WORLD.....912

MOVING PICTURE MACHINE MFRS.
AMERICAN M. P. MACHINE CO.....922
EDISON, THOS. A. 926
ENTERPRISE OPTICAL CO. 850-862
POWERS, NICHOLAS CO. 928

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.
BILHORN BROS. 925
DEAGAN, J. C., COLORED INSERT.....
LEEDY MFR. CO. 917
SINN, CLARENCE E. 923
WURLITZER, RUDOLPH 915
ZEIDLER DRUM CO. 912
YERKES MFR. CO. 916

OPERA CHAIR MANUFACTURERS.
AMERICAN SEATING CO. 924
ANDREWS, A. H. 924
BENNET, GEO. W. 924
HARDESTY MFR. CO. 924
KAUFFMAN MFR. CO. 924
PEABODY SCHOOL FURNITURE CO.....924
ROYAL METAL MFR. CO. 924
STAFFORD, E. H 924
STEEL FURNITURE CO. 924
WISCONSIN LUMBER CO. 924

PROJECTION SCREENS.
MIRRORROID CO. 925
MOTION PICTURE SCREEN CO. 913
SUNLIGHT CURTAIN CO.....862

SONG SLIDE MANUFACTURERS.
EXCELSIOR SLIDE CO. 912
CHICAGO SONG SLIDE CO.....913
NORTH AMERICAN SLIDE CO. 921
SIMPSON, A. L. 918
UTILITY TRANSPARENCY CO. 920

SPECIAL RELEASES.
CINES CO. OF ROME.....915
MONOPOL FILM CO. 905
NATIONAL FILM DISTRIBUTING CO.....909
GOTCH-HACKENSCHMIDT PICTURES 854

THEATER DECORATORS.
DECORATORS SUPPLY CO. 917

Facts and Comments

WHAT is an educational picture? The query is prompted by the indiscriminate way in which the term "educational" is sometimes used. Any picture containing information is in a sense educational. The picture which helps the child to absorb knowledge, such as the schools impart, is educational. There are, however, some types of pictures that are educational in the broadest and best sense of the word, and of such type is the recent Edison release showing the barge canals of New York State. Here information is offered of the highest value not only to the child but to the matured citizen. The canals are among the most valuable assets of this commonwealth of New York. It is of the utmost importance to the welfare and prosperity of the State that every voter should thoroughly realize that fact. Again and again improvements of the canals have been issues in the politics of the State.

*

Within recent years the question of appropriating several millions of dollars for the widening and the general improvement of the canals in the State of New York has been submitted to the people at a general election. Thousands upon thousands of dollars had to be spent by the friends of the canals for an educational campaign in the City of New York, where most people associate the word canal with the odors of Gowanus. Millions of pamphlets were distributed and hundreds of speakers were engaged to make the people of the big city understand the value of the canals, not only to the seekers of cheap transportation, but to every man, woman and child in every part of the State. Such a film as the Edison release here spoken of would have simplified matters very materially. With a few explanatory words as to the origin of the canals, which owe their existence to the wisdom of Governor De Witt Clinton, even the humblest intelligence would have been able to understand and act intelligently. Such films, bringing the concrete facts of a political issue before the eyes of the voters, will play no small part in the campaigns of the future.

* * *

WE have received a letter from Mr. Percy L. Smith, who is aggrieved over the following editorial paragraph in the MOVING PICTURE WORLD of September 9th:

A police court judge in Virginia refused to hold a defendant, charged with having published sensational pictures of a notorious murder trial. The right to print fair reports and publish pictures of public trials is, of course, guaranteed by the constitution of nearly every State. The film producers will, however, take no advantage of this decision. Pictorial portrayal of crime and scandal is the exclusive prerogative of the yellow press. The morale of the moving picture is miles above this level and the monopoly of jaundiced journalism is in no danger from the moving picture.

It appears by inference that the defendant therein spoken of is the writer of the complaining communication. We had no idea who the defendant was and intended only to state the ethics of the moving picture and contrast it with that of the yellow journals. From the position then stated we can by no means recede, nor can we qualify or modify one word of the protest against the pictorial portrayal of crime, whether such portrayal is by means of stereopticon slides or moving pictures. While the filming of contemporaneous scandal or crime is a thing of the past the portrayal in realistic fashion of murder in the photoplay is still altogether too common.

*

Only a few days ago it was reported in the press that a man killed his daughter and then himself while under the influence of a moving picture in which the murder of a daughter by a father and the subsequent suicide of the father was shown with much distressing accuracy of detail. Of course a man in perfect mental health could see such a picture without injury other than a shock to his good sense and taste, but there is among us at all times a percentage of unfortunates whose minds are either abnormally weak or congenitally diseased or otherwise unsound. On such minds the murder picture acts like an irritant poison on a new wound. The man may have carried the seeds of insanity about with him for years, and a sight of the thing that pursued him in his sick fancies was the proximate cause of disaster to himself and others.

*

We have pointed out again and again that the moving picture exerts a tremendous power over the human mind and that this fact should forever be borne in mind by the film producer. This extraordinary power inherent in the picture must be controlled by competent and conscientious forces. If the film producer himself is careless in the matter, a more drastic control from the outside is sure to follow. From what has lately appeared in many instances the present Board of Censorship has no logical or well-defined rules applicable to the film portraying the story of a crime, especially the story of a murder. In some instances they strain at a gnat, in others they swallow a camel. The functions of a censorship, which concerns itself solely with the repression of the obviously objectionable has no impossible task before it, and the members of such a board should be able to discharge the obligations which, it appears, have been voluntarily assumed. Ten intelligent and experienced exhibitors would be the best of all possible censoring bodies. It would pay to have such a decemvirate of neighboring exhibitors view all advance exhibitions and receive due compensation for it. If it is worth $2.50 to have a film tested as to its freedom from horrors by a politician, such as the State of Pennsylvania is famous for, it is worth a good deal more to have the work done by men who must understand and please the public in order to make both ends meet and who fully realize the danger of shocking and disgusting the better elements of the community. If six out of ten reputable exhibitors pronounce a picture as unobjectionable to the general public we are willing to follow their judgment in nine cases out of ten.

* * *

NO better service may at this time be rendered to certain producers of moving picture films than to convince them of the fact that within the last decade or more, popular taste, popular intelligence and education in this country have steadily advanced. Knowledge and the desire to obtain it have never before in the history of the world been more widely diffused. Nor have opportunities to train and educate the mind ever been as numerous as they are today.

To demonstrate the existence of these facts no elaborate process of reasoning is required. Make a visit to the free libraries of the city. These libraries have increased far more rapidly than the population, until today there is scarcely any part where a well-equipped library cannot be reached within a few minutes' walk. Every one of these libraries is busy, keeping up with the demand for books and periodicals. The reading rooms are always well patronized. Talk with any of the librarians, without exception courteous, observant and well-trained men and women, and they will tell you that, while old-fashioned fiction still charms its numerous devotees, the demand is growing for books that not merely supply information or afford pleasure, but will make people think. This is true not only of New York and the East, but of every part of the country, especially of the West. The growing popularity of lectures on historic and scientific subjects, the increased attendances at examinations, at night schools, give ample proof of the progressive tendency of our day.

*

We state these obvious facts because we hope that the contemplation of them will encourage certain film producers to aim higher. Audiences with such elements as we have endeavored to describe are critical. They analyze. If the moving picture falls ever so slightly below their mental or moral level it loses a friend of influence. Upon the verdict of these elements much must depend for the success of any enterprise, which seeks its revenues from the general public. To hold the attention and win the approval of these elements the film-maker can never aim too high.

* * *

IT is with sincere pleasure that we read of the continued and splendid successes of the four reel feature film, based on Tasso's great poem and advertised as "The Crusaders or Jerusalem Delivered." The people of the West could have given no better evidence of their powers of appreciation than by the patronage they extended to this marvelous and wholly unobjectionable film. The prophesy of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD that the future belongs to the feature film dealing in four or more reels with some great classic, dramatic or epic subject could not have been vindicated more strikingly. The films appear to be in competent hands and to their clever and sensible presentation must be attributed a good deal of their success. Films of this character are not merely ephemeral, but permanent values and we have no doubt that once this conviction takes hold of the more important film makers here and abroad we shall have more of them.

The Moral of the Films.

Yes, my little girl, that is the celebrated Abbie Abford, who has consented to help uplift New York. When you grow up, if you can get entangled in an intrigue with another woman's husband and somebody kills that husband's wife, you may also become famous and draw admiring crowds to a moving picture show.—New York World, Sept., 1911.

Some few weeks ago a young man, resident of a southern State, was charged with a capital offense, his wife being the alleged victim. The case had nothing to distinguish it from other crimes of a similar nature, except certain revolting and disgusting features. These very features, of course, made it most attractive to the yellow journals, who feed and thrive on typed and pictured exploitation of moral carrion. An event, which decent journalism would have passed by with scant mention of the main facts, was turned into a sensation of the most obtrusive kind and its loathsome details were paraded before the public with more than the relish of a vulture in the act of tearing his prey. Everything which could by any possibility delight the salacious, the morbid and the degenerate was broadly and persistently flaunted before the reader's eye, until a veritable feast of filth was spread in the yellow columns.

An unhappy waif of a girl, floating among the flotsam and jetsam of the underworld, was in an indirect and obscure way brought into connection with the wretched affair and soon the yellow press began to play its spotlight upon the pitiable little figure. Columns, aye, pages, were devoted to sketching in type and portrait the character of the hapless creature, her career, her sins and weaknesses and her life in the jail in which she was confined. The world was treated to the edifying spectacle of the two leading yellows engaging in a contest for the exclusive possession of the diary of the unfortunate girl, and the diary secured was published with a flare of triumph proclaiming the yellow enterprise. In the course of a few weeks the girl's name and picture were familiar to millions of people, among them the readers of the yellow sheets in this city.

Was it any wonder that this vast publicity attracted some "managers," who offered the girl money for her appearance on the stage? Such a rise of a dramatic or vaudeville star on the American stage was surely nothing new or unusual, and if the matter had stopped here, the world would have passed on to the order of the day with a shrug of the shoulder or a shake of the head. The yellow press, however, boldly, though without one scintilla of evidence to sustain its contention, proclaimed that the girl would pose for a moving picture "concern." No name was given, no further details were vouchsafed, but the ethics of yellow journalism did not call for proof, if the lack of it would interfere with the publication of a "story."

On behalf of the moving picture industry we repel the insinuation as wholly unfounded in fact and supported only by the lurid imagination of the yellow reporter. This industry stands on too high and decent a plane to contemplate the portrayal of contemporaneous crime as a possible source of profit. As the MOVING PICTURE WORLD has pointed out again and again, the picturing of current crime is the unenvied monopoly of the jaundiced journals.

The slightest disposition to be fair and impartial, to give both sides of a story, which in the days of old-fashioned journalism was an integral part of the professional ethics, would have saved the sensation mongers from an error and an injustice. Inquiry at the Motion Picture Patents Company or at the Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company would have revealed the obvious fact that a filming of the poor girl and her pitiful career was an absolute impossibility. Speaking for the latter company, Mr. J. E. Brulatour, its president, has been quick to put himself and his corporation on record in the following plain and emphatic letter, which he hastened to address to the press of this city:

Sept. 11, 1911.

Gentlemen:

It has been called to my attention that the impression prevails that some of the Independent manufacturers who are marketing their products through the Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Co. intend to feature Beulah Binford. Allow me to quickly contradict and set aside any such rumor. It is the aim and purpose of the Independent Manufacturers who are marketing through the Sales Company to make every effort possible to uplift and purify the moving picture productions, and we most certainly would not consider for a moment employing anyone whose character is of the kind of the party mentioned. Please, therefore, place this, our contradiction, on record.

Very truly yours,

J. E. BRULATOUR,
President, Motion Picture
Distributing and Sales Co.

It is pleasing and encouraging to know that, in contrast to the "World," the New York Times, in discussing the vigorous steps of the municipal authorities in repressing and preventing any attempted degradation of the moving picture art to the level of yellow journalism, appreciated the progress and the possibilities of the moving picture. The "Times" says that the proper moving picture has "a hold upon all sorts and conditions of men," and that the shows have improved greatly in excellence and variety of interest." We are glad in passing to remark that the spirit of Raymond Jones still animates the columns of that distinguished journal. Raymond Jones was an altogether different type of journalist from "Joe" Pulitzer.

The Press Agent and the Exhibitor.

By W. Stephen Bush.

IT may be considered a mooted question whether the press bureau as an institution and as at present conducted, does more harm than good. The ordinary press or publicity bureau in most trades and enterprises is run in defiance of one of the plainest and most inexorable laws, to wit, the law of merit, or in other words the law of the survival of the fittest. The bureaus in too many cases proceed on the theory that publicity, skilfully managed or administered, can take the place of merit. Such reasoning is absurdly fallacious, even when applied to the sale of butter and cheese, and it borders on the ridiculous when sought to be applied to an art. An art, much more quickly than a trade, rejects what is spurious and of inferior quality, and attaches its mark of merit and permanence to what is genuine and of enduring quality. A million press agents and their bureaus cannot change the old Latin proverb, "Let him wear the palm who deserves it" into "Let him be best who has hired the most hardened press agent."

Unless you have something that is worth while and really good, it will be eventually bootless to try and make it known. The quality of the thing made known must be the foundation of the advertiser's statement, and nothing else can possibly take its place as a guarantee of success. Indeed, the law of merit works so perfectly and with such automatic precision that the inferior article, praised and exalted in paid type above its actual deserts, loses in the eyes of the public even the little, modest merit it may really possess.

Every day the exhibitor's mail is crowded (I was tempted to say burdened) with printed matter from the manufacturer. Some of this matter is welcome to the exhibitor and quite useful. When a film-maker has produced something out of the ordinary, he has every right to tell the exhibitor all about it. Even the notices about very ordinary films may have their use. Everything over and above that is an affliction and weariness of the flesh to every intelligent exhibitor. Worst of all is the self-laudation which, to the general regret of everybody except the self-praiser, constitutes the largest part of so many of these pamphlets.

An aggrieved exhibitor placed a great stack of them on our desk. Why they were ever printed is more than we can guess. They consist of floods of superlatives that we would hesitate to apply to the statuary of Michael Angelo or the music of Mozart. Regardless of personal discomfort we have waded through a few dozen of "press agent's dope sheets," and learn to our surprise that at least seven of the film-makers glorified therein are "supreme in the world of moving pictures"; that a similar number "make unquestionably the best Western plays"; that "no exhibitor can face the fall season without taking each and every one of the releases of the ——— Company," and an interminable lot of printed bouquets hurled by the film-maker at himself in a perfect frenzy of self-admiration.

Of course, most of this sort of advertising is not taken seriously, not even by the writers thereof, and certainly not by anybody else. After a while the thing begins to pall, and finally degenerates into a plain nuisance. One cannot help wondering what estimate of the exhibitor's intelligence exists in the mind of the press agent. All bombast and exaggeration are harmful to the perpetrator. A plain, unvarnished tale is always the best. Nobody expects the maker of the film to be its critic. No man can sit as a judge in his own case. Whoever undertakes such a task makes himself ridiculous and obtains no benefit whatever. The functions of producing, exhibiting and criticizing films are and of right ought to be separate and distinct, just as the various functions of a well-ordered government.

No class of men realize this better than the exhibitors of moving pictures. If they had followed the advice tendered them by unselfish producers and had exhibited all the "supreme and marvelous pictures," without which, according to the same authorities, they could not have existed, they would be out of business a good long while ago. Exhibitors depend in their judgment of pictures on expert and competent criticism fairly and impartially conducted, on their own judgment, on the attitude of their patrons, but never under any circumstances on the irresponsible lubrications of paid press agents.

The best press agent is the picture of merit. The amount of noise accompanying the picture is entirely irrelevant.

Why Is a Censor?

By Louis Reeves Harrison.

SIMPLEST thing in the world. Here and there in every line of business is an individual with instincts akin to those of the omniverous animal who supplies the meat flavor in a restaurant ham omelet. These human porkers are allowed to range and root in filth until they begin to throw it in our faces: then they are mildly restrained. It is too bad for the public that they exist because their keepers grow so pious in office that they become almost as much of a nuisance as the self-advertising clergymen who shouted at the tops of their voices that they would not marry Colonel Astor to the lady of his choice. If it is true that any producer of moving pictures intended to feature a woman of Beulah Binford's profession, shoving her depravity into the limelight by flaunting her in the faces of our women and children, it is time to eliminate as well as restrain. No organization should tolerate a member who makes a low and vile appeal to what is weak in or coarse in human nature.

The moving picture has come to stay; it is here to grow and to play a wondrous part in human evolution; its widespread influence makes it a power to be well compared with that of the press; it can surpass printed words in its object lessons and reach great heights; but the beginning must be a censorship from within instead of from without. The latter is apt to be trivial and incompetent. For a body of manly, intelligent and decent men engaged in making reels that have cost MONEY to cut a few of them out might be like taking a cold plunge in the morning—it might require courage at first, but it would result in a finer sense of cleanliness and exhilaration after it was over and lead to greater care in the future selection of raw materials.

Censorship can easily become lopsided: witness the prevailing and extremely vague idea of what constitutes tragedy, which confuses stabbing and gun-play with masterly dramas of pathetic character involving desperate passion or situations of extremity. Because tragedy in grand opera and great plays powerfully affects our emotions, a number of moving picture directors attempted to create the same effect by indiscriminate slaughter. The knife-and-pistol dramas of Bloody Run became so common that messenger boys gave up reading the adventures of Nick Carter. The bing-bang-boom-boom of noisy weapons may have stirred the average director during rehearsals just as the shouting and yelling of actors during studio rehearsals reminds one of the racket the New York ash man makes every morning or when we are taking in a few tons of coal, but we in the audience miss that essential part of the thrill even though Percy Peashaker in the two-man orchestra tries real hard to imitate the roar of battle on his kettle and bass drum. Scenes intended to be awe-inspiring in such quasi-tragedies might have been better described as "aweful," and those which were crime inspiring created a new field for the reformer of whatever he does not understand.

A censor can be of great use as long as he confines his faultfinding to productions of motive plainly unclean or those intended to exploit crime, but a weakness to be feared in external censorship is a narrowing of the photoplay to an area in which it cannot vigorously survive. The play is a story of human life. Take away its freedom and sincerity, and it will be a false picture. It deals with emotions that well up in the hearts of men and women, it may portray passions that eat their way into health, strength and sanity like aquafortis biting into a copper plate, not only the virtues but the contradictions of human nature must come into play when an author is devising one of the varied, intricate and sometimes beautiful presentments of our seemingly wondrous existence for the edification or amusement of photoplay audiences. We are marvelous creatures to ourselves, inasmuch as none of us happens to enjoy a speaking acquaintance with the inhabitants of other planets, so the real playwright, the one whose mind is stored with classic memories and knowledge of the arts, who has either a delicate or an impassioned appreciation of what is fine in drama and dramatic in the affairs of humankind, must be given some room. At the rate plays are now being turned out it is growing more and more difficult for the dramatist to arrange his material in such a way that it shall not conflict with what has gone before, so he must have plenty of latitude. Narrowness of horizon may suit the appointed and anointed censor, but it means barrenness of thought for the writer of plays and consequent grey monotony on the screen.

Facing the hackneyed question of whether or not an author of talent is bound to withhold the truth or bound to disclose it seems to be answered by the fact that progress of mind has nearly always resulted from free expression of thought by writers of sufficient cultivation or natural genius to create new ideas and ideals, trade old lamps for new. It was on this account that the press was accorded liberty of speech amounting to almost unrestrained freedom of thought and action even to its misuse in contempt of law and decorum, hence there is little justice in hanging the fetters of despotic puritanism upon moving pictures. Truth is not always welcomed with open arms, any more than a man used to know when he drank more than was good for him in New York and reached home in Brooklyn after dinner was cold. Funny story about him was the time he tried to sneak in after his wife had gone to sleep. At the last moment, when he was about to retire, he stumbled and plunged headlong and landed in an attitude of prayer. His wife, half asleep, reached out, touched his hair and said, "Get down, Nero." He told it to illustrate his presence of mind. He licked her hand to preserve the illusion, but I do not vouch for the truth of his story. I asked him why he conducted himself in such an unbecoming fashion and he offered as an excuse that she was too condemned virtuous. I suppose he meant pious. Truth must be told at times though it be unwelcome, most unwelcome to those who oppress the kind-hearted, the simple and the generous common people.

Strong plays must exhibit force and intensity of feeling, especially when this high emotion is dignified by some noble purpose. Censorship to be distrusted is that which considers mere detail of development rather than the motive. Take the picture of despair recently exhibited by a brilliant young actress in depicting the heart-bleeding emotions of a woman discarded by a man grown weary of his natural selection. A censor discovered—so I was told—something immoral in this baring of soul by a helpless woman, her spirit about to be torn from his by death. The situation awakens deep pity and sympathy; I could see nothing immoral—I was not looking for it—Honi soit qui mal y pense.

As I said before, "Why is a Censor?"

"My Policies"

By Henry.

The World's New England representative has noted that contributors to this journal have often expressed a certain amount of wonderment as to why many moving picture theaters only exhibit real feature photoplays for one day, and then forthwith change the program of pictures. The Moving Picture World itself, speaking from its editorial columns, has advised its exhibiting readers not to fall into this error, but to exhibit certain unusually fine photoplays for a week. We have particularly in mind such films as the Biograph's recent release, "Enoch Arden"; the Itala, "Fall of Troy," etc., etc.

The World's New England representative has decided to take his chances on being stoned to death by moving picture managers, and to let the "cat out of the bag." For, lo! this scribe knows the answer to the question, "Mr. Exhibitor, why do you exhibit this unusually fine photoplay for one day only?" The reason is just this—"My Policies!"

For the benefit of the uninitiated, let us explain just what "My Policies" is meant to convey. Be it known that many managers of moving picture theaters have certain set rules as to the best methods of managing their theaters. Mr. Manager calls these rules "My Policies"—from which there is absolutely no deviation. For instance, a portion of a manager's policies may include these rules: "All pictures must be changed bi-weekly. Illustrated songs are to be used for a period of one week without change. This house does not allow anyone to speak to its employees while on duty, but will carry any verbal message to them," etc., etc. Each manager has certain rules which he has set up as his guiding star—and to break these rules, no matter what the provocation may be, means ruin, ruin and more ruin. And so it comes about that many managers have an exaggerated sense of the importance of a sertain set of rules as to the running and general method of conducting their houses. This writer knows certain managers who run their programs exclusively by a written schedule. Should the schedule call for a somewhat shorter show during the busy after-supper hours (as is usually the case), and it rains in torrents, with a consequent scarcity of business, would these managers lengthen their programs? No, indeed. My policy calls for short shows from 8 p. m. until 9:30 p. m. every night, and this rule must not be broken, no matter how small the attendance may be owing to inclement weather." So we find that the reason why such pictures as "The Fall of Troy," "Enoch Arden," etc., are exhibited no longer than is an ordinary, commonplace picture, can be laid to the door of the mystical and omnipotent "My Policies."—in many instances, at least. Can you imagine a moving picture manager remarking with a sigh, "I wish I could keep this illustrated singer with me a little longer—she has been a big success, and my patrons like her voice—but I always change my illustrated singers once a month." Statements similar to this have been heard by this writer; and quite often, too. A change of "policies" in many houses is something of most momentous import—no matter how trivial the change may be—and conferences, both often and long, are in order before the change is made.

The narrow-minded ideas of a manager in this respect are of no great general importance to the industry. The house itself loses by those methods; and that is the end of it. But, this idea of "My Policies" has another and far-reaching effect on the output of real photoplays that may be termed "classic" in every respect. The narrow minded manger is retarding the advancement of motography as a fine art! The manufacturer well knows—and, mayhap, to his sorrow, that his picture, in which he has spent very much more money and time than was usually allotted to a reel, has but little more chance of a long life than his mediocre effort. Knowing that "my policies" cannot be broken, not even for an "Enoch Arden" quality picture, why should he rouse himself to a very special effort? He can see no special reason, excepting he be desirous of glory and of special and favorable mention in this paper for his excellent effort. In many respects, the manufacturer cannot be blamed for his attitude, as he is not receiving an adequate response to his work.

Aside from the ridiculous light in which this type of moving picture manager is displayed, this latter point is of serious import. It is because of the fact that the "My Policy" manager is a detriment to the production of the highest conception of art in motography, that this space has been used by "Henry," in an endeavor to point out this fault. Let the exhibitor have no hard and fast rule as to the length of time that a picture shall be exhibited. Let the quality of the picture be the judge and jury; and we will enter into an era of "high-art" photoplays. As soon as the manufacturer is appraised of the fact that films of special excellence are used oftener and longer than are the ordinary reels, he will be quick to attempt the production of pictures of unusually fine quality. But, not until then! Here is a problem concerning the advancement of the picture, of which the moving picture manager has the key. Will he allow the manufacturer to open the door? Let us hope so. The World's New England representative is fully aware that in many instances it is the exchange that is to blame for this short-sighted policy as regards the exhibition of feature pictures. In this article, however, he is dealing with the cases in which the manager himself is the chief culprit.

THE CAMERA PRESS MAN.

Animated Associated Press with Representatives Always on the Firing Line.

With the establishment by Pathe Freres, who have branches all over the world, of a motion picture news service which is now in the embryonic stage, there will be introduced in the commercial field a new departure in the photoplay business and an enterprise that will be international in its scope, representing the further usefulness of the film in educating and instructing the public—American and European, says A. W. Thomas, of the Marion, Ohio, Star.

The service might well be called an animated associated press, important events being photographed as they transpire and within a few hours thrown life-like on theater screens throughout the civilized world, an exact reproduction of the events as they occur. Films depicting the essential happenings will be about 1,500 feet in length; will run twenty minutes and be accompanied by explanatory notes, making the pictures readily comprehended.

Instead of pencil pushers, explains Mr. Thomas, the reporters will be known as camera press men. They will be located in the different seaports and larger cities of Europe, America, Canada and Mexico. Nothing will escape their eagle eye or ever-ready picture machine. When Emperor William reviews the Imperial troops, or Great Britain launches a new dreadnought the camera press men will be on hand. They will be there when Albas Pacha, Khedive of Egypt, feasts his victorious warriors, when Paris is again engulfed in the waters of the Seine, when the bubonic plague mows down hundreds of Manchurians; when Menelik, of Abyssinia, takes another wife, when Lloyd George is attacked by London suffragettes, when Portugal has another uprising, when Uncle Sam's cruisers warn Port Au Prince rebels to be good, when forest fires rage in Canada, when fires take lives of big factory employees, when Roosevelt leads the naval parade celebrating the opening of the Panama Canal, when the Panama Exposition gates are thrown open in San Francisco and when Elks and Shriners vie with each other for honors in spectacular parades.

Earthquakes will be caught almost as they take place; international balloon and aviation races, horse racing and prize fights will be quickly pictured. Taft and his opponent for the White House seat will be followed and shown in the East what they do while on their campaign in the West.

Nothing worth reporting and picturing will occur, for instance, like battles, conferences and races, but that the camera men will be on the spot. The world will never have a chance to doubt the authenticity of the details—the indisputable evidence will be there. Rumors of war abroad and here will be closely studied and when war actually comes the reports will not only be thrillingly interesting, but truthful and far more graphic than cables can chronicle or writers dispatch.

The Pathe concern, who have unlimited facilities, announce that there will be American and European "editions" and the "copy" will be fresh. Illustrated weeklies, matrix and cut makers will have to be on the jump for new and unique schemes or their trade is quite likely to dwindle more or less, Mr. Thomas fears.

As Edison said of electricity, "It's just in its infancy," so the same can be applied to motion pictures. With the development of the industry and upbuilding of the tone and influence of the business, comes recognition as a commercial asset to the business world.

"DEALERS AND BROKERS IN MOVING PICTURE REALISM." (Inc.)

By W. Stephen Bush.

"These are rapid days indeed," said Promoter Boreas T. Windblough to a ltle knot of small capitalists, who listened well and said nothing. "Why, gentlemen," he went on, "the possibilities of this moving picture business are only beginning to be realized just now. I am offering you, for a limited period only, stock in my new company, about to be incorporated in any State you like, as the 'DEALERS and BROKERS IN MOVING PICTURE REALISM.' Have you ever stopped to think of the vast amount of moving picture realism that goes to waste, literally goes to waste in this city from a moving picture point of view, day after day? Our company proposes to stop this waste and utilize, for the benefit of the film makers, every filmable accident or calamity. Our list of prices is ready and our charges will be found moderate. Take, for example, the demand for genuine auto accidents, where a person is either killed outright or is more or less badly hurt. The demand for realistic pictures of this type far exceeds the supply, for even the most daring photoplay actor hesitates to take liberties with an auto going at full speed. There results a lack of realism, which is most deplorable. We all know that there is at least one fatal auto accident to every ten reels, and accidents where the hero is nursed back into a marriagable state by the heroine, are more frequent still. We now propose to make it known to the public generally that all persons, who are tired of living will hear something to the advantage of their next of kin and heirs-at-law by communicating with our main office. For a good, realistic auto accident, we are prepared to pay fancy prices. Ghastly suicides with rope, pistol, &c., are discouraged, as we wish to elevate the public taste in suicide as much as possible. For a well-managed, realistic jump from a ferry boat we will pay a good price, but insist on a reduction, wherever the party is rescued.

Special inducements will be held out to mothers-in-law of the militant and heroic type. Any lady of this type is requested to leave her address with the Company, and will be furnished with our telephone number. If any domestic trouble is brewing and before actual hostilities begin, a message sent to us will bring the camera man to the spot on the first available taxi. Western desperadoes, who expect to have trouble with editors, will earn a handsome premium by arranging with our camera man. Don't let your angry passions rise until the latter is on the spot and whether you are right or not, go ahead as soon as we are ready. We guarantee the funeral expenses of either or both contestants and will allow at the rate of accident insurance companies, for the loss of limbs, &c. Statesmen—from aldermen up—who desire to engage in physical encounters, should time their bouts in strict accordance with our schedule—ten seconds after arrival of camera man.

Wives of long matrimonial experience, who are expecting their husbands to return from a late lodge meeting, will, if skilled in the handling of domestic weapons, be able to make annual contracts with us at liberal rates. Book-agents, insurance solicitors, &c., may earn a little on the side by notifying our office of proposed interviews with men of wealth and a grouchy disposition. Special prices for young men offering their best spring poetry to elderly editors. Young men with romantic temperaments and low finances, intending to call on prospective millionaire fathers-in-law, should lose no time in sending for our pamphlet: 'How to become a realistic moving picture actor without previous training." This little book will be sent postpaid to men who climb steeples or mountains, rock the boat in midsummer and do not know that 'it is loaded.'

The company buying most of our output is bound to distance the other film makers, because the people are howling for more realism. We furnish the props for the cinematographic tank drama at the lowest possible rates. Scenario writers, ready to work our realistic features into regular dramas, comedies, &c., can be hired by the hour (13 cents an hour without board, no extras for overtime or Sundays.)"

Reviews of Notable Films

"THE TWO ORPHANS" (Selig).

Reviewed by Jas. S. McQuade.

SELIG'S massive production of "The Two Orphans," in three reels, will be released September 25, 26 and 27. The drama has been enacted by the Eastern company under Producer Turner's direction.

At a private exhibition of the films, I was impressed with the variety and magnitude of the settings, which, I understand, occupied the stage carpenter and his force for many weeks. The Pont Neuf is viewed as a seemingly substantial structure, with the waters of the Seine flowing and rippling under it. The garden in the demesne of the Marquis De Preales, at Belair, showing the gay crowd of revelers and the midnight duel scene, is a splendid spectacle. The gloomy, spacious interior of the Salpetriere prison is another realistic scene, as is also the interior of the old boat house on the Seine, in which the blind Louise is held prisoner by the hag, La Frochard. Another scene which merits special mention, because of the atmosphere it conveys, is that of the French village, near the home of Henriette and Louise. On the morning of their departure for the great city the quiet street is awakened into life. Quaint vehicles and rustics pass by in convoy, and a flock of geese, which has evidently been diverted from the homeward path by the unusual sight, is chased across the square by the boy keeper. The interior views of the city mansion of the Count De Linieres will also bear close scrutiny in their designs and furnishings.

One is chiefly impressed, however, by the fine characterizations offered by the members of the Selig company in these films. The acting of all the principals is worthy of high praise. The two orphans, Henriette and Louise, are in the capable charge of Miss Kathlyn Williams and Miss Winnifred Greenwood respectively. In the garden scene at Belair, where Henriette is at the mercy of the brutal Marquis. Miss Williams sustains the role with commanding dignity. Indeed, in all the situations in which she appears, her acting is consistent and convincing.

A pretty bit of realistic acting—small in itself, but of much artistic value where painstaking detail is necessary—is done by Miss Greenwood when, as the blind Louise, she rushes back up the steps of the Pont Neuf in search of her kidnapped sister. That stumble and fall make the scene thoroughly natural.

Miss Myrtle Stedman, in the role of the Countess de Linieres, shows that she is an accomplished actress in society parts. The La Frochard of Miss Lillian Leighton is such an envenomed old creature that one sometimes almost forgets that it is only acting. Miss Adrienne Krowell will create great waves of sympathy for Marianne, the outcast, a part sustained by her with nice discretion.

The Jacques of Leighton Stark, in conception, interpretation and makeup, is a compelling ruffian. Pierre, his crippled brother, is pathetically sustained by James O. Burrell. Everyone who sees these films run off will admire the acting of Tom J. Carrigan, as the Chevalier, and of Charles Clary, Scene from "The Two Orphans" (Selig).

as the Count De Linieres. Of splendid physique and commanding stage presence, each of these gentlemen compel attention. The sword duel between the Chevalier and the Marquis De Preales is no tame affair, as anyone who knows anything about fencing can see at a glance. It is the most realistic I have seen for a long time.

The costuming of the characters has been attended to with praiseworthy supervision. The garden party at Belair presents a scene of sartorial elegance.

The smoothness of the acting and the intensity of the action throughout bear testimony to painstaking rehearsals under Producer Turner's eye.

"The Two Orphans" is a triumph for the Selig Polyscope Company and will go down in moving picture history as one of the big successes, scored by the silent drama. It illustrates in a remarkable manner how the moving picture can convey the story and plot of a drama, the motives governing the various characters—their loves and hatreds, their crimes and follies—all so convincingly that the spectator's mind is held in thrall. And in scenic investiture one is led through the very places and spots where the plot has been laid, breathing their very atmosphere and taking in their sights and sounds.

"PICTURESQUE COLORADO" (Rex).

Reviewed by Jas. S. McQuade.

While visiting Joe Hopp, of the Standard Exchange, last week, I inquired about "Picturesque Colorado" by Rex. Joe then informed me that he was about to send out the last print he had on hand to a customer, and courteously offered to run it off for me in the office exhibiting room.

The film opens with views of the industrial parade recently held in Denver, the floats used and the great crowds on the sidewalks being pictured clearly. Then a bird's eye view of Denver follows, which gives the spectator an idea of the wealth and importance of the city.

Next we accompany a party of tourists, as the ascent above the clouds is made, on the Moffet road, and we are treated to a snow-ball contest on Mt. Corona in July. The trip by train, over the Georgetown loop, is next made, after which we see passengers making a sheer ascent of 4,000 feet up a precipitous mountainside in a bucket by means of an endless aerial wire rope.

We next look down the Cheyenne Cañon, near Colorado Springs, and afterwards make the trip to Royal Gorge, the sublimity of the scenery dwarfing the works of men and even the flights of the imagination. And now the mind is carried back to the races of the remote past, as we view the ruins of cliff dwellers at Manitou. We are immediately recalled to the present by a band of Indians engaged in a war dance, in the very shadow of the cliffs through whose openings many thousands of eyes have peered out on fearsome scenes in the far past. Manitou is next visited and we view the famous soda springs, where the water of that name is bottled and shipped far and wide.

Our party then makes the trip by auto to the Garden of the Gods, near Colorado Springs. There the famous "Balanced Rock" is seen in the left of the roadway, resting its weight of hundreds of tons on a tiny base from which one expects to see it topple at any moment, before the breath of the wind. The massive "Steamboat Rock," fashioned in the shape of a ponderous steamer, is seen on the right. Returning, we meet Ute Indians going to the garden to engage in a sun dance.

The world's largest warm water swimming pool, at Glenwood Springs, is next visited. Near the springs we catch sight of mountain climbers, and the adventurous camera man must have been near them, for we see Glenwood Springs and the valley, thousands of feet below.

Scene at Pont Neuf, in "The Two Orphans" (Selig).

Our eyes are relieved for a moment from the monotony of stupendous sights as we watch the busy apple pickers near Canon City, Colo., and thence we are whirled away to Cripple Creek, the great mining camp above the clouds. There we are treated to a panoramic view of its straggling buildings. Last we go up the Skyline driveway, near Canon City, in an auto, and learn that the massive underlying masonry and the entire road has been built by convicts from the State penitentiary, in Colorado Springs.

"Picturesque Colorado" is a scenic film of fine educational value. It will serve to teach many Americans that there is sightseeing right at home that will make a pigmy of the Alps and a streamlet of the Rhine. Best of all, it will teach dwellers beyond the sea something of the glories of our natural scenery and will tend to turn a stream of summer travel toward the awe-inspiring scenes of Colorado and Arizona.

The film, which is lightly tinted, is marked by clear, soft photography. It should have a big sale, as we have had too few scenics of our own country. Let's have more of a similar kind.

The Pathe Weekly.

Novel Innovation in Motion Pictures that Promises to Become a Leading Feature.

In no other manner is the wonderful scope of the motion picture and its power as an educator so powerfully illustrated as in the review of world events, now being issued by Pathe Freres under the title "Pathe's Weekly." A glimpse of the most recent issues of this interesting publication is most convincing. In No. 36, for example, the weekly continues its "royal progress" in its presentation of the "Crowned Heads" of Europe. A recent film presents Queen Wilhelmina of Holland as seen riding through the streets of Brussels while visiting in Belgium. The funeral of Queen Maria Pia, which took place in Rome recently, is very clearly portrayed with the information that this wonderful woman had seen her son, the King of Portugal, assassinated, also her grandson met a similar fate, while another grandson, King Manuel, was deposed. From London comes the picture of Beaumont, "King of the Air," at the conclusion of his great all England flight. Vienna presents the most picturesque scenes in its "floral fete," which is very pretty. The whole world is represented in a picture of Jager-Schmidt boarding the "Olympic" in New York on the last stage of his "round the world in forty days" trip.

Another great voyage is shown by a picture of the 25-foot vessel "Sea Bird" on its arrival in Rome, Italy, after crossing the Atlantic from America. Sydney, Australia, sends a picture of the return of the Australian delegates from the coronation of King George V as they are given a rousing homecoming by their friends. From Turkey come pictures of the great fires which devastated a portion of the historic city of Constantinople. The fires in the famous forests of Fontainbleau, near Paris, are also shown.

America is represented by a series of views showing National Guard officers in camp at Fort Meyer, Virginia, a typical camping scene. The Aviation meet at Chicago presents some thrilling aeroplane ascents. Politics are not forgotten, as a picture of Congressman Rucker, of Missouri, brings to mind his near-fight in the House of Representatives in Washington a few weeks ago. Paris fashions for ladies are always an acceptable conclusion to Pathe's illustrated views.

In No. 37 will be found to be an equally comprehensive review and one fully as interesting. The list of events given are:

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—President Taft and General Fred D. Grant reviewing the last National G. A. R. veterans' parade.

CHICAGO, ILL.—Great Elgin Motor Race. The drivers: Hugh Roberts, winner of the Kane Cup, in his Mercer car; Mortimer Roberts, winner of the Aurora Cup, in his Abbott-Detroit car.

BERLIN, GERMANY.—Kaiser Wilhelm II heading the standard bearer's company.

NYACK, N. Y.—Aviator Atwood resuming his flight from St. Louis to New York.

MANCHESTER, N. Y.—Wreck of a Lehigh Valley train; 25 killed, 60 injured—most of them G. A. R. veterans returning from Rochester.

STRASSBURG, GERMANY.—Water jousting tilts on the Rhine.

MIDDLETOWN, CONN.—Wreck of a New Haven & Hartford train from Saybrook; 1 dead, 70 injured.

BOULOGNE, FRANCE.—Auto race circuit.

This is followed by No. 38, issued for the week of September 23, which pictures record breaking bicycle and motor car contests, athletic events, etc., as will be seen by perusal of the following list:

NEW YORK, N. Y.—Bob Burman lowers his own World's Record for one mile on a dirt track at Brighton Beach in his Blitzen Benz.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—William Eads How, the Millionaire Hobo, on his way to the Hobo Convention.

RICHMOND, VA.—Scenes in connection with the Henry C. Beattie trial at Manchester Court House.

NEW YORK, N. Y.—The Labor Day Parade and the American flag used to collect money for the defense of McNamara, the alleged dynamiter, now in jail at Los Angeles.

CHARLESTON, S. C.—A storm of cyclonic velocity devastated the city, killing seventeen persons.

QUINCY, MASS.—The launching of the largest battleship in the world, the "Rivadavia," for the Argentine Republic.

PARIS, FRANCE.—For the ladies—the advance fall styles in women's suits and dresses.

BUCHAREST, ROUMANIA.—A great oil well is on fire and has now been burning for two weeks.

DUBLIN, IRELAND.—The King and Queen of England pay a visit to their Irish subjects.

NEWARK, N. J.—Kramer successfully defends his title as National Bicycle Champion.

BROOKLYN, N. Y.—McGrath, champion hammer thrower, attempts to break his record at Celtic Park.

CONEY ISLAND.—Miss Elaine Golding, of Bath Beach, wins the swimming race from Battery Park, New York City, to Coney Island, fifteen miles in 5 hours and 54 minutes.

With commendable foresight Pathe Freres have not forgotten the weakness of the women patrons of the photoplay theater for the latest Parisian modes. Living models, examples of feminine grace and beauty, give life illustrations of the latest creations in gowns and hats and the most approved style of coiffure. This feature has proved especially attractive and is causing much comment among the fair sex. The possibilities of this feature alone as a business getter for the theater manager can hardly be overestimated. The coloring of this fashion revue is singularly true to life. Exhibitors should be quick to estimate the drawing power of the "Pathe Weekly" and never fail to include it in their week's program.

FRANKLIN THEATER CHANGES HANDS.

Messrs. J. Hesser Walraven and Leon T. Carpenter, formerly with Oscar Hammerstein, at the Philadelphia Opera House, have purchased the Franklin Theater, Fifty-second Street and Girard Avenue, Philadelphia, and will operate it as a high-class motion picture theater. Messrs. Waldraven and Carpenter closed the house for two weeks, during which time it was completely repainted, renovated and refurnished generally. The managers are confident that their policy of showing only the best will insure a continuance of the crowded houses which have been the rule since the opening on Saturday evening, September 2. As a publicity feature, the house runs a snappy one-sheet pamphlet which is mailed to patrons and distributed throughout the audience.

FLICKERS.

Censorship boards are good things. When official censors are detailed to put in "a couple of hours a day" they are qualified to report back why exhibitors cannot personally examine every reel they get.

* * *

No one but a degenerate would have suggested featuring an unfortunate girl in moving pictures. This means that there is a pole-cat somewhere in the business who needs "smoking out."

* * *

The newspaper reports of an Italian who shot himself and daughter in imitation of something he was alleged to have seen in moving pictures fail to state what part "booze" played in the affair, or how much he had on board at the time.

* * *

No further testimonial is needed as to the attractive power of moving pictures when a Kansas farmer will leave his bed in a hospital and hot-foot it to a picture show in his night shirt.

Music for the Picture

By CLARENCE E. SINN

A CORRESPONDENT wants to know if there is an exchange dealing in perforated rolls for player-pianos. I have held this inquiry over until I could learn something definite, but so far have not had the time. If there is such an exchange doubtless some of the readers of the Moving Picture World can give us the required information regarding location and terms. If there is not it seems to me there is room for something of the kind. Why cannot the users of player-pianos get together and conduct their own exchange. A little classified ad in this paper would get it started at small expense and bring quick results. I think it is worth the correspondent's while to try it.

Moose Jaw, Sask., wants to know who publishes the music to picture of "Faust." Pathe Freres released a picture in two parts on that subject and published music for the same. Apply to your exchange for the music or write directly to the manufacturers, Pathe Freres, New York City, N. Y.

The Thanhouser people had a chance to issue a picture with music, but they passed it up, which is much to be regretted. They gave us the picture all right—"Romeo and Juliet," and they are to be complimented on their work throughout. But such a fine production deserves fitting surroundings of which music is not the least important. The opera of the same title (and story) would furnish ample material for a competent musician to make a score from. I saw the picture at several houses and in each case the house was crowded to capacity and a long line waiting for the next show. That and the fact that each seemed to thoroughly enjoy the picture and heartily applauded each reel would seem to indicate that the general public appreciates high-class films and will show such appreciation in the way it counts for the most; i. e., money at the door and applause for the show. I had the good fortune to hear the picture accompanied by very creditable music at a couple of places —notably at Sittner's Theater, Chicago. I did not learn the pianist's name, but desire to compliment her for good work.

I am offering a few suggestions for music for this picture which is selected mostly from popular catalogues, for the reason that this music is likely to be familiar to the majority of my readers. I am not offering this as the best selection, but as the most practical inasmuch as it is within the immediate reach of many. And of those who have not got the numbers mentioned, I believe they are sufficiently known to substitute music of a like nature. But I hope the next time anyone issues a splendid classic like this one they will include music in the production.

I have an inquiry about a book of moving picture music which has leather tabs fastened to and protruding from its edges. These are numbered like an index. Does anyone know of such a publication?

ROMEO AND JULIET (Thanhouser).

Part I.

1. Martenique Intermezzo (or Allegretto) till sub-title: "Capulet and Montague, etc."
2. Heroic till combat, then—
3. Agitato till end of combat.
4. Gavotte till "Romeo is Persuaded, etc."
5. Allegretto (similar to No. 1) till "Romeo and Juliet Meet."
6. Valse Lento till they form for dance.
7. Minuet slow and well marked till dancers exit, then:
8. La Cinquantine till "His Name is Romeo, etc.," then:
9. Valse Lento till "But Soft, What Light Through Yonder Window."
10. Intermezzo from "Cavalleria Rusticana" or something similar till "Romeo Entreats the Good Friar, etc."
11. Vesper Bells till "Juliet's Old Nurse Acts as Messenger."
12. Reverie (The Roses Honeymoon) till change of scene.
13. Gavotte till "Then Hie You Hence, etc."
14. Valse Lento till "Holy Church Incorporate." Then:
15. Religioso till garden scene, then:
16. Light pretty waltz movement or semi-sentimental. (I heard one pianist use "Oh, Promise Me" with good effect.)
17. Swell or change to sentimental for finish.

Part II.

1. Semi-mysterious till next scene.
2. Agitato at duel till they stop fighting, then
3. Short plaintive till second duel.
4. Agitato till end of scene.
5. Religioso all through scene. At change:
6. Pathetic till "Juliet's Father Not Knowing, etc."
7. Waltz movement till Juliet is alone with her father.
8. Reverie (The Harvest Moon) till Friar opens door for her.
9. Semi-religious till Juliet appears in the garden. etc."
10. Reverie (Heart's Ease) till "Believing Juliet to be Dead."
11. Pathetic till "Paris, Who Loved Juliet."
12. Pathetic (minor key—suggestive of funeral) till "Stop Thy Unhallowed Toil."
13. Agitato pp. swell for combat. Then:
14. Plaintive till "The Friar Learns That His Letter to Romeo."
15. Mysterious till Juliet rises.
16. Plaintive till change of scene.
17. Mysterious till Friar enters the tomb.
18. Plaintive (minor key) till end.

Suggestions are also appended for music to following pictures:

AT JONES' FERRY (Edison).

1. Country dance till stop dancing.
2. Lively intermezzo (two-step) till Boss Strikes Young Jones.
3. Hurry p. and f. till change of scene.
4. Moderato (Miama-Remick) till girl falls in river.
5. Agitato—long, till sub-title "A Chance for Revenge."
6. Short moderato till change.
7. Agitato till girl is rescued, then:
8. Plaintive till men shake hands.
9. Waltz or lively till finish.

THE HEART OF JOHN BARLOW (Selig).

1. Allegro moderato ("Kisses," pub. by C. K. Harris) till letter.
2. Sentimental (Apple Blossoms—Leo Feist) till John meets Paul with satchel.
3. Agitato p. and f. (long) till Paul is locked in closet.
4. Same as No. 2 till finish.

THE PARSON AND THE BULLY (Nestor).

1. Lively ("Wildflower Intermezzo") till next scene.
2. Mission Hymn (When she sits at organ) till crowd enters.
3. Hurry when parson knocked down till sub-title "The Next Day."
4. Spring Dreams (pub. by Feist) till "The Young Clergyman."
5. Lively till "A Few Days Later."
6. Any "cowboy" tune ("Broncho Nell") till bully strikes young clergyman. Then Agitato till girl comes front.
7. Intermezzo ("Lily of the Prairie" two-step) till sub-title: "Saturday Afternoon."
8. Any "cowboy" song chorus till "For the Church."
9. Waltz till "Round One."
10. Lively music. N. B.—There are five rounds fought. Use lively music for each round and waltz between rounds. After sub-title "The Knockout" short triumphant in march tempo till "Sunday Morning."
11. A few bars of mission hymn till men enter, then change to any neutral; moderato, waltz or intermezzo.

AFRICAN SHARPSHOOTERS (Gaumont).

1. March to open, continue through two scenes, then:
2. "Oriental Dance" (Herbert's; pub. by Witmark) till change.
3. Mystic Shrine (Oriental intermezzo) till finish.

GIVING THE HIGH SIGN TO WOMAN HATERS (Gaumont).

1. Beethoven's "March From the Ruins of Athens" till change of scene.
2. Intermezzo "Iris" (pub. by Witmark) till "Bringing the Presents, etc."
3. "Egyptian Love Dance" (Pryor; pub. by Carl Fischer) till sub-title "Discovered Making Love to Helen, etc."
4. Pearl of the Harem (pub. by F. A. Mills) till finish.

Working the Sound Effects.

By Clyde Martin.

It is not very long ago that it would take hours of arguing to convince an exhibitor that a drummer would be a valuable addition to the picture theater. To-day the question is not "Shall I use a drummer," but, "Where can I find one that is capable of doing picture work?"

It is just the same with the drummers of the country as it is with the piano players; a piano player may be a concert artist and still not be able for pictures; a drummer may be capable of holding down a job with the largest bands in America and then make a complete failure of picture work.

To my notion, a drummer should never be used through an entire picture, as their work would only become dull and wearisome; on the other hand, if the drummers will limit themselves to bringing out the climaxes and high-lights of a picture, their work will be appreciated and it will improve the picture a hundred per cent.

During the showing of the average dramatic picture there is very little use for drums except in the strong scenes where a strong roll will swell the music to the desired pitch.

In these advanced times a practical and serviceable line of traps is a necessity as well as a source of satisfaction, and a drummer using effective traps is invariably brought more noticeably before the public and his employer.

The question has often arisen as to whether a drummer should invest his own money in traps and sound effects or whether his employer should buy them. It is true that many drummers are working on such small salaries that it would hardly look right for them to invest all of their earnings to boost another's game; on the other hand, if they will just consider that when they have completed their outfit they can demand more money and if they are proficient they will never be out of work.

Sensation is ever a desire of the American public. They delight in being surprised, startled and amused. The drummer of to-day who can go before an audience and perform in such a manner as to attract attention to the features of a picture with some particular trap or imitation will soon prove his value.

There are a great many sound effects that would be out of the question for anyone other than the exhibitor to furnish, such as wind, water, thunder sheets, etc., as this line is large and bulky and give much more satisfaction if built permanently in the theater, either in front of the screen or in the back.

Possibly eighty per cent. of the picture houses of this country are built with the screen to the back and not allowing room for sound effects back of the curtain, in this case they can be worked down by the piano, but the effect is much better if there is space back of the screen.

Some of the best known exhibitors in the business will argue that sound effects are not necessary, and they cannot understand why this extra expense should be added. On the other hand, let us take the Lyman Howe show for example. Lyman Howe shows several pictures on his programs that the public has seen in five cent theaters. Howe projection is fine, but there are many picture houses over the country that are putting on just as good pictures. Mr. Howe does not use a symphony orchestra and still his admission prices range from twenty-five cents to a dollar. There's a reason. In the Lyman Howe show they never lose a chance to work an appropriate sound effect, and he can come into your city and show pictures that you have shown a year ago and people will pay a dollar to see them and wish he would come back, which he does, and the same people pass your place up and pay him another dollar. I have put up this argument to many exhibitors in my travels and they all say, "It's his reputation." I agree that it is his reputation, but how did he make it? Good pictures with sound effects.

I recently had the pleasure of playing the Palace Theater in Burlington, Iowa, for three nights. The first night there was a comedy picture on the program that had a five minute scene at Coney Island. Up to the front of the picture was a big merry-go-round. When I handed Manager Blank my prop list he thought I was crazy when I asked for an organ similar to one used on a merry-go-round. However, Mr. Blank looked the town over and finally returned in a wagon with the real article. That night when the Coney Island scene came on the audience heard the music from the merry-go-round, the noise of the roller coaster, the toy balloons, etc. To put it mildly, the audience did not want to see any other pictures on the program; they wanted them to run that comedy over again.

The next day telephone calls came in wanting to know if that same picture would be shown, but the program was changed. The picture could have been run another day. Never run a good thing in the ground. If you have a feature or something they like, don't tire them of it. I am not writing this little incident in the spirit of boastfulness, but am merely using it as an example of what sound effects will do.

There is hardly a picture produced that does not offer an opening for some good effect and if you have doubts as to whether your audience will like it or not, just try it once.

It is not expensive to work the average effects as most of them are very simple, and you will find that little details count. Not long ago while playing a two-night engagement at the Crown Theater in Ft. Madison, Iowa, they were showing the Kalem picture, "The Railroad Raiders of '62;" and in one scene it shows the Confederates tearing up the track ahead of the Yankee's engine. For this scene we secured a number of short rails and placed them behind the screen and the ushers were there with sledges. When the scene came on the audience could hear the sledges hitting the rails and this one little scene, that possibly would have gone by unnoticed, got a hearty round of applause.

By catching such cues, it does not mean that if there is a blast in a quarry you must touch off a stick of dynamite, the little effects are the ones that count. There is one thing that should be avoided in working sound effects, and that is, too much noise. We will say that there is a battle scene on, and the bullets are flying fast, it is just as effective to imitate shots on a leather cushion as it is to shoot a number of revolvers. Too much noise gives your work the appearance of horse-play and it is far from pleasing to the ladies in the audience.

There can be just as much refinement shown in working effects as there is used in your music and if some scene calls for a loud noise it is better to omit the effect.

Where you have a picture in which just one shot is given, it is sometimes advisable to use a revolver back of the screen, but never in front of the curtain. We will take, for example, such a picture as the Reliance production of "The Gray of the Dawn," or the Rex picture "Fate." In both of these pictures the shot is a strong feature and the pictures are produced in such a way that the use of a revolver would give the desired effect in the ghastly scenes portrayed.

In a forthcoming I will suggest a few sound effects for some of the more recent releases.

Those Sound Effects.

I am heartily in favor of everyone "writing to the paper." There was never such a relief to overcharged feelings as to sit down and tell the editor, or some other correspondent, or the public generally, just what you think of him, or it. Don't be afraid to speak right out—in fact, just let her rip! By the time you have hammered out three or four pages on the typewriter, or rendered unfit for further practical use a dozen or so sheets of ruled paper, you will find the temperature under your collar reduced many degrees. I always do so. Then I carefully read over what I have written, and am so pleased with the uppercuts and short arm jolts which I have delivered that I puff out my chest, take a turn or two about the room, return to my desk, and carefully tear up the letter. Almost always. Sometimes I go so far as to to put it in the mailbox, and am afterwards sorry, because the stuff is either so flat, stale and unprofitable that I am ashamed of it, or it is so good that it hurts the feelings of a lot of folks. Moreover, there is always the danger of starting something, as I seem to have done with a few remarks on sound effects. One gentleman was made pessimistic—he said so himself—and he was a perfectly innocent bystander, a musician who does not use effects. In consideration of the latter fact, it was not obvious how he got hurt, for I had no intention of disparaging real music with the pictures. Being personally unable to play even a Jew's harp, I have the highest regard for those who cause the air to vibrate with harmony and all that sort of thing. Moreover, if that gentleman plays as well as he writes, his theater patrons are to be congratulated. I thought I distinguished between music and noises, even though the latter comes from a piano, as have some of the worst I ever heard.

Then came "Ohio," and reproved me severely as a "somebody"—though my name was signed—and unkindly intimated that I failed to use common sense in my self-imposed duty as critic, as he endeavored to do in his business of making accompanying noises. He also said that he is a drummer who "was engaged for that kind of work principally." I am afraid "Ohio" is a prejudiced witness.

I do not believe that the public cares for sound effects, and, apparently, the majority of managers share my belief. However, it would not be difficult, and I should think it would be decidedly profitable, for managers to put this and other questions to their patrons. The most reliable method would be to have printed a sufficient number of slips of paper, in this form:

Do you or do you not like the "sound effects"—horses galloping, etc.—in addition to the music?

Yes. No.

Tear off end of slip indicating your preference and drop it in a box as you go out.

The vote of one night would give a pretty clear idea of the preferences of a probably representative section of the public. A slip should be given with each ticket sold. There would, of course, be some litter occasioned, but it would be for one night only, and everyone coming in would at once know the cause of it, so it would be of small moment. Also, the bulk of patrons would be flattered that their opinions were wanted. The same method might be followed in regard to illustrated songs, or vaudeville. I think some managers would be rather astonished when they came to check up the ballots.

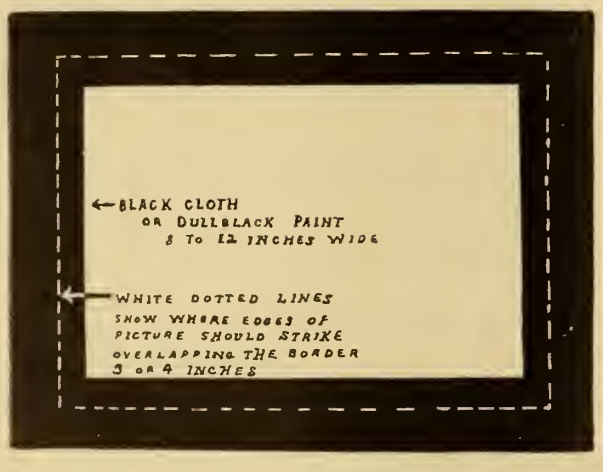
Before retiring from this bloody field, I must regretfully turns my guns upon a young lady, and a violinist, at that. Not because she doesn't play well, for she does exceptionally well, but because she is the cause of the electric fans being shut down, and because her solo lasts ten minutes by the clock just above her head. After sweltering through those ten minutes, one is very much inclined to doubt whether even a mighty good solo was worth what it cost. The music made by electric fans isn't so bad when the temperature is up about ninety. Put that up to the patrons and it is a very large chance that the young lady will be out of a job until cool weather.

EMMETT CAMPBELL HALL.

Framing the Screen

First, I wish to apologize to those exhibitors who wrote me regarding my letter which was published in the Moving Picture World of April 29th, and who did not receive a reply from me, as I received many inquiries from all parts of this country and Canada and as it would be impossible to answer them all personally, I am giving herewith full directions and sketches, which I trust are intelligible.

Many exhibitors make the mistake of putting a frame around the screen and then go hunting for a lens to fill the space left, with the result that as it is practically impossible to procure a lens that will fit the curtain exactly to the edges. The picture will be either too small or will overlap the frame and if the frame is gilded as it is in most cases, the dancing shadows prove very distracting to the eyes of the audience and in no way help to produce good results.

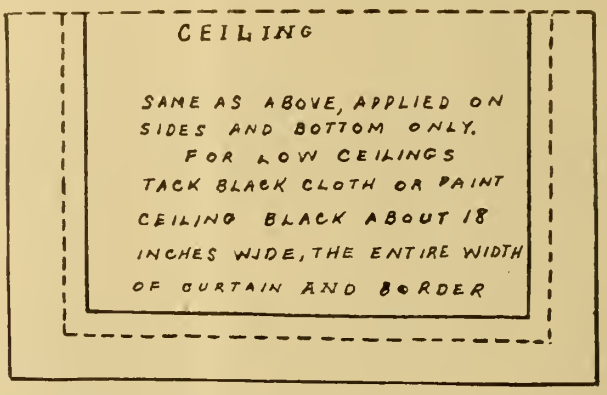


It occurred to a former employer of mine to use a black cloth border instead of the gilded frame and when the same was tried out it was found that not only did it do away with the dancing shadows, but it also enhanced the value of the picture by giving it perspective or greater "depth" than was formerly obtained and which of course is a very desirable feature.

The best way to put on the black border is to project the picture on the screen, apply the border which should be of dull black cloth or paint, the cloth being more desirable as it is more dense and absorbs the shadows better than the paint will.

The border should be anywhere from eight to twelve inches wide and the inside edge should overlap the picture three or four inches or, in other words, the picture should "shine" on three or four inches of the border all the way around, but in cases where the ceiling is low, a satisfactory result can be obtained by framing the sides and bottom only (see sketch).

The sketches will, I think, explain themselves and if the border is properly applied, the results will be surprising and it will be found that the picture will be clear right to the edges of the border, that all fuzziness and discolorations which sometimes appear in the best projected pictures will disappear and with properly shaded lights it is possible to obtain a good "daylight picture."



The lights along the side walls should be shaded so as to throw the rays downward on the seats where it is most needed and the ceiling lights may be lit if they are painted at the bottom of the bulb, but do not make the mistake of using too many ceiling lights, as the rays will cut into those of the picture machine and dim the effect on the curtain and this I believe is the trouble with all of the present so-called "daylight" pictures, despite the claims of their inventors to the contrary.

A single row of lights in the center of the ceiling, placed about fifteen feet apart, using a single eight-candle-power lamp in each should be sufficient for narrow houses, and a double row of the same for wide houses, and care should be taken not to get the first lamp too near the curtain as the picture rays are widest at that point and are more easily affected by the surrounding lights.

GEORGE B. ROCKWELL.

THE BEST WAY TO GET NEWS.

Everyone wants the news! Some want it the quickest way, and others the surest and best way, even if this happens to be a slower way; the slower way is more likely to be the more correct way. The cinematograph is constantly springing surprises upon us, however accustomed to its versatility we may be; that it should become a dispenser of news was not considered as probable—although readily possible. We have now, however, the "picture newspaper." Pathe and Vitagraph are both issuing "editions" at regular intervals, portraying current events at wide range. If other makers follow this excellent lead we may soon expect from the divided territory to be supplied with "picture news" from all parts of the world.

The quickest news is conveyed by the "talking newspaper" first established in Budapest, where those connected with a central telephone exchange, have the latest news simultaneously read to them; although this advantage has not yet reached American cities, they are surely the first to have the best method, even if slower one, of the "picture news." While the "talking newspaper" has the advantage of speed, it can never possess detail, minutiae is after all the most important; this the "picture news" conveys, with interesting and often most delightful satisfaction. If proof were required, the kinemacolor pictures of the outdoor scenes of the coronation will amply supply the same. Never before was such "picture news"; even the most ardent optimistic moving picture enthusiast may be pardoned if he displays a little "open-mouthed" wonder.

Other events chronicled by the recent issues by the firms named possess their own interest. There is no doubt the regular "editions" of these films will be taken with the same regularity as the daily paper. The writer is still of a formerly expressed opinion that the time is coming when the cinematograph will produce within a building, events taking place in the streets—an instantaneous picture news portrayer.

A new record for speed in the complete manufacture and display of a motion picture is claimed by the Selig Polyscope, the employes of which took a picture of 200 guests at the new plant in Chicago and displayed it three hours afterward.

Observations by our Man About Town

THE chief topic bearing upon moving pictures the past week hinged upon the propriety of featuring Beulah Binford in them. The powers that be in Greater New York declared that she would not be allowed upon the stage, nor upon the screen. The cities of Philadelphia and Detroit had already made a similar ruling. Mayor Gaynor struck a decisive blow by instructing the Chief of the Bureau of Licenses to suspend or revoke the license of any picture house that would show the pictures.

* * *

However sincere the promoters of the scheme may have been in their declaration that the proposed pictures were "intended to carry a moral lesson," they succeeded in impressing a wretchedly small minority of the people at large that the pictures would have any bearing at all in that direction. Even if Mayor Gaynor had not interfered, in my opinion, the pictures would not have been shown. Without the slightest doubt the Board of Censorship would have bitterly condemned them and the police would have interfered.

* * *

Time and expense is saved by the Mayor's intervention. Nothing is more effective than a threat to revoke licenses. Ever since that Christmas Eve when the then Mayor of Greater New York made a wholesale revocation of licenses of picture houses the owners of the places have had a dread of the exercise of such powers. Although the action at that time was grossly unjust and the exhibitors won the fight, the worry, work and cost left a lasting impression that it is better to be on the inside looking out than on the outside looking in.

* * *

The action of the municipal authorities in the Binford case is criticized in a few quarters on the ground that pictures that have not been shown, nor even manufactured, cannot be condemned. This is a technical argument that falls with its own weight. The mandate of the authorities is that "any moving picture films or stereopticon views relating to the Beattie murder case, depicting any scene in connection therewith, or featuring any persons implicated therein, or who are depending for advertising on their connection with this gruesome tragedy, are condemned for the reason that they are unfit to be shown in places of public amusement." The case is well defined, the theme of the proposed pictures is as well known to the public as their actual production could make it.

* * *

It is not sound argument to contend that the action in the Binford matter is unfair discrimination because two of the principals in a recent shooting affair were allowed to appear in one of the largest vaudeville houses of the city. The public itself was not on the alert at that time. If it had been, "the two shooting stars" would not have appeared on the stage as such, nor would there be an effort to get the Binford girl either upon the stage or the picture screen.

* * *

All who have shouldered some part of the stupendous task in raising motion pictures to the position they now hold in the estimation of the public must endorse the prohibition of the proposed Binford pictures. Had they been but passively sanctioned and tolerant productions followed, producers and exhibitors would have suffered a loss that cannot be estimated, through public opinion.

* * *

Touching upon themes for moving pictures brings to mind complaints made by many writers of scenarios. I have always contended that no reputable manufacturer of pictures would use a subject without awarding recompense to the author, but recently complaints have been so severe I decided to investigate some of them. The statements from the manufacturers' standpoint indicate that my original contention holds good, but unfortunately, disgust or indisposition to require explanations on the part of some writers create misunderstandings regarding the true methods of those in whose hands scenarios are placed.

* * *

At one studio the following case was cited: A writer, acquainted with the manager of a distant city theater, left with him a scenario with a request that it be sent to a studio presenting certain pictures that were popular at the house. The writer thought the scenario would receive more prompt attention if sent in by the manager of a theater. The latter left the paper on his desk for two weeks or more. He had forgotten about the matter, but promised to forward it when reminded by the writer. More neglect followed and eventually the manager was transferred to a house in another city. During the several months that elapsed the studio the writer had in mind produced a picture that embodied many of the principal points covered by the scenario in question. Of course the author made demand for compensation. The case proved one of coincidence. The scenario upon which the picture was based was received from a third party, who did not know the writer first mentioned, and it was shown by the theater manager having custody of it that the manuscript left with him had never left his possession; he had never read or shown it to anyone, nor had he discussed the paper after receiving it.

* * *

Coincidences are frequent in the picture business. They sometimes create unpleasant feelings on the part of producers against authors. I distinctly remember an incident in that line in the metropolis. Two concerns advertised a film bearing identically the same title. Of course, each denounced the author of the respective manuscripts, claiming he had "played both ways." To be more clear, it was charged that the author had sold the same story to both companies. An examination of the subjects exonerated him. Although the main titles were alike, the themes were entirely different and the authors were strangers to each other.

* * *

But this complaint hit me hard. A writer stated that his scenario had been retained for some time. He finally received it with a letter stating the story had been rejected. He noticed that on the back of the manuscript was written with lead pencil, "A good story. Make copy." That certainly looked like a bad case. The writer admitted he had never seen the story produced in picture form, but he had not seen all the pictures produced by the studio in question.

* * *

Getting a line on the studio against whom the indictment was made, I asked the manager to plead. This was what he said: "The case looks like a strong one, but it is really not as strong as it looks. In the first place, none of the established companies will endanger its reputation for the value of a scenario and I am satisfied that not one of them has intentionally deprived a writer of a manuscript, or the value he should receive for it. The writer you refer to should, in justice to the studio, as well as himself, have inquired as to whether a copy of his manuscript was withheld, or whether the story, or any part of it, has been produced. The writing may have been made on the back of it by one reader and the subject may have been rejected by another, whereupon the manuscript may have been returned without erasing the writing made by the first reader. Perhaps the favorable note was made by mistake upon the wrong manuscript; and it is not unlikely that the manuscript was returned in mistake."

* * *

"Have you known of an employee submitting as his own a scenario that had been sent in by another party?" was asked.

"Only in one instance, in my experience. When a writer submits with his scenario his name and address he has the whip in his own hands. A few cents in postage will bring back a reply one way or the other. The one great fault with most authors is that they too frequently take credit for originality they are not entitled to. A man may have returned to him a good story that, in the main, has already been covered by some other writer, although we may not have produced it at the time the first paper is rejected. In some cases we buy two or three stories, or even four, and combine the best points of all in one picture; but where this is not practicable and there is still a similarity, we give the best scenario the preference."

Advertising for Exhibitors

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT.

[This department is for those live Exhibitors who appreciate the benefits to be derived from advertising their houses and their programs. The Editor will be glad to receive and comment upon plans and ideas, tried or untried, submitted for the general good of the business. Send in your smart advertisements for criticism.]

BROADLY speaking, a properly conducted house, neat in appearance, with a good program and the best projection is the most valuable advertisement a photoplay theater can enjoy, but, having all these, it is necessary to bring the fact to the attention of the prospective patron before the merits of the house are appreciated.

In most cities the cost of newspaper advertising space is prohibitive, considered from the point of view of the photoplay exhibitor, but in the towns and the smaller cities it is possible to use newspaper space at least on Saturday or Sunday if not daily, and if it is intelligently done there is no more effective method of reaching the public.

But to advertise intelligently is not to take a ten-line space and devote it to the statement that the Bijou has the best show in town. Every manager declares his house to be the best, and the statement carries no weight with the public. Prove that it is the best, if that be possible, or make some less sweeping argument.

"The Best Show in Town" conveys no appeal to the reader. It does not make him want to go to the theater. Very possibly he already knows that you have a photoplay theater, and you have spent your money to no effect. It is not much more convincing to explain that you will make a daily change of program or that you have new reels on Mondays and Thursdays.

If you can work ahead, tell him what the changes will offer. In most instances you probably will not know yourself, but always you can arrange with the exchange for some commercial that you can be sure of getting, and a commercial that you can count upon is of more value in an advertising campaign than a first run that may be any one of the day's four or five releases. Take your first runs as they come, but plan your advertising on the "sure thing" commercial that you know you can produce.

Advertise for the New Patron.

Your regular patrons may know what a "first run" is, but you are not advertising for the steady patron. You are trying to make more steady patrons out of the men and women who do not know about photoplays. To such people the fact that you use first-run stuff means nothing and the statement that you have two first-runs each week is all Greek. But if you announce: "Coming Thursday. The Great Western Story, 'The Cowboy from Carlisle.' Made in the Heart of the Rockies" you've offered something definite, something that may attract the reader and get him into your house.

And that's what you are advertising for. If you're running the right sort of house you can hold the newcomer once he has come, but the trouble is to rouse his interest and get him through your doors to see what a deal of entertainment you offer for five or ten cents.

If you can make such a man think there is some one thing you offer that he wants to see, you've got him, but you're not going to get him with the "Great Show" or "Program Changed Daily." If he comes, it will be to see the mountain scenery, or because the title of the photodrama has caught his fancy.

Make Reading Notices Effective.

With most papers, the insertion of a theatrical advertisement carries the implied right to a reading notice, generally gauged by the number of lines of advertising. This is worth more than double the value of the matter in the advertising columns and generally it is the reading notice that the alert exhibitor wants.

Don't leave this to the editor. He'll tell someone to write it and the result will be something about "John Smith, the genial and enterprising manager of the Grand" and the fine show he gives. It will make you feel good all over and it will look fine in the scrap-book, but it won't bring you in one penny in business, and it is business you're after.

Write the notice yourself and turn it in the same time that you hand in your advertising copy. Talk about your films, not about yourself. The public does not come to see you, but the pictures you have to offer. Tell them what you have and what you expect to have. Get them interested. Tell them about the Pathe micro-cinematographic films that make microbes look as large as kittens; tell the feature of some photodrama or comedy. If you are located in an inland town, play up the marine pictures. If you are in the East, exploit the Western releases. Make the notice so attractive that the reader feels he must see the picture talked about, and always remind him that this particular reel you are talking about is but one of three or four or five subjects, as the case may be.

Personal Mention Will Come with Enterprise.

It is a good thing to keep your name to the fore, but not at the expense of the space that should go to the theater. Get your personal mention through your abilities as a hustler. If a fireman is killed on duty, be one of the first to come forward with a subscription to the fund that some paper is almost certain to start. Give your receipts for one performance and let people know that you are doing it. If the local improvement society wants the house for a morning meeting, show your public spirit by donating it. If the house must be closed on Sunday, offer it to some well-known mission. Let people know that you are there and the personal pages of your scrap book will fill with amazing rapidity.

Be Breezy If You Can.

If you can take enough space, the personal note is effective, but it cannot well be done in a couple of inches. A quarter of a column should be the least space used and the style first used by the press man of the old Howard Athenæum in Boston is probably the most effective when properly done. Being a burlesque theater, the original was startlingly lurid in its style, but it can be modified to suit almost any condition. It is merely a breezy chat about the coming show and, adapted to photoplay, might read something like this:

DON'T MISS THIS WEEK'S BILL.

It's just a little mite better than ever and three crackerjack reels are going to make talk that will last long after the films have gone on to delight audiences in other cities. You like comedy, of course, and there's one of the Lubin brand that will make you laugh every time you remember it. It's called

THE TENT VILLAGE.

A Tragic Comedy of a Very High Tide and it tells of a couple of campers who wanted to get near the water and they did—right on the edge of the bounding billows—but they raised their tent at low tide, and when the turn came—but we don't have to tell you the rest—you can guess, but you can't imagine how funny it is. Then there is

THE NEW CHURCH CARPET.

An Edison Study from Real Life.

You forget that this is a photoplay as you follow the simple story of the loving mother who takes the Ladies' Aid Society money to visit her dying daughter, and you want to smash the miserly husband and help her out. No shooting, or blood and thunder—but it grips. You'll not be sorry you saw this gem—and it is a gem. Then there is the Pathe micro-cinematographic

BOIL YOUR WATER.

The Sensation of Two Continents.

Snakes as large as life, bugs the size of puppies and germs as large as baseballs, all in a drop of water magnified 40,000 times. One of the most widely discussed films ever made. Don't miss it. At the

UNIQUE PHOTOPLAYHOUSE.

Broad and Main Streets.

Monday - Tuesday - Wednesday.

Gauge your style to suit the class of patrons you make your appeal to. You would not call a minister "Old Sport," or address your chum as "Reverend Sir," neither will you use the same address to the boy on the street and the man of education. Plan to fit your audience, but never gauge your appeal too low. Be breezy, but neither coarse nor vulgar. It takes an expert to write in slang, but anyone who can talk can write as he talks, simply and with conviction.

Bright Lines in Lobby Work.

Take the same tone in your lobby advertising. It never is a good plan to plaster the front of your house with home-made signs. Do not use too much reading matter of any sort, but with the wealth of well planned printed matter that is offered by various concerns, it is absurd to resort to the wrapping paper and marking brush to save the very small cost of the poster work that will give the appearance of solidity to your house. Even experienced exhibitors do not always appreciate the impression on the public that is made by regularly printed paper.

At the same time there is now and then the need for a quickly made sign, and you want to be in touch with someone who can do neat lettering in a hurry. If you have the trick of expression, a daily hint will get your regulars looking for the bulletin.

Here, too, you want to get away from the "great show" idea. Get a snappy line and leave the great show for your audience to use. If you were an outsider, which would get you quickest:

"This Is the Best Show in Town"
or
"You want to be around when Gus and Bessie fall out of the hammock in 'Cupid and Charlie Chase.' It's great!"?

In almost every photoplay there is some little thing that may be "played up" in this fashion to rouse curiosity, perhaps some humorous situation or tense dramatic moment, perhaps only a background of unusual beauty, or a trick of the camera. There must be something in three reels. Dig it out and use it. The Moving Picture World will give you advance hints, film stories, criticisms and the advertisements of the manufacturers.

A Simple Card System.

If you want to do things the right way, get a card catalogue system. At the start you can get an outfit large enough at a cost of two or three dollars. Get a set of alphabet cards for each manufacturer and several packs of the plain ruled cards.

When you get your World, go over it carefully and write down the names of all films that have not been mentioned before. Some of these will be in special items, others in the manufacturers' notes, while others will make their first appearance in the list of releases. Use a card for each title and mark the volume and page number of each mention on a line. You will have ten or eleven lines on which to write in the data. The World numbers consecutively for a volume instead of starting page one for each issue. This greatly simplifies looking up the material, particularly if you are careful to keep all copies in some cheap binder.

If you have entered a title before, add the new page numbers and keep the card up to date. Drop the "A," "And," or "The" from the title to avoid confusion. The Biograph's "The Last Drop of Water," for example, would be filed under "L" instead of "T" in the Biograph Section. This keeps half the cards out of the "A" and "T" classifications.

If you are careful to keep your entries up to date, you will be able to tell all about any film in less than five minutes. It may take a couple of hours a week, but it may save much more time than that, and you are always well posted.

Unless you go back and enter up the past six months, the file will not be immediately useful, but it will become invaluable as the records grow and as your business expands, and you are enabled to better your service and make more effective use of advertising you have your card system ready to your hand. You are not always going to be content to drag along in the rear. Get ready now to get ahead.

The Park Photoplay Theater, 819 East 180th Street, New York, is under new management and reports the largest business in the history of the house. Many improvements have been made, including the addition of a full orchestra and better film service. Mr. S. Crystal, who has formerly managed theaters in Chicago and Baltimore for the past four years, is in charge. No vaudeville.

The New Montgomery Theater

Some Views and Features of the Magnificent Picture House in Atlanta.

From time to time the Moving Picture World has mentioned the progress of that photoplay exhibitor par excellence, Mr. Frank T. Montgomery, whose enthusiasm and advanced ideas of picture exhibition has placed this popular amusement upon a high plane in those cities of the South chosen for his operations and gained for it a measure of popular approval not equaled elsewhere. While recording Mr. Montgomery's success in Memphis and Jacksonville, mention has been made of his latest venture—the construction of the Montgomery Theater at Atlanta, Ga.

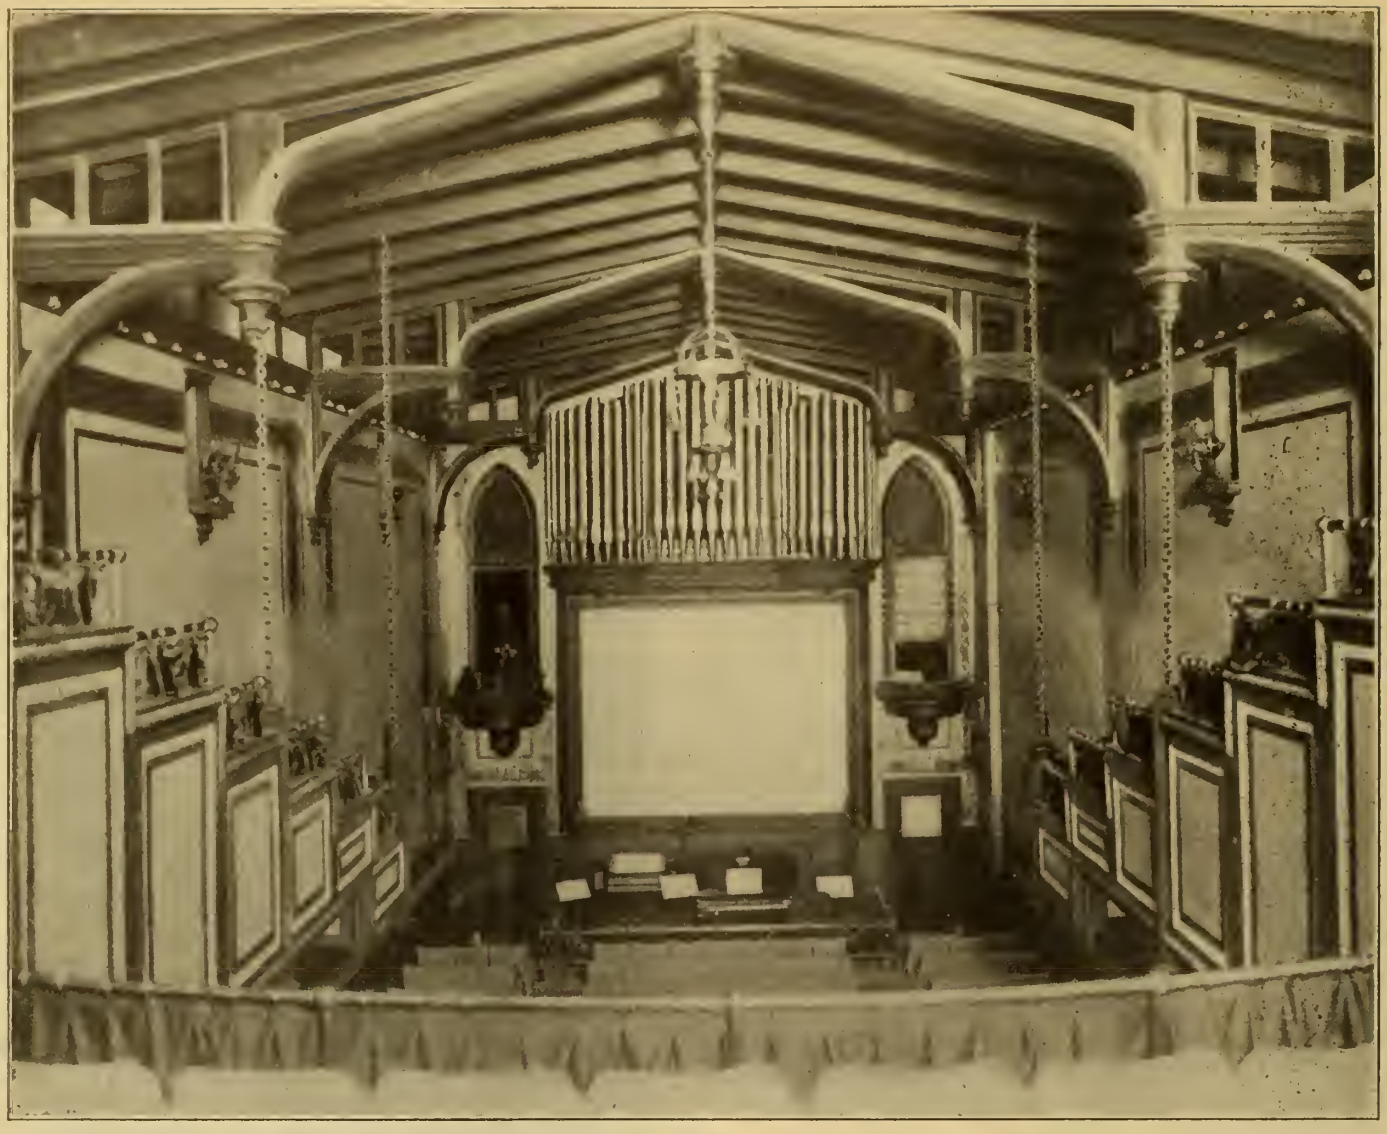
This project was brought to a happy climax in the formal opening which took place on Monday, July 31. The delay in our story was occasioned by non-receipt of the photographs which are reproduced herewith. The pictures tell a better story than it is possible to put in type. Note the solid magnificence of the interior, which is treated in a manner quite different from anything we have ever seen. All will agree that the facade is one of attractiveness. Some of the details, not visible in the picture, should be mentioned, and which is taken from a description published in the Atlanta Georgian upon the occasion of the opening:

Entrance to Montgomery Theater, Atlanta, Ga.

"Notable among the features is the ladies' rest room, pe[r]fectly fitted on the balcony level. From this vantage poi[n]t a view of the decorative effect is exceptionally pleasing, t[h]e graceful swing of the balcony, which extends almost ha[l]f way around the house; the truly wonderful blend of restfu[l] harmonious coloring throughout the whole interior bring[s] the eye to a peaceful, pleasant gaze upon the elevated curtai[n] where the pictures are shown in deep-toned beauty. Abov[e] the curtain is the magnificent organ, the largest pipe orga[n] in any theater in America. The full, resonant tones of th[e] organ only serve to intensify the harmony of the whole hous[e] as does the artificially draped balcony at the left of the organ.

"There is an abundance of fresh air circulating from rightly placed fans, that do not blow with sudden force but gently cool the air, making the feeling even more restful. The seats all wear linen covers and the ushers appear in full dress.

"Harmony—harmony is the keynote everywhere in the most beautiful of all moving picture shows. It is indeed a departure, a novel and beautiful feature is this, that F. T. Montgomery has built in Atlanta, and the city can easily boast of having an amusement house second to none in the country for beauty and design and quality of entertainment."



View of Interior of Montgomery Theater, Atlanta, Ga., Taken from the Balcony, Showing Sheet, Pipe Organ and Orchestra Enclosure, and Singer's Balcony on Right of Sheet.

The Montgomery is on Peachtree Street, just above Auburn Avenue, splendidly located for the purpose, and is now doing the record business for pictures in that city.

Since achieving success in this venture, Mr. Montgomery has moved upon Augusta and other cities of the South, and more triumphs will be recorded as he progresses.

LYRIC THEATER, CHICAGO.

The Lyric Theater, at Milwaukee Avenue and Division street, is a fine example of the modern moving picture show ouse. Like many other up-to-date houses, it has a well-oped cement floor, so that the picture may be easily seen om all seats. The projection is very fine, and the picture admirably steady and bright, though the curtain is coated ith some dark blue substance, which tends to dull the pic-are considerably. I have been told that this curtain coating a paint called "Curtainyline," which was popular a few ears ago, but it seemed not to give satisfaction, and most the places that used it have aluminum or white screens nstalled. It certainly does not improve a picture, giving it a very cold tone, and robbing it of the sunshiny effect which we see a well-lighted photograph projected with a good light, and besides, it dims the brightness of the colors in colored films and song slides. The Lyric has been open about eight months, and though I was told that business was rather quiet the house was well filled. The attendance of the house reflects the character of the shows presented. C. Y.

Absolution for a manager from blame for a panic will not bring any of the patrons back to life. The only thing it will bring is More Laws.

EXHIBITOR'S AND LECTURER'S KEY TO DANTE'S INFERNO.

The Moving Picture World, anxious to see the great artistic production of Dante's Inferno (Milano Films) properly presented, has printed the above-named book for the purpose of aiding the exhibitor, who wishes to show the attraction in his house. The book is based upon the presentation of the reels at Baltimore and Providence under the direction of W. Stephen Bush. Lecture, music and effects all have an important share in the successful presentation and the author with considerable care and patience has gone over every single scene and given it a proper placing. The lecture, which may easily be learned, runs in exact conformity with the action on the screen and for this reason is welcome to every audience. Wherever possible the words of the poet have been followed in the lecture. In the matter of effects experience has shown that the effects indicated in the book are without exception appropriate and striking. Effects worked by a competent man, carefully following the instructions laid down in the book, add very much to the force and realism of the picture. It is plain that a proper presentation will get more money and secure a longer engagement than a careless and ignorant handling. This will be doubly true by the time the films get around to the later exhibitors, for the novelty of the thing will then have worn off a little and a proper presentation will be more important than ever.

The book contains a set of press notices, full instructions to lecturer, piano player and operator, a very complete lecture and much other matter, such as special keys, a biography of Dante, some of which may with advantage be reprinted for general distribution among the audience. The price of the book is $2.50. Special rebates are given when quantities are ordered.

Sales Company Employees' Ball.

Another Large Gathering of the Film Clan in Prospect.

Another social affair by the employees of the Sales Company is now under way which promises to outdo any previous social function in the moving picture trade. The success of the last reception of the Sales Company employees' Ball still lingers vividly as a very pleasant memory. But when they tell us that this time they are going to discount their first effort by one hundred per cent., we at once open our date books and enter Saturday, October 14th as an evening to be spent with that congenial company at Alhambra Hall, 7th Avenue and 126th Street. We would not miss it for anything.

The first ball was somewhat of an experiment, but the next one is going to be the real thing. Already the various committees are perfecting arrangements and nothing will be left undone when the time arrives to make it one of the most pleasant evenings imaginable. Strictly speaking, it will not be confined to the evening, but will continue all Saturday night until Sunday morning with no limit set upon the time. The admission price this time has been raised to $1.00, but with each ticket will be given a handsome keepsake, which will be an elaborate fancy pillow with the Sales Company's trademark worked upon it in colored thread.

This will be perhaps the best opportunity this year to meet all the people in the trade on a social basis. Film people in all branches of the business in or around Greater New York at the time are cordially invited. Exhibitors are especially invited; the attendance of all film actors will be compulsory. Exchangemen are welcome and all out-of-town exchangemen are particularly invited. If they cannot come personally, an advertisement in the programme will let the trade know that they are present in spirit at least.

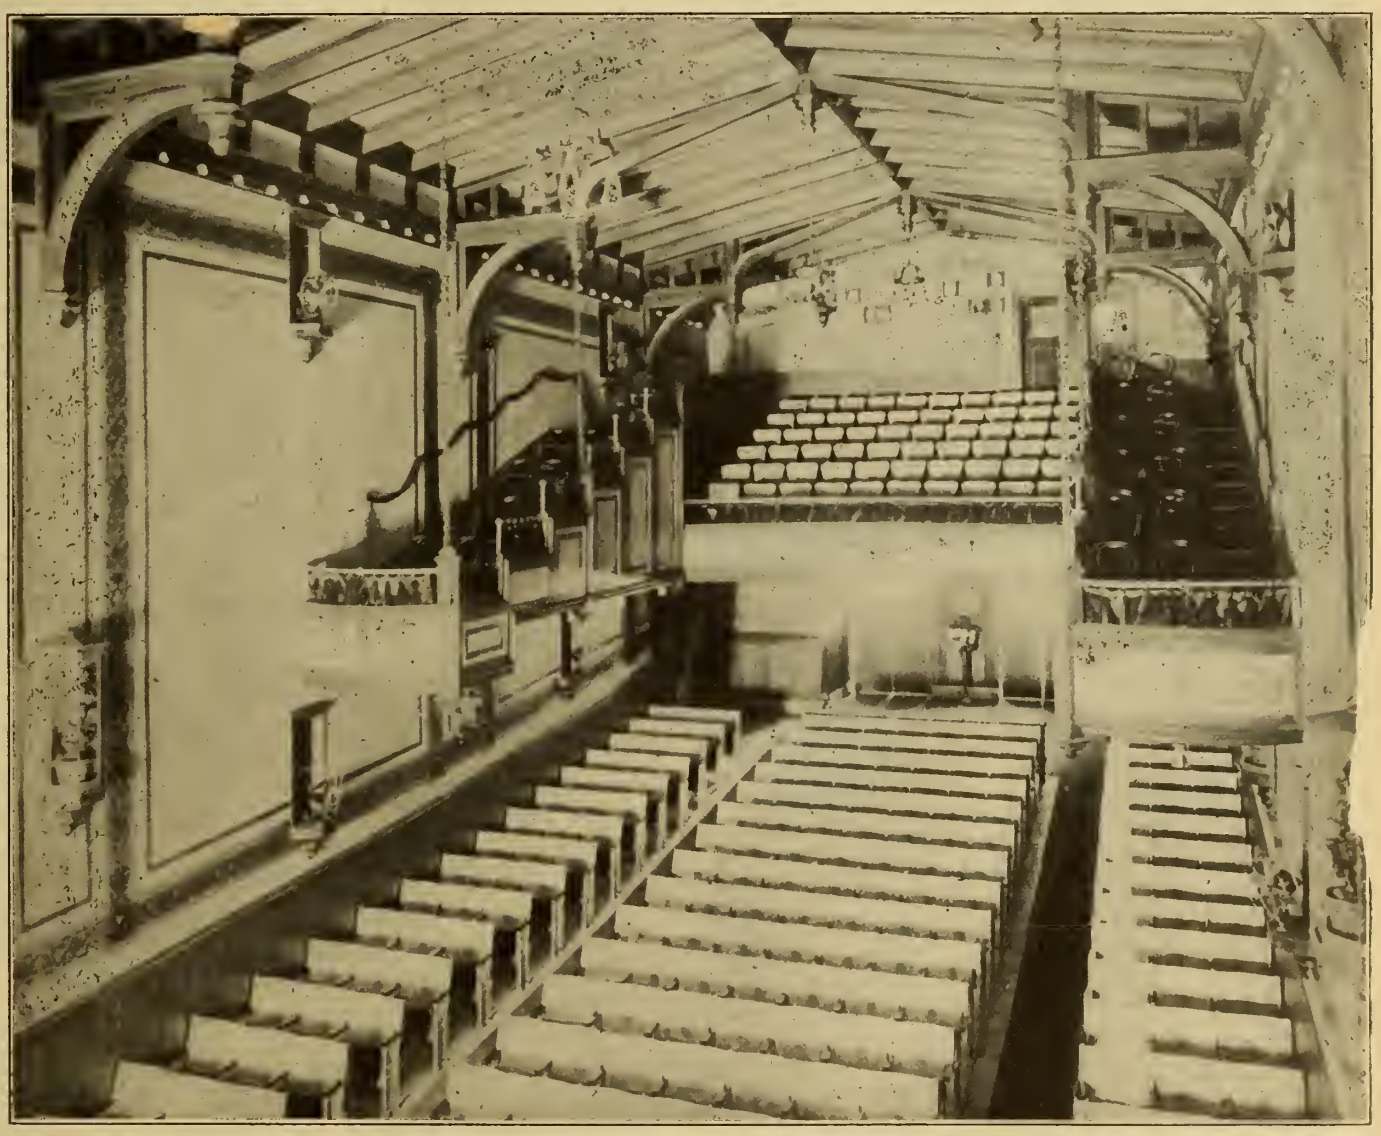
Speaking about the programme: It will be a very ornate affair, designed also as a souvenir with a handsome colored cover in several colors, embossed. All the leading concerns in the film business have taken space in this programme, which is especially valuable because the programme will surely be kept as a souvenir for years and the advertisements will have a long life. The trade so far has been surprisingly liberal in subscribing for space.

Once more Stauch's celebrated military band from Stauch's pavilion, Coney Island, has been engaged to furnish the music. As this band has been occupied playing dance music every day for many years, it may well be considered that their work is perfection. There will be, of course, a moving picture entertainment, but it will be different from that at the last reception. We are not at liberty to divulge its exact nature, but there will be a few special reels exhibited made especially for the occasion that are intended as a pleasant surprise.

Don't forget the date, Saturday, October 14th, at Alhambra Hall, 7th Avenue and 126th Street, New York. Be sure to attend and bring your wife, sweetheart or friends. All ranks leveled, and all will meet on an equal footing.

MELVILLE JOINS LUBIN.

Wilbert Melville, for some time past managing director of the Solax studios, has resigned his position with that concern to accept a position as director in the studio of the Lubin Manufacturing Company.



View of Interior of Montgomery Theater, Atlanta, Ga., Taken from Singer's Balcony, Showing Gallery Arrangement.

CHICAGO LETTER.

By Jas. S. McQuade.

FOR some time past I have listened to complaints regarding the inspection of films by exchanges. There is no doubt that there is considerable dissatisfaction among exhibitors over the laxity of the inspection departments of exchanges, just as there prevails among managers of exchanges on account of the oversights and carelessness of exhibitors when returning films. Some operators are responsible for the poor condition of films when received by the exchanges, and some girl inspectors are responsible for the nerve-wrecking experiences of managers who take pride in having their shows proceed without a hitch. There is negligence on the part of the operator and, too often, only a perfunctory examination of films by the inspector.

As the operator and inspector are paid to render their best services, why not replace them when trial has proved their unfitness?

The inspection of films is a very important duty and it should be thoroughly performed. To merely wind a film, without looking at yards and yards of it, is making a mockery of work. The other day the manager of a large theater, in this city, was astonished to see, as a film was being projected, that a leopard in a scene was walking on the ceiling, an acrobatic stunt that created great laughter. On another occasion he received a first-run film without a title! What was the inspector doing, in these two, out of many, cases that could be quoted?

Rapid Rise of J. D. Williams in Australia.

J. D. Williams, of the Greater J. D. Williams Amusement Co., Ltd., of Sydney, Australia, spent several days in the city last week. He was accompanied by Leon Phillips, treasurer, and E. Lindsay Thompson, a director of the company and an alderman of Sydney. The party is making an extensive tour through the United States and Mr. Thompson is familiarizing himself with all that is best in the municipal governments of American cities, so that his home city may benefit by the knowledge gained. According to a statement made by Mr. Williams, the honor of being next Lord Mayor of Sydney will most likely fall to the lot of Mr. Thompson.

Mr. Williams has had a meteoric rise in the moving picture business in Australia. About two years ago he landed in Sydney with modest means, a thorough knowledge of the exhibiting and exchange business, and a great ambition. The field had already been well covered by the Spencer and the West enterprises, but Mr. Williams had new ideas and he believed that they would appeal to Australians.

To quote from an article in "The Lone Hand," of Sydney:

"To Mr. Williams Australia was a place of delightful climate, peopled by working classes who had more money to spend on amusement than the average American, and more time to spend it in. But what pleased him most was the fact that amusement managers had failed to see that really huge market. And so he marked it for his own, and at once set to work to organize a number of outdoor amusements where the masses of the people could find entertainment and healthy recreation at moderate prices.

"And the public appreciating his enterprise, he made money fast.

"Photoplays, as Mr. Williams calls picture shows, were just beginning their boom in Australia, and the film habit was settling down nicely into its offride. The masses of the people were most insufficiently catered for, and J. D. Williams stepped into the breach and blocked it with the gorgeous Colonial Theater, in George Street, Sydney.

"Other photoplay enterprises had started, with the idea of being as like the ordinary theater as possible; a place where a man could take his wife and family on state occasions and, instead of watching real actors, gaze on shadows; but it was to be the night out that a theatrical evening always means, and as everybody knows a theatrical night leaves but little change out of a sovereign.

"Mr. Williams started with absolutely opposite ideals. His object was to establish a popular resort where people of all classes could find regular and frequent enjoyment at prices that would not make their pleasure a strain on their resources. To do this he tried the experiment of giving short sittings, lasting approximately an hour, for sixpence and threepence, so that a couple who had an hour or so to spare could for a humble shilling sit in quiet comfort and see the life of the world unrolled before them. His next problem was how to make the fact that this cheap amusement was availably known to the public. Ordinary advertising would be useless for the purpose. Circularizing would be too slow. So he made his photo-theater its own booming advertisement. He established a splendid and attractive entrance with floods of light and music to attract attention, in the busiest part of the city, where it jutted like a rock into the ever-flowing human tide, and created a backwash that filled the theater twelve times a day.

"Experience proved his idea was nothing less than an inspiration. Had his theater been three times the size he could have filled it just as often. The task of turning stacks of money away daily broke the hearts of the manager and his staff. There was nothing for it but extension, and extension on a large scale. So the Lyric and Colonial No. 2 were erected in wonderfully quick time on the other side of the street and J. D. W. gleaned back contentedly and said, 'Thank God, we'll have to turn no more dollars away.'

"There he was wrong, and the yell 'more room,' 'give us more room,' is growing louder and louder, and J. D. W. realizes he'll get but little sleep till that yell is satisfied. For in spite of his three theaters, which each fill and empty twelve times a day, the J. D. Williams Company is still turning away good money, and there seems nothing for it but to take a whole block and build a theater that will blot out the great Hordern Emporium in size.

"This enormous success is due to a combination of a variety of reasons. First and foremost, the theaters are all placed where there is a large and increasing foot passenger traffic. The gay exterior, the light, and the music, all attract the people. The splendid vestibules, with marble steps, marble ticket-boxes, and the vast marble staircases, with railings of burnished brass, make an alluring bait. And when all this splendor is available for sixpence and threepence the places are naturally rushed. It's worth a shilling an hour just to sit in them and rest, but when the world's best photoplays are laid on the value received for the money becomes overwhelming. For the interiors of these theaters are ideal. The seating is of the best, and so is the quality of the pictures and the excellence of the attendance. The result is, the casual visitor becomes the regular client. These effects are heightened by the fact that there are absolute changes of programme on Mondays and Thursdays, and the film that goes off on those days never reappears. On Mondays and Thursdays the same faces are seen in the theaters week after week, month after month—the first-nighters of the new regime. In some ways this absolute change is a hardship, for every now and again there comes along a film like that splendid representation of the Fall of Troy, or the Patbe masterpiece, La Tosca, that never grows old and that people would dearly love to see again. Such films as these would not grow stale in the course even of years, if put on at reasonable intervals. But the great mass of the people demand the new thing every time, and the majority wins its way.

"This is the 'Continuous Show.' And the theory of the thing is just this: It takes very little more to run a theater from 11 a. m. to 11 p. m. than from 6:30 p. m. to 11 p. m. The same machinery has to be maintained all the time. In the ordinary show which gives one exhibition only, this has to be paid for by the entrance fees of the fifteen hundred or so people the theater will hold at prices ranging from sixpence to two shillings. In the 'Continuous Show' about half the number of films are shown, and the highest price is the lowest in the other establishment. But the 'Continuous Show' fills up twelve times a day, which means that the cheapest seat in the 'Continuous Show' brings in three shillings, one shilling more than the dearest in the ordinary show, while the dearest seats fetch six shillings apiece on the day, that is three times the price of the dearest seats in the ordinary show.

"The 'Continuous Show' has made the photoplay an article of everyday use instead of an occasional luxury. People who come to town through the day for the purpose of shopping can combine business with pleasure at the J. D. Williams theaters at a time that no other theatrical manager will be bothered catering for them. And this, which is most important, is a fact: the J. D. Williams theaters are the only ones in Australasia that give especial matinees for ladies and children. This fact is one of the great sources of the popularity of these theaters. The management carefully selects a special set of films for showing at these matinees. Another advantage to ladies is that the management specially invites them to make these theaters their rendezvous, and provides rooms and lady attendants for their comfort. In fact, the J. D. Williams Company has laid itself out in every possible direction to capture the good will of the women of Australasia.

"The success of the Greater J. D. Williams Amusement Company, Ltd., has been phenomenal. It has three theaters in Sydney. One is being erected in Brisbane, one is in full blast in Melbourne, a splendid structure. It has four in Maoriland, where it does the lion's share of the picture business. Eventually it will have four theaters in Sydney, three in Melbourne, two in Adelaide, five in Maoriland, and one in Perth. That is already decided upon.

"In addition to this, the company at present runs five film exchanges. It holds the sole agency for quite a large number of the best American and English film factories. When its films have gone the round of its own huge circuit they are hired out or sold to small suburban shows, which make a comfortable living by showing the forgotten films of the big metropolitan picture palaces. But the film exchanges do not confine themselves to the distribution of films that have been used. It supplies exclusive films to any manager in Australasia, and the large number of sole agencies that it holds make this branch of its business a lucrative one."

The enterprise shown by the Greater J. D. Williams Amusement Co., Ltd., in building beautiful, modern structures to house moving pictures, is unrivaled at the present time. The Melba, in Melbourne, cost $175,000 and will seat 1500 people. The Columbia, that is now being built, next door to the Melba, will represent an investment of $200,000 for the ground and building. It will also seat 1500 people. The Crystal Palace, that is being erected in the same block as the old Colonial No. 1, in Sydney, will cost $175,000. It will have a seating capacity of 1500.

"Our aim is to have a chain of theaters, each of which will be equal, if not surpass, theaters devoted to the drama or the highest type of vaudeville," said Mr. Williams. "We are providing the best modern appointments for comfort and safety. Each theater has its lounging rooms for ladies and men, a room where nurses care for children while the mothers are seeing the show, lavatories, smoking-room, etc. In fact, everything that will conduce to the comfort of patrons is provided by us."

American films are the most popular in Australia, those of Western life being very popular.

It will surprise Americans to learn that the yearly license for picture theaters in Australia, however costly, is only $50.

During his visit Mr. Williams will purchase electric equipment and other paraphernalia for the house in course of erection.

I learned from Mr. Williams that he has some big things in view that will be of interest to everyone in the picture industry when they are launched. With ample capital and a large reserve to fall back upon when necessary, the Greater J. D. Williams Amusement Co., Ltd., will be in a position to carry into effect any project decided upon, and there is reason to believe that the operations of the company will not be confined to the antipodes.

Mr. Williams is still a young man, full of energy and possessed of a keen business instinct. He has succeeded in getting the financial support of some of the best known business men and capitalists in Sydney and has the reputation over there of making half a million dollars in less than two years. His home people in Parkersburg, West Virginia, are proud of him and believe that with his present start he will bring renown to the picturesque and peaceful city. Mr. Williams left Chicago at the close of the week to visit his home.

Chicago Film Brevities.

The Essanay Film Manufacturing Co. has closed a contract with the National Commission for the exclusive picture rights for any and all world series championship games. The price paid has not been divulged, but it is known to be much in excess of anything paid in former years.

William H. Bell, manager of the General Film Co.'s branch at 435 N. Clark Street, has sold the Northwestern Amusement Supply Co., at 212 Wall St., Spokane, Wash., an exclusive moving picture supply house, to August Weaver & Son, Spokane, Wash.

The following paragraph was taken from a letter recently received by the Selig Polyscope Co. from Corlies & Greene, of the Imperial Theater, Jersey City: "We wish to take this occasion to compliment you on the character and quality of your present productions. They have certainly forged ahead in the last few months, where we regret to say that some of the other makers in their increased production, have lost sight of quality. We trust that Selig will not fall into this error."

Fifteen members of the Essanay stock company and two camera men visited Kankakee on Labor Day last in charge of V. R. Day. The county fair was on at that city and certain scenes were taken that will appear in a film shortly to be released.

S. S. Hutchinson, president of the American Film Mfg. Co., paid a flying visit to New York last week.

A. M. Kennedy, manager of the American Film Mfg. Co., who is in Southern California visiting the Western company, will arrange for the taking of Western scenic films before his return. He will be gone two weeks.

Allen Dwan, the Western producer of the "Flying A" cowboy films, is a graduate of Notre Dame, Indiana. Mr. Dwan is an ambitious young man of fine capabilities.

Neal Duffy, owner and manager of the Elite Theater, Appleton, Wis., was in the city last week. He stated that business last summer was the best experienced in the last three years. Mr. Duffy takes great pride in his orchestra, as his audiences pay particular attention to the music. Manager Duffy gets his service from the Western Film Exchange of Milwaukee.

The members of the Moving Picture Exhibitors' Association of Illinois received an invitation from Manager Sullivan, of the Princess Theater, this city, last week, to view "Dante's Inferno," each being admitted on presentation of a business card.

"Temptations of a Great City" is having a remarkable run. Joe Hopp announces that he has booked it ahead for two months. Frank Thielen has booked it for his circuit of vaudeville houses.

President Hopp, of the Standard Film Exchange, states that the fall season has opened up briskly and with a volume of business that he had not expected. His contracts are more than twice what they have been any preceding year. He also has observed that exhibitors are inclined to book better service, which shows that the public is demanding a better quality. Mr. Hopp states that the Standard, the Laemmle and the H. & H. Exchange has discontinued its slide department, referring all inquiries to song slide exchanges.

George Thomsen, manager of the Bijou Amusement Co., Ironwood, Mich., was a visitor at the G. F. Co.'s branch, 117 N. Dearborn St., last week. He reported business very satisfactory, as the mines in that district have been reopened and there is an abundance of money. Manager Thomsen also gives an exhibition in Hurley, Mich., on Sundays. Hurley is a small town five miles from Ironwood.

W. H. West, of the Majestic Theater, Kewanee, Ill., paid a social call at the G. F. Co.'s branch, 117 N. Dearborn St., last week. Mr. West at one time was a solicitor for the old Theater Film Service Co. His business is satisfactory.

A. W. Parker, former owner of the Photo-Play Theater, Pontiac, Ill., was in the city last week, arranging for a service for his new theater, the Cosy, which he purchased recently. Mr. Parker is a wideawake business man, but cannot quit the exhibition game. He will co-operate with the manager of the Photo-Play, and believes both houses will do a fine business.

The Truth About the Jest.

By Emmett Campbell Hall.

IN the index of The World, of September 2, I find "Trials of a Scenario Writer (Cartoon)" and on page 631 the pictures referred to. May I venture to point out that the World has accomplished the (for it, most unique) feat of falling down?

I think it will be admitted without argument that there is nothing quite so serious as a good joke; that the better the joke the greater the fundamental truth embodied? Also that the essential characteristics of a cartoon are as well defined and as precise as a rule in arithmetic. The Century Dictionary says that a cartoon is "a picture, either a caricature or a symbolical composition, designed to advocate or attack some idea or person." With regard to caricature, the same authority says, "The distinguishing mark of a caricature is that it absurdly exaggerates that which is characteristic." The series of pictures referred to does not, I submit, comply with this requisite; therefore is not a caricature, and consequently not a cartoon. We will call it a pictorial joke. (Oh, I know that the person who has to have a diagram with each joke is a sad specimen, but not nearly so sad as the joke which cannot be analyzed.) In short, this "cartoon"

EMMETT CAMPBELL HALL.
Snap-shot of the Well Known Scenario Writer.

makes the scenario writer simply ridiculous, and this was not, I am quite positive, the object intended. Had the title been "Trials of the Writer of a Scenario" I wouldn't have taken this present and terrible risk of being charged with the lack of a sense of humor, but "a Scenario Writer" means one who writes scenarios—who makes that his business, more or less. The pictured tragedy might occur to the first, and the pictures might be near enough the truth to be really funny, but not to "a Scenario Writer."

A good cartoon is a regular club, and almost as effective in an argument, but to be good it must be about 98 per cent. hard truth and 2 per cent. jest, whether the jest part be caricature, burlesque, parody, or travesty. However, those of us who are endeavoring to lift scenario writing to the dignity of a vocation will appreciate the motives which inspired the cartoon to which I have raised mild objections.

It would scarcely be polite if I should fail to acknowledge the courteous attention paid me by Mr. "Inter Nos" in his letter published in the issue of the 2d, so I agree with him that he is a sore head. One cause of soreness seems to be that he isn't permitted to call several editors and directors by their given names. This might be a very valuable privilege. I cannot say from personal experience, but, Bill, I seem to recall something about familiarity leading to undesirable consequences, and that the friendship of kings and editors and sick folks is about as safe to carry around with you as a dynamite cartridge. Submitted a script on June 12 and wrote on the 28th asking for a report? My dear Bill, how many magazines report on manuscripts in eighteen days? Thirty days is a minimum average, many require from 60 to 90 days, if the manuscript is receiving serious consideration. I have found the average time required for a decision on a photoplay to be 20 days. Your testimony concerning the notation on your returned script is startling in its suggestion, but hardly conclusive. You have a common law property right in your idea. If the producer should presently release a picture embodying that idea, and you can fix the identity of the person whose handwriting appears on the manuscript, you will have the drop on them, I think. Yes, the revamping thing is becoming a little conspicuous. Yesterday I saw the introduction of "The Taming of the Shrew" done, and poorly done, under the title "A King for a Day." Also, in the rush of turning out steen films a week, details are beginning to suffer, as in "Archibald the Hero," for instance, where a telegram to be sent is written on a "Received" form. A small matter, yes, from one point of view.

Friend Bill, Inter Nos (and some others) seems to have gotten the idea that I am the champion, appointed or volunteer, of the manufacturers, and of present conditions. Not at all. There are many features of the picture business that fairly shriek for improvement, and I think the scenario writers are subjected to an unnecessary hardship by the failure of the manufacturers to give credit for authorship. We simply have a different idea of the proper and most effective method of bettering a situation.

OES RETURNS.

American Representative of the Great Northern Says He Has Surprises for the Trade.

Ingvald C. Oes, the energetic and far-reaching representative of the Great Northern Film Company, returned to New York on September 5, after a four-weeks trip abroad. In his travels Mr. Oes spent several days at the headquarters of his company in Copenhagen, made a flying trip to Berlin and skipped over to Norway for a short visit, and then had to hustle to get back to America on account of the great rush of returning tourists which has been taxing the transatlantic ferryboats to the limit. But, despite the strenuous time he had between business and pleasure, Oes came back in the pink of good health and spirits, prepared to push Great Northern pictures to the limit.

"While at headquarters, I spent most of my time looking at new pictures," explained Mr. Oes. "I went over for a certain purpose and that I accomplished. I am not at liberty to state the nature of the transaction, but that will come later and it will be in the nature of a surprise to the trade. The Great Northern has been working on a line of high-class comedies which will compare favorably with the best of American production. It may be of interest to readers of the Moving Picture World to know that, in the production of its dramatic and comedy subjects the Great Northern has the co-operation of the leading actors and actresses of Denmark—artists equal in ability and reputation to Sothern and Marlowe in America. And what is more, no amateurs are employed in our pictures. None but professional players are engaged for parts, which insures artistic work throughout.

"It is an interesting story, the manner in which our company succeeded in gaining the support of Denmark's leading players," said Mr. Oes. "Our efforts were directed first toward securing the services of the leading writers of the country in the production of scenarios. Then the big dramatic and comedy stars of the Royal and other theaters of Copenhagen were induced to portray those stories as a sort of novelty, just to see how it felt to work in pictures. The plan proved successful and, from a novelty they came to look upon the picture as a vehicle for the highest expression of their art, and a more enthusiastic company of photoplayers is not to be found anywhere than those engaged in producing Great Northern pictures.

"My story would not be complete if I did not mention the fact that the Great Northern had made a very considerable addition to its plant, necessitated by the immense European business it is doing. While in Germany I discovered that our pictures were very popular and could be seen in all the big houses in Berlin. The company has also been incorporated, the capital being 1,000,000 crowns—about $250,000—and there is no water in it either.

"Another point: we have 150 scenic subjects of the highest quality and interest, which have never reached America. This is unfortunate. The public want scenic pictures, but the exchange and the theater men have stood fast against them. The time is coming when the public demand will be irresistible and then we will have a real treat for the theatergoer.

"Regarding the trade generally I found the independent American product to be selling as strong in Europe as was the licensed. I look for the independents to do a better business in America this coming season than heretofore. Everything seems to point that way.

"Altogether my trip was very satisfactory and pleasant and I feel encouraged by the outlook here."

Mr. Oes expressed his hearty disapproval of the attempt of certain individuals to exploit the principals of criminal acts and said it was "killing the goose that laid the golden egg" to attempt to thrust pictures of that character upon the public.

THANHOUSER'S "DAVID COPPERFIELD" AT REGULAR RATES.

"David Copperfield," the Dickens story in three reels by the Thanhouser Company, will be issued as a regular release and on the same day of three successive weeks. Each reel is complete in itself and presents a concrete epoch in the life of Dickens' great character. As no extra price is charged for the reels, exhibitors are warned that no extra rental price should be paid. It has come to the knowledge of the Sales Company that rental agencies have been in the habit of late of demanding an extra price for subjects that are in great demand, such as the Thanhouser "Romeo and Juliet," Itala's "Clio and Phyletes," Nestor's "Mutt and Jeff" and others which are supplied at the regular rate. Manufacturers who issue feature reels feel that the business as a whole should benefit by their effort and that if anyone is to profit it should be the manufacturer by the sale of extra copies to meet the demand, thus encouraging them to still greater effort.

HIGH-CLASS RELIANCE FEATURES COMING.

The Reliance Company have a nice present in store for the exhibitor. They realized that during the reorganization of their stock companies a few months ago several films were issued which were much below their usual high standard. As the exchanges and exhibitors stood by them during the slump, they are to be rewarded by the early release of several feature subjects at no advance in price. The cost of these subjects to the Reliance Company was more than double that of any ordinary film, and in quality they excel some for which state rights are demanded .Great credit is therefore due to the Reliance Company for their generous attitude toward the exhibitor in giving them the best works of art along with and at the same price as the ordinary product.

ECLAIR'S PRESIDENT IN NEW YORK.

Charles Jourjon, president of the Eclair Company of France, is at present in this country, together with the chief mechanic of the Paris factory, to superintend the American plant at Fort Lee, N. J. The laboratory part of the building is now completed and in operation, but delay in getting special material has impeded the work on the studio. However, several American outdoor subjects have been filmed and at no distant date we shall see American Eclair films of the same excellent technique which characterizes the European product.

BERTRAM ADLER STILL IN HOSPITAL.

The latest reports from Lebanon Hospital, in which Bertram Adler, press representative of the Thanhouser Company, is confined with typhoid fever, is that Bert is getting on as well as can be hoped for at this stage of the disease, and it is expected by the physicians in charge that he will be able to leave in about two or three weeks.

Education and Science

BEULAH BINFORD IN PICTURES—NEVER ! ! !

Since this unfortunate young woman became notorious, the daily press in all parts of the country have been announcing her appearance in moving pictures. At first it seemed too impossible to become true; it appears as a fact, however, that work has positively commenced on a film with her as the center of the attraction. In that relationship which exists between moving pictures and the world at large, it is only of secondary importance what any governor, mayor, newspaper or society may think.

It is of first importance what the opinions of those at the center of the moving picture fraternity may be.

The Moving Picture World occupying this central position, and voicing the true morals of applied cinematography in life portrayals, must speak in no uncertain tone. It was commonly supposed that the day of evil pictures had passed away. It seems to be forgotten by some people that there are two ways in which a picture may be evil; one, where the plot is evil, even though the players may be pure; the other where the plot may be pure, and the players evil; in either case the results are sure to be evil and consequently mischievous. It is contended by those producing the "Beulah Binford" films that the subject is arranged to "teach strong moral lessons"; what flagrant hyprocisy! what shame-faced duplicity! Have these people discovered how to do the impossible—to "bring good out of evil"? The old satanic device of putting out an evil subject under guise of "teaching a lesson in the dire results presented" is certainly improved upon here, where an unfortunate and notorious immoral character is paraded and exploited to teach our pure young people "strong moral lessons."

The infamy of such a course is only augmented by the greater infamy of the degenerate mind which so cunningly hopes to deceive the world by applying stolen moral phraseology to entitle an immoral procedure. Those having charge of this nefarious business boast of having taken this unfortunate girl under the protection of their own home while "posing" her for the pictures "for humanitarian reasons." Was there ever such a wicked travesty of humanitarianism? To give this poor girl a home while exploiting her sin before the world, oh, the shame of it! Poor Beulah Binford! Would that some wise, humanitarian, motherly person or school, could take you into the secrecy you so much need, where you could atone for and forget the evil past, of which you are such an unfortunate victim.

The world pities and would aid this poor girl now so ill advised. Authorities everywhere desire her retirement, and is she does not seek it by her own efforts, for her own good, she will be forced into it by that same law which silences her paramour.

Those who would help this girl to that silent future will teach true "strong moral lessons" and give an example of true "humanitarianism." Those who would exploit her are doing her harm and injurying the public morals. No, Beulah Binford pictures cannot be.

AN ANCIENT LAW.

A scrutiny of the forthcoming releases shows a remarkable dearth of scenic, industrial and other instructive and really valuable films. With over twenty manufacturers ringing the changes between drama and comedy, comedy and drama, the unvaried programme is becoming rather wearisome. "The same old thing" was formerly the criticism on this monotony making it appear that the manufacturers have a secret law among themselves very much like the ancient law of the Medes and Persians "which altereth not." It should be noticed, however, that those ancient peoples who prided themselves upon their unalterable laws did not long exist, some of them only being known among the relics of ancient history. Is this prophetic?

A law always works true; that which will not alter is superseded: that which will not rise upon the wave will recede with the ebb. There is a wave of progress, as also there is a wave of public requirements. The wise ones ride upon it to the fulfillment of the required ideals; while the unwise ones drift back upon the ebb and, being caught in the undertow, are carried down into oblivion. The writer makes no prophetic claims, but ventures the hazard that simple drama and comedy will sooner or later work sad havoc with the moving picture business; in fact, it has already passed the first tiresome stage.

OBSERVATIONS.

In the "One Hundred Dollar Bill" (Vitagraph), it should be noticed that apart from the story it is practically a series of interesting views of New York. It is a pity to have a picture going into the country districts of the United States without this helpful information as many are the scenes of life and interest of the metropolis.

Washington Park and Arch, Park Place with the police arousing sleepers on the benches in the early morning. The famous "bread line" at the Bowery Mission, Chinatown and Baxter Street are all clearly seen as the background for the wanderings of the unfortunate possessor of the one hundred dollar bill. The strong feature of this playlet is its New York setting and it ought to have been pointed out; not to do so robs a good picture of more than half its value. Why spend valuable time and money in producing such scenes and then leave them nameless?

Pathe's "picture news" continues interesting, if news means knowledge and knowledge wisdom, there can be no doubt that the world-wide scenes are increasing the value of news. The unveiling of the Imperial Monument in Rome is a splendid picture, taken as usual at a precise moment of interest impossible in a still picture.

Events of interest everywhere are caught up in this series with a realism that is giving a new value to news and must prove helpful wherever shown.

MOTION PICTURES ON CARE OF TEETH.

As a means whereby the public may be instructed in the proper care of the teeth, and intended primarily to overcome the existing prejudice against dental examination in the public schools, Dr. Lyman L. Zarbaugh, D.D.S., of Toledo, Ohio, in an address before the National Dental Association, at their recent convention in Toledo, suggested and outlined a plan for the use of motion pictures in connection with the nation-wide educational propaganda which will be conducted in the near future under the direction of the Oral Hygiene Association.

Dr. Zarbaugh's plan is to show pictures of teeth in the process of decay and how decay may be averted; the action of the heart in causing the throb, by pumping the blood to the arteries of the tooth; the action of the saliva; the mastication of food and the gathering of germs. The pictures are to be distributed throughout the country and made so convincing that all who view them will visit a dentist and have the effects of bad teeth removed from brain and body.

The plan was well received and approved by the Association and steps will be taken in the near future for its development, the Oral Hygiene Association to have charge of the enterprise. F. R. M.

READ TOOK TOGO PICTURES.

Jack Read, formerly with the Imp Company, is said to have several thousand feet of fine views of the recent visit of Admiral Count Togo, of Japan, to America. Mr. Read had an exceptional opportunity to obtain intimate pictures of Japan's famous sea fighter and has some great pictures posed with the Admiral's consent.

A VITAGRAPH "COPPERFIELD" COMING.

The Vitagraph Company of America is working on "David Copperfield" by Dickens, "Vanity Fair" by Thackeray, "Ivanhoe" by Sir Walter Scott. They will all be three-reel subjects, and are the continuation of its literary films, the first of which was "A Tale of Two Cities," which met with such great success.

Projection Department

Edited by F. H. RICHARDSON

OPERATORS' UNION ADDRESSES.

No charge for insertion of name and number of union, and name and address of secretary.

L. U. 162, San Francisco, Cal. Headquarters, No. 68 Haight St.

L. U. 143, St. Louis, Mo.; F. J. Fuller, Fin. Sec., 6219 Ella Ave.

L. U. No. 182, Boston, Mass. Headquarters, Room 7, 724 Washington St.

L. U. No. 60, Cleveland, O. Headquarters, Herald Bldg., 310 Prospect Place.

L. U. No. 181, Baltimore, Md.; Frank Lewes, Sec., 1835 E. North Ave.

Aux. L. U. No. 35, New York City. Headquarters, 109 Third Ave.

An Imposition and a Swindle.—The word swindle, with which this paragraph begins, is a strong one. It is meant to be so for the subject demands handling without gloves. There are certain parties, some of them known to us and some not, who are building motion picture mechanisms and making repair parts in almost exact imitation of the leading American projection machine manufacturers' product. There are on the market today mechanisms in almost exact duplication, so far as the general plan of construction goes, of certain models of the Powers and Edison mechanisms, as well as of one or two others. If the imitations were equal in excellence to their models it would still be a swindle, since this maker has simply stolen the ideas of companies who have evolved them at enormous outlay of time, patient experiment and money. But this is not the whole story, for the machines are in no respect the equal of the mechanisms they seek to imitate. In fact, some of them are crude in the extreme. They are built cheaply for the purpose of catching suckers, and quite some of them have been caught. The curtain results produced by them is usually wretched, while the repair bill is, by comparison, enormous. Their life, too, is extremely short.

The matter does not stop here, however, for unscrupulous parties have been and are now duplicating, so far as looks go, the various parts of all leading mechanisms, and in some cases even having the petrified gall to stamp them with the name of the company producing the machine. These parts are also usually more or less crudely made and of poor material. It must be remembered, in considering this thing, that the machines and parts being forged (for it is forgery in a way) did not spring into existence in a day or grow up over night. They are the product of months and even years of study, thought, and careful and very costly experiment; yet these imitators calmly appropriate the result of all this and put it into the form of cheap, poorly made duplicates. They steal from the machine manufacturers and cheat the exhibitor by selling him inferior (usually very inferior) goods under the claim that they are "just as good" as the Powers, Edison, Standard, Motiograph or whatever make of machine it may be. My advice to exhibitors is to let this kind of stuff severely alone. If you buy it, you will perhaps save a few cents on a part, or a few dollars on a machine, but you will get the worst of it, not sometimes but every time. Buy machines and parts only from reliable exchanges or dealers, or from the manufacturers themselves. In every case make it clear that you want the genuine parts and if they are not such send them back and demand your money. In sending your machine to repair shops other than the manufacturer, make it very plain that you want none but genuine parts and will not pay for anything else. To help out this matter I would suggest that all machine manufacturers adopt some trademark small enough to be impressed upon every part they make. This would at least help some in stamping out the pernicious practice. It is entirely to the interest of the exhibitor to aid in every way possible in this matter.

I have written strongly, but, as I before said, it is a subject demanding strong treatment. In such matters a spade should be called a spade. Many an excellent machine has received a black eye through substitution of repair parts crudely made and of miserably poor material. To the exhibitor who is not a mechanic, a part may look the same as the real article, and yet be in fact very different both in workmanship and material.

Spokane Situation.—From Spokane, Wash., comes a letter saying that I. A. T. S. E. local union has held out the olive branch to the recalcitrant I. B. E. W. operators' union "until it is worn out," and that every effort has been and is being used to settle the difference on a fair basis. Accepting this statement as true, we would advise the men in the I. B. E. W. union to do their share in reaching a settlement. Affiliated with the I. B. E. W., they have no standing with other operators' organizations and their cards are not worth the paper they are written on, outside of their own city. In the beginning there was probably wrong, to some extent, on both sides. This is almost invariably the case. Forget it, brothers. Never mind the past. It is dead. Live for and in the future. The suggestion has been made that an arrangement between the operators and stage employees similar to that between the H. & R. E. I. U. and the B. I. L. (waiters and bartenders) would be the best solution of the present situation. The suggestion is excellent and worth very serious study and consideration by both the operators and stage employees.

That New Lamp.—Seattle, Wash., writes, replying to my comments on his new ninety-degree arc lamp, page 711, Sept. 9 issue: "The first thing I sought to overcome in the production of a reliable automatic projecting light was the uncertainty of the carbons. My regulation is made so that I am actually independent of that feature, and the light is maintained continuously central with the condensers. I have the only practical way of doing this and as soon as I am a little further along with my patent applications I will tell you how it is done. I am absolutely independent of all magnets, solonoids and other uncertain electric effects, having tried them out to my heart's content. I can adjust as often as you desire—every quarter of a second if need be. I find, however, upon alternating current—using a compensarc—that I need not adjust oftener than every two minutes and get a very satisfactory light on a three-minute adjustment. I have spent nearly four years in hunting for a light that I could leave absolutely alone for six hours at a time and with twenty-four inch carbons I can leave it for twelve to fifteen hours at a time and it will continue to give a maximum light—readjusting at 3/64 parting of carbons—for the entire time. I do not blame you for being 'from Missouri. I was, and it took many a day to prove to myself that I really had such a light. In writing to local M. P. operators, I find little interest in an automatic light. Is it because they are as doubting as yourself? As to voltage and amperage, I am working it with ten, twenty-five, forty or fifty amperes—50 volts A. C.—and find no difference whatever. I believe if there is any difference it works the better the higher the amperage. In conclusion I will say that I was after a light that would project Lumiere Color plates, and they wrote it must be 40 amperes to be satisfactory. I find it takes as high as 60 amperes for some of them. If you have anyone on this coast that you will send to see it I am glad to show it and prove to you that it can be done, and is done, producing a Perfect Light. I use Electra P. L. Carbons cored. With this lamp you never touch the carbons further than to put in new ones. You can turn on the current with a time switch a mile away if you desire; the lamp lights itself and maintains a perfectly even light with carbons at 3/64 of an inch separation; adjustment every half minute or every minute, or longer periods as you may find the carbons will give the light desired."

You certainly have an abiding faith and plenty of confidence in your invention, Seattle. I shall withhold further comment until I see and test one of the lamps. It is no wonder operators are not enthusiastic, since they will naturally fear that such a lamp will injure them. But however this may be, history tells us that it is utterly impossible and foolish to attempt to suppress really practical inventions. Aside from the practicability of the lamp for moving picture projection, if it is all you claim, it will undoubtedly have a large field in other directions. As soon as you are ready, I would suggest that you send on a sample for examination and practical tryout. While I am still unable to believe the lamp will deliver the goods perfectly enough for motion pictures, I will give it a fair and square trial and report exactly what I find. I shall await receipt of the lamp with much interest.

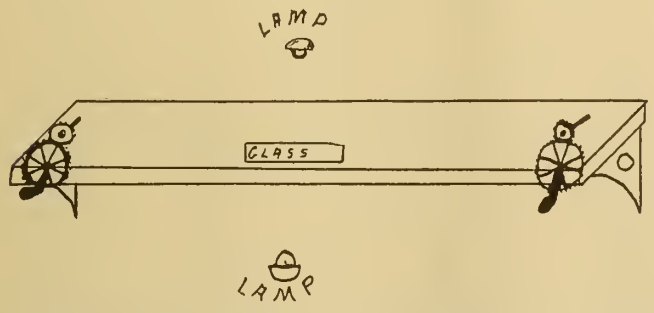
Mending Table.—California (name of town suppressed) writes: "May I utter a few words of commendation of your department and the clear, understandable way in which you answer questions. Many of the queries are not clearly put, which must cause you much annoyance. I have been in the business seven years and have had many puzzles to solve. Have also answered many foolish questions. I have much still to learn, and what I know has come through personal experience. The fact that I was an electrician has helped greatly in my work as operator. The manager says I am the best operator he has had, but nevertheless, I realize my own shortcomings. I have a motor, but never leave the machine an instant while the film is running.



"Enclosed find sketch of my rewinding and patching table. I have a rewind at each end so that I can run the film either way. The square of glass is thick plate glass, frosted on the under side. The lower lamp is shaded upward and the one over the table is shaded downward. It affords a smooth surface for scraping the film and the light through the frosted glass shows every line so that a perfect patch is easily made."

Many thanks for your appreciation of the work we are trying to do. Yes, some of the correspondents are a little careless in propounding their queries, but I have gotten used to that and generally manage to make out what they really mean. Questions that may seem foolish to you and me may not be so to the operator who has not perhaps had the opportunity you and I have had to learn. We must remember that up to a comparatively short time ago the operator had absolutely no method of education in projection except through experience, and while experience may be a good teacher, she is also a mightly slow one. A combination of study and experience is the only way by which any man can learn to excel in projection—or anything else for that matter. Life is too short for any man to learn all there is to know about operating through the medium of experience. He must study also and (I do not say this through conceit, but as a plain statement of fact), until my handbooks came out and this department was started, there was mightly little the operator could get to study. The table scheme is excellent. It has been previously illustrated in the department, but its re-publication will be of value to our new readers. The glass should be about eight inches long by any convenient width, not less than three inches. You can frost one side of a piece of plateglass by rubbing it with fine emery cloth.

Further Explanation.—Miami, Fla., writes: "I notice McPherson, Kans., did not quite understand my remedy for losing the lower loop. I simply removed the flanges on the bottom sprocket and then removed the steel idler and in its place put an Edison hard-rubber roller. I do not know myself just why substituting hard rubber for steel stopped the trouble, but it certainly did. If McPherson wishes to try the matter out, all right, but he must not blame me if it does not work out with him. I also must say that my sprockets are in perfect line and the lower sprocket idler is set so it just bears lightly on the film. Kansas must have his sprockets in perfect line—not 'nearly so'—but in perfcet line. I received the handbook all right and if I were to attempt to tell you how well I am pleased with it it would consume a whole page of the paper. I want to say right now, though, it is simply great. I hope that McPherson will be benefited by what I have said."

We are pleased to know you like the handbook. I see no reason why a hard rubber roller should be better than a steel one. However, I pass the matter along to our readers for experiment.

An Argument.—Leadville, Colo., writes: "I note, issue of September 2, that two operators (Norfolk, Va., and Mr. Wallace) take up the question of operating a projection arc without resistance on a motor-generator set. I claim space in which to answer their communications. First, as to Norfolk, who says: 'I notice sketch accompanying the article (my article) did not show the connections of his machine.' If by 'machine' he means my motor-generator set, it certainly does not, for the simple reason that I plainly stated on the drawing the voltage, etc., and in my letter said the generator was shunt wound. Those two statements should carry their own explanation. If by machine he means the moving picture machine (arc), the connections are shown on the diagram. Proceeding further, he says: 'I also am using a compensarc or, as they are generally known to the fraternity, a 'booster' or 'balancing set.' Now right here, Mr. Richardson, I want to say that I, too, am too modest to write 'E. E.' after my name, but I have certificates of efficiency in electrical matters from such schools as the Polytechnic and the South Kensington, both in England, and have been fourteen years in the business. This is the first time I ever heard a motor-generator set called a 'booster' or balancing set. I would like your judgment on this matter. As to likening a compensarc to a motor-generator set, why, I think the brother has made a mistake in writing, since any tyro in the business would dispute that proposition. Because I omitted a few unnecessary details from the sketch, Norfolk intimates that I do not know why I get certain results. Allow me to inform the brother that I designed the set myself and therefore may be presumed to understand it. Another thing: from his sketch I take it he is using a compound wound generator, whereas I distinctly stated mine to be shunt wound. His sketch shows a connection direct from his generator brush to his 230-volt A. C., and I should imagine there would be something doing. As far as our brother from Norfolk is concerned, he has failed to 'show me.' Mr. S. F. Wallace appears to be a practical operator, and if ever he travels to Leadville I should be glad to have him call on me. I again reiterate my statement that I am using a shunt wound generator and running my arc direct from the brushes with only the resistance in the arc itself. I thank you for the many useful hints and lessons gleaned from time to time from the department. I am not too learned to learn more. I would ask you, Mr. Richardson, to again look over Norfolk's sketch, as printed, and see if you don't find something rather peculiar. Norfolk should notice that I am using A. C. to drive my motor—not D. C. as he appears to surmise."

Now, gentlemen, arguments of this kind are distinctly valuable provided you keep good-natured. There were one or two points in Norfolk's letter I fully expected would be jumped on by someone—especially his reference to a "Compensarc." As nearly as I could understand him, he had a compensarc hitched in between his motor and generator. That would not put it on D. C., but I can see no earthly use in such a connection; moreover, I never before heard of connecting the brushes of a motor and generator. I took it that he had made an error in his drawing, but what the compensarc can be used for, in any event, you are at liberty to search me. More than this, however, the generator brush, on the other side, is connected direct to the 230-volt line. The way I learned things, a "booster" is a device for raising voltage on D. C. lines. Maybe there are other kinds of "boosters." Balancing sets I am not familiar with at all. However, I could not see the practicability of Norfolk's connections. Perhaps he can make matters more plain. The only "compensarc" I know of is a low-voltage transformer. If there are other devices bearing that name let Norfolk explain what they are. I do not profess or claim to be very well posted on the electrical effect of the various field windings of generators. Perhaps your shunt winding produces the constant current effect. If so, that explains, to me, the whole matter, and I apologize for casting doubt on your statements. Kindly set forth the exact electrical effect of such winding. My understanding is that the only dynamo on which an arc can be run without resistance is one with a light field and heavy armature reactance. This is an exceedingly important matter, Leadville, and if you can make matters clear I am willing to sit at your feet and learn. There is a large sum being paid daily for current wasted in rheostats by exhibitors using motor-generator sets. If, as it would appear from your writings, this is useless, we want all the particulars. Just assume that I don't know a thing, and explain precisely what the generator is and exactly how it controls the current. As for Norfolk, I am sure he will not become angry, but realize that somewhere and somehow he has made a mistake, either in his drawing or his explanation, and come across with the right solution. You may ask why I said his sketch was O. K. I have said many times before that I don't always say what I think about such things. It is often best to leave it to the wits of our readers to discover the fact that something is wrong. What I have said about operating an arc hitched to an ordinary dynamo without resistance, be that dynamo whatever voltage it may, I still maintain: The thing cannot be done.

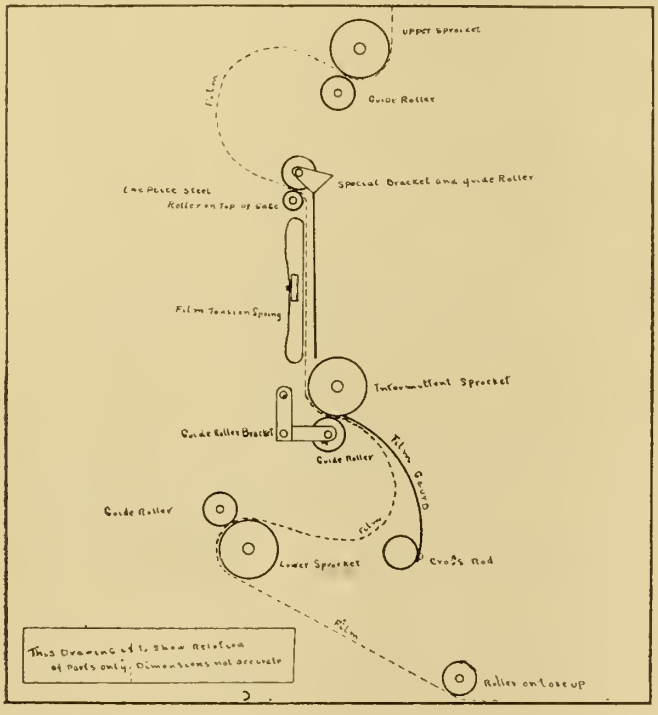
Oil Casing.—Chicago, Ill., writes: "Have had cover of my Powers Six oil casing off and now it leaks. Have set screws up as tight as I can, but it still leaks. What can I do to remedy it?"

Remove the cover, clean it perfectly clean and coat the surfaces with shellac. Put it together immediately and tighten screws. Don't put in oil for a little while after completing the job. The shellac should be pretty thick.

Improvements for Edison Exhibition Model?—Mr. Wm. E. May, Bartlesville, Okla., sends in drawings of improvements for the Edison Exhibition Model machine.



It will be observed that Mr. May has designed an outside shutter attachment ,an oil casing for star and cam and arranged for a larger lower loop. The larger lower loop, provided it be had without undue sacrifice in other directions, I regard as distinctly excellent.

The oil casing looks all right, but, frankly, Neighbor May, I don't like that tumbling rod in the shutter arrangement. Maybe it will work satisfactorily, but I am from Missouri.

Chain Lubricant.—Chicago, Ill., writes: "Have a Standard No. 2 machine which has given good service. What oil is best for the takeup drive chain? Also is it practical for me to put in a new cam-pin myself?"

I believe you will find the bicycle chain graphite lubricant which comes in stick form and may be had of any bicycle dealer as best for the chain. Yes, you may remove the old pin by loosening the set screws in the edge of the cam, which holds it in place, driving the pin out by using a punch and tapping gently with a light hammer. Tap very lightly, however, if it is necessary to drive it at all. Maybe a pair of pliers will do the work. Get a new pin from the manufacturers and insert it, setting up the set screw very tight again. The pin comes out either way, forward or back.

Brains and Quick Work.—An operator of Hartford, Conn. (sorry I have not his name), is said to have pulled off a stunt recently which, if correctly reported, stamps him as a man of quick wit, resource and brains. The audience in the theater in which he works was startled by several sharp claps of thunder in quick succession and to start things moving nicely, two idiotic girls screamed "fire." That, of course, settled it. There was a short pause and then a concerted rush for the doors, though the manager and others did all they could to allay it, a panic was nicely under way. There happened, however, to be an operator of ability, brains, and wonderfully quick perception and action in the operating room. He seized a slide-glass, wrote on it and flashed the message on the screen. The panic was quickly turned into a laugh. "Don't hurry out! Only the wicked are afraid of thunder," was the message. Probably had a man of less decision and action been in the operating room there would have been people injured—perhaps killed. Moral: It pays to have brains in the operating room.

El Paso, Texas, Joins the List.—El Paso, Texas, writes: "Now that I am in El Paso I take pleasure in writing the department again. In all the years I have read The World I do not remember seeing anything from this city. El Paso is one of the best cities in Texas, and the only one having an I. A. T. S. E. local of operators. They are pretty strict in all things here. Last week I went before the City Electrician and was given a stiff examination—one I did not expect in a city of 39,000. I paid 25 cents each for license and working card, which is figured to cover the cost of printing only. The union initiation fee is $25, but as I already belonged I escaped that and secured position three days after arrival; salary, $21 per. Six hours a day is the time, opening at 3:00 p. m., two hours for supper, and close at 11:00 p. m. House furnishes relief at 50 cents per hour. All houses charge 10 cents admission and none open before 2:30 p. m."

Pleased to know the El Paso boys enjoy such excellent conditions. Would not advise operators to rush in that direction, however, just on that account, since probably all positions are filled. Moreover, the union controls the situation. The El Paso managers have shown sound sense in adhering to the ten-cent admission, and we trust they will continue to do so until they feel able to introduce a fifteen-cent fee. Five-cent admissions breed "chase-'em-through" shows, cheap operators, and cheap everything. Of course, I readily admit that there are exceptions, but that is the general result.

Don't See the Point.—Cleveland, O., writes: "On page 374, August 12th issue, 'Corrects Editor.' An alternation is half a cycle. It is therefore represented by one of the half waves and there are two alternations for every cycle. Current passes through a set of positive values, while the interval of time represented by 0-1 is elapsing and a similar set during the second interval represented by 1-2. This operation is continued so long as the dynamo runs and current is used, each wave occupying an equal interval of time. The two sets of values represented by 0-2 is called one cycle. We all make mistakes, but you ought to square matters with Mt. Jewett, Pa."

Well, Neighbor, I must confess I cannot see where I have anything to "square." I am perfectly willing to admit mistakes when made, but in this case I don't quite catch the point. Mt. Jewett said, "One cycle equals ½ alternation," whereas one alternation really equals ½ cycle. I merely called attention to his own error. As a matter of fact, however, we are both wrong, I think. Strictly speaking, an "alternation" represents nothing whatever except the reversing of the current. It is a term used to signify a certain action, viz: current reversal. A cycle, on the other hand, represents a certain current value, in work performed, during a certain period of time. At least that is the way I would look at it. We have, however, gotten into a habit of considering an alternation as representing the current action during one-half a cycle. In the diagram, the horizontal line represents the point at which the voltage is at zero, and the figures 1, 2, 3, 4, 5 stand for one, two, three, four and five one hundred and twentieths of a second, when dealing with 60-cycle current. O represents the point at which (at the line) the voltage is zero and the amperage therefore nothing at all. The vertical column of figures stands for the amperage which rises with the voltage to maximum each half cycle and sinks again to nothing, to again rise. This operation goes on continuously. With 60-cycle current, the voltage and amperage is absolutely nothing at all (zero) 120 times a second. From zero it rises gradually, but with lightning speed, of course, to maximum and again sinks. I think you have mistaken my meaning in the answer to Mt. Jewett.

Another One.—Galveston, Texas, writes: "I have noted lately in the Department, considerable discussion by several operators of the feasibility of running a projection arc without a rheostat. The boys are all apparently losing sight of the fact that in order to produce a satisfactory arc light (on direct current) the voltage must be somewhere between 40 and 50 volts at the arc. That is, the arc takes on an average of 45 volts. Now, anything over and above that amount is useless and must be choked back or dissipated in a rheostat. If the line voltage is 110, the arc will take 45, and the remaining 65 volts will be used up in the rheostat. But, if the dynamo only generates 45 or 50 volts to start with, that's the end of it. The arc requires just that many volts and uses them all up, so to speak; there are none left over to be choked back, therefore no rheostat is necessary. It might be well to add, however, that in "making the arc," the carbons should not be held together too long, as then the resistance is very low, which is equivalent to a dead short circuit on the dynamo, which in some cases would be fatal.

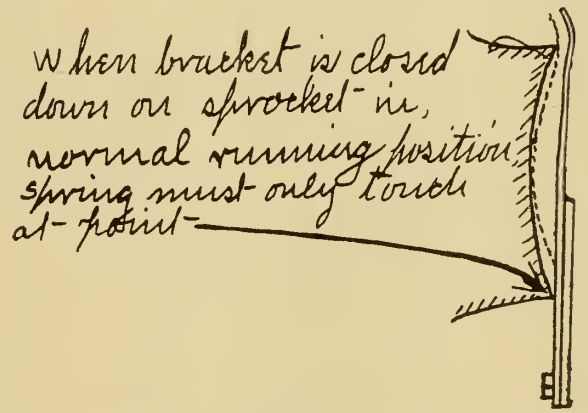
"With respect to Norfolk, Va., page 624, it is doubtful if any operators who have a so-called 'booster set' will 'find out the whys and wherefores of things' from a study of his drawing. I would strongly advise him to study out his connections again and make sure he doesn't get his dynamo in series with his motor and the 230-volt line."

I think your letter is fully answered elsewhere, Galveston. Like you, I think Norfolk has some explaining to do. You are wrong in supposing that an ordinary 45 or 50 volt dynamo could be used on an arc without resistance, or I am wrong in saying it can't. Let the wise ones come forward. By "ordinary" I mean the type of generator found in light and power houses.

Seats.—Omaha, Neb., propounds the following: "I have seriously considered the matter of grading the prices of my seats, which are all on one floor. The problem is, which ought to be highest in price, the front or back rows. I have heard that in England the seats furtherest away from the screen are highest in price and those nearest are cheapest. Is this the fact and why? I run nothing but pictures."

It is the fact, Omaha, and the English method is correct. The further the seat is from the screen the less defects in projection will be visible. The picture will not seem to jump so badly and slight trembling or vibration will not be visible at all. Rain marks, pinholes and similar faults will be less prominent and the illusion of looking at the real thing instead of a shadow will be greater. Of course this matter of distance may be overdone to such extent that finer details of the picture will be lost, especially if the eyesight be not very sharp. For ordinary vision forty to sixty feet is ideal and seats within that range, or even a little more distant, say even 75 feet, are the best in the house.

Lower Loop.—Minneapolis, Minn., writes: "Am having trouble with losing the lower loop of my Powers Six. It jumps continually. Can you advise me as to a remedy?"



I probably can. Look carefully at the spring holding the takeup roller bracket. You will note that when the bracket is closed the spring holds it in position by pressing on the lower one of two points. The top of the spring is curved back slightly, sometimes considerably, into the hollow between the two points. It occasionally happens that the top of the spring is bent back too much and touches either in the hollow or on the top point when the bracket is closed. This has the effect of allowing the front roller to be very easily raised, hence the film is likely to climb sprocket teeth whenever a patch goes through. Remedy: bend the top of the spring until it touches the lower point when the bracket is closed down in position on sprocket. In the sketch the heavy line shows how the spring ought to be and the dotted line how it sometimes is. Wearing off of the lower point will produce the trouble also. Remedy is the same.

Advice Wanted.—Newark, N. J., asks: "I have a New Jersey license; also carried a New York card from 1907 to 1910. Can I register for New York examination, or must I serve a six-months' apprenticeship? Would you prefer a Hallberg or an Edison transformer? My Edison gets very hot. Does not the heat represent wasted energy?"

We cannot make comparisons of goods of various makers in this department. Yes, the heat not only represents loss but shows something wrong. I have no doubt but that the Edison people will promptly make it right if you take it up with them. All transformers get slightly warm, but should not get so hot but that you can lay your hand on them anywhere at any time. The Edison transformer is considered a good machine, as is also Mr. Hallberg's. As to the other matter; it is now in process of adjudication. Until such time as there is a decision against the law as it stands you will have to serve an apprenticeship. A decision, one way or the other, will probably be reached soon and it will be promptly published.

Arc Projector.—Quincy, Ill., writes: "In August 19 issue I note sketch of Jacobson's arc reflector—an excellent idea. However, I have an arc projector made from a condensing lens which does the work and does it well. Exactly opposite the crater puncture a pin-hole in the farther side of lamphouse. In any convenient manner support an ordinary condensing lens so that you can slip it back and forth to focus in front of the hole. At a suitable distance from the lens, which may be from one to four feet, place a square of white cardboard on which to focus the arc. A convenient holder for the lens is a round piece of tin one inch larger in diameter than the lens. Cut a hole, two inches across, in its center and then bend the edges of the tin over the lens to hold it. The projection is perfect."

That scheme has been published in the department before, but we thank Quincy for sending it in nevertheless. It is entirely practical, costs nothing, and works well. It is not necessary to use a whole lens. Half a broken one will do just as well. The right distance from the door may be ascertained by arranging the cardboard screen in position and moving the lens back and forth until a clear projection of the arc is had. The editor, however, prefers a circle of ruby and a circle of "pot green" glass, two inches in diameter, in the front end of the lamphouse door. The two glasses are put together in one mount so that you look through both You can look at the arc all day if you want to without any eye-strain whatever. He prefers this arrangement for the reason that once installed the glasses last as long as the lamphouse and is not in the way in any degree, at the same time answering every purpose of the projector.

The New State Law.—The legislature at Albany has enacted another piece of left-handed wisdom in the shape of a law prescribing how operating rooms in this state shall be built. As usual the legislative act bears every evidence of crudeness born of almost total lack of practical knowledge of the subject being dealt with. More than this, it begins to look as though there may be a large-sized African in the operating room woodpile. I am informed that Connecticut has, at least in some of her cities, made regulations which practically force the purchase of an asbestos room made by a certain firm in New York City. This information is not positively confirmed yet, and I should like to hear from Connecticut operators as well as from operators in cities or states in which an asbestos operating room is made obligatory as to exactly what the requirements are in that respect. The new New York law does not say nothing else will be accepted, but it goes into details of construction of asbestos rooms and merely says "or other fire-resisting materials." The impressions conveyed to the casual reader would be that asbestos rooms are required. The law, as a whole, is a wretched makeshift. It merely says that the structural members shall be angle and T irons not more than four feet apart on sides and not more than three feet on top and back; door to be framed with T and angle irons. Irons to be 1¼ x 1¼ x 3/16 inches. Size must be 48 square feet of floor surface for one machine and 24 additional square feet for each added machine, a stereopticon or spotlight presumably counting for a 'machine,' though it does not say so. Floor must be covered with asbestos board ⅜ inch thick. Openings must be of "reasonable size" and protected with shutters. Taken as a whole, the new law is a joke. Apparently it is merely a boost for asbestos "booths." Its creator may have been perfectly honest, however, in which case he has done himself small credit. I am informed that its interpretation and enforcement will be left to the judgment and discretion of the head of each Borough Building Department. That is another joke, isn't it? The exhibitor owning a house in three or four of the boroughs will probably have to go some to keep up with the various interpretations of the "law." Not one single word is said concerning a vent flue of any kind. We are getting entirely disgusted with such asinine attempts at legislation. It is an outrage on the business.

Motorcycle Operator.—Brother Brock, of the Cleveland union, is spending his vacation on a motorcycle and has covered the distance from his home city to Gotham already, calling on the department editor last week. He returns to Cleveland by motorcycle, taking another route.

Another caller this week was Mr. E. C. Turner, superintendent of electrical affairs, Atlanta, Ga. We enjoyed a lengthy chat with Turner, who seems to want to do the right thing as regards motion picture theaters and operating rooms. We tried to impress upon him the great importance of a vent flue of ample size from the operating room ceiling to open air, shutters that really work and absolutely fireproof walls. He informed us that some Atlanta houses now have such a vent flue, but that sheet metal was favored for operating room walls. With all respect to Mr. Turner the sheet metal part of it is distinctly bad. Sheet metal is not fit for a wall from any point of view. Brick, hollow tile, concrete or hard asbestos building board are the only materials fit for operating room walls.

And, by the way, I heard of the prize, double-distilled, star idiot of them all this week. I have forgotten the name of the town, but an exhibitor built a splendid operating room, the walls six inches thick and of solid concrete. An ideal fireproof operating room wall. It was paneled off on the outer surface and the inspector compelled him to cover the outside of that room with asbestos. Where on earth is the fool killer? Mind you, the chump made him cover those concrete walls with asbestos. Think of it!

Mechanical Slide.—Brooklyn, N. Y., writes: "A brother operator claims he made a slide producing the same effect as the Imp titles. Showing outline of stage scratched in opaque, he then causes curtain to rise disclosing an announcement. I tried to make such a slide, but have not succeeded. Have you ever heard of such a one and could you advise me how to make it? I have seen many mechanical slides, but the curtain raising effect has got me going."

The curtain effect cannot be had as it is shown on the Imp titles, but the construction of a mechanical slide producing such an effect, except for the actual rolling of the curtain, ought to be simple enough. It would be a matter of a clear space surrounded on three sides by outline, as you say, etched in opaque paint or cut in thin metal. You would have then to arrange a long roller with crank at bottom of slide, since the screen must go down, not up, and a couple of small, grooved pulleys at the top. Your clear space would have to be comparatively narrow up and down and you would pass two cords around the roller and pulleys, one at each side of the clear space and on these cords fasten a thin, opaque screen just wide enough to cover the clear space with 1-32 inch or so to spare on either side. This curtain must only be wide enough to reach down around the roller from the lower edge of the clear space and up just to the clear space on the other side. By revolving the roller the "curtain" would be pulled down off the clear space, which would of course be up on the house screen. You could also arrange a very thin screen on a roller at the bottom, with a couple of very flexible spiral springs at each end to pull it back up, the screen in this case to roll up on the roller. I know of no other way of accomplishing the effect you seek.

Large Picture Defects.—Denver, Colo., writes: "I have had quite an argument regarding size of picture. The question in dispute is: Is as good projection possible with a large as with a small picture. Agreement has been made to leave the matter to you."

There are of course points in favor of both large and small pictures. With the smaller one more brilliant illumination is had from a given current strength; also on short throw the definition is better. If the throw be quite short it is very much better. Defects in the film do not show up nearly so badly. Jump and movement of the film is not so visible. On the other hand the flicker, if any there be, is inclined to be more pronounced. With the large picture every defect in the film is hugely magnified—defects such as pinholes, etc. Rainmarks are very much more visible, since they, too, are enormously magnified, and this really is one of the worst objections to large pictures when running old films. Less curtain illumination per square foot is had, of course, from a given current strength. On the whole I think it may safely be said that curtain effect with the smaller picture is the best, particularly with old films.

Now is the time for all local fire chiefs and building inspectors to get names and photos in the papers by declaring that all the theaters in town are "fire-traps."

SEE ADVERTISEMENT ON PAGE 847.

Comments on the Films

Licensed.

"The Thumb Print" (Vitagraph), September 1.—This picture has all the elements of success except a story that can appeal to human sympathies. There are human scenes in it, but one of the important incidents outrages human nature. The film is artistically conducted and constructed, well acted and very beautifully photographed.

The plot is very well handled. The true lover, Plympton, is called to the East from the Western town. Case, the postmaster of the town, to deceive the heroine, Helen, destroys Plympton's letters and then marries her. A counter plot is then introduced and we see the villain postmaster defrauding an Italian. This character's desire for vengeance furnishes the picture's Nemesis. The Cases then come to the East on their honeymoon and Helen meets Plympton at a reception. The way this meeting is conducted is unnecessarily awkward. This is the only incident in the story of which this can be said. Helen explains the situation to Plympton and invites him to come the next day to her house, where the two are discovered by Case. Plympton accuses Case of treachery. To avoid a scandal (this is the way the leader puts it, though why a scandal was necessary is not shown), Plympton proposes to toss a coin to see who shall own Helen, the loser to kill himself at midnight, and it is he who loses in the toss.

Perhaps the scenario writer wanted to show Plympton as generously doing a brave thing, putting his life in peril for Helen's sake. There was a chance that he would win, and that would solve the difficulty. If he lost, however, Helen would lose a friend who could help her in many honorable ways, and it would leave her in a very sorry predicament, married to a liar and a villain. The incident shows Helen to the spectators as a mere chattel, for she consents to put her affection on the toss of a coin, to take the hero or the villain as a coin shall decree, and she, doing this, makes a pitiable figure. However, this furnishes a forceful climax for after Plympton has departed to prepare for suicide, the wronged Italian, whom we have seen following Case for vengeance, stabs him. It is just before midnight and Helen finds the body. Her first thought is to save Plympton and her efforts to accomplish this leave her open to suspicion as a murderess. She is saved by the evidence of a thumb print expert. The closing scenes are very effective.

"A Daughter of the South" (Pathe), September 2.—A war story, with the eternal triangle worked out by a girl, a Confederate soldier and a Union soldier. The girl loves the Confederate and the Union man loves the girl. There is a serious tangle, but eventually the Confederate is saved from a difficult position by the Union man and all goes well again. The acting is well done and the mechanical work could scarcely be improved.

"A Western Girl's Sacrifice" (Essanay), September 2.—The young man of this story breaks off a match with an Eastern girl because he did not understand a joke and hurries west. There he meets with an accident and is taken to a woodcutter's cabin, where he falls in love with the daughter of the house. Eventually they are married. The other girl hears of the accident, and hurries west, only to find that the man is married. The Western girl sees the couple together and realizes that her husband's love is not hers. She takes her own life, begging the two to marry after she has gone.

"The Easterner's Sacrifice" (Lubin), September 2.—The old idea of a girl making a sacrifice for her brother's sake is pictured on this film. Disguised as a cowboy, she holds up her own father to get money to save her brother from arrest. The lover protects her by exchanging clothes and riding back the same way. He is captured and would have suffered for the crime had not the girl confessed, showing her father her brother's letter. The father relents and the erring boy is assisted. The young man wins this girl, thus acceptably ending a pretty romance.

"Hearts and Swords" (Biograph), September 2.—This excellent picture has two characters that add greatly to its value. These are the faithful darkey and the courageous poor white girl. These poor whites of Virginia were descended chiefly from poor but honest English men and women, indentured to pay for their passage over, but there were among them many who were descended from deported criminals and also from those Hessian soldiers (most despised of all) whom Washington captured at Trenton. After the Revolution no one wanted these, so they took wives and squatted on the manorial and crown-grant lands. They were not molested because a lawsuit would cost more than the land was then worth. This girl plainly showed herself noble and her love and hand clearly honored the returned soldier.

The picture's weakness is the coldness that the proud Southern belle showed to this poor soldier. It was the reverse of typical and a libel on the well-known loyalty of Southern women during the war and after. It added nothing to the picture that a little show of warm appreciation and encouraging friendliness would not have given and seems as pictured a distinct loss.

"On the Warpath" (Kalem), September 1.—A Western story, featuring the adventurous bravery of a boy in attempting to defend a cabin against the attack of a band of Indians. The hurried escape of the family in the prairie schooner is a novelty which excites interest. The determination of the youngster makes him popular, but all feel relieved when he is rescued from his perilous position.

"Putting It Over" (Essanay), September 1.—This picture might be called "Courting in Disguise." That is what the gentleman did. He was an actor and the girl's father entered strenuous objections to his attentions and ordered him from the house. He called in a number of disguises and ultimately won the old gentleman's consent to wed his daughter.

"Miss Chatterer's Experience" (Essanay), September 1.—In comedy a woman agent is treated to an uncomfortable experience. She finds a package of money, which the owner is too surly to accept when it is offered to him. She proceeds to put some of it to work in a restaurant, but encounters the owner and a policeman when she goes out. It takes some time for explanations, but eventually everything is satisfactorily adjusted.

"Dad's Girls" (Selig), September 12.—There is no stalling in this lively Western melodrama with Indians. It has some good things, and while not all of it is fresh, it is all conducted freshly, so that there is little of the feeling in the spectator that some of it had been seen before. It is fairly well planned, though it wouldn't have been hard to have arranged the first few scenes so as to picture the situation clearly sooner. It is commendable, but not important.

"Her Crowning Glory" (Vitagraph), September 12.—Her luxuriant chestnut locks were the crowning glory of the rather angular governess. Her charge, the sentimental widower's little girl, cut them off at the instigation of a jealous nurse maid who was pretty. The picture is a cutting satire. No doubt satires are, to a certain extent, healthy. We are all more or less foolish and it does us good to get rapped occasionally. The governess of this picture was foolish, but she was most unmercifully punished, the hair was real. After she (Miss Finch) leaves in a very skilfully pictured torment, the widower (Bunny) makes love to the scheming nurse maid. It is a very competently produced and well acted picture.

"Jealousy" (Vitagraph), September 4.—In this picture the Vitagraph actors have rendered an adequate idea of the deep jealousy which may sometimes possess the soul of a woman. The alternate flashes of uncontrollable anger and the equally dark depths of despair are played with power by the leading actress. She carries her audience with her, so strong is her action. Then comes the final scene, the passing of the wine, the wine of death, the flash of the dagger the clasp of the dead hand, and oblivion. When the last scene disappears from the screen the audience feels as though it had looked upon something beside a silent drama. It has seemed so lifelike and the players have succeeded so well in translating the emotions that a breath of relief follows its disappearance.

"How Algy Captured a Wild Man" (Selig), September 4.—The scenery in this picture will interest most audiences. It shows Santa Cruz Island and the story is a legend of the place. Algy is a character who will furnish good sport. His capture of the wild man, while it disgusted the girls of the picture, so amused the boys that they forgave his bragging. That is a very exciting race where the wild man appears suddenly in the midst of the surprised party and Algy makes hurried tracks toward his friends, leaving the girls to whatever fate might befall them. The escape and kidnapping of Algy, the second capture and the following recital of Algy's prowess are all good comedy and will be enjoyed by any audience.

"The Hermit" (Pathe), September 4.—A story of a hermit who makes friends with a little girl and gives her a nugget of gold. This leads her father to rob him. How the father is saved from the consequence of his crime supplies a dramatic sequel to the robbery.

"The Stuff Heroes Are Made Of" (Biograph), September 4.—The feature of this film is the ruse by which Alice prevents the burglar taking her sister's locket and assists in overpowering him later. She feigns to be walking in her sleep. While all the other girls are scared almost to death she calmly walks downstairs. The young man returning for a forgotten suitcase helps in the capture and no longer feels any doubt about which sister he wants. The disappointed one threaens suicide, but her country sweetheart objects and she doesn't press her intention.

"A Gay Time In Washington" (Lubin), September 4.—George gets away from his watchful wife by telling her he is to dine with President Taft. Of course she is greatly delighted at the signal honor. He and his companion proceed to have a gay time in the capital city. But his wife finds out that Mr. Taft is not in Washington. Hence the trouble. Many excellent views of Washington are shown.

"A Friendly Marriage" (Vitagraph), September 5.—In this film we are shown two people, one a Western heiress and the other a foreign lord, who agree to a friendly marriage. The lord has some ability and writes a novel which is accepted. Meanwhile he employs a very attractive stenographer and the wife, when passing his study discovers him conversing with the girl. This discloses the fact that she has fallen in love with him, and upon his return home she is quite ready to find fault and be more or less disagreeable. But she has also won his love as chance happenings show. It is all very romantic and told with a vim which does much to maintain the interest.

"The Three Musketeers" (Edison), September 5 and 6 (two reels).—Dumas' great story is given a fine setting in this film. It has caught the spirit of the story, reproducing it almost as the average person has imagined it. The setting, the costumes and the action are all just what the imagination naturally pictures them, hence the film cannot be anything but successful. The four friends, Athos, Porthos, Aramis and d'Artagnan, are there and their action is in harmony with what one may expect. Also those who have never read the story cannot fail to be interested in the film. It is filled with action, as befits the tale. Further, those portions have been retained which carry the audience forward and introduce them to the principal features in the chain of sensational events which the novel describes.

"The Totem Mark" (Selig), September 5.—In this Indian story a totem mark affords means for identifying a girl who had been stolen by Indians from a neighboring tribe when a child. Because of her beauty she incurred the jealousy of all the squaws of the tribe, and they charged that she was a witch. She was sentenced to be set adrift in an open canoe to go over a falls. But her brother, coming from the other tribe with presents, identifies her by the totem mark, and she is saved. It is very exciting. The wild, tumbling waters of the falls make a beautiful and, as background of this situation, fascinating picture.

"The Diamond Gang" (Essanay), September 5.—A sensational detective story. It is very well planned and its feature is a very exciting chase. The diamond gang in an automobile on the road, the police in a trolley car paralleling it. The gang take refuge in an old barn and the police have an old fashioned bandit fight with much revolver smoke before they can capture the thieves.

"The Willow Tree" (Vitagraph), September 6.—A new version of the loss of memory idea. Caught in the desert and getting a fall down a steep bank, the young man loses all memory of his former home and friends. His mother dies and his sweetheart sets out to find him. She succeeds, and only causes him to remember her by means of the willow which he planted before his cabin door in accordance with his promise to his mother. The acting where the girl undertakes to restore his memory is good. The change in his facial expression as his memory comes back to him is a very illuminating piece of stage business.

"A Question of Modesty" (Lubin), September 6.—In this comedy the principal feature is a widow's sudden discharge of her doctor after she has broken her leg. Modesty forbids letting him set the injured member. She sends for a young woman doctor, a sweetheart of her son's, whom she has forbidden the house. The leg is set, the widow is made comfortable, after which she gives the young people her blessing.

"Pardon Me" (Lubin), September 6.—The unfortunate gentleman shown in this film was always getting into difficulties and as constantly asking those with whom he collided to pardon him. Interference with a policeman lands him behind the bars and he is seen there asking with an imploring look for the proper authorities to "pardon him."

"Honoring a Hero" (Pathe), September 6.—This war story deals with the forgotten grave of a Union soldier which had been overlooked. The widow and daughter are the only ones to remember it on Memorial Day, excepting the young officer who marched away with the gallant officer when he went to the front and was in love with his daughter. He finds the bereaved women weeping over the grave and induces those in authority to honor the brave man who died of his wounds. The young man is rewarded with the gratitude of the mother and the love of the girl. The picture is commendable.

"A Tennessee Love Story" (Selig), September 7.—The fathers have long been enemies, but the young people disregard this fact and persist in falling in love with each other. The lover kills the girl's brother without knowing it in a very remarkable but convincing way, and the same night elopes with the girl. The father is led to believe that theyoung fellow murdered his son and swears vengeance. Some time later the father finds the couple in their cabin, but the young man sits by a cradle. This stays the elder man's hand, and the young man has an opportunity to explain. He does this so successfully that when his wife is brought in she and her husband find her father singing the baby to sleep. Not all stories of this type end so happily, especially when they look so dark at the beginning. It is an interesting but not important picture.

"The Dark Romance of a Tobacco Can" (Essanay), September 7.—A colored girl put her name and address in a tobacco can. A young man is informed that the uncle who has just died decreed that he must marry within a week or lose the fortune. He opens the can of tobacco he has just purchased, discovers the note, writes the girl to come on at once, yet he is horrified when he finds that she is a colored lady. In despair he drags the maid to the license office, where they are married just in time to save the fortune.

"The Redman's Dog" (Pathe), September 7.—The interesting features of this film are the horse which goes after aid, and the dog which trails the ranchman to the tree to which he has been bound by bandits. The work of these animals is very interesting. The holdup and the rest of it are no more than commonplace.

"The Hobo Cowboy" (Melies), September 7.—A hobo is befriended by a man and his daughter. Through the influence of the girl, he becomes once more an honest man, obtains work on a ranch and ultimately runs for sheriff and is elected. Later the man who befriended him shoots the saloonkeeper. The sheriff has the handcuffs on him, but the plea of the daughter causes him to relent, and he holds up the posse with his gun until the man has a chance to get across the border. Then he surrenders. Some of the boys are for lynching him, but after hearing his story they agree with his action. He feels, however, that he has violated his oath. So he dons his hobo clothes and boards the first freight that comes along. The picture is well acted and interesting.

"Japanese Dice and Butterflies" (Pathe), September 7.—A very attractive scenic film which will keep your audience pleased all the time it is on the screen. It is short, which is, perhaps, its only fault.

"A Society Mother" (Gaumont), September 5.—This picture might have been better called "An Ambitious Mother." She was a society woman, but the present title isn't descriptive. The picture seems to be the first in a series of "life as it truly is" photoplays. It is effective. In construction, acting and staging it is strong, but, though the sense of its being a picture of real life is also strong, it leaves a rather unpleasant taste in the mouth. It is pessimistic. Save for this, it is a very good picture.

"The Old Confectioner's Mistake" (Biograph), September 7.—Good scenarios must be scarce when the Biograph Company will utilize one maimed from the start as this one is. The situation can be put in a nutshell. The old confectioner was friendly with certain children. Ice-cream was ordered for their picnic, which was to be held in a pleasant grove outside the city. The confectioner had a bad toothache and got laudanum to ease it. By mistake he poured the bottle full of laudanum in place of vanilla into the cream. Half an hour after the cream had been started on its way, the mistake was discovered and (hindered by cleverly arranged difficulties) the old man has much trouble in getting to the grove in time to save the children. They are saved, but their picnic is spoiled; they have no ice-cream. How can such a picture be popular?

"Clever Beyond Her Years" (Eclipse), September 6.—This picture's very little heroine runs the farm while her mother is sick. Everybody will see that such tasks as are shown are too large for a girl of the age represented. Some degree of interest may attach to a film of this sort, but such cleverness is so clearly impossible that the picture loses point. As pictures of farm life in France it is very interesting.

"Lake Thun, Switzerland" (Eclipse), September 6.—A very beautiful outdoor picture, giving a series of views of a lake which is almost a rival of Lucerne. The shores are shown for a distance of twenty miles. Beautiful villas and gardens give place to precipitous rocks and the whole closes with a tinted view showing a sunset behind a mountain range which is very effective.

"The Story of Rosie's Rose" (Lubin), September 7.—The love story of the Maine coast given on this film is very interesting and commendable. Rosie, the belle of the fishing village gave two roses away. Each of the two brothers got one. They were jealous of each other. The younger one, when they were out at sea, found the rose she gave to the older one and threw it overboard. Later, out in the dory, there is a fight for the other rose, and the dory is swamped. The older brother swims to the shore. The younger one is rescued by the father and his crew. Each supposes the other dead. The older one tells the girl and discovers that she was truly in love with the younger. The father with the younger brother reaches the house. The lad can't bear to go in. On the beach he finds his brother. Each hardly believes his senses. Together they find the girl, who is weeping. The older brother keeps the rose, but the younger brother gets the kiss. It was promised to each.

The first scene of this picture seems cramped; it has an unnatural, stagy look. If a bit more background had been shown, it might have had more atmosphere and looked more like life and less like a photograph.

"When the Sun Went Out" (Kalem), Sept. 8.—An eclipse of the sun in this picture is made to frighten a party of Indians into releasing their captives. This is in line with an old Iroquois legend. Fortunately the lovers make good time in getting away. When the sun reappears from the shadow a few minutes after the captives are released the Indians realize that they have been tricked and hasten after them. It is a hard chase, both their horses fall exhausted and they come dangerously near re-capture. They are saved by a party of emigrants. There is a short, sharp fight and the Indians are defeated. It is a good Indian story and the novelty of the eclipse adds to the interest.

"Cherry Blossoms" (Vitagraph), Sept. 8.—A Japanese love story in which cherry blossoms play an important part. The young man is false to his first love. In Japan he goes to meet the new love while the cherries are in bloom. As she comes toward him with her arms full of blossoms he realizes her insincerity and the cherry blooms remind him of the girl he has almost forgotten. He returns and again the lovers meet under the cherry tree and the man is forgiven. The cherry blooms are managed with skill and the pictorial effects are very beautiful.

"At Jones' Ferry" (Edison), Sept. 8.—This story is told amid unusual and novel surroundings. It will interest because it shows the lumberman's life, but while it is convincing in its description of human feelings, the incidents connected with the girl's fall and rescue from the river are not made to seem real. A feature is a quaint old-fashioned ferry such as was once common, but now seldom seen.

"The Wrong Glove" (Essanay), Sept. 8.—Here is a little love tale which centers around a quarrel among some young people occasioned by jealousy. The feature is that one of the young men carried in his pocket and adored for several days a glove which he supposed belonged to one girl, while, as a matter of fact, it was the glove of his old sweetheart. She finds it there and thinks his assumed ill nature was only a joke and hastens to make amends. It is amusing.

"Farming—Old and New" (Gaumont), Sept. 9.—The first picture shows an old-fashioned plow slowly and laboriously driven by horses, while in the second is seen the power plow with its multiple shares doing the work of a number of teams. It is a striking object lesson in the advance of agricultural operations.

"Jimmie's Job" (Vitagraph), Sept. 9.—Three very clever players make a thoroughly enjoyable picture of this little office comedy. It is not a picture that brings out hearty laughter, but it is entirely human and the skill of the three leading players puts it over in a way that gets home to the heart of the spectator and keeps him smiling, which is much better after all. This reviewer enjoyed it more than any picture he has seen in some time more than a week. Jimmie, the office boy, is the human "scape-grace" kid, that will find some way to get to the ball game. Originality is a valuable quality. Jimmie uses it to get to the game and also to save a lady's handbag from a thief. The office stenographer, however, is Jimmie's match in most things. She can hold her end of the office up. Between the two there is always a contest (good-natured underneath) going on to see who is who. When Jimmie has worked his game to get to the ball field, she craftily brings the advertisement of the great ball game to the boss's attention. He decides to go. The stenographer keeps glancing over her shoulder while the boss is reading the ad. Her eyes are black and these glances are impish; it's a very clever play. The boss sees Jimmie at the field, and his job is only saved for him by the lady whose handbag he had saved. The picture is wholly commendable.

"That Winsome Winnie Smile" (Edison), Sept. 9.—The scenario of this picture was written by Carolyn Wells. It's a comedy of social life in small community probably. It is light hearted and pleasing. The players all do commendable work. While not very important, the picture furnishes good amusement.

"No Cooking Allowed" (Edison), Sept. 9.—This on the same reel with "Winsome Winnie's Smile" makes a good second for it. It is in a little different vein, being a boarding house comedy, but has the same qualities, good nature and light-heartedness.

"The Heart of John Barlow" (Selig), Sept. 8.—John Barlow is the captain of a fishing schooner and this film pictures him as acting bravely and wisely when he discovers, by a note he chances to pick up from the sitting room floor, that his wife is about to elope with a young merchant of the village. The players act with a good deal of naturalness and the story, on the whole, is interesting and fairly strong. John's making the merchant come with him to the house to show him the two sleeping children is not shown convincingly. It is easy to see why it was done. In a stage drama John's words to the scamp would have got hold of the situation in something like the same way. The first method might be very effective; the second method, showing the children's part in the situation by picture, in this way is strained. The total effect of the picture is good; it is more than merely satisfactory, but the mind accepts and likes it with reservations. It stands high among the films of a not very distinguished week.

"Eva is Tired of Life" (Pathe), September 11.—Eva has been discharged by her employer. She decides that it is time for her to depart this life. Accordingly she undertakes a number of routes, with funnier results each time. It is a trick film; but the player who takes Eva's part is a competent comedienne.

"Little Moritz and the Butterfly" (Pathe), September 11.—A lively comedy which kept a New York evening crowd amused. The adventures of little Moritz will maintain good humor while the picture is on the screen and leave a pleasant impression.

"From Lourdes to Garvarnie" (Pathe), September 11.—A travelog which gives a series of interesting views between these two points. Like all Pathe's work of this character it is satisfactory. The viewpoints are well chosen and there is plenty along the way to interest an audience.

"The Village Hero" (Biograph), September 11.—That many times circumstances favor a hero will occur to the one who sees this picture. The hero business was not in Max's particular line, but he enlisted because his sweetheart insisted. While tired and hungry he enters a house which has just been attacked by revolutionists. They think a whole regiment is back of him and flee.

Independent.

"Three Million Dollars" (American), September 7.—The novelty in this comedy will keep the audience laughing. A will left three million dollars to a girl, provided she married within one week. It requires a kidnapping party to catch the man, and then an abduction to corner the girl. Eventually they are tied blindfolded in a barn while the justice is sent for. The guard plays cards and the prisoners escape.

"The Cowboy and the Artist" (American), September 4.—The story of how an artist deceived a simple Western girl, won her away from her lover and apparently left her in hopeless misery. The discarded lover is asked by the girl to find the artist, who is lost in a canyon. He does so, bringing him back to the ranch. The artist has written a note directing whoever finds his body to notify his wife. This note the cowboy presents to the girl. The girl, realizing the enormity of the offense she has committed turns to her mother for comfort, while the cowboy orders the artist to be gone.

"Inshavogue" (Yankee), September 4.—A story of Ireland, showing one of the legendary Irish heroes, a match for an entire British army. When offered pardon he is treacherously arrested and cast into prison, but escapes and flees to the mountains. His wife gives birth to a daughter and loses her own life. Lady Roderick gives birth to a daughter and the child dies. The doctor who attended both cases exchanges the motherless child for the dead one and she is brought up as the daughter of Lord and Lady Roderick. On her eighteenth birthday she is told her true history. Through the effort of a suitor she meets her father, who, when he is convinced that she is truly his daughter, proclaims himself, is arrested and cast into prison. He is afterward released through the efforts of Lord and Lady Roderick.

"Tangled Heartstrings" (Yankee), September 11.—The great fault of this picture is its inhumanity. It not only fails to convince the spectator that its hero acts as a man in his situation would be likely to act, but it leaves in the mouth an unpleasant taste because the man's action under the circumstances and the way the woman accepts it seem almost preposterous. The situation is this: The gardener's ambitious son has been educated by the lady who, in a way, has fallen in love with him. She is engaged to another man, who, as suitor, has long been jealous of the young gardener. The young man's old father knows this; the young man doesn't. The father procures from the lady a letter telling the youth that she is engaged to another. The youth has just won a large sum of money on Wall Street. He goes to the lady's home and in the midst of an evening gathering scatters the money around the room, making a declaration that he is repaying her for the sums spent on his education, and in truth making a public disgrace of the whole business. The woman accepts it as a just rebuke and later marries the man. Such peculiar characters as these are not pleasant companions even for the fifteen minutes of a moving picture; they are not even mildly interesting.

"The Stage Robbers of San Juan" (American), September 11.—The hero, "Slippery," and the heroine of this picture are robbers; the only mitigating circumstances being that they want to get to Mexico, where they can live "straight." They have a partner in the hold-up business who poses as a good man, but is treacherous and brings "Slippery" to justice on account of which he is considered a hero. "Slippery's" wife gets him out of prison and they escape, while the partner is "shown up." It is well acted in most of its scenes. In one scene "Slippery" is so badly wounded that he faints and falls from his horse; but a few moments later, when a gun is pointed at him, shows remarkable strength and agility. There is one remarkably fine photograph in the picture. It is interesting but is not an important picture.

"By the House that Jack Built" (Imp), September 11.—With good measure of success the Imp Company has produced this fantasy of Old King Cole's realm, with Boy Blue, Bo-Peep, Taffy the Welshman, the Man all tattered and torn, the Priest all shaven and shorn, the Cow with the crumpled horn, as well as Old King Cole, among the principal characters. There's a delightful little touch of poetry given to the picture at the very beginning. It is the message that the Old Woman of Bambury Cross brings to the poor little nurse girl. She is tired and weary, and the old woman tells her that Old King Cole has commissioned her to choose her as the bride for the prince. Could anything be better? It is just the human touch needed to grip our interest in the story. The projection, when it was seen, wasn't very good and the reviewer doesn't dare comment on the photography. Some of the scenes were very pretty, while others might perhaps have been improved by more careful rehearsing. The cow was a dummy and spoiled one scene, though a well-made dummy might have been better than a real cow. On the whole, the picture is delightful and very commendable. It is likely to please the majority of spectators very much indeed.

"His Dream" (Reliance), September 9.—Two women seated directly behind the reviewer watched this picture apparently with deep interest, and from their comments seemed to approve of and enjoy it. It is a sermon-picture, but it's a very human one. After some pleasing and natural love scenes (the woman behind the reviewer called them "sweet") the lover (Mr. Walthall) gets drunk at an impromptu jollification at the club. His friends have to put him in bed. He has a bad dream. He sees in himself the drunken husband who illtreats his wife and at length kills one of his friends. This is pictured as a dream and as such it would have been more pleasing if the sleeper's presence had been kept in the picture. It is a bad nightmare and it makes the dreamer decide to drink no more. The closing scenes are as pretty as the early scenes. It is very well acted.

"Count Ivan and the Waitress" (Thanhouser), September 5.—The story here told has its beginning in Russia with its unjust intrigues. The old musician was forced, an innocent man, to flee to America. Misfortune followed him there and but for a waitress and her policeman sweetheart he would have been taken to prison. However, she befriends him when he needs it most. Shortly afterward things change with him. His friends in Russia prove to the czar that he has been loyal. A pardon is issued, his estates are restored and he is permitted to return home to enjoy them. Before going, he liberally rewards his benefactors, leaving them beyond want for the rest of their lives. It is a well told and romantic story which is made all the more entertaining by the good work of the actors.

"Red Feather's Friendship" (Powers), September 5.—Here is an Indian picture which effectually emphasizes the fact that an Indian has gratitude. Befriended by a ranchman, the time comes when he has an opportunity to repay. The foreman undertakes to force his attentions upon the ranchman's wife, and because he is turned away, captures her by means of a decoy letter, and takes her away to the mountains. The Indian and the ranchman follow and arrive on the scene in time to see what straits the woman is in. A shot from the Indian's gun sends the former foreman to his deserts and pays the debt of gratitude at the same time.

"The Lost Letter" (Bison), September 12.—Jealousy causes one man to shoot another, but the bullet only grazes him and he is shortly up and after the attempted murderer. The sheriff's posse undertakes to stop trouble and takes a hand in the fray. The wouldbe murderer, believing he is in for hanging anyhow, writes a satirical letter and shoots himself. The other man, found near the corpse later, is accused of shooting him and despite his protestations of innocence is tried and convicted. The wind blew away the man's letter. His sweetheart finds the letter in the road as she rides to save him. It is played with much camera consciousness.

"The Temptation" (Reliance), September 6.—Several years ago one of the expensive monthly magazines printed a story the same in outline as the story pictured on this film; but the original setting of the incident was in the West, or at least in a lonely district; this is pictured as taking place in Mt. Vernon, N. Y. The woman's taking the injured stranger in and giving shelter for the night is not so convincing in a community where a telephone call would have brought an ambulance, as it was in the lonely locality. The original story was much more tragic than this. This picture is fairly well acted and effective.

"When the Law Came" (Champion), September 6.—Apparetnly an attempt is made in this picture to show the difference between trial by jury under the law and such lynch law as has prevailed at times in the West. The man in this picture, tried and found guilty, would have suffered just the same under lynch law, but the pardon from the governor on the strength of the testimony of the accidentally killed man's little daughter might not have been forthcoming. It seems to this reviewer that the film misses what it was clearly intended to portray—the coming of the law. Wouldn't it have been better to have had the little girl present the testimony at the trial?

"Hector's Inheritance" (Solax), September 6.—An entertaining comedy showing how a café keeper, reading that one of his most despised employees had been left heir to a million, gives him money and allows him to enjoy himself, thinking that he may get some of the million in return. A few days later, after the young fellow has spent money like water, he reads again that the boy's relative was insane and thought he had a million. The no-account young man is thrown out and the café keeper proceeds to meditate upon the loss of his money.

"Duty" (Imp), September 7.—Many good qualities in this picture keep the interest awake from beginning to end. It is not a great picture, and it might have been more convincing if it had been acted more naturally.

It is a story of a rocky coast. In the opening scene we see that the wife of the keeper of the light is sick. The keeper has two children, the older merely a lad of about nine. The time comes when it is necessary for the keeper to make sure that everything in the lantern chamber is in good order for the night. He and the boy climb the tower stairs and we see that the light is encased in a large cylinder with six big bulls-eyes. The case is shown slowly revolving. As father and son busy themselves getting things in shipshape, the revolving lantern suddenly stops. The father attempts to get the machinery going again, but is unable. There is a handle by which when necessary the lantern may be turned by hand. Though this is a hard and tedious job, someone must do it or the stony reef will be dark. The lad is too young to row ashore for the gear that is broken on the motor; the father has to go, and reluctantly the lad is left to turn the lantern.

On the return trip, after he has procured the needed gear, the father staves in his dory on a half-submerged rock and is compelled to swim. It was not possible for the picture to show us how long this swim is. It partly makes up for this by showing that it took him till dawn to reach the lighthouse. Meanwhile, the lad has fallen exhausted. The mother, noticing as she lies on her bed, that the light is out, climbs weakly to the tower and turns while her strength lasts; then she too falls. At dawn, the father reaches the reef and can hardly climb to the light, where he finds the lad unconscious and the mother delirious. There is a pretty scene for the close. We see the government official presenting a medal to the keeper. This he won't accept, for he points out that his wife more truly deserves it.

"Picturesque Colorado" (Rex), September 7.—This is a very welcome and interesting scenic film. It is rather long, but so much the better, for there isn't one inch of it that lacks great interest. The least interesting part of it shows a parade with decorated floats seen recently in Denver. Perhaps among the best things shown is an excursion train photographed passing through the Royal Gorge. Some excellent views of the Garden of the Gods are included, among a surprising number of other features that make Colorado one of the wonder places of the world. It is a very good film—one that any reviewer could take pleasure in commending highly.

"Mutt and Jeff and the Escaped Lunatic" (Nestor), Sept. 9.—There is fun in this picture. Mutt and Jeff before they land in the mad house serve as waiter and cook in a restaurant.

"A Dream With a Lesson" (Great Northern), Sept. 9.—Here is a thrilling dream which represents the temptation of a young student who has as a neighbor a miser continuously counting his gold. He dreams that he has robbed him, as he was tempted to do and the troubles which followed are so vividly portrayed that when he awakes he no longer possesses any desire for wealth which might be gained that way.

"Foolshead, Hypnotizer" (Itala), Sept. 9.—Once again this comedian appears with a stunt that amuses with its unexpected developments. Of course, all sorts of difficulties pursue the gentleman in the course of his machinations, but these troubles afford amusement for the audience and laugh follows laugh as the film runs. It is not so good as some Foolshead films.

"The Twin Squaws" (Powers), Sept. 9.—Here is a film that is charged with thrills, though quite the most powerful comes toward the last. The renegade for revenge captures one Indian brave, the Indian maidens and a ranchman's daughter. Then he forces them all to the mouth of a bears' pit and is about to drive them to a horrible death when another Indian, lover of one of the maidens, appears and makes short work of the revengeful gentleman, and releasing all from their unpleasant and dangerous plight.

"A Western Tramp" (Bison), Sept. 8.—The unfortunate tramp is not received with favor by the men of the ranch except Jones, who gives him a helping hand. Smith is hard on him. Later he discovers that Smith is trying to make trouble for Jones by falsely accusing him to his wife of making love to another girl. The tramp finally makes the girl confess her part in the intrigue. Smith is driven from town and the tramp gets a good home. The film tells a good story. It is played with much camera consciousness. It is fair.

"Bill Buys a Lobster" (Lux), Sept. 8.—A farce in which Bill, after partaking of a lobster in company with an uncommonly pretty girl, takes on the characteristics of the crustacean and does a number of very surprising things backward. He has all sorts of difficulties until he manages to steer himself home, where he is tenderly picked up by Mrs. Bill and carried to safety.

"The Romance of a Wager" (Lux), Sept. 8.—Is or is not the public really generous? That is the question that was debated at length and a wager of $5,000 was laid that a man could live for a month upon charity. He assumes the disguise and at first is successful, but later is cast into prison charged with robbery. The stipulated time is up, however, he throws off the disguise and is released. Next he goes to the lady of his choice, not for a pittance this time, but apparently for something more important than alms. And the film ends with his getting it.

"The Best Policy" (Solax), Sept. 8.—Two brothers love the same girl. The gay one is in the lead as compared with the plodding, hardworking brother. But the gay one's debts accumulate and he must have money. So he steals from his father, placing a few bills in the brother's pocket. Here the girl intervenes and succeeds in running the real thief down. The story would be incomplete if she didn't marry the plodder.

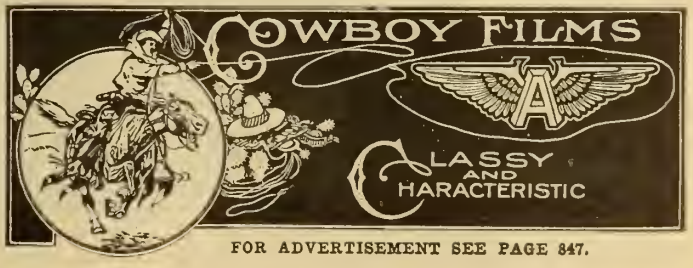
"Faded Roses" (Yankee), Sept. 8.—A young man sends his sweetheart a bouquet of roses in which is a note declaring his love. The girl does not see the note, consequently sends the messenger back empty handed. Thirty years after they meet. Both are single and he inquiries why she did not answer his note. Together they open the box and there among the faded roses lies the note. Even though thirty years have elapsed the lover gets a favorable answer. A Reliance picture of a few months back had a similar situation.

"Mesmerizing Moe" (Yankee), Sept. 8.—A good story in which two practical jokers are nicely beaten by an old negro whom they undertook to fool. They fool him with different sized fish, eventually replacing two small ones with two large ones. Uncle Moe thinks he better accept what the gods have evidently given and starts home with his fish. The jokers did not bargain for anything of that sort and are forced to buy their fish back in order to save them.

"Charlie's Buttie" (Champion), September 11.—Here is a Western story which introduces a thrilling race with Indians. A colored servant executes a bit of heroism by dismounting from his horse which was carrying him and the girl of the family and facing the Indians alone because it was impossible for the horse to carry both to shelter. The rest reach the fort safely and quickly return, only to find the poor, bruised body of the faithful servant who had given his life for "Little Missy." The race is thrilling and the story works out very romantically.

"How Poor Babies are Reared in Paris" (Eclair), September 11.—This film shows one of the most famous of the helpful children's institutions of Paris. It is the "Baby Home" and the picture tells how the children are cared for and closes with a reproduction of the recreation dance. The pictures of the kiddies seemed to please the audience very much.

"How Teddy Lost His Bet" (Eclair), September 11.—A comedy in which a champion bicyclist is defeated by a cripple whom he had seen fit to ridicule. The unheard of and unthought of obstacles which beset the path of the arrogant champion afford amusement for the audience. He arrives at last just in time to see his crippled rival win.



FOR ADVERTISEMENT SEE PAGE 847.

Manufacturers Advance Notes

"FRIDOLIN—THE WALK TO THE IRON FOUNDRY" (Gaumont).

George Kleine announces another exceptional colored subject with decided educational value to follow his release of "The Upward Way," which was reviewed in the issue of September 2.

"Fridolin" is a dramatization of one of Schiller's world-famous ballads. In staging the poem for use of the moving picture theater, Gaumont has carefully studied the costuming and architecture of the day in which the events of the poem are supposed to have happened, and faithfully recorded them on the screen. The coloring is of the usual Gaumont quality, showing careful study in the making of rich shades.

The story is briefly that of the gentle page Fridolin, who honors the Countess of Savern, his mistress, and watches her every move in order to please her.

The jealousy of Robert, the huntsman, is aroused to such a degree that he lays a plan to rid himself of Fridolin, whom he considers a rival. He plants the seed of distrust in the Count's mind by telling him that the Countess and Fridolin are sweethearts.

The Count, filled with rage, goes to the workmen of his iron foundry and gives them the order to throw the page into the furnace.

The Count returns to his palace and sends Fridolin to his death, but by a chance he is delayed. When the Count tells Robert what he has done, the jealous huntsman goes to the foundry to see if the Count's orders have been executed. The workmen, thinking Robert the person to be destroyed, cast him into the furnace. Later Fridolin arrives with the message and is told that the Count's command has been obeyed. The Count is astounded when he learns the result.

The film introduces many beautiful out-of-door scenes, and the pictures which represent the estates and grounds of the Count are especially artistic. The excellent coloring adds decided value to the production.

ANOTHER ESSANAY "SNAKEVILLE" COMEDY.

"Townhall, Tonight" Tells How "Snakeville" Was Buncoed Again.

The excellent Essanay Western stock company have added another big "yell" to their long list of popular "Snakeville" comedies and "Townhall, Tonight" which tells how two barnstormers again relieve the villagers of their hard-earned coin, is one of the funniest of this series which has yet appeared.

That clever little comedian, Augustus Garney, who, with Victor Potel, also in this picture, and who made their first appearances in the Essanay productions as Hank and Lank, is at his best in this film.

The story tells of the misadventures of the Schultz Brothers, "celebrated vaudeville artists," who come piking up the gravel-strewn ties of the railroad track into the lonesome little village of Snakeville. Between them they are carrying a large trunk and the sign on the little red station reads "New York, 2,810 miles."

Scene from "Fridolin" (Gaumont).

That night they show to a full house, but not for long. After two or three futile attempts on the part of the "orchestra," one man with a fiddle, to find something in common between his harmony and theirs, the audience becomes exasperated and yells out its derision. Finally, unable to stand more of the alleged music, Mustang Pete and Broncho Bill, with their gang of rowdies at their heels, run the two comedians off the stage. The box office man having decamped with the receipts of the show, the two "artists" are as bad off as before.

Scene from "Town Hall To-Night" (Essanay).

After a sleepless night in the dressing room the pair start out foraging in the morning and one is pinched for stealing pies from a kitchen window. Making up as an old lady the one who escaped manages to convince the sheriff that it is her son who has been jailed and secures his release. The plight of the poor old lady and her son induces all Snakeville to contribute to send them home to little old Broadway.

Scene from "Town Hall To-Night" (Essanay).

Not until the two "artists" are safely on the rear end of a departing train do they give away their stunt, and not until the smaller Schultz brother pulls off his old lady's wig and does a jig for the edification of the "Snakeville" rubes, do these latter awaken to the fact that they have been very cleverly stung. Then there is some wailing and gnashing of teeth and when the train pulls out of sight around a curve there is a general mixup of scuffling fighting men, and several inquiries of "Where is that sheriff," who has been fortunate enough to beat a hasty retreat.

HOW TO GET HALLBERG'S NEW CATALOG.

In J. H. Hallberg's advertisement on page 923 is explained just what to do to get the new illustrated catalog which Mr. Hallberg is preparing to distribute to the picture trade. Exhibitors and exchange men, as well as dealers in moving picture accessories, will be better informed by having a copy of this handsome trade booklet where they can lay their hands on it.

THE BETTER WAY (Imp).

The reformation of a criminal through the influence of a Salvation Army worker furnishes a theme for a very interesting story, replete with pathos and the right sort of appeal. The erstwhile leader of a bad gang is released from prison only to join his former associates and resume a career of crime. The woman of the underworld, with whom he was associated before his conviction, again exerts her power over him and he is fairly launched on his downward career when he meets a sweet, sympathetic little Salvation Army woman who immediately becomes interested in him. The good influence triumphs over the bad and he endeavors to secure work. A nemesis in the way of his record of crime pursues him and when he is engaged an officer lays bare his past and he is promptly discharged. How he finally marries the faithful girl and assists her in her work and triumphs is a sad story. The former sweetheart endeavors to win him back to a life of crime and nearly succeeds when fortune favors him and all is made clear to the officers, who exonerate him. The gang is informed of his conversion and the influence on the abandoned woman is salutary by reason of the kindness of the wife of the ex-convict. The film is for release Thursday, October 12.

Scene from "The Better Way" (Imp).

"MUTT AND JEFF" MIGRATE.

David (Nestor) Horsley and his whole office force, including Mutt and Jeff, Desperate Desmond and even little Charlie Simone, made a quick getaway from the neighborhood of Fourteenth Street last week and will hereafter be located in Bayonne, N. J. With a studio in Staten Island, a factory in Bayonne and main office in New York, Mr. Horsley found that too much of his time was taken up in traveling, hence he has put up a building in Bayonne which will accommodate the whole force. His address now is, The Nestor Film Co., 688 Avenue E, Bayonne, N. J. Beginning September 23, the Mutt and Jeff releases will be every Saturday one-half reel and the other half also a comedy. The Wednesday reel will also be a split reel, one-half Western and the other half a series of the famous "Desperate Desmond" escapades. There is certainly enough variety in the Nestor releases to please the public and the exhibitor, and, with the advantages of concentration of efforts that we have alluded to above, it is reasonable to suppose that increasing quality will maintain their position in the front rank of Independent films.

NEW POWER'S REPRESENTATIVE.

The Nicholas Power Company announces that it has engaged Mr. F. W. Swett to act as special representative. He will spend most of his time traveling, principally in the interests of Power's Cameragraph No. 6, which is enjoying unprecedented popularity, not only in the United States, but in foreign fields as well; in fact, wherever moving pictures are shown.

Leaving the position of chief electrician of the Dominion Atlantic Railway & Steamship Company, of Yarmouth, Nova Scotia, in 1906, he took charge of the Royal Opera House in Yarmouth and there gained his first experience with moving pictures. The pictures projected in this house soon became the standard by which others in that vicinity were judged.

Having in view a wider field of activity, Mr. Swett left there to take charge of the repair department of the F. J. Howard Film Exchange, of Boston, Mass. This gave him a thorough knowledge of the mechanical construction of the various makes of machines which he was called upon to repair and adjust.

Mr. F. W. Swett.

The Southern Pacific Railway Company, having added moving pictures to its publicity department, engaged Mr. Swett to travel throughout the country with Prof. James W. Erwin, the official lecturer of the company. In that position he had entire charge of the mechanical apparatus used by the lecturers for the company. After covering the United States, he went to England in 1909, and for five months with Prof. Erwin gave illustrated lectures at the Anglo-American Exposition, Earl's Court, London. At the close of the exposition they made a tour of the English provincial cities.

Since his return to the United States, Mr. Swett has been devoting his entire time and attention to the motion picture machine business and is one of the best posted men on the mechanical construction of the various makes of American and European machines now on the market.

He is a member of Local No. 2 I. A. T. S. E., of Chicago. Not only is he an expert in the handling of machines, but he has the rare faculty of quickly imparting his knowledge to others, and, where an inclination is shown to raise the standard of their work, Mr. Swett is always glad to give the operators what knowledge and assistance he can. His electrical training is especially valuable in this connection.

The Nicholas Power Company considers itself fortunate in having secured the services of Mr. Swett and feels sure that he will materially increase the host of friends it already possesses.

NEW STAFFORD CATALOG.

E. H. Stafford Mfg. Co., of Chicago, is now at work on a new opera house catalog which will be ready for distribution very shortly and will show a lot of new designs that will please the moving picture people. This catalog will be sent upon request; get yours in early.

THE HONEYMOONERS (Thanhouser).

A yarn about poodle dogs usually excites the suspicion of the public and the editor. He mentally chalks one more up against the poor press agent—and at the same time the aforementioned unfortunate individual goes down a peg in the editor's and the public's estimation. Indeed, only a press agent, with courage and the imagination of a shipping clerk, nowadays resorts to a dog yarn.

But there is no getting away from facts. The scorn of editors and the public must be braved in telling about five wilful, woolly and playful pets which nearly disrupted the Honeymooners production. Poodle dogs of a particular size are always scarce when you need them. The first one used used in the picture, which deals with the trials and tribulations of newlyweds who are separated by overzealous friends—and incidentally shows the Bridgeport wreck—was sold by its owner.

After a successful but trying experience in an endeavor to match this poodle, which is the inseparable companion of the bride, so that another part of the picture could be taken, [illegible] Hunting Grounds before the stage could be set. Other poodles were gotten and before the separated bride and groom fall into each other's arms, two more had to be pressed into service. Up in New Rochelle there is a dearth of poodles, and those of the proper shape and form that were in town at the time "The Honeymooners" was produced, mysteriously disappeared. The "Lost and Found" columns in the Hicksville papers will bear witness to the truth of these devious and various allegations.

"Cinematograph Fiend."

"THE CINEMATOGRAPH FIEND" (Gaumont).

The accompanying engraving is from the cartoon poster made for Kleine's Gaumont subject, "The Cinematograph Fiend." The subject is full of real laughs on account of the amazing situations into which the zeal of the cameraman leads him.

CURRENT EVENTS—VITAGRAPH.

The current issue of the doings "abroad in the land" is well recorded in this month's series. The opening of the Colonial Park and playground in New York City with appropriate exercises is a commendable picture of civic advancement for the benefit of the children of the crowded parts of the city, and will prove helpful accordingly. The visit of Admiral Togo is a good series previously described. How a city may be inundated by heavy rains is an unusual scene. The opening of the municipal free baths at Coney Island is another instance of civic progress for the benefit of the people, and besides affording interesting pictures of the attractive events attending the occasion, is a record of what can be done for the good of the public. The effects of an electrical storm on the famous "coaster" at Brighton Beach shows the havoc wrought upon that structure in an exceedingly short space of time. The long swim of Rose Pitonof from New York to Coney Island, a distance of twenty-three miles, is a prolonged event, pictures taken at frequent intervals showing this intrepid sixteen-year-old girl battling with the sea, are unusual ones and very interesting, the final one showing her successful finish on the arrival at her destination full of vigor draws applause from the audience. In striking contrast to the latter picture is the arrival in New York of Atwood after successfully flying from St. Louis. The unusual illustrations of two history-making records, one in the air and one in the sea, are valuable and instructive.

The most unique picture is that of "Bobby" Leach making his famous plunge over Niagara Falls in a specially constructed barrel—"the only man who ever performed that feat." It is rather a weird sight to see this elderly man—about sixty years of age—as he forces himself within the confines of his almost coffin-like structure and is fastened in with nuts and bolts perhaps never to be seen again. After being shown in the "rapids," the camera is unusually successful in following the mere speck of black as it takes its perilous leap over the falls and is finally captured in the river below, where it is quickly opened, with Leach found alive, yet stiff, stunned and bruised; a little refreshment and "Bobby" is soon appreciating the fact that after a strange fashion he is a hero.

Calendar of Independent Releases.

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 18th, 1911.

AMERICAN—The Gun Man (Dramatic)	1000
CHAMPION—Shenandoah (Dramatic)	950
ECLAIR—Magic Music (Trick)	330
ECLAIR—When the Leaves Fall (Dramatic)	665
IMP—The Charleston Hurricane Flood (Scenic)	500
IMP—The Bicycle Bug's Dream (Comedy)	500
YANKEE—The Star Reporter (Dramatic)

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 19th, 1911.

BISON—The Sheriff's Brother (Dramatic)
POWERS—Lost in a Hotel (Comedy)
POWERS—An Old Time Nightmare (Comedy)
THANHOUSER—The Lie (Dramatic)

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 20th, 1911.

AMBROSIO—Tweedledum's Riding Boots (Comedy)
AMBROSIO—Tiny Tim as a Detective (Comedy)
CHAMPION—The Stolen Horse (Dramatic)	950
NESTOR—Across the Divide (Dramatic)
RELIANCE—The Stolen Play (Dramatic)
SOLAX—Oh, You Stenographer! (Comedy)

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 21st, 1911.

AMERICAN—The Claim Jumper (Dramatic)	1000
IMP—By Registered Mail (Dramatic)	1000
REX—The Rose and the Dagger (Dramatic)

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 22nd, 1911.

BISON—The Missionary's Gratitude (Dramatic)
LUX—Bill as an Express Messenger (Comedy)	344
LUX—The Stolen Diamond (Dramatic)
SOLAX—Nellie's Soldier (Military Dramatic)
THANHOUSER—The Honeymooners (Dramatic)
YANKEE—The Girl and the Chauffeur (Dramatic)

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 23rd, 1911.

AMBROSIO—The Mask of the Red Death (Dramatic)
AMBROSIO—The Hornet
GREAT NORTHERN—Caught in His Own Net (Dr.)
POWERS—Red Star's Honor (Dramatic)
RELIANCE—The Way of a Maid (Dramatic)
NESTOR—Mutt and Jeff and the Dog Catchers (Com.)
NESTOR—Obliging a Friend (Comedy)

MOVING PICTURES IN PROVIDENCE, R. I.

Reports From a Special Representative.

It is a curious commentary on the spirit of the times, that of Providence moving picture houses two at least have been converted into their present state from churches. The two oldest picture theaters, which still adhere to their original style of entertainment and which have never yielded to the vaudeville delusion are the Bijou and the Nickel. The latter is a well conducted show house, situated on Westminster Street, above Grace Church, and has a seating capacity of about 1,000. It is a nickel theater only in name, as there are comparatively few five cent seats in the house. It was the first moving picture theater in Providence and seems still to be the most successful. Mr. Westgate, the manager, has the right idea about running a moving picture entertainment.

"The people of Providence," said he to a representative of the Moving Picture World, "are fond of the pictures and we get a very nice class of patrons. We show three reels, averaging about two weeks in age and have a special corps of capable singers, who appear in duets, quartettes and occasionally quintettes. It is quite different from the ordinary illustrated song and is thoroughly appreciated by our patrons. Our staff of singers at present consists of Percy Cann, John Farley, Tom Giblin, Emily Blanchard and Marion Rogers. One of my singers went abroad and achieved considerable distinction on the operatic stage. That will give you an idea of the material I have on my staff."

Another straight moving picture house is the Bijou, run something on the plan of the Nickel and catering to a desirable class of patrons. The manager of this place is Mr. M. J. Reilly. Licensed pictures are run in both the houses mentioned; in fact, independent pictures are used in only one house, the Casino, which features vaudeville above the pictures. There are two other houses, where moving pictures merely help out the gaps between vaudeville, the Scenic and Bullock's. The vaudeville in the places named is neither better nor worse than the brand inflicted on patrons in New York houses. The pictures were given more care and attention than is usually bestowed upon them in houses giving the "mixed" variety of entertainment, but it was easy to detect the superior management of the picture end in the straight picture houses.

The attendance in the straight picture houses seemed much better than that in the "mixed temples," both in point of quantity and quality. As in other places I have discovered here, too, that the cheap vaudeville attracts a most undesirable class of patrons, who soon scare away the more quiet and refined people and have the place to themselves. The conduct and attention of the audience in the straight picture places was far above the conduct and attention in the other places.

The writer was told that the rules and regulations governing the exits and safety appliances, together with building ordinances, are very severe in Rhode Island. "Only a millionaire," said the writer's informant, "could possibly build a new moving picture house in Providence and comply with all the rules, ordinances, laws and regulations, that have within recent times been put on the statute books."

All the exhibitors interviewed had a kind word to say of the Moving Picture World, and told the writer that they found the columns of the paper not only interesting, but practically useful in the conduct of their business. All watch the reviews and often have special articles reprinted to hang with the pictures in the lobby.

MOTIOGRAPH MODEL 1912.

The Enterprise Optical Manufacturing Company authorizes the Moving Picture World to make the announcement that it will be ready to make deliveries of the 1912 Model Single Motiograph equipment about October 1st. Particulars will be sent to anyone requesting them. The manager of this company reports to us that the demand for the Motiograph has been on the increase since early spring of 1910, and their sales for August of 1911 were about equal with any one month in the history of their business, which covers a period of over thirteen years. This company is issuing a little booklet with illustrations entitled "The Making of the Motiograph," which they will be glad to mail free to anyone asking for same.

FOR ADVERTISEMENT SEE PAGE 847.

Calendar of Licensed Releases

CURRENT RELEASES.

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 18th, 1911.

BIOGRAPH—Dan, the Dandy (Comedy) 998
KALEM—The Ranger's Stratagem (Dramatic) 1000
LUBIN—The Senorita's Conquest (Dramatic) 1000
PATHE—The Fright (Dramatic) 754
PATHE—Fire Brigade in Moscow (Scenic) 230
SELIG—Noted Men (Topical) 180
SELIG—Lost in the Arctic (Dramatic) 880
VITAGRAPH—One Flag at Last (Military Drama) ..1000

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 19th, 1911.

EDISON—The Sailor's Love Letter (Dramatic) 1000
ESSANAY—Saved from the Torrents (Dramatic) 980
GAUMONT—Jimmie on Guard (Dramatic) 710
GAUMONT—Crossing the Alps in a Motor (Scenic) .. 285
PATHE—Pathe's Weekly No. 38 (Topical) 1000
SELIG—McKee Rankin's "49" (Dramatic).....1000
VITAGRAPH—How Millie Became an Actress (Com.)1000

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 20th, 1911.

EDISON—An Unknown Language (Comedy) 985
ECLIPSE—In Ancient Days (Dramatic) 1000
KALEM—Losing to Win (Dramatic) 1000
LUBIN—The Life Saver (Dramatic) 1000
PATHE—An Up-to-Date Squaw (Comedy) 754
PATHE—African Birds and Their Enemies (Edu.) 197
VITAGRAPH—Beyond the Law (Dramatic) 1000

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 21st, 1911.

BIOGRAPH—When Wifey Holds the Purse Strings (Comedy) 463
BIOGRAPH—A Convenient Burglar (Comedy) 534
ESSANAY—All on Account of the Porter (Comedy) ..
ESSANAY—Everybody's Troubles (Comedy) 980
LUBIN—The Human Torpedo (Comedy) 1000
MELIES—For $200.00 (Dramatic) 1000
PATHE—Starlight's Necklace (Dramatic) 951
SELIG—A Cup of Cold Water (Dramatic) 1000

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 22nd, 1911.

EDISON—The Battle of Trafalgar (Dramatic) 1000
ESSANAY—Live, Love and Believe (Mil. Dr.) 980
KALEM—The Cowboy's Bride (Dramatic) 1000
PATHE—Electric Boots (Comedy) 426
PATHE—Old Delhi and Its Ruins (Scenic) 285
PATHE—Surfing—National Sport in the Hawaiian Islands (Scenic) 285
SELIG—Shipwrecked (Dramatic) 1000
VITAGRAPH—Forgotten (Dramatic) 1000

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 23rd, 1911.

EDISON—The Big Dam (Western Dramatic) 1000
ESSANAY—An Indian's Sacrifice (W. Dr.) 980
GAUMONT—A Heart Breaker by Trade (Comedy) ... 710
GAUMONT—The Culture of Bulbous Flowers (Edu.).. 290
LUBIN—Her Inspiration (Dramatic) 1000
PATHE—Gypsy Maids (Dramatic) 900
VITAGRAPH—Over the Chafing Dish (Comedy) .....
VITAGRAPH—The Tired, Absent Minded Man (Com.)1000

ADVANCE RELEASES.

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 25th, 1911.

BIOGRAPH—The Revenue Man and the Girl (Dr.) .. 999
KALEM—Arizona Bill (Dramatic) 1000
LUBIN—The Matchmaker (Dramatic) 1000
PATHE—The Disappointed Old Maids (Comedy) 490
PATHE—Whiffles' Hard Luck Stories (Comedy) 475
SELIG—Two Orphans (1st Reel) (Dramatic) 1075
VITAGRAPH—By the Camp Fire's Flicker (Dr.)....1000

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 26th, 1911.

EDISON—Mary's Masquerade (Comedy) 1000
ESSANAY—Lost Years (Dramatic) 980
GAUMONT—A Friend of the Family (Comedy) 850
GAUMONT—The City of Bordeaux, France (Scenic) .. 175
PATHE—Pathe's Weekly No. 39 (Topical).....1000
SELIG—Two Orphans (2nd Reel) 986
VITAGRAPH—His Sister's Children (Comedy) 1000

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 27th, 1911.

EDISON—A Cure for Crime (Comedy) 1000
ECLIPSE—The Trials of a Tall Traveler (Comedy) ... 458
ECLIPSE—Manufacturing Fireworks (Industrial) 542
KALEM—Hal Chase's Home Run (Dramatic) 1000
LUBIN—A Cowboy's Love (Dramatic) 1000
PATHE—Driven from the Tribe (American Dramatic).1000
VITAGRAPH—A Western Heroine (Dramatic) 1000

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 28th, 1911.

BIOGRAPH—Her Awakening (Dramatic) 997
ESSANAY—The Power of Good (Western Drama) ... 980
LUBIN—A Counterfeit Roll (Comedy) 1000
MELIES—The Mission Waif (Dramatic) 1000
PATHE—Gypsy Honor (American Drama) 1000
SELIG—Two Orphans (3rd Reel) (Dramatic) 1090

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 29th, 1911.

EDISON—The Death of Nathan Hale (Educational) ..1000
ESSANAY—When He Died (Comedy) 980
KALEM—The Blackfoot Halfbreed (Dramatic) 1000
PATHE—The Bell Ringer of the Abbey (Fairy Tale) .. 615
PATHE—Across the Polar Seas (Scenic) 397
SELIG—John Oakhurst, Gambler (Dr.).....1000
VITAGRAPH—Ninety and Nine (Dramatic) 1000

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 30th, 1911.

EDISON—The Maiden of the Pie Faced Indians (Com.) 500
EDISON—Turning the Tables (Comedy) 500
ESSANAY—The Strike at the Little Johnny Mine (Western Drama) 980
GAUMONT—Hearts May Be Broken (Dramatic) 1015
LUBIN—A Nearsighted Chaperon (Comedy) 1000
PATHE—A Convict's Heart (American Drama) 1000
VITAGRAPH—Her Hero (Comedy) 1000

WILL SELL YERKES' EFFECTS.

Mr. Horace S. Peed, formerly connected with the Electric Theater Supply Co., of Philadelphia, has associated himself with the Yerkes Company, the well-known concern, which supplies effects to exhibitors. Mr. Peed is a capable and energetic young man and his many friends wish him unbounded success in his new connection.

BLACHE RETURNS FROM EUROPE.

Mr. Herbert Blache and wife returned to America September 12 on the "Crown Prinzessin Cecile" after a highly enjoyable and profitable sojourn in Europe.

FOR ADVERTISEMENT SEE PAGE 847.

The Hudson Guild, of New York City, has inaugurated free moving pictures as the feature of their neighborhood playground activities in Chelsea Park. The outdoor exhibitions will be continued until October.

WARNING

All persons are hereby notified that H. T. May is not a solicitor for the Moving Picture World. Do not pay money to him under any circumstances. When last heard from he was in Boston, Mass. Information as to his present address will be appreciated.

—Moving Picture World

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

OBJECTS TO CERTAIN RELIGIOUS PICTURES.

August 9, 1911.

Editor Moving Picture World:

Dear Sir—This letter is written to you as a protest from the East Broadway, West Broadway, Ideal, Baxter and Preston theaters, of the city of Louisville, in regard to two certain pictures, because of religious principles involved. Lately a picture called "The Nun" brought forth vigorous protests from thousands of people throughout the entire country, of different religious denominations, because it was considered by them sacrilegious and against the principles of Catholicism. This other is a picture which shows a young monk who was ordained to the priesthood, but later escapes from the monastery to make love to his former sweetheart, which love she rightfully rejects.

The reel "As Fate Decreed" goes still further and describes a monk who broke his vows and married. The main objectionable feature of the film, and which is utterly ridiculous, is that the monk is compelled to escape. It gives the impression to the public that he is imprisoned and barred in the monastery, which is untrue.

Such pictures involving the breaking of vows and religious principles are distasteful and insulting to people of all religions and we believe that they are made by companies either through the ignorance or prejudice of their scenario writers or stage managers. The houses mentioned above use strictly Licensed films and we write this letter for the betterment and the advancement of the motion picture business.

The writer read a short time ago the advance bulletin issued by one of the Independent concerns in which a minister of the Gospel had gone West with the intention of bringing the Christian faith to the cowboys (who are, as the film suggests, drunkards and gamblers, and utterly dispossessed of any religious principles). The minister finds the cowboys in a saloon and intends to deliver a sermon to them and convert them to the Christian faith, and to better their condition as men. Instead of succeeding he was forced to partake of liquor from a bottle, which was pressed to his lips by the cowboys, and in the end the minister becomes intoxicated and hilarious and wishes to serenade his wife, and asks the intoxicated cowboys to assist him. The bulletin stated that this was a comedy reel; but instead we believe that it is a tragedy and an insult to Christian religion and morality.

We believe that all religious subjects should be eliminated from pictures, unless they are presented with all the sacredness that is due the subject and should be strictly facts and not imaginations and fabrications.

Hoping that the manufacturers of both Licensed and Independent subjects will consider this matter more thoroughly and that the censors bar all subjects that tend to injure or insult any or all the sects of Christian religions.

Yours truly,

FRED J. DOLLE, Pres.

WANTS REAL RIDERS.

Editor Moving Picture World:

Akron, O., Aug. 14, 1911.

Dear Sir—I note in your columns that you would be grateful for just criticism on picture plays. I want to be enlightened on several matters that interest me. I witnessed a picture the other night where a young lady was impersonating a riding-bred Western girl, and such an exhibition I never witnessed in my life. The poor little Indian broke mustang, how he must have felt! The rider had the reins in her right hand and had hold of the saddle horn with her left; toes turned out like an alligator, but that was all right for her, as I suppose she yelled to the pony to commence, and is happy in her own little mind to think she came through that thrilling ride of sixty feet without a scratch; but the humiliation of the poor pony—he must have felt mighty cheap. And I would also like to know why the manufacturers persist in trying to keep actors up in front in Western pictures and, if they have any real riders, they and the ponies must be covered up.

There was a couple of real people who played a vaudeville house in our town and they were sure enough. "Real" and together with their "real" ponies, real saddles, and gorgeous attire I thought it the grandest sight I ever saw, so asked the gent why he didn't get himself a position with an M. P. concern and he laughed and replied, "They don't want any folks like us in their game; they just want to fake the people till the people won't patronize their game any more, then they will say Western pictures ain't no good." He showed me the riding game on the level till I can see now that actors only tend to make the pictures look raw.

One forenoon these folks went up to our fair grounds and we witnessed some of the most remarkable riding.

On the way home my little daughter remarked, "Those ladies in picture shows must be just learning to ride."

Now I became interested in this couple and volunteered to write to some of the manufacturing companies and I found out he was right; they don't want any "real" people in their pictures, as they all told me their company was full; but they didn't say of what.

I also wish to inform you that it doesn't matter how much wardrobe a man or woman puts on, if they are not accustomed to wearing it, they will give themselves away. I was born and raised in the heart of the great Panhandle of Texas, and I say it is a disgrace to have the reputations of the hero horseman of the greatest country on earth pulled down by the display of low down, horsemanship I see in the majority of pictures.

Now I ain't rapping any one, but this should be profitable criticism to some of the film manufacturers.

The names of the people I referred to in this letter are Madge and Buck Bailey, known to the show world as the Baileys, and they are visiting their relatives at 2724 Queen Avenue, Cleveland, O. Their outfit is sure the "real" thing. Now you can publish this, as I know the Western game from A to Z, and you can ask my opinion on any subject any time. Yours truly,

M. DEVERING,
G. D., Akron, O.

LOOK OUT FOR SHOALS AHEAD.

Editor Moving Picture World:

Dear Sir.—Your warning to the Motion Picture Exhibitors, under the title of "Exhibitors Rise to the Occasion," in the issue of August 19, 1911, is worthy of consideration by all exhibitors who have the best interest of the photoplay industry at heart, and it is only with a friendly feeling to all and animosity to none, that I again ask the exhibitors to look out for shoals ahead. And while at all times let your slogan be, "Organize," organize; don't try to form into one organization three separate factions, whose interests are only identical in so far that they all get their profits from the motion picture film.

As you all know, the manufacturers are organized in the Motion Picture Patents Company, and the Sales and Distributing Co.. You also know what a big mistake the Film Exchanges made when they formed the Film Service Association, by admitting to membership the manufacturers. When they did that their organization was doomed, and it was only a short time until the fact was exemplified that man is guided by his material interest.

The organization of manufacturers was necessary, not only to protect their own interest, but through the many minds there is, and there will be, concerted action upon ideas best suited to their line of business.

And now that the exhibitors have formed their national organization, it is the duty of all motion picture exhibitors to make application for membership in a State, or the National organization, and form locals in their home towns, as the advantages to be gained through the League are many.

Members of Pennsylvania League get anywhere from ten to twenty per cent discount on many things we purchase for our theaters, and the supply houses cater to our committees and offer inducements, knowing that as an organization we purchase in larger quantities and they can sell to our members at a lower rate, saving for them much more than the dues in the League.

The League has been instrumental in staying much of the adverse legislation. The motion picture theater pays an excessive license or tax, and receives in return nothing but contempt, and just as long as you are unorganization and depend upon individual action, you will not be deemed worthy of consideration.

With the above facts in view, and the many other evils that we have to contend with, we ask you to organize. Now, exhibitors, get together and be guided by past history, and don't make the mistake that the film exchanges did by admitting into their organization others than exchange men. Let our League be for and by the exhibitors only, and for the best interest of all concerned in the moving picture business in general.

Get your organizers out in the various States and when the time comes for the second National Convention, held at Chicago, go there, like business men. Know what you want and how to get it; you have nothing to lose and everything to gain through organization. We are, yours for united action.

Motion Picture Exhibitors League of America,
Pennsylvania State Headquarters, Pittsburgh, Pa.
233 Fifth Ave., 3rd Floor, Roberts Bldg.
Per Fred J. Herrington, President.

LIKES FOREIGN PICTURES.

Boston, Mass., Aug. 15, 1911.

Editor Moving Picture World:

Dear Sir.—Is it the intention of American motion picture manufacturers to drive all foreign films out of the market? If such is the case, it seems to me it would be a pity, as part of the present product of the American manufacturers is beneath contempt. There seems to be a regular carnival of vulgarity, both as regards dramatic and comic films.

When the motion picture business first started, I took the greatest interest in motion picture exhibitions, chiefly on account of the foreign films, which give one a fairly good idea of European life, street scenes, etc. But as the American films have increased in number, and have practically driven out the foreign product, I patronize the motion picture theater about a third or a half as much as I did, because I do not care for pictures dealing with American life, with which I am familiar, and which is lacking in picturesqueness and dramatic interest.

Another question that I should like answered. Have the Germans gone into film manufacturing? If so, why do we not see some of their films? They would be welcome for the sake of novelty and variety.

Very truly yours, JOHN CLEMENT.

(We give space to the above letter because it expresses an opinion that is shared in by many of our readers, viz., that foreign-made films are popular with a very large section of the public. This is contrary to what the exchanges will tell you and what the exhibitors repeat, parrot fashion, but it is true. Films of German manufacture have not yet had a look-in, owing to peculiar trade conditions, but beginning next month the releases of the National Distributing Company will include films from two German manufacturers. Needless to say that they are, such as we have seen, in keeping with the accepted standard of German exactitude and quality. Ed. M. P. W.).

AN OPERATOR TURNS ON THE SEARCHLIGHT.

Boston, Mass., Aug. 23, 1911.

Editor Moving Picture World:

Dear Sir—Seeing an article in the World August 5 by "J. M. B." saying that his films are in bad condition when he receives them from the exchange (naturally so because exchanges don't bother much with them except to take in the money), that his operator had twenty breaks the first time he ran Il' Trovatore and refused to run it a second time, and then ask, who is to blame for it? I say it is up to his operator to put the films in good condition before he starts his show. I have had films where sprocket holes were gone and terribly scratched; in fact it was on the "bum," so that it could not be fixed. These I have refused to run and they went back to the exchange, due to carelessness of operators (of course allowing for poor film stock).

A new film goes to a certain house for three days. The operator takes it from the can, puts it in his machine and runs it. The film is not given a particle of care from the time it arrives until it leaves that house. Then several other houses get and treat it in a like manner. After two months it is a piece of junk. Operators should be careful, as a few of us are, to look over all films, both new and old, and keep them in perfect condition. This can be done by looking them over each time after they are run when they are being rewound. That is the way I do. Now if every operator or his helper would do this and also keep a good light on their pictures and run them at proper speed we would have some classy projection.

I know of operators, and old tiers too, who should known better, but who run the films just as they come from the exchange. Every film that leaves my theater is in perfect condition. Of course I know how reels are "examined" at the exchange. Lizzie and Maggie sit and chew gum and eat candy and talk about the dance they were at the night before; if a film breaks while rewinding it is "fixed," which usually takes five minutes to each patch, and the reel is pronounced "O K." But I still insist that it is up to the operators to do their part and keep the reels in good condition, for all will benefit by doing it. Also keep their machines in good condition so that the reels of film will not get damaged while they go through more than the ordinary amount of wear, which no one can help.

I remain, truly yours, for good operating.

ABRAHAM GOLDSTEIN.

"WOMAN WITHOUT A HEART" DISLIKED.

Wichita Falls, Texas, August 24, 1911.

Editor The Moving Picture World:

Dear Sir: We desire to hand a certain manufacturer a very much deserved knock for manufacturing such a picture as the "Woman Without a Heart." This is nothing more than a scene in a house of degredation and leaves that impression on the mind of anyone witnessing the picture. I consider it an insult to decent, respectable, high-minded people to put such a cheap, vulgar suggestion of a picture on the screen and any manufacturer that makes such a picture, to our mind, doesn't deserve the patronage of the public, and we have written our Exchange not to send us another picture made by that company.

We write this letter hoping and trusting you will print same and by doing so you will be doing humanity a favor. We, who are trying to uplift the moving picture business and place it on a high standard and hold it, should rise up in arms against such trashy, low down stuff. Such pictures should be eliminated and makers put out of business.

We sincerely hope you will print this letter in The World, and we do not care if you use our name. Yours very truly,

WREN and BERRY.

Larmar Air Dome.

ANOTHER GOOD OPERATOR.

Cleveland, O., Aug. 31, 1911.

Editor Moving Picture World:

Dear Sir.—Having read an article complimenting an operator on his good work, I feel it my duty to say a few words of praise in behalf of the two operators employed at the Dreamland Theater, this city. As electrician and operator for six years, and with a traveling production at the present time, I can truthfully say that I never saw any projection equalling that to be found in this theater. I have visited this place four tiues, and will say the projection is perfect, notwithstanding that a plain screen is used, the picture is as brilliant as the more costly screens. Upon inquiring, I found that I could not see the operators, but learned their names to be D. R. Canady and Raymond Ray, each working one shift of seven hours per day. Anyone having visited this theater will verify my statement.

Very truly yours,

'Old Timer."

BACK OF THE YANKEE Trade Mark
are the combined efforts of a splendid organization of Moving Picture Experts second to none.
MONDAY
FRIDAY
SEPTEMBER 25
FOR THE WEARING OF THE GREEN
An Irish patriotic masterpiece full of stirring incidents and beautiful scenic settings.
Code Word, Green
SEPTEMBER 29
MAN
An original story, magnificently portrayed on Pope's famous lines:
"Know then thyself, presume not God to scan,
The proper study of mankind is man."
Code Word, Man
YANKEE FILM CO.
344 E. 32nd St., New York City

FOR ADVERTISEMENT SEE PAGE 847.

INQUIRIES

Correspondents are advised that no attention will be paid inquiries which do not give the name and address of the writers. For the purpose of reply, initials or noms de plume may be used.

Inquiry as to the private affairs of photoplayers will not be answered. This includes the question as to whether or not they are married.

No inquiries of a general nature will hereafter be answered by mail and only in special cases when a stamped self-addressed envelope is enclosed. Many correspondents ask the same question and we have initiated this department to save our own time and yet help out our readers when we can.

J. H. B.—An average of six weeks in obtaining decisions on your scripts is rather good. The story may have to be read by two or three persons before being passed, and the delay is favorable rather than the reverse. (2) Never send a script to more than one company at one time. Both may accept and cause you embarrassment, and possibly a market for other scripts. Experienced authors aim to keep from twenty to thirty scripts out all the time, rather than ten copies of each of three scripts.

G. W.—Charles Ogle is the Washington in the Edison "The Battle of Bunker Hill."

Ned.—Sydney Drew, who produced "The Red Devils" for Champion, is the same player who was starred two years ago in "Billy," which play, by the way, was the work of Mrs. Drew. He is not the son, but the brother, of John Drew. He has been best known of late through his work in the vaudeville theaters, and is now doing some of his sketches into photoplays. Kalem's "When Two Hearts are Wou," for instance.

B. N. C.—The Talking Pictures you see advertised are not produced with a phonograph. The dialogue is supplied by actors, who work behind the screen. Parts are not supplied, but the players improvise, so that there is no market for scripts with "full parts."

T. L. H.—Jimmie, in the Gaumont pictures, is a little French boy. His name is not on record. (2) Henry Walthall, of the Pathe company, is now with Reliance. (3) We do not know where Marion Leonard is. It is understood that she is in Paris.

D. Mc N.—Most photoplayers have qualified on the dramatic stage, but some have worked into the business through the playing of minor parts in the studio. You might get a chance as an "extra" with some company, and gradually work up, but it would be slow, uncertain work. The fact that you are a good elocutionist is no argument in your favor, for obvious reasons.

O. M. T.—The names of Mutt and Jeff, of the Nestor company, are not announced.

Geraldine.—Billy Quirk is the comedian of the Eastern Pathe company. (2) We have no idea that he would be offended if you wrote and told him how good you think he is.

D. H.—The small boy in the Edison company, is Yale Boss. Kenneth Casey is the Vitagraph boy. It is not possible to say which is the better. That is purely a matter of personal opinion. Be content with the evident fact that both are good.

O. E. S.—Maurice Costello is still with the Vitagraph, and there is no prospect of his leaving. This is one of the reports that seem to enjoy perpetual life.

J. C. G.—Emmett Campbell Hall reports a scenario sale at $100 dollars, and there are other records, but higher sums have been paid for subjects. The Edison company, for example, probably paid Mark Twain a sum in excess of $100 for the use of his "The Prince and the Pauper," and have probably paid in three figures for original scripts by Carolyn Wells, and others. The average script is seldom worth much beyond the value of the idea, since changes are almost invariably necessary.

Vera.—We do not deal in personal information, but if Adele de Garde was the daughter of Maurice Costello and Florence Turner, as you suggest, there would be some exciting scenes in certain sections of Brooklyn.

D. S. U.—It is customary to hire street cars as wanted. It is better than using scenery cars, and at the same time cheaper. A car costs from $5 to $10, according to the distance run and the time required. Railroad trains cost from $50 up.

Biff.—The Selig fire pictures were made in Los Angeles. They are actual fires, filmed by arrangement with the Department. (2) The Thanhouser company burned down an "actual house," and they did it on purpose.

L. P.—The Lubin Western pictures were made at a camp in New Jersey. The camp has been abandoned. (2) Your second question is out of order.

G. A. H.—Hobart Bosworth was the Knight in Selig's "A Knight Errant." (2) Miss Turner plays in as many Vitagraphs as she can, but they have a number of companies, and she cannot head them all. (3) Seven to ten days are required to make the average photoplay. Some styles of trick pictures may require two or three months. (4) Gene Gautier is still with the Kalem company, but she has been with the Irish section, and these pictures are just starting to come.

C. W.—The way to locate a film quickly, is to ask the exchange, since the house is probably supplied by a local concern. We know of no house using all the first-runs each day. That means five or six new reels daily.

Kidder.—See answer to D. H. The girls are Gladys Hulette and Enda May Wleck, of the Edison studio, and Adele de Garde, of the Vitagraph. The Biograph child has no name for picture purposes.

V. M.—The "loop" is just a loop of film above and below the opening in a projection machine. The film comes down off the reel with an even movement and is wound below. The loop provides play for the intermittent movement as the film is jerked past the projection opening.

Victor.—Actual Indians are not used for acting parts in Western pictures for the reasou that they lack the requisite dramatic training. There are some blood Indians in the pictures, but Frank Lanning is uot one of these. You can probably purchase his picture from the Kalem company. Helen Gardner was the favorite in "The Death of Edward III."

K. L. S.—Mary Pickford was the girl in Imp's "The Call of the Song." She is not the sister of Florence Lawrence, though she succeeded her both at the Biograph and Imp companies.

Constant Reader.—Edward Genung played the lead in the Thanhouser "Little Old New York." (2) We do not know the present address of Miss Caines, formerly with the Lubin Co., but we believe that she is still in Philadelphia, though not with a company. (3) Harry Meyers is still with the company and has worked in recent releases.

Mac.—We cannot give you the addresses of companies "that steal ideas," because we do not believe that the companies steal ideas. Now and then some dishonest employee may appropriate an idea. Usually the company pays for it.

CORRESPONDENCE

LOUISVILLE.

The next ten days promise to provide factors which will boom business. The Louisville Lodge of Elks has arranged for an aviation meet to be held this week, in which Harry Atwood and other premier birdmen of the world will perform. Of course this attraction will draw thousands of out-of-town visitors even before the 1911 Kentucky State Fair opens for a week's run at the Kentucky State Fair Grounds in Louisville. The Fair will bring tens of thousands of country visitors who constitute a highly desirable element of photoplay patronage. Both of these events are calculated to swell the gate receipts of the picture men and make the first fortnight of September a bumper trade period.

L. J. Dittmar, of the Majestic Amusement Company and promoter of the company which is handling kinemacolor colored pictures of the recent coronation in England, throughout Indiana, Ohio and Kentucky, has made arrangements for the introduction of the well-known "new process" films in Louisville. The run of kinemacolor offerings commenced last Monday, to continue for a week at the Shubert Masonic Theater in the Gateway City. Their introduction was a distinct success as the public took to the colored scenes with a vim and capacity houses were in evidence at every show, the price scale being 25 cents for the afternoon and 50 cents in the evening.

The Majestic offered a fine American Biograph bill this week, playing to excellent audiences. The two headline attractions were "The Wages of War," an emotional drama of the Civil War portraying the devotion of a sister to her wounded brother convicted as a spy, and the "Bathing Girl," a comic reel depicting the adventures of a petite young damsel on the beach chaperoned by her grouchy dad.

The successful motion picture show must be made to stand out as the scintillatingly bright spot of its neighborhood. Thousands of dollars are spent by Louisville picture men every year to provide an abundance of illumination for their houses and in this connection the Princess Amusement Company, operating the Orpheum Theater on Jefferson Street near Fourth Avenue, is mighty glad that the Orpheum is where it is. Last week, as the result of a campaign instituted by a local light and power company for better lighting in Louisville, fourteen handsome lighting standards were erected on the square in which the Orpheum is situated. Each standard contains five high-powered Tungsten bulbs and the result is that the street is made as bright as day from dusk to sunrise, considerably enhancing property values in that neighborhood and making the square one of the most prominent sections of the downtown district. The remuneration for the lighting company for its establishment of "The Great White Way" is paid proportionately by property owners and merchants along that square and the Orpheum operators say that increased business at the theater because of increased popularity of the square as a promenading district certainly justifies expenditure for better street lighting.

The Avenue Theater has but a week more to run its moving picture bill. After next week the Fourth Avenue playhouse will return to melodrama.

A moving picture theater with a seating capacity of about 500 persons, to be called "The Star," is to be erected at Seventh and Market streets in Louisville in the near future. The plans for the new structure are in the hands of architects Joseph & Joseph, but the identity of the owners is not disclosed at present. The Star will be up to date in every particular and will be fireproofed throughout. It is situated in a downtown section where the field is practically virgin, the nearest competitor being half a dozen squares away, and should make good in every way.

Miss Grace Lair, soprano prima donna at the Majestic Theater, will soon be one of the few women in Kentucky to have attained the distinction of being an aviator, or aviatress. At the coming aviation meet to be held by the Louisville Lodge of Elks, when the McCurdy-Willard bird-men will perform hair-raising stunts and also demonstrate the passenger-carrying ability of the aeroplane, Miss Lair has signed up to accompany Aviator McCurdy on one of his flights. She was one of the first of the numerous women who applied to be selected.

A. B. Arnett, of Midway, Ky., recently commenced a moving picture theater in that city, giving the first show on September 1. The Arnett pictures are being shown in the Masonic Temple in Midway and first-class accommodations are provided, from the house equipment to the quality of program offered.

The Crescent Amusement Company has started work upon its new theater in Bowling Green, Ky., which will be a twin to The Columbia, which is now under Crescent management in that city. An up-to-date structure for the show is now being erected at Main and State streets in Bowling Green and will be ready for occupancy on September 15, when an A-1 bill of the latest releases will be offered to the public in the western Kentucky town.

William J. Wise has completed plans for the erection of a handsome photoplay theater in Midway, Ky. Mr. Wise has secured the Midway Opera House for his attractions and is now equipping the auditorium with a Power's No. 6 picture machine and a service of high-class reels. The house will be started in operation as soon as possible.

The Gay Theater, in Knoxville, Tenn., has been remodeled and is now being thrown open for a winter run of five vaudeville acts and three reels of high-class motion pictures. The Gay management proposes to run four shows a day with a 10 cents admission charge for matinees and ten-twent-thirt schedules during the evening.

The managers of the Bonita Theater, in Knoxville, Tenn., are putting forth some of the best-written newspaper advertising notices that have made their appearance in Southern picture exploitation circles for many a day. The Bonita policy involves distinctly educational features along the most approved lines and succeeds in getting and holding public attention not through sensationalism or unethical announcements or lures, but through intrinsic values of the films themselves. The idea stands for all that is best in the photoplay industry, for by featuring the legitimate worth of various releases the theater manager arouses permanent interest in his offerings and in the scattering cases where such consistent and educational advertising has been noted it has certainly brought home the bacon for its users. The Bonita notices have supplanted the "Come one, come all" ballyhoo type of display ad.

J. D. CRAIN, JR.

NEW ENGLAND NOTES.

An attempt to exhibit the Johnson-Jeffries fight pictures at Music Hall, Bar Harbor, Me., has resulted in the bringing of an action against the promotors of the exhibition for a violation of the State law prohibiting the public exhibition of prize fight pictures.

J. Fred Lovett, formerly manager of the Empire and Scenic Theaters, Providence, R. I., has been chosen to manage the Casino, of the same city.

Mutt and Jeff, featured at the Franklin Opera House, Nashua, N. H., brought a good response.

The name of the Nickel Theater, at Manchester, N. H., has been changed. It is now Auditorium, under which title it opened Sept. 4.

Senator Powers, of South Boston, Mass., who is deeply interested in motion picture theaters throughout New England, has offered Major Fitzgerald, of Boston, $50,000 for the portion of the G. F. Parkman estate situated on Belleview Avenue, Newport, R. I., to be used as a site for a large motion picture theater, dance hall and restaurant.

Dante's Inferno played to such pleasing business at the Providence Opera House, Providence, R. I., the first of the week, that it was held over for the second week, Sept. 13. Prices ranged from 10c to 50c, and it was S. R. O. twice daily.

T. Delassio, of Westfield, Mass., has completed plans for his new picture theater. The house has a good location on Elm Street, and will be 200 by 30 feet.

Jacob Lourie, general manager of the large Colonial Theater, Nashua, N. H., has made arrangements to run a legitimate attraction one night each week and high-class Licensed pictures for the rest of the week.

Col. W. G. Stanton, manager of Central Square Theater, Lynn, Mass., has employed lady ushers at his theater for the coming season. An orchestra will also be added.

The Scenic Theater, Clinton, Mass., is doing good business with Independent pictures. J. A. Jasper is the proprietor.

The Library Theater, Bennington, Vt., has added a six-piece orchestra and is doing a nice business.

George Delmore, of the Old Howard and Bowdoin Square Theaters, Boston, is also owner of the Rockland Opera House, Rockland, Mass.

H. L. Strong, proprietor of Dreamland Theater, Keene, N. H., remarked to the Moving Picture World man the other day that he is finding business bigger than ever.

George Graham, formerly owner of the Palace Theater, Fall River, R. I., has sold his interests to John W. Barry, of New Bedford, Mass.

R. F. Kinder is the proprietor of the Lenox and Aceo, Bridgeport, Conn. Both are doing good business with Licensed pictures.

Lynn Theater, Lynn, Mass., opened Sept. 11, with pop vaudeville and pictures, and with Jeff Callan as local manager for A. Paul Keith.

The writer is informed by an official, that there are over 1,000 picture theater operators licensed in Massachusetts.

The Operators' Union 182, of Boston, has 200 members, and is most prosperous. There are but two houses in Boston not using Union operators.

The Gaiety Theater, Boston, will run a Sunday night concert of pop vaudeville and pictures.

Independent service seems to agree with Whitney Theater, Bennington, Vt., as the house has done better with that service than before.

Kinemacolor pictures of the coronation have done so well at Tremont Temple, Boston, that they were held for a third week.

Al. Bevin, manager of the Klein branch of the General Film Co., was married on Saturday, Sept. 2. Managers who gather at his office to see the pictures in advance, have presented Mr. and Mrs. Bevin with a handsome 130-piece dinner set.

Nat Burgess, formerly of the Old South and New Washington Theaters, Boston, has accepted a position as manager of Sheedy's Theater, Brockton, Mass. The house opened August 28.

Openings of theaters have been particularly numerous during the past few weeks. Here are some of them: Scenic, Waltham, Mass., of the William Bradstreet circuit, newly decorated and renovated, Aug. 28; Auditorium, Malden, Mass., Aug. 28; Vien's New Bedford, Mass., Aug. 21; Savoy, New Bedford, Mass., John W. Barry, manager, Lincoln, Bridgeport, Conn., C. E. Coles & Co.; Auditorium, Concord, Mass., Charles McNulty, proprietor; Congress Hall, Portland, Me., F. Earle Bishop, manager, Sept. 2; Broadway, Lawrence, Mass., Sept. 4; Majestic, Keene, N. H., C. W. Shaefem, manager, Aug. 28; Colonial, Nashua, N. H.; Thornton's, Riverpoint, Arctic, R. I., Sept. 2; Music Hall, Lewiston, Me., Sept. 4; Sterling, Ansonia, Conn., Aug. 28; Hudson Opera House, Hudson, Mass., under new management, Sept. 2; Loomer Opera House, Williamantic, Conn., J. H. Gray, manager, Aug. 24; New Cambridge, Cambridge, Mass., Sept. 4.

BOSTON.

The contention of this writer, stated on several occasions, that the Savoy Theater, on Washington Street, has always been a distinctly losing proposition, has been publicly verified. The house is on the market today, the price being asked is $20,000, and $12,000 has been refused to date. $100,000 has been sunk in the venture. The trouble with the Savoy is, that it has a poor front having no attraction for the passerby. It might be termed self-effacing.

Mr. John J. Maloney, a member of the examining and executive board of the local operators' union, has been engaged as chief operator and electrician of the Star Theater, succeeding Al. J. Reith.

Manager Joe Roth, of the Olympic Theater, reports very brisk business with W. E. Green's service.

The Jolliette Theater flopped over to the Licensed service of the General Film Co., and is getting three firstrun reels, one a week old and one commercial.

Josephine Clement, manager of B. F. Keith's house, is presenting some fine programs, a one-act play, musical numbers in very appropriate settings and costumes, camera chats and motion pictures that are carefully selected. Miss Clements maintains the highest standard of excellence in her pictures and always shows reels of unusual value.

SEATTLE.

At a dinner party of representative motion picture men held here recently, and at which John D. Williams, of Australia, was present, it was proposed that two large photoplay theaters be erected in this city. Mr. Williams reported that the plan of devoting larger theaters to pictures had worked out satisfactorily in Australia, where he has been for the past two years. Arrangements for a confereuce to be held upon the return of Mr. Williams from London in November were made at which time the details of the theater project will be worked out. At the dinner were Mr. Williams, E. Lindsay Thompson and Leon Phillips, of Sydney, Australia; Eugene Levy, proprietor of the Grand Opera House and a circuit of theaters in Seattle; Arthur S. Kane, manager of the General Film Co., and Mel Simmons, assistant manager, Seattle; P. Stephens, manager of the General Film Co., Portland, Ore.; and Alex Singelow, of the Star Theater, Everett, Wash.

Plans for a $100,000 picture theater of modern construction and equipment on Second Avenue, between Union and Pike Streets, have been completed, and the building will be pushed as rapidly as posible. The venture is being financed by John H. Clemmer, owner of the Casino and Clem theaters in Spokane, and his son, John Q. Clemmer, owner of the Dream Theater of this city. A seating capacity of 1,500 is to be provided and among the accessories will ve a pipe organ costing $10,000.

George Endert, manager of the Pacific Film Exchange, is off on his vacation, which consists of a tour of the State by automobile. He will visit the exhibitors enroute, thus combining business with pleasure.

Manager Elwell, of the Peoples Amusement Co., states that the policy of the Alaska Theater will be a daily change of three reels with a 5 cent admission.

ST. LOUIS.

A section of freshly laid concrete roof of the Olive Theater, being erected at Olive and Saharab Streets, by the E. H. Pipe Co., collapsed and injured several workmen the other day. The accident will delay the opening of the house at least a week.

Elmer H. Coudy, manager of the Aubert Airdome, became a Benedict on Sept. 2. At the close of the performance Mr. Coudy and his pianist, Miss Eunla Parmele, went to Clayton, Mo., and were quietly married by Justice Weinmeyer. The wedding had been planned for some time in October, but the couple thought to surprise their friends by getting married at once. By some means their move became known and when they appeared for the performance Sunday evening they found the house placarded with the announcement, "Here's Wishing Mr. and Mrs. Coudy a Long and Happy Life."

The moving picture contest conducted by the St. Louis Times has been concluded and the judges have decided that the "travelogue" is the most educational and the most interesting of subjects. The winner was awarded a prize of $25.

The Imanita Theater was packed to the doors last week with "Jesse James In Missouri," which has proved a great drawing card.

O. S.

PITTSBURG.

Mr. H. R. Karnes, of Huntington, W. Va., visited Pittsburg this week. He is the owner and manager of the Lyric Theater, of Huntington, which has a seating capacity of 450. Independent films from the Pittsburg Photoplay Company are used at this theater. Mr. Karnes states that Huntington is a nice town for all moving picture houses. Although it only has a population of 35,000, it has eleven theaters, and with good prospects of having two more added to the list in about a week or so.

Mr. J. J. Burns, of Ridgway, Pa., was also a visitor in this city. He states that business is very good in Ridgway. He is part owner of the Star Theater of that place, which has a seating capacity of about 180 and standing room for 80 more. It is equipped with a fireproof booth and a No. 6 Powers machine. Three reels of good run independent films from the Pittsburg Photoplay Company are used.

The Opera House, Curwensville, Pa., is now under the able management of Mr. Harry Charnas. Although a comparatively young man, he has had a wide experience in both moving picture shows and legitimate theater management. His innovations while at the head of the Pastime Theater, Altoona, Pa., and the Photoplay, Harrisburg,, Pa., brought him into the moving picture limelight. The Opera House is running independent films from the Pittsburg Photoplay Company.

Mr. J. F. Behnn, general manager of the J. Frank Hatch Film Company, during Mr. Hatch's absence with his water carnival in Illinois, reports to good business and states that few of the houses which use the Hatch service have closed for the season.

Mr. Silverman, the manager of the Liberty Film Service, states that if business comes his way in the manner it has come during the past month he wouldn't complain even if the warm weather were to continue to next year.

The Peerless Film Exchange, at 411 Ferry Street, with its paragon film service deserves praise worthy of comment. Mr. J. L. Fay is the manager.

The Homewood Airdome, located in the aristocratic portion of Pittsburg, under the able management of Mr. W. H. Priest, is continuing to play to capacity business. The Airdome is the only one of its kind in the county, being constructed of structural iron and fireproof canvas sidewalls and top. It has a seven-foot air space from the side walls to the top. A one-pin Edison machine is used and is operated by "Pete" Alderman in an able manner. The Homewood Airdome is owned and controlled by Messrs. J. J. Ballard, E. C. Elliott and W. H. Priest. Independent films are used.

Mr. J. Boyle, of the Majestic Theater, Johnstown, Pa., was in the offices of the General Film Company this week. He reports that things have been very good with him and the box office receipts are very gratifying.

Mr. Chas. E. Reamer has just returned from his pleasure trip to Atlantic City. Mrs. Reamer accompanied him on his sojourn.

The "Temptations of a Great City" film is being booked by Mr. E. B. Clark, of Dubois, Pa. This film has proved a great attraction everywhere, and it is expected that the film will be booked solid. Letters to Mr. Clark may be addressed General Delivery, Downtown P. O., Pittsburg, Pa.

With due apologies, the following poetic muse: A little ballplaying now and then is relished by the busiest men, is appropriate to describe the game between the Columbia branch of the General Film Company, at 436 Fourth Avenue, and the Calcium Light branch of the same company. The battery work of "Jim" Galvin, the University of Pittsburg star and Dave Mellontree, of the Calcium branch, would put the great battery of Marty O'Toole and Kelly to shame. Eddie Fitzpatrick made one of the most daring plays of the day. He stole third base with three men on the bases. Mr. Arthur Vostberg, the worthy film doper of the Calcium branch, caught a hard fly in deep center. The Columbia branch won to the tune of 11 to 7.

The "Silverine" Brilliant Glaze Curtain Company has installed a number of their curtains in this city and vicinity in the last week or so.

The camera men of the Selig Company spent a busy two weeks in this neighborhood. Their coming was unheralded. They originally were sent under the auspices of the United States Government to secure views of the coal mining and iron and steel industries. As everybody knows, these are the industries that made Pittsburg world famous. The Bureau of Mines was mainly responsible for their visit. When the photographers came they arranged matters with the Pittsburg Chamber of Commerce, who gained them an entrance to everything they wanted to see and as a natural result millions of people throughout the United States will see reliable pictures of this great district which is first in coal production, iron, steel, structural iron and plate glass manufacture. Also the leader in the cork industry and the pickling and preserving of fruits. Moving pictures could be more profitably used to advertise all sections than the using of expensive space in the magazines.

EDDIE WHEELER.

HARRISBURG, PA.

The Star Theater has reopened after being dark for two weeks while undergoing a general renovation and remodeling, including addition of more seats.

Sunday night, August 27, 1911, Silverman Bros., of the Photoplay, gave a special exhibition to all of the delegates of the Young Men's Hebrew Club of Pennsylvania, which is holding its annual convention in this city.

Ben Buckwalter, of the Theatorium Theater, has a force of men at work repainting and papering the interior of his theater; he is also negotiating for the adjoining building, and if he succeeds in securing the same will enlarge his theater to a seating capacity of seven hundred.

Eugene Hoffman, operator at Keith's Orpheum at Altoona, is spending his vacation with friends in this city.

Chas. Adams, chief operator and electrician for the Photoplay, has returned to Altoona, where he will resume his duties at Silverman's Pastime Theater.

The operators of Harrisburg held their final meeting Sunday last and will send their application for a charter in a few days.

As a special feature of the State Medical Society convention in this city next month, Mr. Hite has been engaged by Dr. Ellenburger to give moving pictures showing the stomach in action and showing the digestion of the food and its preparation for absorption.

Manager Miller, of the Summit, featured Uncle Tom's Cabin recently to an appreciative audience.

The Victoria featured as special release the White Caps, with lecture, and it drew exceptionally well.

MAXWELL H. HITE.

SO. BETHLEHEM, PA.

The Lehigh-Orpheum will be the name of the new theater now being erected. The house is expected to open on New Year's Day.

Arthur Blacker, the manager of the Bijou, is one of those live wire up-to-date moving picture men who is always adding improvements to the house he controls. The interior and exterior has been remodeled, and was done without closing the house.

The Pastime Theater, which has a seating capacity of 250, will in the near future annex their open air addition, adding 200 more seats. This is the only theater in town having an open air combination, and was originally designed by J. G. Bellen, the manager of the house. Nestors' Mutt and Jeff pictures are run every Monday, and have proven to be a big drawing card. Beginning Labor Day, four reels of pictures will be run instead of three, as has been the policy of this house.

The Palace, which was closed during the summer months for remodeling, was reopened on Labor Day with a record breaking crowd. The theater is worthy of comment, and the highest praise is due Albert Longo, the manager. About three years ago he entered the moving picture field, giving the public a different and better show than the rest, and today the Palace is the by-word of the picture loving public. A Powers No. 6 is used, and the projection is far superior to that of any other house in town. A five piece orchestra furnishes the music, and in every sense of the word the good work of the operator gets the pictures over the "lights."

Under the managership of A. Tocce the National Theater is doing a good business. The house has a seating capacity of 400, and the program consists of four reels of licensed films.

The Victor, which is the newest theater in town, runs five reels of Independent photoplays, and will add a five-piece orchestra and two vaudeville acts to complete the program. Herman Buraks, the manager, believes in giving the public a big show for a little money, and this is the secret of the Victor's success.

The Gem, under the management of Fred Eddinger, which was open Wednesday and Saturday during July and August, reopened on Labor Day and will run every evening during the season. Three reels of new Independent films and an illustrated song form the program.

SAMUEL CRISTOL.

INDIANAPOLIS.

Charles Olson and Benjamin Barton, who own a string of moving picture theaters, are preparing to build the most elaborate moving picture theater in this city. This will be located in North Illinois Street and will be a five-story structure, costing $50,000. The first floor will be used as a moving picture theater, while the upper floors will be devoted to offices. A film exchange operated by Olson and Barton will also be housed in the new building.

John F. Brynes, representating a picture company of Chicago, was in the city a few days ago, arranging for the taking of films of places of interest in this city. These pictures will include principal thoroughfares, principal buildings and the homes of prominent citizens.

The Urban-Smith Kinemacolor motion pictures are showing for several weeks at the Murat Theater, one of the Shubert houses, and are drawing large crowds.

H. A. Gird, W. T. Law and Dan Brown, Jr., have organized the H. A. Gird Co. in this city for the purpose of conducting moving picture theaters. The company is incorporated with an authorized capitalization of $5,000.

A moving picture theater will be established at Evansville by the Main Theatorium Co., which has been organized and incorporated with a capitalization of $4,500. Those interested in the company are Isaac Hamburg, Philip Holzman, David Ringelsky and Abe Mack.

Robert Sherman, of Rockford, Ill., will erect a $20,000 moving picture and vaudeville theater on the site of an airdome he has been operating at Princeton.

CUMMINS.

Among the Exhibitors.

Sioux City, Ia.—Harry Cassidy is looking for a desirable location for a motion picture house in Sioux City.

Memphis, Tenn.—Plans are now being prepared for a new motion picture theater, to be opened by the Majestic Amusement Company, at an early date, at South Main Street. It is said the improvement will entail an expenditure of about $10,000 and it is claimed the building, when completed, will be the handsomest of its class in the entire South.

Omaha, Neb.—The Lyric Theater has again changed owners. Chamberlain & McCarthy have sold out to a man named Hopkins, who owns a theater at Kearney.

Sioux City, Iowa.—D. E. Fyock will build a big motion picture theater at Storm Lake.

Allison, Ia.—J. W. Thompson has leased the Opera House here.

Louisville, La.—Building Inspector Tilford has been notified that the West Market Street Amusement Company, which plans to erect a $35,000 motion picture theater at Twenty-third and Market Streets, also is planning the erection of a similar theater on the north side of the Bardstown road, near Transit Avenue. It will be known as the Baxter Theater, and will cover ground 60 x 150 feet. It will seat 1,500 persons, and will cost about $20,000.

Milwaukee, Wis.—The Victoria Theater, Milwaukee's newest moving picture house, located at Winnebago and Eleventh Streets, has opened. The Victoria occupies the site of the old Schuster store, and is most centrally situated for an enterprise of this character. It is owned and will be operated by a stock company, composed of some of Milwaukee's capitalists.

Racine, Wis.—Plans and specifications have been prepared for the erection of a new theater at State and Main Streets.

Niles, Ohio.—Mgr. Jack Strafford, of the Niles Opera House, is having plans prepared for a new theater .

Belford, Ia.—Lincoln Bent, of Maryville, has been awarded the contract for the erection of the new Opera House here.

New York, N. Y.—Eberle & Demmer have prepared plans for installing an open air theater at 115th Street and Eighth Avenue.

Aurora, Neb.—Emil Schwarz and Paul Hoppen have purchased the Lyric Theater, and will manage same.

Utah, N. Y.—Superintendent of Buildings granted a permit to L. H. Chapman to remodel the first floor of the Owens Building, in Bleecker Street, for theater purposes. The entire building is now being remodeled. Plans for the theater, which is to be a picture house, were filed by the architect a few days ago. The estimate of the cost of the work in making the first floor into a theater is placed at $2,000.

Wilmington, Del.—Plans have been drawn for alterations to the St. Paul M. E. Church property, in Market Street, above Seventh, which will be converted into a moving picture theater after the St. Paul congregation moves into its new edifice.

Scranton, Pa.—The new Nickelette, known as The Grand, in the O'Malley Building, has opened, under the management of Austin O'Malley.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Henry P. Schneider is estimating on plans for a moving picture theater at No. 5517 North Fifth Street, for Hampson & Wierman.

Of all "writing-for-pay" work picture play writing is easiest. No literary style needed. Film makers pay for ideas alone. Our course tells you all about the profession and form of scenario. Complete for $1.00. Photo-Play Syndicate, Box 20, Cleveland, Ohio

ST. LOUIS CALCIUM LIGHT COMPANY
Established 187 [illegible]
Oxygen and Hydrogen Gas furnished in tanks for Stereopticon and Moving Picture Machines. All orders to any part of the United States filled promptly.
516 Elm Street, ST. LOUIS, MO., U. S. A.

DRUMMERS
Our new 32-page Catalog P of drums and traps is now ready Send for it. Lowest prices in the U. S. on high grade goods.
Jenkins Music Co., Kansas City, Mo.

FOR SALE—Moving Picture Theater, Waukesha, Wis.; 10,000 population; $20 month rent; $600, $300 down; or will rent complete, $50. One at Watertown, guaranteed $50 weekly profit. For Sale—All makes Film, $5 per reel; new Motiograph, $175; new Powers No. 6, $175; Edison, Lubin, new, $100; Model B gas outfits, $15, $20, $25; Plush Opera Chairs, $2; Light Reducers, $15; Song Sets, $1; Passion Play, $75. For Rent—Any make Film, $1 week. Will Buy—Johnson-Jeffries Film, Passion Plays, other Film, Machines, Tents.
H. DAVIS, Watertown, Wis.

Salem, Ore.—John F. Corday has sold the Grand Opera House to F. L. Watters.

Racine, Wis.—A new vaudeville theater, that will cost $70,000, will be erected at Main and State Streets.

Lincoln, Neb.—Plans have been prepared for the remodeling of the moving picture theater at 1327 O Street, to cost $10,000.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Henry P. Schneider is taking estimates on a new theater to be erected here at 5517 N. Fifth Street for Hampson & Wierman.

Wheeling, W. Va.—Mike Avis, of the Victoria moving picture theater, will enlarge the seating capacity of his house.

Columbus, Ohio.—Architect J. S. Goldsmith is preparing plans for remodeling the Krause, Butler & Benham Building, on North High Street, for a moving picture show for John Pekras.

Sunlap, Ia.—L. D. Cogswell has purchased the Opera House here.

Milwaukee, Wis.—An addition will be built to the Elite Theater at Green Bay and Auer Avenues, to cost $5,000.

Sheboygan, Wis.—The Jones-O'Brien Amusement Company has had plans prepared by W. C. Weeks, architect, for the erection of a theater.

Storm Lake, Ia.—J. M. Russell will erect a moving picture theater, at a cost of $5,000.

Pittsfield, Mo.—The Sansen Amusement Company will erect a moving picture theater in the near future.

Au Sable, Mich.—A. F. Affelt will erect a moving picture theater, to be known as the Rex.

Chattanooga, Tenn.—William S. Nell, owner of the Crescent Theater, has leased a new building, which will be remodeled, at a cost of $10,000, and will be occupied by the Crescent, October 1. Mr. Nell is the principal stockholder in the Picto Amusement Co. here and controls five other picture houses in other cities.

Wilmington, Del.—Bader & Company will start to erect the moving picture theater for the Wilmington Stores Co., where St. Paul's M. E. Church now stands, about September 1.

Albia, Ia.—The Comet Moving Picture Theater has been sold by the Comet Amusement Co., of Red Oak, to Alex Long.

Savanna, Ia.—Al Dockstader will establish a new moving picture show here.

Aiken, S. C.—Dr. T. C. Stone is interested in the movement for a new Opera House, to cost $10,000.

Newark, N. J.—F. F. Proctor has plans for a new Opera House, to be erected in Bijou Park, Market Street, Newark, N. J.

South Scranton, Pa.—A new Nickelet to seat 500, will be built by Stephen A. Smith, at 527 Prospect Avenue.

Milwaukee, Wis.—Moving picture theaters are having a boom. A new one is to be erected at North Avenue and Fourteenth Street, for Borum & Goldstein, the one at Walnut and Seventh Streets will be remodeled, at a cost of $2,000, and alterations costing $4,000, will be made to the Elite Theater, on Green Bay Avenue.

Louisville, Ky.—Opposition having developed to the erection of a motion picture theater at Second Street and Burnett Avenue, the promoters have decided to select another site on which to build.

Columbus, Ohio.—John Perkins, proprietor of the Hippodrome Moving Picture Theater, will remodel the premises at 21 North High Street, into one of the largest moving picture show places in Ohio. The name of the new theater will be Dreamland.

Wheeling, W. Va.—The Victoria Moving Picture Theater is to be enlarged to meet the requirements of greater patronage.

Louisville, Ky.—Plans have been drawn for a motion picture theater at Twenty-third and Market Streets, to cost $35,000. It will seat 2,000 people.

Taunton, Mass.—Music Hall is being remodeled and redecorated, and is to be opened as a motion picture house on Labor Day.

Sayville, N. Y.—Contractor John Van Ysseldyke now has the frame up for the new Novelty Moving Picture Theater, which is being erected by Kost & Webber, on the easterly side of Railroad Avenue. The new amusement hall will be quite a large structure, 35 x 70 feet. The interior will be lined with metal ceiling and will make an attractive little theater. The building is to be steam heated, and will be hurried to completion. It is expected that it will be in use within the next two weeks.

Memphis, Tenn.—The Majestic Amusement Co. will establish a new motion picture show at 49 S. Main Street, to cost $10,000.

Minneapolis, Minn.—H. L. Ware, 1530-32 Lake Street, will alter building into moving picture show, to cost $1,800.

Louisville, Ky.—The West Market Street Amusement Co., will erect a new theater to cost $35,000, at 23rd and Market Streets.

Aurora, Neb.—A Mr. Hopkins, of Kearney, has purchased the Lyric Theater here.

Minneapolis, Minn.—Emma C. Hagstrom, 1704 E. Lake Street, will establish moving picture theaters, to cost $1,500.

Louisville, Ky.—L. J. Dittmar is planning a large new motion picture theater to occupy the site of the Majestic Theater, in Fourth Street, near Chestnut, which will cost approximately $75,000. It will have a seating capacity of 1,500.

Pittsburg, Pa.—Arrangements have been made for the erection of a high-class moving picture theater at 634 Smithfield Street, for the Union Amusement Company, which will cost $3,500.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Henry P. Schneider, architect, is making plans for Messrs. Hampson & Wierman, for the erection of a moving picture theater, to be located at 5517 North Fifth Street.

Sheboygan, Wis.—Sheboygan is to have another elaborate picture theater erected here, which will be known to the public as the Princess Theater. It will have a seating capacity of 800, and will be under the proprietorship of Mr. Jones, manager of the Majestic Theater. This new enterprise is situated on Eighth Street, opposite the Foesti Hotel

Duluth, Minn.—Extensive improvements will be made to the Sunbeam Theater.

Racine, Wis.—The Orpheum Amusement Co., capital $32,000. The Racine Theater Co., capital $10,000; M. J. Gillen, Milton Knoblock and Frank H. Miller.

Morgan, Pa.—A new moving picture theater is being planned for this town, which will be situated in the Addis Hall, under the ownership of James Tarr.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Plans have been filed with the building inspector by the Allegheny Amusement Company, for the erection of a high-class moving picture theater.

Ida Grove, Ia.—Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Frie have purchased a moving picture show at Eldora, Ia.

Kansas City, Mo.—A moving picture show will be conducted at Charlotte and Independent Avenues.

Newark, N. J.—The Crescent Theater Co., will erect a new theater in the rear of the present building. Old theater will be remodeled as a lobby.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Extensive improvements will be made to the Chestnut Street Opera House.

Hood River, Ore.—A new Opera House will be erected here.

Birmingham, Ala.—R. D. Burnett has plans to remodel building at 19th Street and Second Avenue, for theater to cost $10,000.

Tampa, Fla.—J. G. West will erect a moving picture theater.

San Antonio, Texas.—J. M. Nix, of the Royal Theater, has purchased the Majestic Theater in Waco, from Adolphus Busch.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Messrs. J. Rose and Sons, have begun the erection of a new moving picture theater at 2716-2718 Girard Avenue, for Morris Spiers, which will cost about $15,000. Another is also being planned for this town, which will be located at 3139 Frankford Avenue, for the Allegheny Amusement Company.

Binghamton, N. Y.—Charles Savery, proprietor of a moving picture theater here, is planning to erect another, which will be located at 38-49 Clinton Street. The estimated cost of this new enterprise is in the neighborhood of $10,000.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—The Olympic Theater, formerly the Court, on Adams Street, will again reopen within a few days, and will remain under the old management of the Fourteenth Street Theater Amusement Company

Wilmington, Del.—The St. Paul's M. E. church, at Market and 7th Streets, will be converted into a moving picture theater.

Pasadena, Cal.—Dr. Rudolph Schiffman will erect a new theater on Colorado Street.

Kewanee, Wis.—A new opera house will be erected here, to be known as the Herschfieldt Opera House.

Milwaukee, Wis.—The Butterfly Theater, an absolutely fireproof playhouse, built expressly for the picture show business, has opened. It is one of the finest picture show theaters in the country. The building stands on a solid foundation of reinforced concrete. The framework is of steel, the walls, floors and roof are of re-inforced concrete, making the entire structure completely fireproof from foundation to roof. The building has a frontage of forty-five feet on Grand Avenue, between Second and Third Streets, and a depth of 150 feet, with an L in the rear, measuring 50 by 20 feet. The theater has a capacity of 1,500 people at a sitting and the seats are large and comfortable. The ventilating system completely changes the air every three minutes. The lighting will be the indirect system, by means of which not a single lamp is visible, although there are 2,000 lamps used in illuminating the house.

Daylight pictures are being used in this theater. One of the big attractions is the $10,000 pipe organ, which will be played at every performance, in addition to an orchestra of ten pieces. The theater was built, and will be personally managed, by A. L. Ries, formerly a leading theatrical manager of St. Paul.

Albany, N. Y.—P. J. Shea will establish a moving picture theater at 22 Third Street.

Princeton, Ind.—Robert Sherman is planning to build a $20,000 theater on the site of his airdome here.

Milwaukee, Wis.—Charles L. Lesser is preparing plans for a motion picture theater, to be erected by the Kosciusko Theater Company, to be erected on the north side of Lincoln Avenue, near Fifth Avenue. It will be 30 x 100 feet, and will have a seating capacity of 400. The cost of this new enterprise is estimated to be $10,000 when completed.

Albany, Wis.—Mr. Richard Thurman has purchased the lease on the Opera House here, and will continue to exhibit moving pictures.

Red Bank, N. J.—The Beach Park Amusement Company has sold its rights in Beach Park to Ira Lewisohn, who will commence the erection of a vaudeville and moving picture theater in it.

Williamsport, Md.—The Pythian Opera House here, has reopened under the management of Robert Victor, who will exhibit moving pictures and vaudeville.

South Amboy, N. J.—Joel Sickles has opened the K. of P. hall as a high-class picture theater.

Minneapolis, Minn.—A new vaudeville theater will be erected here, at Chicago Avenue and Lake Street, at a cost of $25,000.

New York, N. Y.—Plans have been prepared for a new theater, to be erected at Fifth Avenue and Cathedral Parkway, to cost $75,000.

Hastings, Pa.—Plans are being prepared for a new opera house, to be erected on Main Street, by John Siehert and J. A. Commons.

Hamilton, Ohio.—Sims & Benzing will make improvements to the Jewel Theater, to cost $7,000,

Baltimore, Md.—The Madison Amusement Co. will erect a new moving picture theater at Madison Avenue and Bloom Street, to cost $4,000.

Storm Lake, Ia.—D. E. Fyock will establish a moving picture theater here.

Milwaukee, Wis.—A $25,000 vaudeville and moving picture theater is being planned for 20th Street and Fond du Lac Avenue.

Wildwood, N. J.—W. C. Hunt has taken a lease on the Holly Beach Pier and will convert it into an elaborate picture house.

Louisville, Ky.—A permit has been granted to Mrs. Lula B. Greely, for the erection of a moving picture theater to be built at Fourth and O Streets.

Lancaster, Pa.—The Family Theater has reopened under the new management of Mr. Charles M. Howell.

Stroudsburg, Pa.—The airdome "East Stroudsburg" has opened.

Sheboygan, Wis.—The Pastime Theater has opened to the public.

Cincinnati, Ohio.—Messrs. Meis & Cohen, owners of a moving picture house at Northside, have closed a deal here for the erection of a moving picture theater on the west side of Vine Street, near Calhoun.

Darlington, Ind.—A $7,000 opera house will be erected here, to be called the Little Gem.

Bedford, Ia.—A new opera house will be erected here, to be known as the Clark Opera House.

New York City.—Arrangements have been filed for the erection of a high class moving picture theater at the northwest corner of Madison Avenue and 102d Street for J. & C. Fischer, to cost about $12,000.

New York City.—Plans have been made for the conversion of the building situated at 368 7th Avenue into a moving picture theater for Messrs. Duross & Co.

Sharon, Pa.—A new picture theater is being erected on Shenango Street.

Chicago, Ill.—An elaborate moving picture theater is being planned, to be established in the building situated on North Avenue and Fourteenth Street, for David J. Borum. It will cost when completed $17,000. Another picture house will be erected on National Avenue between Thirtieth and Thirty-first Avenues, to cost $8,000.

Des Moines, Ia.—A new theater is being planned to be built on University Avenue, between Twenty-fourth and Twenty-fifth Streets, which will exhibit moving pictures and illustrated slides and be under the management of Charles Namur.

South Bend, Ind.—Harry G. Sommers has purchased the Auditorium Theater here from the Studebaker Bros. Mfg. Co.

Newport, Wash.—C. A. Fiedler will erect an opera house here.

Columbus, Ind.—John S. Crump will erect an addition to Crump's Theater.

Omaha, Neb.—A new moving picture theater will be established at 2416-18 Lake Street, to cost $5,000.

Wilmington, Del.—Work has commenced for the erection of a high class moving picture theater, which will be situated on the old St. Paul's M. E. Church property, on Market Street, near Seventh.

Philadelphia, Penn.—Arrangements have been made for the erection of a high class picture theater, at 519 East Girard Avenue, which will occupy a space of 50 x 100 and will cost when completed about $15,000.

Houston, Tex.—The Temple Airdome, which has been closed for the past week, has again opened under new management.

Milwaukee, Wis.—R. Bruce Douglas, who is building a moving picture theater on Greenfield Avenue, to cost $8,500, has sold the building to Earl E. Cotanch and Clyde Hofferman, who will operate it when completed.

Chillicothe, Ohio.—The Apollo Moving Picture Theater has been sold by Mrs. Henry Hamm to C. A. Smith.

Key West, Fla.—John Carbonell is having plans prepared for a new theater, to cost $12,000.

Bowling Green, Ky.—The Crescent Amusement Co. has leased the building at Main and State Streets, and will remodel same for theater.

Richmond, Cal.—Local business men are forming a company for the erection of an opera house on McDonald Avenue.

Louisville, Ky.—Plans for a moving picture theater to occupy the site of the Hast building in Fourth Street, just south of Chestnut Street, are being drawn by B. Davis, architect.

Licensed Film Stories.

SELIG.

SHIPWRECKED (Sept. 22).—Annie Jackson, who is living with her uncle, Horace Gregory, an old fisherman on Val Dez Island, is injured by an automobile. John Kingdon, who happens by, takes her in his machine to the hospital. There he learns to love her, but his advances are not wanted by her uncle, for his choice for his niece's hand is Joe Runyon.

So when Annie returns to her home, and is told she has to marry Runyon, she refuses.

In the meantime, Kingdon leaves for Honolulu. The vessel is wrecked. Kingdon, cast into the sea, clings half exhausted to a spar.

By a trick of Fate, the wreck occurs on the rocks of Val Dez Island, and Annie sees the spar, rows out and succeeds in dragging it to shore, where Kingdon is recognized.

The young people declare their love for each other, but Runyon plans to get Kingdon out of his way.

The "best laid plans of mice and men gang aft agley," and so Kingdon escapes the trap laid for him, and taking Annie with him to the mainland, they get married.

THE TWO ORPHANS—1st REEL—(Sept. 25).—Diane Eleanor De Vaudrey secretly marries a man beneath her. A child is born, Louise, the blind girl. Diane's father kills her husband and forces her to marry the Count de Linieres, who remains ignorant of Louise's existence.

Louise is placed in the keeping of a peasant woman who has a child of her own—Henriette.

Eighteen years later, the peasant woman dies and the two orphans start for Paris. The day they arrive in Paris, the Marquis de Preales notices Henriette and decides to kidnap her.

Henriette rescues Marianne, an outcast, from suicide. Henriette is abducted by the Marquis.

Marianne, in order to escape from Jaques Frochard, surenders to the Gendarmes.

Louise ,left alone, starts toward the river and is saved from falling into the water by Pierre Frochard, a brother of Jaques. La Frochard, an old woman beggar, lives with her two sons. Louise now falls into their hands.

The Marquis has brought Henriette to a garden fete, given in bonor of the Chevalier. Henriette appeals to the Chevalier's bonor to save ber. In an ensuing fight De Preales is killed. They start out to search for Louise.

THE TWO ORPHANS—2d REEL—(Sept. 26).—The Count De Linieres, now Minister of Police, discovers that there is in existence secret archives containing the histories of noble families. The Countess tells the Chevalier of her early marriage and baby Louise. The Count overhears enough to make him suspicious. The Chevalier tears out the incriminating page and burns it.

The Chevalier, deeply in love with Henriette, arouses the King's displeasure by proposing to the girl. She refuses him and he renews his search for Louise.

Meantime, poor Louise, clad only in rags, is forced to sing on the snow-covered streets, by Frochard. Pierre attempts to aid Louise, but is rebuffed by Jaques.

The Countess pleads with Henriette not to marry the Chevalier. Henriette hears the voice of her blind sister in the street below, and attempts to rush to her, but is arrested. Louise is dragged away by Frochard.

THE TWO ORPHANS—3d REEL—(Sept. 28).—Henriette is exiled, but Marianne, the outcast, changes places with her.

The Chevalier's valet, Picard, has located Louise in the old tumbled down hoathouse of the Frochards. Picard carries the tidings to Henriette while the Chevalier goes to enlist the aid of the Count and soldiers.

Henriette arrives at the Frochards, and finally finds her sister, but when they attempt to leave, Jaques bars the way. Pierre has previously determined to free Louise, and now he engages Jaques in a knife fight. Jaques is beginning to best his weaker brother when the soldiers arrive and batter down the doors and the girls and Pierre are saved.

Frochard and Jaques are arrested. Pierre is rewarded and Louise is restored to her mother, the Countess. Henriette places her hands in those of the faithful Chevalier, and once more life takes on a golden hue.

ESSANAY.

LOST YEARS (Sept. 26).—John Walters, foreman of a construction gang, at work on the river front in Chicago, has occasion to reprimand one of his laborers, James Brown, for loitering at his work. A quarrel follows, in which Brown is worsted by Walters and later the laborer is heard to make threats against the life of the foreman. The next day Brown receives his check and is told that he is no longer needed. Brown and Walters are alone and Brown, still determined to carry out his threat, again attacks the foreman, but is again defeated. Walters then pleads with Brown to make up their quarrel, which the latter finally agrees to do. Walters turns to go, but slipping on a wet plank plunges head first into the river. Unable to swim Brown finds it impossible to rescue the man, and a moment later when two policemen arrive on the scene and when it is finally decided that Walters has been drowned, they arrest the laborer, charging him with murder. Walters, however, is not drowned, and has effected a landing on a rude sort of landing underneath the pier. Here he is captured by two river pirates, who, in fear that the rescued man will disclose their retreat, shanghai him to a strange port, where he is thrown on his own resources. He engages as a farm hand and falling in love with the farmer's daughter marries her, and deciding that farm life has proven more attractive than city life, he decides to spend the rest of his life in the country. In the meantime, Brown, accused of murdering the foreman, is found guilty and sentenced to a life term in the penitentiary. Forty long years pass by, when there is a visit to the prison by the board of pardons. Brown pleads for his release, but to no avail; but Walters, reading an account of the denial of the pardon of Brown for his own murder, hastens to the prison and soon obtains the release of his former asociate. Brown is then taken to Walter's home, where he is made a member of the family and given a good home for the rest of his life.

THE POWER OF GOOD (Sept. 28).—Jim Reed, an outlaw, holds up a stagecoach, but is seen by a horseman, who hastily rides to the sheriff's office and shortly after, the sheriff and posse are in pursuit. Finding the trail of the desperado they follow him through a dense woods on the mountainside before he is aware that he is being pursued. He easily eludes them and coming across a miner's hut, enters and holds up the miner's wife and daughter, while he forces them to prepare him a meal. The sheriff and the posse, in the meantime, have found his trail and tracked him to the hut, but the outlaw, threatening to kill the mother, forces the daughter to tell the sheriff and posse that the man has not appeared at their place. No sooner has the outlaw left the cabin than the daughter runs to call back the sheriff and sets them on the right path again. In a battle between the sheriff and Reed, the latter is wounded, but succeeds in again throwing the man-hunters off the scent and finally falls bleeding on the doorstep of another cabin. Here he is taken in by an old backwoodsman, who makes him swear that his wound has been caused by an accident, which Reed does. He remains with the backwoodsman until he has recovered, thanks to the care of the old man's daughter. His association with her, a woman, despite her rough beauty and culture, is pure at heart, has worked a change in his own mind. During his illness she has read to him out of her Bible and the old man's prayers at night have also stirred his conscience. One Sunday morning he is invited to go to church with them, but declines, assuring them that he will go when he is more able. After they are gone he hurriedly packs his few belongings, and leaving a note, explaining what he had been and promising to reform after he has served his time, he goes to the sheriff and gives himself up.

WHEN HE DIED (Sept. 29).—Phil Flooey, a clerk in a broker's office, is suddenly taken ill at his office and begs permission of his employer to go home for the rest of the day. The boss permits him to do so, and he leaves the office with the boys, tendering him their sympathy and hope he will feel all right the next day. When Flooey arrives home he finds that his wife has a lady caller, Mrs. Jabber. The Jabber child is with her and she and his own little girl are playing with their dolls. They are noisy, however, and when Flooey says that he wants to sleep, the little ones are told to go out doors on the steps and play. Here the children play with their dolls and one of them, who has a black veil for her doll's dress, hangs the veil on the door-knob, which makes it appear as a signal of mourning. The next morning, Flooey feeling much better, proposes a picnic, and he and the family leave the hackway to catch a car to the country. Shortly after, one of the boys, employed at Flooey's office, passes the house and sees the crepe. He immediately starts the story that Flooey has died. During the day, the office force make preparations to give Flooey a real royal send-off and in the evening, having purchased an exquisite floral piece they go to the Flooeys' home to console the bereaved widow. Upon their request to look upon the mortal remains of their departed co-worker, Mrs. Flooey is thunderstruck, but ushers them into the parlor, where her husband is asleep on the couch. But suddenly the "corpse" becomes animated and sits up in surprise, and the surprised friends, as soon as they have collected their senses beg an explanation. The little girl clears up the mystery when she explains that the crepe is her doll's dress, and the mourners' sorrow is turned to mirth.

THE STRIKE AT THE "LITTLE JONNY" MINE (Sept. 30).—Young Jim Logan, a miner at the "Little Jonny" mine, is in financial straits owing to the long illness of his wife. Other misfortunes follow when Jim learns of the discontent of other miners and their grumbling at the present wage scale they are receiving. It is finally decided to make demands to the mine owners, and Jim is chosen to appeal to the superintendent, J. C. Phillips. Phillips' answer is to tear up the communication and to kick Jim out of the office, into the arms of the enraged miners. Vowing vengeance, the whole crew throw down their tools and repair to a nearby saloon to make plans for making their employer "come through." Jim refuses to be a party to their intended violence, and going home he tells his wife of the strike. He is then visited by a committee of the strikers, who ask him to join them, but he refuses to do so. Jim then learns that his wife has received a check from Supt. Phillips to tide them over during the strike and Jim, who is confident that, while the miners are partly in the right, he must prevent them from resorting to violence, decides to watch out carefully and to warn the superintendent of his danger. After he leaves the house, his wife, struggling from her sick bed, mounts a horse and after a long ride notifies the sheriff who, with a posse, rides to the relief of the superintendent, whose life is in peril. Back at the mine a crowd has gathered and have attacked the building, determined to lynch Phillips. Logan and Phillips, inside, hold them off and finally, seeking to escape through a window, Phillips is wounded. Logan fights off the half dozen miners until a few minutes later, he is overcome just as the sheriff and posse ride up and disperse the mob. Later, when Logan again calmly asks the superintendent to grant the demands of the strikers, Phillips seats himself at his desk and writes an order granting all their demands in full.

GAUMONT.

A FRIEND OF THE FAMILY (Sept. 26).—The quarrels of married life generally arise through quite insignificant causes. The young couple whose troubles form the reason for this story, separate in consequence of jealousy, resulting from incidents of the most trivial nature.

Each rushes off at once to confide in some reliable friend, and as luck will have it, they both go to the same old gentleman. Being possessed of tact and resource, he at once devises a scheme whereby to bring the couple together as early as possible.

By exciting the curiosity of each in regard to the occupants of the rooms adjoining their respective chambers, which, by the way, are adjacent, each making for the other a room with a mysterious tenant, he brings them together under circumstances so humorous that a reconciliation is effected.

THE CITY OF BORDEAUX, FRANCE (Sept. 26).—One of the finest commercial cities of France, about 370 miles southeast of Paris. In this series we see many of the most important streets and public buildings.

The city has a most striking water front, and though the streets in the older part of the town are narrow and crooked, the streets of the newer portions are broad and well paved. Scenes: General View of St. Michel's Tower; the "Monument Des Girondins" with its Bas-Reliefs; Place Des Quinconces; the Tower.

HEARTS MAY BE BROKEN (Sept. 30).—Tired of his present surroundings, Robert Manville, artist, seeks a quaint little country village which contains many beautiful picturesque spots, and is an ideal place for a vacation.

Upon his arrival he engages a room at a pretty old fashioned dwelling, and as a diversion flirts with his landlord's pretty daughter. Therese, who falls deeply in love with him, not knowing that he has a beautiful wife of whom he is very fond.

Robert, however, soon tires of the country maiden and sends for his wife. Therese meets her at the gate, and upon learning that she is Mrs. Manville, states that she will seek her husband for her.

She finds him busily engaged in painting a picture of the old mill.

Therese calmly informs him that his wife is awaiting him at the farm, and paying little attention to the change in her attitude toward him, he joyfully hastens away and affectionately greets his wife.

From a distance Therese watches their meeting, and when they go for a row on the stream follows them to the shore.

Heartbroken because of his deceit and heartlessness, she creeps slowly into the waters, and while the boat containing the happy husband and wife drifts quietly with the current. Therese sinks to the bottom of the stream and her lonely passionate heart finds rest.

ECLIPSE.

THE TRIALS OF A TALL TRAVELER (Sept. 27).—Mr. Long has his own private little troubles in finding a room large enough to accommodate him. He first makes application for a room at the Mermaid Hotel, and finding that the hostelry is full, attempts to force them into making a place for him.

After his ejection he tries the Royal Hotel, where he gets a room, which is so low that he forces his head through the ceiling, much to the astonishment of the occupants of the room above.

His next attempt is at the Green Crab Inn, where he is installed in the attic, where the bed is much too short for a man of his height. He falls asleep at last, but an involuntary movement causes his feet to go through the partition.

Ejected again, he sleeps on a street seat, but is interrupted by the police, who arrest him. The next morning in his cell the traveler comes to the conclusion that he has found the best hotel of all when breakfast is served to him by the polite officers.

MANUFACTURING FIREWORKS (Sept. 27).—Making Shells:The case mold—turning and joining. Filling shells with smaller shells and stars. Fixing fuses and lifting charge. Firing a huge shell—Mortar drawn by team of four horses. Weighting mortar with sandbags. Hoisting the shell into mortar. Firing. The Result—Midnight, stars and golden rain of fire. Making rockets. Filling and firing rockets. Wonderful display. Preparing Living Fireworks and Night Effects. Human figures outlined with points of fire. A novel boxing match, figures invisible, only firework outlines remain; humorous. Making set pieces on trellis and lattice work; expert and dexterous. Night scenes. Final display. Coronation flower bouquets. Fascinating exhibition of shells, bombs, rockets and fire showers.

KALEM.

ARIZONA BILL (Sept. 25).—Arizona Bill, a cowboy on the Bar 3 ranch, is paid off and discharged. Mounting his horse, he rides to town. Black Dog, a worthless Indian, passing through the ranch riding a crowbait pony, exchanges for one of the ranch horses. Riding off, he takes his way toward town. Passing Arizona Bill's house he sees Bill's handsome horse tied outside and concludes he will make another exchange. Shortly after the departure of the Indian from the ranch one of the cowboys discovers the loss of his horse and rides in pursuit. Reaching Bill's home he finds the horse tied outside and accuses Bill of stealing it. While this is going on Nancy, the rancher's daughter, has ridden off to the far section of the range to inform her father of the theft of the horse. The father, accompanied by a number of the cowboys, starts after the thief.

Bill succeeds in getting away from his captor and rides for the hills, but is pursued by Steve, who eventually gets the drop on him and compels him to walk in front of his horse toward town. In the meantime Bill's wife sees the Indian thief and recognizes her husband's horse. At the point of a gun she effects a capture and rides in with the Indian just in time to rescue Bill from an extremely serious situation.

HAL CHASE'S HOME RUN (Sept. 27).—Grace is somewhat disgusted with her sweetheart, Tom, because he is such an ardent "fan" and seems to give more attention to baseball than he does to her. Tom induces Grace to attend the game and she becomes as enthusiastic as he.

The home team slumps and the fans are quite disheartened. To clear things up Tom asks Grace to marry him, but she replies she will not give her consent unless the home team wins the pennant. Quite discouraged, Tom calls on his friend, Hal Chase. Hal says the team can win out if they capture a decisive game to be played that day, and he assures Tom he will try his best to bring home the victory. At the game Tom and Grace are quite despondent when the game stands 2 to 0 in favor of the enemy in the last inning. With two men on bases, Hal Chase knocks a home run and excitement reigns supreme. The home team has now won the pennant and Tom has won his bride. When he calls to present Grace with the ring Hal drops in on them and is heartily congratulated by the grateful fans.

THE BLACKFOOT HALFBREED (Sept. 29).—Colonel Baker, in charge of a regiment stationed at Fort Nelson, near the Blackfoot Indian Reservation, marries Goffersocks, a full blooded Blackfoot Indian. The fruit of their union, a beautiful daughter, Maude, is sent East to be educated.

Our story opens with a letter from Maude to her father, advising him of her intention to return home. On Maude's return to the fort her Blackfoot mother begs her to visit the Indians. While occupying her mother's tepee, Big Chief, the chief of the tribe, covets the handsome halfbreed. Maude, finding Indian life unbearable, returns to her father. Captain Tingley, next in command to Colonel Baker at the fort, has long been an admirer of Maude, and their engagement is finally announced. Maude's return to the fort angers the Blackfoot chief, and she is urged to return to her mother's wigwam to prevent hostilities. On arriving at the Indian village, Goffersocks plans to marry her to Big Chief. Fawn, an Indian girl friend of Maude's, goes to the fort with news of Maude's situation, and asks for aid. Captain Tingley, at the head of a party of soldiers, effects a rescue and Maude renounces her tribe.

LUBIN.

THE MATCHMAKER (Sept. 25).—Evelyn Bruce, a finely educated girl, whose mother was in reduced circumstances, secured a position as governess in the home of the wealthy Mrs. Satterlee. This wealthy lady had arranged a match for her daughter, Helen, with Sir Henry Osborne, but Helen was in love with her mother's gardener, Thomas Gordon. She used to run away while Sir Henry was at her home and meet Gordon clandestinely. It didn't look very good for mother's plans. Of course, mother didn't introduce her son to a mere governess, but Harold managed that anyway and when he did, he fell in love with her, while Evelyn did the same with Harold, and it wasn't very long until they were engaged.

Helen discovered them one day at a secret meeting and promptly told her mother that Harold was throwing himself away on a mere governess. Mother, being a good general, immediately discharged the governess. Then Helen got a dose of her own medicine, for Sir Henry found her in a very loving scene with the gardener. Sir Henry wasn't a bit jealous and promptly offered himself as an ally to the young people and a few days later Helen and the gardner eloped, leaving ambitious Mrs. Satterlee literally "flabbergasted." Then the good Sir Henry discovered the affair between Harold and Evelyn and managed to bring that to a successful culmination. The joke was certainly on Mrs. Satterlee. It's a delightful and lively love comedy.

A COWBOY'S LOVE (Sept. 27).—It all started when an automobile carrying Cleo Graham and her fiance, Herbert Fitzroy, broke down in the West. Handsome Bud Marsdon, a cowboy, hitched his horse to the machine and pulled it to a hotel, indignantly refusing Fitzroy's offer to pay for the service.

The next evening the cowboys held a dance and it must be admitted that Fitzroy had grounds for jealousy because Cleo danced nearly all the time with Bud.

Fitzroy and a "sorehead" cowboy named Dan, plotted to get Bud into trouble. In a preliminary gun fight Bud got the better of Dan. Then the latter wrote a note signing Cleo's name and asking Bud to meet her at the "Forks." When Bud arrived there he was held up by four masked men. They took his saddle on which his name was stamped, placed it on a horse that they had stolen and turned the animal loose. A little while later they released Bud, after putting into his pocket a face mask.

The alarm was soon spread and the sheriff set out to find the horse thief. Of course, when the animal was discovered with Bud's saddle there seemed no doubt as to who had stolen it, and when Bud was found with the mask in his pocket, assurance was made doubly sure. He was arrested. Shortly after that the jail was broken into by a mob and Bud was taken out to be lynched.

Meanwhile Dan and one of his pals quarreled over the money that Fitzroy had given tehm and Dan shot his pal. Cleo passed in an automobile, found the wounded man, and he told her the whole story. Cleo rushed with all speed to the jail and from there followed the mob, arriving just in time to save Bud.

A COUNTERFEIT ROLL (Sept. 28).—Albert and Ethel are their names, and it happened one day that they left their respective clubs, forgetting their respective purses, and it happened also that they went for lunch to the same restaurant and happened to sit at the same table. When it came time to pay for their respective lunches they discovered that they had forgotten their respective purses. Each tried to explain to the proprietor, but he had been "stung" by that little story before, and he turned them over to the police.

The scene now shifts to a saloon where Bob, a half-witted fellow, found a roll of greenbacks. He immediately decided to celebrate, but when he offered one of the bills to the bartender, that functionary declared it a counterfeit and handed poor Bob over to the police. Albert, Ethel and Bob were brought up for trial in the same batch and Bob, hearing that they had no money, offered his roll in payment of the restaurateur's claim, for which they thanked him, and were released.

A short time later the restaurant man discovered that he had been "done" again, this time with counterfeit money. The police went scurrying to find the two supposed crooks. They found Ethel in the act of buying a railroad ticket and just as they took her into custody, Albert arrived prepared for travel. Both were taken back to the station house. Bob was also there and explained how he had found the roll. Albert and Ethel called up their clubs and then everything was adjusted.

THE NEARSIGHTED CHAPERON (Sept. 30).—Although Kingston Howard and Virginia Remington had been sweethearts a long time, Virginia's aunt considered it her duty always to be in the room throughout the young man's calls. One evening they decided to get ahead of her, and accordingly stole out of the drawing room into the library, but they could not shake aunty. She soon discovered their absence and followed.

Then Kingston had an idea. Right under aunty's eyes he wrote a message on his cuff telling Virginia to have her maid dress in one of her evening gowns and James, the butler, slip on a full dress suit. Aunty was near-sighted and would take the two servants for them. This was soon done and James and the maid took the places of Kingston and Virginia in the library, while the two sweethearts found a cozy nook in the conservatory.

There is a whole lot of comedy when Aunty finally addressed the supposed lovers on the subject of the lateness of the hour. Poor James was almost at his wits' end and finally attracted Kingston's attention by throwing one of his slippers across the court. The lovers then quickly resumed their former position in the library and a moment later Kingston bade Aunty and Virginia good night.

EDISON.

MARY'S MASQUERADE (Sept. 26).—Mrs. Van Court, who is giving a dinner party, receives word at the last minute of the twelfth hour that one of her guests is unable to attend. She is very much disappointed, but as her niece, Mary, is due on the same day of the dinner party from boarding school, she has Mary substitute in place of the missing guest.

Mary, although quite a young girl, looks real cute in her long dress with its train, and is behaving like a full grown person. As Mary has not quite fully learned to manage her dress, she stumbles quite a number of times. Mr. Randolph, the guest of honor, is attracted by Mary's girlish ways, which she occasionally lapses into, and when Mary begins to dance with Mr. Randolph, she breaks down completely, and rushes outside. Randolph, in searching for her, discovers a photograph bearing her autograph as Mrs. Van Court's niece, and the secret is out. He finally finds her in the summer house, where he manages to dry her tears, and also produces a smile. It is needless to say that within a few years, she will, no doubt, change her name to Mrs. Randolph.

A CURE FOR CRIME (Sept. 27).—Bill Crook, a sneak thief, enters Doctor Livingston's home and is caught in the act of helping himself to what doesn't belong to him. The distinguished surgeon in a humorous way gives the thief the alternative of arrest or submitting to an operation on his skull. The thief chooses the latter and is led by the doctor and his colleagues into the operating room, where they place him under the influence of ether, after which they bandage his head. When he awakens he is made to believe that his bump of acquisitiveness has been removed, thereby making it impossible for him to commit crime. Moreover he is warned that the removal of the bandages under a month means instant death. Bill Crook now goes forth under the impression that he cannot commit crime. Although he has several interesting and amusing encounters with temptation, he pursues honesty to the bitter end and begins to think that there are exceptions to the rule that "honesty is the best policy." At the end of the four weeks, however, he meets Doctor Livingston, who removes his bandages and pronounces him cured, after which he rewards him for an act of bravery and secures a permanent position for Bill, who is crooked no longer.

THE DEATH OF NATHAN HALE (Sept. 29).—Captain Nathan Hale receives orders from General Washington to join General Putnam in the defense of Long Island. On his way he stops to visit his sweetheart, where he finds his rival, Dalton, who has just proposed to and been rejected by Dorothy. Dalton, seeing that Hale is the favored suitor, resolves to be a soldier also, and promptly enlists with the British.

Hale proceeds to Long Island, where he and his command fight bravely to prevent the British advance, but Howe and Clinton hurl such an overwhelming force against the little army that they are obliged to take shelter in the forts. General Washington, seeing the impossibility of holding these, orders a retreat to New York. Leaving their camp fires burning, they silently steal out and under cover of a heavy fog, board the waiting boats and cross to New York. When Howe moves forward to the attack the next day, he finds nothing but a deserted camp. Washington, being anxious to learn the movements of the British, Hale volunteers to obtain the information and disguised as a schoolmaster, he makes his way to the British camp. Here he is recognized by Dalton, who at once reports that Hale is a spy. Hale is arrested and searched and, plans of the British position being found in his possession, he is condemned to be hanged as a spy.

He is thrown into a temporary prison to await execution. He is not permitted to write to his mother or his sweetheart, even the consolation of the church being denied him. But his sweetheart manages to slip by the guards and bid him a tearful farewell before she is roughly torn from his embrace.

The next day Hale is led out and executed as a spy. As he speaks his last words, "I only regret that I have but one life to lose for my country," the scene dissolves into the statue of Nathan Hale in City Hall Park, New York City, the transformation to the everyday activity of a great city being a startling one.

THE MAIDEN OF THE PIE-FACED INDIANS (Sept. 30).—This travesty begins with an encampment of Indians eating their daily luncheon of Boston beans and custard pie. The sunshine of this particular camp is Ha-Ha-Minnie, the chief's daughter, who has a marked fondness for pie. One day she strays from camp to a mountain stream joyously eating a pie, when she encounters a fierce Mexican. Her screams for help quickly bring little Fauntleroy, the big cowboy, to her rescue and instanter she falls in love with her preserver for his bravery. The Mexican, seeking revenge, imparts a pack of lies about Fauntleroy to her father, the chief, who commands her to marry a red man. This statement brings two Indians, who are rivals, into a warm dispute, which they settle with boxing gloves. The winner presents himself to her only to be rejected point blank. The chief, now thoroughly aroused, declares war against Fauntleroy and together with his braves they pursue and capture him. He is brought back to camp and tortured in a most ridiculous manner.

Ha-Ha-Minnie openly and boldly declares her undying love for Fauntleroy. This throws her father into a terrible rage and he orders her under guard to the wigwam, from which she escapes to a ranch, where she tells of Fauntleroy's capture. The cowboys quickly leap into their mounts and make for the camp with lightning speed. All the Indians but one bite the dust. The survivor, strange to say, happens to be the rejected lover, who follows, kidnaps the beautiful Indian maiden, and dragging her to a railroad, binds her secnrely across the track to meet her fate. But brave Fauntleroy once more arrives in the nick of time, snatching her from the very jaws of death just as the train thunders by and ever after they live in peace and happiness.

TURNING THE TABLES (Sept. 30).—A mild mannered man is John, the second husband of Martha, a domineering shrew, who makes his life miserable by nagging and constantly pointing out the good traits of her first husband, lost at sea, wishing he could return to her. John determines to cure her by inducing a sailor friend of his to impersonate Martha's first husband and abuse her to such an extent that she will never mention his name again. Things do not work out quite so smoothly as John had planned. The friend who impersonates her first husband does it so remarkably well that it attracts the police and by a most laughable mistake Martha is dragged to jail charged with disorderly conduct.

John then sets about to secure her release and finds that although she was arrested by mistake, it has served the double purpose of completely taming her and allowing him to be master of his house.

VITAGRAPH.

THE CHILD CRUSOES (Sept. 13th).—Jack, a little orphan, is anxious to become a sailor, and although Captain Rhines refuses to take him aboard his ship, manages to sneak in as a stowaway. When out to sea a few days, he is discovered, and is about to be disciplined, when the captain's daughter, May, intercedes.

A terrific storm strikes them, and the ship is dashed to pieces. The captain, with the assistance of Jack, builds a little raft, and with little May, they set out for an island which they can hardly discern, as it is so many miles away. After drifting for many hours, they at last reach the island, which is inhabited by a savage tribe. The captain, making his way over a rock-bound coast, misses his footing and is dashed to pieces. Little Jack and May are now left alone, and together they succeed in building a crude shelter.

A fire is started for cooking purposes, and the smoke attracts the attention of the savage inhabitants of the island. Jack, seizing his rifle, manages to shoot the foremost one. The report of Jack's rifle is heard by an officer of an American man-of-war, who happens to be on the island, and he, together with his men, go to the rescue of the little tots. It is not long before they are on their homeward journey. (This subject, which was announced for release on September 20th, has been changed to Wednesday, September 13th, and the publication of the synopsis was delayed on that account.)

..BY THE CAMP FIRE'S FLICKER (Sept. 25).—Madge, a young artist, is in love with a military officer. Suddenly he is called away to the Philippines, where he is shot. He lies upon the battle field, half dead, but he has enough strength left to crawl to a nearby stream. There he is found by Anita, the Spanish girl, who is also very much in love with him. She notifies the ambulance corps, who carry him to the hospital tent, where Anita nurses him.

Madge, who has now become a red-cross nurse, goes to the Philippines, and fate has her stationed at the very hospital at which her affianced husband is convalescing. There is hatred between the two girls, as each one claims that he belongs to her. So Madge leaves a note in the hands of Anita, with instructions to give it to him, saying that she has gone to another part of the island, and trusts that he will be happy with his new-found love.

Anita does not deliver the message, and in a jealous rage, leads the Philippinos to Maxwell's camp, where he is attacked. Anita is killed in the midst of a battle, having thrown herself on Maxwell's neck, thereby being killed by the bullet which was ostensibly meant for him.

After the battle Maxwell is sitting alone in front of his camp, thinking of Madge, when Madge, who has heard from him before, appears in her red-cross uniform. A happy reconciliation is the result.

HIS SISTER'S CHILDREN (Sept. 26).—Harry Burton's sister and her husband are suddenly called away for a few days on business and telegraph him to come to their home and take care of their two little boys, "Toddie and Budge." He at once complies, and is soon with the children, assuming his duties as "governor."

Helen Manton, stopping in the same town, thinks a great deal of Harry Burton, and naturally he of her. This is quite noticeable in the first scene, when Harry arrives at his sister's home, where Miss Manton is waiting to receive him, in behalf of his sister. He gets a lively handling from the two boys, and before he gets through they manage to get him "in wrong" with his sweetheart, Helen Manton, when he arranges to send her a box of flowers, and they transfer the flowers from the box to the waste basket and replace them with their "mangy" doll, which Harry sends to Miss Manton, supposing that the box contains the bouquet. When Helen receives the box and beholds the contents, she is insulted, and sends him a note to that effect.

The next day Harry goes to her hotel to apologize and ask her to come to his sister's house to assist in caring for one of the children, who has been taken sick. She hesitates, but finally consents to go. Under her kind services the sick child is quieted when she kisses and comforts him. The little fellow insists upon Helen kissing Uncle Harry, whom he thinks everybody should love as he loves him. Harry and Helen are surprised at this request, and somewhat embarrassed, but, to humor the child, they are not unwilling subjects of his whim. The doctor and little "Budge" tiptoe from the room, "Toddie" falls in a peaceful sleep, while the two lovers stand contentedly alone in each other's embrace.

A WESTERN HEROINE (Sept. 27).—Louis Ransome intrusts some silver and a large sum of money to his foreman, Roger Peters, to take to his partner, Ralph Howell, in a neighboring town. Lopez, a Mexican, working in the mine, overhears the instructions given to Roger, and with the help of two companions, Ford and Jenkins, he resolves to waylay and rob Roger. They follow him by a cross-cut and shoot at him. Roger dashes on, but one of the shots hits him; finding himself wounded, he resolves to take refuge in his own home, where his niece, Sue, keeps house for him. He eludes his pursuers for a time and reaches home, only to die of his wound. He gives the money and the silver intrusted to him to Sue, and with his dying breath makes her promise, if possible, to deliver it safely to Howell. She hears the others, who have again got on Roger's trail, coming; she bars the door and window and goes to the attic.

Lopez and his companions arrive. Seeing there is no back door to the house and only the attic window, they turn their attention to the front of the house and proceed to break down the door. Meanwhile Sue, taking a rope, escapes out of the attic window, and, mounting Roger's horse, dashes off for town.

Breaking in the door and searching in the attic, Ford and Jenkins see her riding off in the distance. They pursue her, but after a desperate chase, Sue reaches the town. The people turn out to drive off the robbers and Sue fulfills her trust by placing the silver and the money in the hands of Ralph Howell, who discloses his love for her, to which she is a submissive listener.

THE NINETY AND NINE (Sept. 29).—Asa West is a wild sort of a fellow, and is driven from home by his father for disobedience. After a long time of absence, Asa secures a position on a farm, and soon gains the respect of his employer.

Mr. West takes his wife and daughters on a motoring trip through the country. Their machine breaks down, and while the chauffeur is repairing the car, Mr. and Mrs. West take a walk down the road, and the two daughters wander off in the opposite direction.

Asa emerges from the woods he has been working in, and when walking home on the road, meets his sisters. They are very pleased to see him, and take him back to the car, where they meet their parents. When Mr. West's eyes meet the statue of his son, he at once embraces him and once more the family is united.

HER HERO (Sept. 30).—Mr. and Mrs. Brown are a newly wedded couple old enough to know better. Mrs. Brown is somewhat nervous and constantly in fear of the unexpected happening. She is particularly solicitous about house breakers and burglars, and when she communicates her fears to Mr. B., he assumes an air of bravado and "tut-tuts" at her anxieties, declaring that while he is near she has naught to fear. His better half looks up to him as her brave hero, and he basks in the limelight of her admiration, telling her of the many wonderful deeds of heroism and daring which he has performed upon the plains as a cowboy, and defender of the helpless. So vividly does he describe these "Munchaussen" fairy tales that she sees, in her mind's eye, each one distinctly enacted before her, and to add to their seeming reality, the audience has a view of the same performances.

Thoroughly pacified, Mrs. B. retires for the night, Mr. Brown locking all the doors and windows before he follows her. During the night, Mrs. Brown hears a grating noise. She awakens her husband, and tells him that there is someone breaking in the house. Mr. Brown, thinking it only an offspring of her imagination and nervousness, sallies bravely forth, pistol in hand, to meet the intruder. Imagine his surprise when he really meets an actual burglar. Brown goes all to pieces, shakes like an aspen, and is unable to control himself, crying lustily for help. Mrs. Brown rushes to the assistance of her husband, seizes the revolver and fires point-blank at the retreating burglar. During all this, in the excitemnet of the moment, she is unable to realize what she has done, and falls upon her husband's agitated bosom, where she reposes contentedly and happily, while Brown, with much bluster, takes all the glory to himself, convincing his trusting wife that his intrepid courage has scared away the thief.

MELIES.

THE MISSION WAIF (Sept. 28).—In the days when Indian uprisings in the West were common, there took place a massacre near an old California Mission, in which all were killed save a tiny girl, who slept safely in her dead mother's arms. Mission Fathers, on their way to vespers, heard the child's cries, rescued it and adopted it. For seventeen years she waited upon the aged fathers faithfully, at the end of which period, a tragedy occurred that broadened her life considerably.

Captain Courtesy, a bandit, had held up some cowboys, who when free, gathered a posse and followed him. The captain held them all at bay, and by a clever ruse, escaped and sought refuge in the Mission. The Mission fathers received him graciously, and the girl admiringly. He hid his identity, and soon became a favorite at the Mission, especially with Mary, the one-time waif. It was her first love.

One day, while walking, Mary read a sign, offering a reward for the person dead or alive, of Captain Courtesy, distinguishable by a cresent-shaped scar on his forehead. She took no notice at the time, but upon arriving at the Mission, Courtsey declared his love to the girl, and she, in response, placed her hands upon his head to imprint a kiss. Her fingers slightly disarranged the hair, and there was exposed to view the crescent-shaped scar. The truth of the situation came to her and she ordered Courtsey from the room, but by no means dispelling the affection from her heart.

Scene from "The Mission Waif" (Melies).

Courtsey had not proceeded far when he discovered another and still greater Indian uprising than had caused the extermination of Mary's family. His first thought was of the Mission and the girl it harbored. He reached the old structure just in time to warn Mary and the fathers, who escaped into an underground passage. Courtsey remained to defend the Mission. From the subterranean passage Mary gained access to a camp of cowboys and called them to action. After a fierce conflict, the Indians were put to rout. Mary and the fathers emerge from the cellar and begin the search for Courtsey. He had been killed defending the girl he loved.

PATHE.

DISAPPOINTED OLD MAIDS (Sept. 25).—Two fieldian manner. He, being a gentleman, paid them in a little village, side by side, and spend their time in casting their eyes over the horizon, to see whom they may devour. The fact that the village is small accounts for the charming ladies having lived thus long in single blessedness. One day a youth of exceeding beauty arrived in the village and set all the ladies by the ears. The two old maids were particularly delighted by his Chesterfieldian manner. He, being a gentleman, paid them much attention, as was his wont with all ladies. They, being old maids, took it too seriously, and finally, after much tittering, arranged to compose two notes, bidding him meet them at the fountain,—which he did, but with his fiancée on his arm, to the disappointment of the old ladies.

WHIFFLES' HARD LUCK STORIES (Sept. 25).—Whiffles, being in straightened circumstances, decides to raise a little money. Just how he does it, forms a film that is guaranteed to raise the risibility of every spectator.

DRIVEN FROM THE TRIBE (Sept. 27).—A very little boy makes his escape from the massacre, and having been captured by the Indians, is allowed to live and grow up with the redmen. Years pass and little Richard is now a full-grown man and wins the love of the belle of the tribe, much to the jealousy of the chief's son. Finally, the chief dies, and his son is made chief and the pale faced Indian makes his escape from the tribe with his dusky bride. Their thrilling race for life across the arid desert form a thrilling picture, which one wants to see.

GYPSY HONOR (Sept. 28).—A gypsy girl, who is selling flowers, is seen by the mayor of the town where the gypsies are in camp. He immediately takes a fancy to the girl, and calls at the encampment to see how they are situated. In the course of his visit, he displays a fat wallet, which proves too much for the cupidity of two men of the tribe,

TRADE MARK

EDISON FILMS

TRADE MARK

Tuesday, September 26th 1911

Mary's Masquerade

CAST.

Mary.....Mabel Trunnelle
Her Uncle.....Harold M. Shaw
Her Aunt.....Miriam Nesbitt
The Young Man at the Dinner Party
Sydney Booth

Light comedy, showing how Mary, a schoolgirl, posed as a society woman in order to prevent having thirteen at the dinner table. The consequences were a little unexpected.

Wednesday, September 27th, 1911

A Cure for Crime

CAST.

Dr. John Morgan, a Distinguished Surgeon.....Charles Ogle
His Friend.....Robert Brower
The Vagrant.....Edward O'Connor
Dr. Morgan's Little Boy.....Yale Boss

This is a comedy showing the power of mental suggestion. A vagrant becomes good because he is made to believe that it is impossible for him to do wrong. An unusual plot.

Friday, September 29th, 1911

The Death of Nathan Hale

(United States History Series, No. 5.)

CAST.

Nathan Hale.....Harold M. Shaw
Dalton, a British Soldier.....Marc McDermott
Nathan Hale's Affianced.....Marie Tener
George Washington.....Charles Ogle
Israel Putnam.....Robert Brower

Telling the story of the Battle of Long Island, with Washington's masterly retreat, and Nathan Hale's attempt to do his country a service, resulting in his execution as a spy. At the close the scene dissolves into the statue of Nathan Hale in City Hall Park, New York City.

Saturday, September 30th, 1911

Maiden of the Piefaced Indians

(On reel with "Turning the Tables.")

CAST.

The Maiden.....Rolinda Bainbridge
A Cowboy Hero.....John R. Cumpson
A Villainous Mexican.....Charles M. Seay
The Indian Chief.....Robert Brower

A Western burlesque, showing all the familiar types in ridiculous situations. Full of laughs from start to finish.

SCENE FROM
"THE DEATH OF NATHAN HALE"

Saturday, September 30th, 1911

Turning the Tables

(On reel with "Maiden of the Piefaced Indians.")

CAST.

A Henpecked Husband.....Edward Boulden
His Wife.....Lorette Wells
His Sailor Friend.....George Nichols
A Policeman.....Edward O'Connor

Broad comedy, telling how a henpecked husband turned the tables on his wife by making her believe that her first husband had come back.

THOMAS A. EDISON, Inc. 72 Lakeside Ave., Orange, N. J.

THE WISE EXHIBITOR BELIEVES IN GOOD ADVERTISING

and from the number of orders that have come in from all parts of the country there seems to be plenty of wise ones. Every mail brings a great many orders which go to swell the list of live exhibitors, and from present indications this system seems bound to become

THE UNIVERSAL SYSTEM

We sell you the frame for ten dollars and furnish you with a poster for each and every film released. Each poster consists of a half-tone cut showing an actual scene taken from the film, together with the name of the subject and a complete synopsis of the story. The posters are printed on one hundred pound enameled paper and are lithographed in from three to six colors. For this high-class poster service we make a charge of

ONLY—TWO—DOLLARS—PER—WEEK

Exhibitors Advertising Company

Suite 604-605-606, 117 North Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

NEW YORK ADDRESS

Room 815, 145 West 45th Street, New York

who afterward attack him and throw him over a cliff, after having relieved him of his pocketbook. The gypsy girl, fearing just such a dénouement, has fled, and sees the dastardly act, and brings about the rescue of the man and the final arrest of the culprits. The final scene shows the gypsy as the adopted daughter of the mayor.

THE BELL-RINGER OF THE ABBEY (Sept. 29).—A beautiful legend of old Brittany, tells the story of an aged bell-ringer, who finds ,one dark night, the bells of the abbey refuse to ring, and the devil appears before him. The bell-ringer, terrified, runs to the mayor, who tells him if his bells do not ring the curfew, he will be cast into a dungeon dark. On the way to the hut the bell-ringer passes a ragged urchin, who begs for food. The heart of the bell-ringer, being filled with the milk of human kindness, he carries him home and gives him bread and milk, and lo! the bell-ringer finds that he has entertained an angel unawares. This angel finally beats the devil and sets the old man's bells ringing at the proper time, thus saving his miserable life.

A CONVICT'S HEART (Sept. 30).—A convict makes his escape from the penitentiary and is found by a little boy, who takes him home, feeds him, gives him a new suit of clothes, and helps file the shackles off his feet. The boy, who lives alone with his mother, in a house heavily mortgaged, does his best the day after he finds the convict, to put off the foreclosure of the mortgage on his little home, but the man who holds the mortgage is hard hearted and attempts to throw them out into the road bodily. The convict shows himself during this episode, and in consequence, is forced to flee, as there is a $500 reward offered for his recapture. The boy goes with the convict into the woods, and there tells him the story of the mortgage, and he, hardened criminal, knowing that the human blood hounds are on his trail, compels the boy to deliver him into the sheriff's hands at the point of the gun, which the convict himself supplies. The result of this is that the convict goes back to jail and the little boy, winning the five-hundred-dollar reward, manages to save his home.

BIOGRAPH.

HER AWAKENING (Sept. 28).—A pretty but dutiful daughter has one fault, vanity. She is ashamed of her poor old mother, who is decrepit and lame. Working in the office of a laundry, she meets, on social terms, one of the customers, who, becoming quite attracted by her, is later considered her sweetheart. Ashamed of her home and mother, she has never let him visit her, preferring to meet him outside at a trysting place. One day, when walking with her sweetheart, she meets her mother, but denies her. Her awakening comes a few minutes later, when she sees her poor old mother knocked down by an automobile. Her mother dies from the effects of the accident, and the poor girl's grief knows no bounds as she fondles the old cane so long carried by her dear mother. Her future does not remain hopeless, for the young man vows he still loves her; but what a bitter punishment she had suffered for vanity.

THE REVENUE MAN AND THE GIRL (Sept. 25).—The Moonshiner's daughter meets one of the revenue men and is attracted by his appearance as he is with hers. She, while rough in nature, has a tender heart, as is shown by her attention to her pet dove. The revenue man makes a daring arrest of a couple of the moonshiners, which arrest the other moonshiners reseut, and swear vengeance. The girl's father leads the vindictive mountaineers and is killed by one of the revenue men, who in turn meets his death. This sets the girl's fierce mountain spirit ablaze, and after her father's burial she joins the pursuit. Two days later, the survivor of the two officers, worn out with fatigue, sits on a bank by the stream, when the girl approaches. She is about to make good her threat, when her pet dove falls at his feet. He picks it up tenderly and sends it on its way, impressing the girl so that she later helps him to escape by hiding him in her room and afterward leaving the mountains for a new life in the city beautiful.

Independent Film Stories

POWERS.

THE FALLS OF BOHEMIA (Sept. 26).—A marvelous photographic record of some of the most delightful spots in Bohemia. The best known cataracts have been taken at full flood and present a spectacle of rugged nature that must always be refreshing to those who live in cities. In addition, some quiet water scenes in other parts make a delightful contrast. The wonderful mirror-like placidity of some of the Bohemian lakes is beautiful to behold, and as fascinating in its own way as turbulent waterfalls are in theirs. These views were selected with exceptional artistic instinct by the special traveling photographer of the Powers Co.

IMAGINATIVE WILLIE (Sept. 26).—Imaginative Willie was an awful fraud. He was also somewhat of a prevaricator. He went on a visit with his parents and let it understood that they went to the far West. All his boy companions envied him his journey to the land of cowboys and Indians; half-breeds and Indian maids; had men and helpless ladies. The only place he saw daring deeds of devilry or heroism was in some Deadwood Dick stories that he had brought home with him. Having created a false impression Willie had to live up to it, and he told some wondrous tales of adventure.

On his return home his boy and girl friends gathered about him to hear his personal experiences. He told a tale of putting a Western hnd man to rout, and after the yarn was spun he received several pieces of candy from some of his numerus juvenile admirers. He told another tale of how he rescued a helpless maiden from Indian kidnappers. For that he received more candy and the girls edged closer to him. He told another of a hand-to-hand Bowie knife duel between himself and a murderous Mexican. This left the other boys green with envy while the girls gazed at Willie in open-mouthed admiration.

Tbings were looking squally for a boy named Tommy. His fickle little sweetheart had edged very close to Willie. Tommy was quite forgotten. When the yarns were finished Willie in triumph marched off with Tommy's girl. After they had gone Tommy found the Deadwood Dick Stories that Imaginative Willie had been sitting on and had forgotten. On glancing them over he discovered that Willie had been telling them stories he had read in the novels. Tommy showed them to the others and Willie became the laughing stock of the town.

THE HALF-BREED'S ATONEMENT (Sept. 30).—Red Moon, a half-breed, lost all that the world held dear to him upon the death of his wife and boy. Tenderly he placed them in their rude graves beside his tepee and sat himself down to grieve and brood. Each glance at the simple crosses of boughs that marked the graves caused him to meditate upon the contempt of white and red men for the half-breed. For the love of those he had buried he had endured insult and isolation, but now he must face it alone, which made it doubly hard. His heart swelled with resentment against all men, for no man had ever given him a chance. He would go his way alone, nor beg, nor kneel to any man.

Having no trade, he determined to become an outlaw and hate the world. Soon rewards were being offered for his capture, for Red Moon had become a daring desperado. One day he came to rob the sheriff's ranch while the owner was away. Just as the half-breed arrived he heard a shot. The sheriff's boy had accidentally shot and wounded himself seriously. Red Moon came to the scene. The sight of the grieving mother and the stricken lad reminded him of the dear ones he had laid away and his heart was touched. A doctor's aid would have saved his own boy and he did not hesitate, at the mother's pleading, to gallop away for a surgeon, regardless of his own safety. On his return with aid, Red Moon was arrested by the sheriff, who had also arrived. He was taking the half-breed away to prison when the boy's mother interceded for the unfortunate man. Hearing the story of privation, bereavement and final sacrifice for his own son, the sheriff tore up the offer of reward and took Red Moon to work for him. Thus did the social outcast, by a humane act, redeem himself and find a home and a son that he came to love as his own.

THANHOUSER.

LOCHINVAR (Sept. 26).—Sir Walter Scott has given the world many heroes, but the one who will live the longest is Young Lochinvar, "who came out of the West." For Lochinvar was one of those heroes, who when he saw what he wanted, went and got it, and did not bother asking any one to help him. He was self-reliant and energetic, and it was not strange that the "fair Ellen" loved him, or that her kinsmen hated him.

The poem tells how "the fair Ellen" was forced by her parents to consent to marry a man so despicable and generally valueless that he is not even given a name. He is simply described as "a dastard in love," and a "laggard in war," and it is not remarkable that the fair Ellen objected as vigorously as possible.

When young Lochinvar heard the news, he started "all alone," for the home of the fair Ellen, and arrived just as the wedding was about to be celebrated. The Netherby clan, kinsmen of the bride, seeing that he had no followers, were disposed to be on the aggressive, but Lochinvar told them that "Now I am come, with this lost love of mine, to dance but one measure, drink one cup of wine." This seemed an easy way to prevent trouble, and the bride's father agreed. During the dance Lochinvar managed to explain to the girl that his horse was outside, and asked her to elope with him. She took one more look at "the dastard in love," who was not an inspiring spectacle, and consented. Then the couple danced to the door, and out, leaped on the horse and sped away before the Netherby clan realized what had happened. And they never saw the "fair Ellen" again, for she became the happy bride of Lochinvar. History does not tell what happened to the "dastard," who was tricked out of a bride at the very altar. The chances are that he was exceedingly unpopular, in his neighborhood, unless he made that a foreign one.

LOVE'S SACRIFICE (Sept. 29).—A middle-aged scientist, on a vacation in the country, meets and falls in love with a young girl, the only daughter of a widow, who is an invalid. The widow, knowing that her life is near an end, hopes to see her daughter settled happily before she dies, and heartily approves of the scientist. Partly because of her mother's advice, the girl consents to marry, and the ceremony is performed while the invalid is on her deathbed.

In her new home, the girl is happy, but finds that her life is a lonely one. Her husband is wrapped up in his profession, and while he loves his wife dearly, she is not all in all in the world to him, and sometimes she feels that she is neglected.

So she welcomes the appearance of a young man, son of one of her husband's old friends, and on his part the acquaintance speedily ripens into love. The wife is too innocent to realize it, the husband immersed in his studies, does not know it, and the only person who sees that the couple are in danger is a faithful old servant of the scientist.

This man finally determines to call the husband's attention to affairs. While the young people are in the garden, he induces the scientist to look out of the window. The husband sees his wife being embraced by the son of his old friend.

He drops the curtain with a groan. Had he waited a moment, he would have seen that his wife indignantly spurned the attention of the man, and ordered him from the place, never to return. But all that the husband saw was what seemed to convince him that his girl wife loved another, a younger and handsomer man.

Then he considered what to do. Humbly, he decided that perhaps the mistake was his own, and that the wife's happiness must be secured under any and all circumstances. So he decided to eliminate himself in such a manner that his death would seem to be a natural one, and so that the wife, without scandal, could wed the man he thought she loved.

So he tells the wife that he is going abroad on business, and she does not suspect anything. But later the old servant receives a letter from his master, telling him he has deliberately gone to a section of the tropics, which is practically death for white men, and that he hopes and indeed knows, that he will never return.

The servant is warned that the wife must never know, but his tears give an inkling of his secret. Finally she sees the letter, and is horror stricken at the error of her husband. Losing no time she posts after him, finds him sick and apparently dying, and convinces him that the only man she does love, or ever did love, is himself.

Joy aids his recovery, and in time he is able to return home, with the faithful wife who had nursed him back to health. Each saw that they had been somewhat to blame, and that too much science is sometimes as bad as too much flirtation. So they adapted themselves to each other's ways, and went through life as partners, without secrets from each other, or misunderstandings.

IMP.

THE CO-ED PROFESSOR (Sept. 25).—College pranks furnish material for amusing stories and the circumventing of the faculty has taxed the inventive mind of many a student. In this case Professor Jenkins and his co-laborer, Miss Penelope Grim, keep a tight rein on their respective charges, owing to the proximity of the sexes. The young people resent this and decide to outwit the instructors.

The girls have prepared a little spread in the room occupied by the ring leaders in the scheme and they cast about to devise ways and means to smuggle the young men into the apartment. One ingenious mind suggests hauling them up in a basket and the idea is acted upon immediately.

A large basket and a strong rope are secured. The basket is lowered over the window ledge and the plan works admirably. The young men are hauled up in rapid succession, but the return trip is made once too often, for the basket is sighted in midair by Professor Jenkins, and he takes in the situation at a glance.

His advent into the room containing the hilarions party is like a bombshell, but the instructor proves to be a good fellow and enters into the spirit of the occasion with a zeal that is appreciated by the students.

Miss Prim, passing by the door, has her suspicions aroused. She enters, but there is a complete metamorphosis, the young men secreting themselves, the professor being chucked under the couch. She exits not quite satisfied that all is well. The professor emerges from the escapade without being suspected and is hailed as a jolly good fellow by the students.

THROUGH THE DELLS OF WISCONSIN IN A MOTOR BOAT (Sept. 25).—This is a beautiful scenic picture taken in the world famed dells of Wisconsin, showing the shady nooks, the wooded cliffs, and the splendid stretches of water, a panorama of picturesque islands, rocks and crooks in the stream. (Copyrighted 1911, by Independent Moving Pictures Co. of America.)

'TWEEN TWO LOVES (Sept. 28).—Grace is the pretty daughter of Farmer Howard. Her mother being dead, the affections of the father are centered in his only child and he idolizes her. They are almost inseparable companions, happy and

ANNOUNCEMENT No. 7

THIS week with fevered anxiety we have awaited the returns of the first week of actual service. The act of service in itself is a big point, but by far the strongest element of that act is the character of quality of the programme. 21 reels and not a single inch of the 20 odd thousand negative feet needing an apology. In fact the first week's programme confers distinction and reflects the scientific and art achievement of many nations of many climes in a modern industry which broadly speaking is universal in character and interest. In visiting the moving picture show we have a common purpose entertainment. An entertainment and analysis will show is dependent upon diversity. The National protects this point in drawing from the World's product rather than upon a province. Every week will strengthen this point and show you that the advent of the National Programme marks the era of uplift in the industry. We have come into the field, not in a competitive sense, but as leaders in a movement to carry this great industry to the plane it is destined to occupy.

The Market Is Now Being Served With Exclusive Film Service

furnished by

The National Film Distributing Company of New York City

We have been exhibiting our goods throughout PENNSYLVANIA, OHIO, INDIANA and KENTUCKY for the past ten days. We have no APOLOGIES to make. The goods SPEAK for themselves. QUALITY and VARIETY.

By the time this announcement reaches you in print we will have given exhibitions in the following States: MISSOURI, TENNESSEE, OKLAHOMA, TEXAS and KANSAS.

We Have Completed the "Hub"—We Are Now Adding the Spokes.

That is to say, we are contracting with Exchange Men in territory not already allotted, and our special Executive Member, Mr. B. E. Clements, will arrange to meet any and all parties desiring to open Exchanges in any part of NORTH AMERICA.

EXHIBITORS, NOTICE:
You will be notified from time to time of the City and Theater where you can see our programme in your respective States. Take a look at the goods. This is all we ask of you upon that call. We have surprised the entire film world at every phase of action.

THE REASON WHY

MONDAY—"PLANTATION," "CLARENDON," "MONO."
TUESDAY—"ROSE," "DEUTSCHES BIOGRAPH," "HELIOS."
WEDNESDAY—"FEDERAL," "MONDIA," "LATIUM."
THURSDAY—"WASHINGTON," "HEPWIX," "FILM d'ART."
FRIDAY—"MOHAWK," "CRICKS AND MARTIN," "ACQUILA."
SATURDAY—"OKLAHOMA," "DEUTSCHES BIOSCOPE," "SAVOY."
SUNDAY—"CALIFORNIA," "MESSTERS," "COMERIO."

Demand the best. You are entitled to same. Place the Moving Picture Industry on a qualified basis. Dignity and Merit.

DO NOT DECEIVE YOURSELF THAT OUR PROGRAMME IS ANYTHING OTHER THAN AN AMERICANIZED PRODUCTION CONSISTING OF QUALITY, VARIETY and EDUCATIONAL; WE SHOW NOTHING DISTINCTIVELY EUROPEAN.

THE TIME OF ACTION IS NOW AT HAND. BE THE FIRST TO RECEIVE AND HAVE NATIONAL EXCLUSIVE PROGRAMME FILM SERVICE IN YOUR HOUSE. EVERY SUBJECT A FEATURE AND A REPEATER. WE CENSURE AND PICK OUR ENTIRE OUTPUT. WE ARE NOT COMPELLED TO TAKE UNQUALIFIED SUBJECTS FOR OUR PROGRAMME.

Special: BE PREPARED TO GET THAT NATIONAL GAZETTE ON SUNDAY.
WATCH FOR WEDNESDAY'S EDUCATIONAL.
OUR EXCHANGES HANDLE OUR MANUFACTURER'S SPECIAL FEATURE.

Wire Or Write Your Wants Look for the word "National"

NATIONAL FILM DISTRIBUTING CO.

NATIONAL FILM DISTRIBUTING COMPANY

34-36 West Houston Street New York City

NATIONAL FILM DISTRIBUTING CO.

contented. The daughter grows to womanhood and the father is not aware of the transition, regarding her as a child.

The farm hand, who is addicted to the drink habit, at last tries the patience of his employer and is discharged in disgrace. Ben Wagner, a clean-cut young fellow, applies for work and is engaged. He is attentive to his duties and pleases the old farmer and the daughter.

It is the old, old story, ever new. The farm laborer loves Grace and she returns his affection. Ben goes about it honorably and asks the farmer for permission to marry his daughter. Then it dawns on Howard that Grace is a woman and that marriage is the natural sequence, but he cannot bear the idea of the parting. He is jealous of the love of the young man and forbids the marriage. Grace tries to prevail upon him to relent, but the old man is stern and the scene is an affecting one. The result is natural. The young folks marry and leave the sorrowing father alone and childless.

Fortune does not favor them. The husband is stricken while working in the fields and dies, leaving his widow and child in destitute circumstances. Widowed, she appeals to her father for assistance, but he has not forgotten and with unnatural anger, he refuses to own her as his daughter or contribute to her support.

Leaving her child one day, she sets out to find work. Her dwelling catches fire during her absence, but she returns in time to save her babe, making a desperate fight in the smoke and flames. The house is destroyed and she has no home.

Desolate and in despair as the last resort, she takes her child and sets out on foot for the home of her childhood. She arrives footsore and exhausted, and seats herself on the old familiar porch with her fretful baby. The old farmer is seated by the fireside, a soured disappointed man. He is thinking of the time when he was happy with his little daughter on his knee. Suddenly he hears the crying of an infant. It awakens pleasant memories. He listens and is then interested.

Going to the door, he sees a woman and a babe on the porch; she is evidently on the verge of collapse and he gathers her in his arms and half carries the baby and mother into the house. Then he discovers that it is his daughter—the girl he discarded. He contemplates her for a moment and then—takes her in his arms. There is a happy reconciliation and the daughter and widow assumes her old place at the head of the household of the happy old farmer. (Copyrighted 1911 by Independent Moving Pictures Co. of America.)

ECLAIR.

HEARTS AND EYES (Oct. 2).—While cleaning her gloves which she was to wear at a ball, Cecilia meets with an accident and becomes blind. Her slim resources are soon exhausted, and being unable to work, the poor girl is soon brought to distress. Led by her little sister, she is forced to beg. Young Doctor Humbert, noticing the young girl one day, becomes interested, and persuades her to go to his offices, where he operates upon her, and in time the girl recovers her sight. Meantime, the young doctor has fallen in love with his pretty patient, but feels it is a rather delicate matter to declare his affection for the girl, under the circumstances, and cannot gain sufficient courage to do so. At the same time Cecelia acknowledges to herself a love for the doctor which she dare not hope even may be returned. All seems very hopeless when, upon leaving the room one day, Dr. Humbert, thinking himself unobserved, out of the ardor of his love, throws a kiss to the girl of his choice. Cecilia, however, has been watching his departure through a mirror, and noting the action, quickly turns and faces her lover. There is that in the eyes of each which breaks down all reserve, and soon they are clasped in each other's fond embrace—the old, old story.

FOR YOUR HATS, LADIES (Oct. 2).—Ladies, grand and beautiful, do they know the trouble and unending labor that is contingent upon the production of the magnificent plumes which adorn their hats? This interesting film will let you into the secret. First you are courteously escorted over an ostrich farm and shown how the feathers are plucked from the huge bird, which strenuously objects to the operation. Then you behold the sorting of the feathers to be shipped to Paris; then you are allowed to take a peep while they are being dried, joined and curled. At last the finished feathers arrive at the milliner's shop, and there is nothing for you to do but pay the bill, gentlemen.

AMBROSIO.

TWEEDLEDUM'S RIDING BOOTS (Sept. 20).—Tweedledum goes riding with his lady love, but being a poor horseman, and also hampered by a new pair of long boots, he has many amusing mishaps, and is finally unseated at a fence. Returning home the boots give him some more trouble, and the climax is reached when he receives a note from the girl saying she has no use for such a poor horseman.

TINY TOM AS A DETECTIVE (Sept. 20).—The diminutive hero proves his worth as a detective and recovers a large sum of stolen money. His small stature enables him to follow the culprits, hiding in places impossible for a larger man.

BISON.

THE SHERIFF'S BROTHER (Sept. 19).—John Stockton, the sheriff, and his brother, Frank, are in love with Anna, and Frank wins her hand. Frank and his bride are in their new home, and he sets his rifle up against the wall. It slips to the ground and is discharged, killing the woman. Knowing the impulsiveness of the westerners, especially in a case where a woman's death is concerned, Frank hides in the hills, leaving a note telling of the accident. The mob starts in pursuit, but the sheriff, fearing a lynching, holds them back and himself goes after his brother and brings him back. Frank is protected and is given a fair trial, in which he is exonerated.

THE MISSIONARY'S GRATITUDE (Sept. 22).—While paddling in the lake the missionary's canoe upsets and he is rescued from drowning by New Moccasin, a Cheyenne, who has just escaped from the Sioux after a thrilling fight. The Sioux recapture New Moccasin, and the missionary pleads in vain for his rescuer's life. New Moccasin is tied to the stake to await death by torture. Slender Pine is moved to compassion by the missionary's eloquence and falls in love with the captive. She manages to cut his bonds, and the three escape and finally outdistance the pursuers. The lovers are married by the missionary and go back into the wild woods to set up their new home.

RELIANCE.

PALS (Sept. 16).—Two homeless waifs live with a modern "Fagin," in a hovel. That they have not become hardened is shown by the fact that they steal some rolls from a baker's wagon to satisfy their hunger, but return a woman's purse, lost, containing a large sum of money. Later, when arrested for the roll theft, the woman secures their release. Returning home, the boys turn over to the "Fagin" their receipts for the day, but one of the boys drops a coin out of his shoe, where he had hidden it, and receives a severe beating. The other runs away hotly pursued by the "Fagin," but makes his escape. He falls asleep on the stairs of the residence of the woman who lost her purse and she takes him in, feeds him and puts him to sleep in a nice, clean bed. The "Fagin" sees this and plans to burglarize the house, thinking the boy will disclose where the valuables are kept. In company with the other boy, he effects an entrance, and awakens the sleeping boy, commanding him to show the way to the silver closet. As he is taking th earticles, the boy suddenly screams for help. The man of the house jumps out of bed, and pursues the burglar up the stairs. A policeman, seeing the ladder at the window, comes up, and the burglar's escape is cut off. His struggles are stopped by the burly policeman, and he is led away, and the boys are given a new home by the kindly woman and her husband.

THE STOLEN PLAY (Sept. 20).—Charles Martin, a farmer, goes to a show and gets an idea for a new play. He mortgages the farm to go to New York to have it produced. At a boarding house he meets an actress who introduces him to theatrical managers. His funds are gone and his play rejected, and he is saved from suicide by the girl, who is also "broke." They spend their last dollar for theater tickets and he sees his own play. Infuriated, he dashes back of the stage and in a sensational scene denounces the manager. The next day he affects a settlement and asks the girl to marry him. They are shown a year later living in contentment on the farm.

SOLAX.

OH! YOU STENOGRAPHER (Sept. 20).—John Glenn & Sons, Brokers, employ Miss Pearls as stenographer. She immediately falls into high favor with the senior member of the firm. She is too clever to state the fact that she is engaged to a rough Westerner who has staked a claim in a rich mining district.

Very soon the two sons become deeply enamored, and a rivalry starts between the father and boys. Flowers, candy and lunches follow in quick succession. The father is soon put in the background. Finally one of the boys gets his brother in disgrace by means of a practical joke, and the older son thinks he is the favored suitor. About this time the Westerner arrives. Having struck a rich claim, he comes to claim his bride. She accepts him at once, and the Glenns are left without a stenographer, mortified and chagrinned. They finally accept the situation and take the matter as a huge joke.

NELLIE'S SOLDIER (Sept. 22).—By allowing a gang of timber thieves to commit depredations, Sheriff Binn, of Viscera County, California, has been receiving a big rake-off. The government finally sends a detachment of cavalry to eject the intruders. Sergeant Bell orders them to leave the reservation, which they do, vowing vengeance. Bell telegraphs the Department Commander, requesting authority to arrest the sheriff. The telegraph operator, Nellie Mason, whom the seargeant fell in love with while en route to the timber camp, is sending the message when the sheriff and his gang of fellows enter, insult Bell, and in the scuffle which follows, a pistol is discharged, killing a bystander. Nellie persuades Bell to flee, and when she hears of the sheriff's intention to falsely accuse Bell of the murder, she follows and hides him in an old, deserted cabin in the mountains. She then wires the Department Commander to hurry the authority for the arrest of the sheriff, which she finally receives and notifies the troops, who arrive just in time to save her and her lover from being killed in the deserted cabin by the outlaw sheriff and his gang of desperadoes.

AMERICAN.

THE GUN MAN (Sept. 18).—Bill Fremont is in love with Edna Curtis, the daughter of a neighboring ranchman. Edna's brother, Fred, does not like Fremont, and objects to him paying attention to his sister. As the ranchmen in the vicinity are mising cattle, it looks very much as if there were an active rustler around. Fremont (who is the rustler), sees a chance to divert the suspicion from himself upon young Curtis, and informs his employer that he has good reasons for believing Curtis is the rustler.

Fremont's employer, while in town, secures the services of a cowboy by the name of Curly Hitchcock (who is a crack shot), to run down the cattle thief. Curly, while on the range, accidentally discharges his gun, receiving a flesh wound, and rushes to the nearest house to have it dressed. This house happens to be the home of Edna Curtis, and her willingness to aid him excites his admiration.

A short while after, Curly returns to the ranchman who has employed him, and taking a powerful telescope, rides out on the range. There he meets Edna. Fremont comes upon them, and when Curly rides away. Fremont tells Edna that her brother is a rustler ,and that Curly has been employed to capture him. Frightened, she hurries to her home to tell her folks and to hide her brother.

A few hours after Curly left Edna and Fremont, he notices, through his powerful telescope, Fremont driving off a herd of cattle. The ranchmen are now infuriated, as they have discovered that more cattle have been stolen, and believe that the gun-man is a fake. Curly arrives at the Curtis home, just in time to get a shot at Fremont, who has led a number of ranchmen to Curtis' home to hang Fred. Everything ends happily, and Fremont gets his just deserts.

THE CLAIM JUMPERS (Sept. 21).—Mack and Ella are engaged to be married, but Mack's father will not give his consent. Mack is further disheartened because Ella will not marry him without his father's permission.

On the government grant land, Mr. Whitcomb, Mack's father, discovers oil. As Mr. Whitcomb has filed a previous find, he cannot file this one, and offers his son one-half of the claim, if he will file it for him. During Mr. Whitcomb's conversation with his son, he is overheard by what is commonly termed claim jumpers. The proposition is accepted by his son, who rides away. En route he passes the home of his sweetheart, and he informs her of his mission. Following him are the two claim jumpers, who heard Mr. Whitcomb's conversation. These men arouse the suspicion of Ella, who quickly follows them.

Mack locates the claim by the number on the map, and is busily engaged staking it out, when the claim jumpers land upon him. One of them takes the map from him, and rides to the Recorder's office, while the other fights with Mack. Ella, surmising what has happened, outwits the claim jumper, by riding to the Recorder's office and filing the claim, which she is able to do, as she knows its number. She then explains matters to the crowd, and when the outwitted jumper arrives, he is driven away by the points of the guns held by the cowboys. The cowboys now ride away to the claim to see if Ella's story is authentic. They find it to be true, and the claim jumper that Mack is holding down, receives a sound trouncing. Ella offers Mack's father one-half of the claim conditionally, and the old man complies willingly.

LUX.

BILL AS AN EXPRESS MESSENGER (Sept. 22).—This is an exceedingly amusing comedy, showing Bill seeking a position. He finally secures one as express messenger, where we see him pushing a tricycle express cart. The result we will leave to your imagination.

THE STOLEN DIAMOND (Sept. 22).—After toiling for many years, an old miner finds a very large diamond. His daughter's sweetheart and many other friends attend the celebration of his success when the diamond is handed around for inspection. The sight of so much wealth overcomes one of the party, who returns at dead of night, steals the diamond, takes it into the hills, and buries it at the foot of a tree which he marks, in order to recognize it again. The old miner's daughter has given her sweetheart a scarf early that day. While embracing her the sweetheart drops it. It is snatched up by the diamond stealer, who places it near the cabinet, from which he extracted the valuable jewel. Consequently when he accuses the sweetheart of the theft, everybody, with the exception of his mistress, are forced to believe it. An old sheriff makes an examination of the cabin and finds another clue in the shape of a knife, which is known to belong to the accuser. It is easy for the innocent man to keep a level countenance, but when his knife is discovered, the guilt shows itself upon the thief's face. He is finally driven at the point of a revolver, to acknowledge his crime, and lead the sheriff to the spot where he has bidden the diamond. The same is restored to its rightful owner.

COMING MONDAY, OCTOBER SIXTEENTH

BOUCICAULT'S MASTERPIECE

The Colleen Bawn

In—Three—Reels

A GEM FROM THE EMERALD ISLE

Every scene made in Ireland and in the exact location described in the original play

SCENARIO BY GENE GAUNTIER

Produced under the personal direction of

Mr. SIDNEY OLCOTT

BOOK THIS EXCEPTIONALLY GREAT FEATURE TO-DAY.

The Phoney Strikebreakers

A Western Comedy

Released Monday, October 2nd

Approximate length 1000 feet

The Saving Sign

This classic Indian production is a headliner.

Released Wednesday, October 4th

Approximate length 1000 feet

The California Revolution of 1846

An historical story containing tense situations.

Released Friday, October 6th

Approximate length 1000 feet

KALEM COMPANY, Incorporated

235-239 West 23rd Street, New York

LONDON, W., 86 Wardour St. :: :: BERLIN, 35 Friedrich Str.

LOOK AT THIS

W. H. ESCH,
Majestic Theatre, La Porte, Ind.,

says that he installed a set of Deagan's No. 310 Electric Bells at $75.00, and had to lock the exit and entrance doors the third night to keep the people from breaking in. The house next door, with a large orchestra, and four vaudeville acts, did practically nothing, while the first few weeks the business in the Majestic was as good at 11 o'clock at night as at any other time of the day, with no other added feature except the bells.

The net income of the house was increased $375.00 the first four weeks—absolutely the best investment ever made and he would not be without a set at any price.

The Bells paid for themselves the first three weeks they were used.

THE testimonial of Mr. W. H. Esch (see page preceding) is not an exceptional case as we have hundreds of customers ready to testify the value of the Deagan's Bells and other musical instruments as an amusement attraction.

Mr. Exhibitor, you are not taking any chances. We refund your money if you are not entirely satisfied.

We have been 31 years in business and from almost nothing built up a $100,000.00 proposition by delivering the goods every time.

We make these bells in sets from

$40.00 up

The most popular set of bells we are now making is the

No. 310 outfit

25 Bells, 2 Octaves, Chromatic C to C

Complete with resonators, keyboard and all electrical apparatus.

Price of this outfit is $75.00

Will be shipped to you for examination and trial on receipt of $5.00 to guarantee express charges.

Every set of bells guaranteed one year.

Write for circulars and descriptive matter

J. C. DEAGAN

3800 N. Clark Street

CHICAGO, ILL.

IMP

IMP

(Freeman Owens)

THIS IS THE YOUNG CHAP WHO RISKED HIS LIFE to obtain for you a marvelously exciting moving picture of the

"CHARLESTON FLOOD AND HURRICANE"

(Regular Imp Release of September 18th.)
(Copyrigh, 1911, by I. M. P. Co.)

It is a great picture, a grand scoop, a climax to the Imp's special efforts to make you glad you're Independent Despite the fact that the picture was taken in the midst of flood and hurricane it is clear and sharp. It is a marvelous feat in photography. There are scenes of tremendous waves dashing over docks with buildings in the background denuded of windows and roofs askew; buildings crumbled like houses of cards; railroad tracks lifted from their beds; heavily loaded freight cars overturned, huge trees uprooted; vessels driven ashore and stranded high and dry; streets flooded; vehicles almost hub deep in the flood. In the midst of all this, Freeman Owens kept turning the crank of his moving picture camera, thinking nothing of his own neck but glorying in the fact that the Imp would have another beat-of-the-world! Wire your exchange this very instant. Show your colors! Help the Imp in its efforts to give you what you want!

"The Co-Ed Professor" (Sept. 25)

(Copyright, 1911, by I. M. P. Co.)

A college comedy that will bring shouts of laughter. On the same reel we give 250 feet of beautiful scenic film entitled "Through the Dells of Wisconsin in a Motor Boat." Get 'em!

"'Tween Two Loves" (Sept. 28)

(Copyright, 1911, by I. M. P. Co.)

You'll take off your hat to the Imp when you see the perfect combination of acting, staging and photography in this fine drama. It will only emphasize the fact that "Imps are getting better every week!" Go after it!

INDEPENDENT MOVING PICTURES CO. IMP AMERICA

Independent Moving Pictures Co. of America,
[illegible] West 41st St., New York City. [illegible] Free
Are you [illegible] your free [illegible] circulars?
Are you [illegible] mailing list? If not get on!

Demand Two Imps Every Week

CAN YOU BEAT IT?

Read What Customers say

Your new stock is the greatest ever. The base is as strong as the Rock of Gibraltar. During the last few months we have used many thousands of feet with perfect results. You can always count on us, for you are making a standard of film quality. Enclosed find order, together with check to cover amount of same. We wish to thank you for your prompt shipments.

Very truly yours,

----- ----- -----

LUMIERE CINEMATOGRAPH FILM

Positive and Negative

3½ CENTS PER FOOT UNPERFORATED.
¼ cent per foot extra for perforation.

GUARANTEED Perfect in manufacture. The same uniform quality always.

All orders filled promptly. SEND US YOURS.

Lumiere Jougla Co.

75 FIFTH AVENUE (Between 15th and 16th Streets)
PHONE 531 STUYVESANT NEW YORK CITY
Chicago Branch - 30 East Randolph St.

W. E. GREENE FILM EXCHANGE, Inc.

The Oldest and Largest Independent Film Exchange in New England

Notice to Exhibitors

We are prepared to take care of any amount of summer business in New England. You don't have to worry about your film service when you are trading with us; we do the worrying for you. The pick of the output of the Sales Co. is at your service. Write, wire or call at

W. E. Greene Film Exchange

INCORPORATED

228 Tremont Street, Boston, Mass.

Telephone 3790 2187 Oxford

"ELECTRA" PINK LABEL CARBONS

ELECTRA

TRADE MARK

"ELECTRA" PINK LABEL CARBONS

COST more than others, but when taken into consideration the superior service they give, they are more than worth the difference in price.

Don't experiment with so called "equal to Electra" kinds, but specify the genuine "ELECTRA" pink label Carbons.

The immense superiority of "ELECTRA" Pink Label Carbons lies in the absolute mechanical and scientific perfection of their manufacture, in conjunction with high grade materials of which they are made. They are always uniform, and prompt shipment can be depended on.

(Sole Importer)

HUGO REISINGER

11 BROADWAY, NEW YORK

No. E-405. List $10.50.

Ask discounts of your Electric dealer. If he does not carry, write us direct.

Engineering Reports Free.

AT LAST

It is possible to have daylight pictures to run continually in a lighted theatre.

Beautiful even illumination with inexpensive indirect lighting fixtures. Not an electric bulb in sight. The light thrown to the ceiling and diffused through the room. No annoying side lights.

Theatre lighting revolutionized by this Eye COMFORT SYSTEM of Indirect Lighting.

Hundreds of installations being made.

Our engineering department will furnish you free of expense, reports and recommendations on request.

BETTER LIGHT AT LESS EXPENSE

Investigate—Write today

NATIONAL X-RAY REFLECTOR CO.,
235 Jackson Blvd., Chicago.

Gentlemen:—
Send full information regarding lighting of our theatre.

Length ..... Width ..... Ceiling Heighth .....
Name ..... Address .....

SLIDES that ADVERTISE

Particulars on request

EXCELSIOR SLIDE CO.

61 West 14th Street New York City

McKENNA

BRASS
RAILINGS
EASELS
GRILLES
CUSPIDORS

BRASS
KICK PLATES
STAIR TREADS, DOOR SILLS

McKenna Bros. Brass Co.

PITTSBURGH, PA.

In answering advertisements kindly mention Moving Picture World.

Make your own local Moving Pictures

For the theater manager, for the lecturer, scientist and for the manufacturer at large. New Moving Picture Cameras, Printers, Perforators, Developing outfits, Tripods, Tilts, large and small, Winders, Rewinders, Measurers, Menders, latest Projecting machines and single arc dissolvers, negative and positive film stock, perforating, printing and developing done, special lenses—best equipped laboratory and machine shop in the world. Send for descriptive catalogues why you should makefilms,

EBERHARD SCHNEIDER

219 Second Ave. near 14th Street. New York

Machines and Films For Sale

3 Second-hand Power's Machines, $90 to $170
1 Newly Rebuilt Head - - - $50
6 Second-hand Edison Machines, $85 to $110
Lot of Films For Sale Cheap

MAYER SILVERMAN

105 Fourth Ave., Pittsburgh, Pa., U. S. A.

We Offer 300 more to the Trap Drummers

Get your order in at once. At our special offer price—$10.0

This high-grade Orchestra Drum, 10 thumb screw rods, transparent drum heads, solid shells, maple, rosewood, walnut.

Size, 3 x 14—3 x 15—4 x 15—4 x 14. This offer for September and October.

E. P. Zeidler Drum Co., Cleveland, O.

who, as a compensation, gives his daughter in marriage to the lover who has been wrongfully accused.

NESTOR.

ACROSS THE DIVIDE (Sept. 20).—If she could only get John to sign the pledge—what a happy little family they would be, and Mary glanced to where her husband stood kissing their two rosy children good bye. She would plead with him that very night. Unfortunately, however, ere night fell, John, at Lem Bassett's invitation, had stopped in at Murphy's saloon to have "just one," but had nevertheless reached the quarry in such a condition, that the foreman had promptly discharged him, greatly to Lem's satisfaction.

The remainder of the day John spent in the saloon, but getting into an argument toward evening, the bartender unceremoniously threw him outside, just as his supposed friend was returning from work. Picking John up, Lem helped him to his home—where, as soon as Lem was left alone with the young wife, he attempted to embrace her. Hearing her cry of surprise and indignation, the husband returned.

Mary, unmindful of his condition, stepped between them, but John pushed her aside—more forcibly than he realized—for she fell, striking her head on the table, and lay unconscious. Believing her dead, as did John, when he tried to revive her, Lem made for the door, closely followed by the now sobered and frantic husband. On and on they ran, until the pursued man reached the cliff. There a desperate battle was fought, ending in Lem losing his balance, and falling over the cliff.

Filled with horror at what he had unconsciously done, John fled the State. In the struggle, however, his coat had been thrown aside, so that two prospectors, finding it six months later, sorrowfully came to the now fully recovered Mary, with the news that her husband had fallen over the cliff.

Fifteen years passed. John, who had become "a gentleman of fortune," was lying in wait for the stage coach, when his daughter, who with her mother and brother, had moved West, happened upon them. To protect her from his men, a quarrel arose, in which John was wounded, but as the others ran off, the girl snatched off his mask and signaled the stage coach for her "friend"—and ere half an hour had passed, the supposed dead husband and wife were happily united.

MUTT AND JEFF AND THE DOG-CATCHERS (Sept. 23).—This time Mutt and Jeff are not overprosperous (a financial state of affairs to which they are no strangers) and, as is their usual wont, they get busy devising ways and means to make an easy living—the easier the better.

Traveling organists have no difficulty in getting money; and as Mutt always was musically inclined, he undoubtedly could grind out the same quality and the same quantity of music that energetic Italian mountaineers regale us with. But what is organ music without a monkey? How to get a monkey, that's the question.

Mutt's think-box gets in motion. It takes more than a little persuasion on his part to get little Jeff to impersonate the much needed monkey. Organist Mutt and collector-monk Jeff soon begin making noise and incidentally some money.

Business, however, does not meet with Mutt's most sanguine expectations, and, of course, he takes it out of the monkey. The dog-catchers, a tender-hearted bunch, free Jeff from Mutt's brutal clutches and take him away with a motley assortment of stray dogs.

What does Mutt do without his monkey? What does Jeff do in the dog den? What do the dog-catchers do? They cut up such a lot of uproariously funny monkeyshines as to keep both young and old doing the continuous laughing performance till the climax is reached.

OBLIGING A FRIEND (Sept. 23).—Kitty the cook's cup of joy was overflowing. This morning, Bob Hanson, her pugilistic "steady," had at last kept his promise to give her a boxing lesson; and although tables and chairs had been overturned in the bout, Kitty was still radiantly happy until she discovered her master and mistress sprawling upon the floor, where they had been unintentionally knocked by the excited fighters, as they entered to ascertain the cause of the disturbance.

Then, despite the pleading of his wife, Mary, John ordered Kitty to pack her trunk, and strode off to the office to promptly forget his wife's parting instructions about sending home a cook at once.

At the close of the day, Mary called up and informed her husband that unless he returned with a cook, she would go home to mother. Hurriedly he rang up the employment office—but unfortunately all help had gone for the day.

In despair John turned to Jack Wilber, who for the last half hour had been practising with a Biddy's masquerade costume, which he was to wear that evening, and insisted that to oblige a friend in such a sore need, Jack must go home with him that evening and concoct a few of the dishes about which he had bragged.

Under protest the young man was at last coaxed to take his place in the kitchen. All might have gone well, had not Mary entered in time to see her husband fastening the new cook's dress. In tears the unhappy wife started for her room; John, however, quickly headed her off, and was endeavoring to straighten things out, when prints of the following famous works by

WILL BUY OR LEASE

CHARLES DICKENS

"Old Curiosity Shop"
"David Copperfield"
"Oliver Twist"
"Tale of Two Cities"

Also POWERS CAMERAGRAPH

Send all particulars in first letter. Otherwise no attention paid.

Address

W. L., Room 903, 507 Fifth Ave., NEW YORK CITY

POSITIVELY the best terminal ever devised for motion picture arc lamps. GUARANTEED to prevent burned off wires,

Price $1.00 per pair postpaid

YOUR MONEY BACK IF YOU WANT IT

STERLING NOVELTY CO., 500 Main St., Warren, Ohio

THE BEST BY TEST

ATTENTION

Exhibitors and Operators

IF troubled with your films coming apart — USE BULL-DOG FILM CEMENT. It is a known fact that our N. I. Cement is the best on the market. We have now a special inflammable cement that we recommend for use on inflammable films only, this cement does not warp or weaken the film. Manufactures and exchanges send for samples.

Bull-Dog Cement is Manufactured by

The One-Drop Oil Company

520 West Jackson Blvd.,

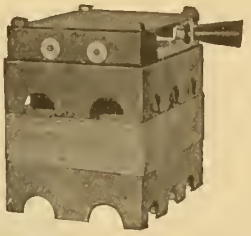
CHICAGO ILLINOIS

Our Entire Stock

And present purchases consist mainly of the world famous Scott & Van Altena and DeWitt C. Wheeler slides, hence a service from us means the very best to be had in the line of high class photography, varied posings, and beautiful coloring. Such a service combined with our absolute guarantee to furnish only one theatre in each city, (Chicago excepted) should appeal to you. We ship your entire weekly supply of sets in one consignment.

¶ Rental rates and catalog upon request.

CHICAGO SONG SLIDE EXCHANGE
6th FLOOR, POWERS BLDG.
37 So. WABASH AVE. - Dept. 1 - CHICAGO, ILL.



TRANSARC

Price $50.

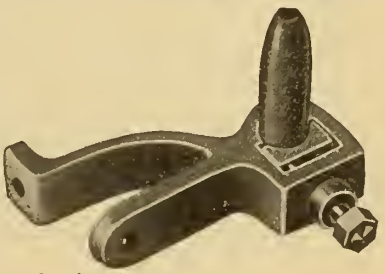
Dimensions, 8½" x 10½" x 11"
Core Loss, 55 Wats.
Volts at arc, 35.
Amperes, 30-40-50-60.

Construction

The core is of the "SHELL" type construction with highest grade of steel lamitations, exposing the outside surface to the air, while the coils mounted therein are carefully wound and treated in the most approved manner and protected from any possible damage thereto, being mounted inside the core. The slate on which the regulating switch is mounted, serves as a cover for the shell and coil; the contact being protected by a thin sheet of metal, preventing accidental short-circuting or shocks to the operator.

The Indestructo Carbon Holder

is an integral casting of special metal—fitted with a sliding-contact, operated by a set screw or wing nut, if desired. The design of the contact fits the carbon, furnishing a larger area of contact, and thus requires less pressure to securely hold the carbon. It is impossible to score the carbon, and the adjustment screw will not "freeze" under any considerations. The concentric adjustment permits instantaneous renewals of carbons.



For further and full particulars white

THE ST. JOHN CORPORATION
180 Broadway, NEW YORK CITY
Sole distributors for MOHAWK ELECTRIC CO. - Albany, New York

THE POSTER PROBLEM SOLVED

We have after heavy investment and much attention completed arrangements for the first and only satisfactory method of printing and distributing Motion Picture Posters ever devised. Having as exhibitors experienced inconvenience and loss of business during the past two years, owing to unsatisfactory Poster Service, we are in position to know this announcement will be regarded as a most welcome and important one to Motion Picture Exhibitors not only in the Central States but throughout the entire country.

We begin with the licensed releases of the week of Monday, September 25, 1911, to serve all Exhibitors using licensed films whose remittances have been received on or before that date. Our plan is most practical and economical. Wishing to give exhibitors all possible benefits we will work on a very narrow margin of profit and cannot afford to ship charge account or C. O. D. We supply a large standard size full one sheet poster in colors for each reel for the entire licensed output, which at present amounts to 36 posters per week neatly rolled, sent in one shipment by express each week. We pay all express charges. Total Poster Service Rate $2.00 per week.

EXHIBITORS POSTER SERVICE
611 First National Bank Bldg., Chicago.

The Screen is the Whole Show

That is the spot where the pictures talk to your patrons, and coaxes them to Come Again.

How can you welcome them on a dull or painted rag?

Unless your pictures are shown on a "MIRROR SCREEN" they are flat, dull and without perspective or depth. You won't believe it until you see the difference.

Write me a letter today, and I will send one of our salesmen to you, and if we cannot show you that WE CAN IMPROVE YOUR PICTURES 1,000%, in illumination, depth and beauty, no matter what you are using, we will give you the price of a "MIRROR SCREEN."

Just received a postal from an exhibitor in Ohio, saying that $1,000.00 would not buy his "Mirror Screen" if he could not get another.

You don't need Vaudeville if you have a "MIRROR SCREEN." I will be delighted to get a line from you.

MOTION PICTURE SCREEN CO.
Shelbyville - - - Indiana
F. J. REMBUSCH, President and Patentee

Kitty's voice again brought them to the kitchen.

Acting upon Bob's suggestion, Kitty had returned to get dinner, when she beheld her "ateady" with his arms about the new servant. As huahand and wife entered, the rolling-pin waa descendiug vigorously upon Jack's head, and he, poor man, finding all other exits cut off, made a mad leap tbrough the window. Then John beheld his obliging friend, Jack, minus the skirt, for Mary had snatched that as he passed, ruuning at full apeed, closely followed by the neighbor's dog and a howling mob.

REX.

THE ROSE AND THE DAGGER (Sept. 21).—Rosita and Emanuel, two lovers, returning from a ball, are overtaken by a storm. Emanuel leaves her in the shelter of an old castle, while he goes to seek better protection. The castle is the refuge of a notorious bandit, Ronaldo, to which he comes while Rosita is awaiting the reutrn of Emanuel. He sees Rosita and advances upon her with his dagger to obtain her jewels. Rosita exerts all her wiles and coquetry to divert his mind uutil Emauuel should return. She flirts and dances, and her beauty and grace at last arouse Ronaldo's passion. Dagger and jewels are forgotten; it is now the woman that he desires. She dances—and the exotic spell is on him. She dances—and the old drama of weak woman's power and strong man's weakness is again enacted. He tries to kiss her, but she dances off and arouud him, ber great, gray eyea fastened upon him, tantaliziug him to heated frenzy, while by clever maneuvers she strives to obtain possession on the dagger at his belt. At last she permits Ronaldo, who has almost lost his senses from the furious rage of his futile passion, to hutton her shoe—the tigress preparing for her prey. With a dexterous, swift down-sweep of her arm she grasps the dagger and is about to plunge it into his heart when a bolt of lightning strikes him and Diviue murder accomplishes her purpose. As she stands, awed hy the swift and final blow from the hand of Providence, Emanuel returns, and she leaves the castle and its memory behind.

CHAMPION.

THE BLACK HORSE TROOP OF CULVER (Sept. 25).—At Culver, Ind., is to be found an institution of learning and military training, that is unsurpassed in this country as regards private schools of this character. To see this troop of horsemen in their daring riding feats is to set one's blood on fire with admiration for their pluck, skill and brains which they bring into their work. It is almost unbelievable what these youths can perform on horseback, either in the saddle or bareback. Vaulting on and off the horses going at full speed; forming pyramids three feet high while the chargers madly gallop; making intricate evolutions in spiral, circular and oblique movements.

THE COOK OF THE RANCH (Sept. 27).—A cowboy falls in love with the huxom cook of the ranch, but the cook pretended to make merry of his tender sentiments. Filled with a spirit of harmless mischief, the cowboy scrawled a note to the cook, asking for a tryst. He then sent a similar note to "a haythin Chinee" who worked about tbe placc. He then notified the foreman, by a note, to be on hand to help along.

Bnt the joke waa causing the foreman to so split his sides that he had to share it with tbe ranch owner, who in a convulsive fit had to tell bia wife. She, hysterically, unloaded it on the maid. She in turn doubled up like a jack-knife and had to disgorge the aecret to her sister.

The cook, coming in unexpectedly, overheard how she had been tricked. Throwing down the smoking turkey she was carrying in, she seized a rolling-pin and butcher knife and set out to trail the cowboy. As stout as the cook, so was the cowboy. What a chase they had! The cowboy escaped her wrath, butcher knife and rolling-piu.

Meanwhile there was no dinner. And every one had laughed so much that they were monstrously hungry. Then an appeal was made to tbe cowboy, and he appealed to the cook, telling her how madly and jealously he loved her, and that was why he had acted aa he had done. The love potion was effective, and the cook soon assuaged the hunger of the ranch owner and all hands.

GREAT NORTHERN.

CAUGHT IN HIS OWN NET (Sept. 23).—A pretty farm yard scene opens this aubject. The farmer's daughter haa two admirers, one a farm laborer, employed by her father, and the other, a young mau neighbor farmer of good financial standing. The father is in arrears with his rent, and the rich young suitor to his daughter offers to get him out of the difficulty, providing he will give him his daughter's hand in marriage. The father consents, but the girl soon shows her objection, preferring the love of the laborer. The rejected sultor, in anger, enters the farmer's barn, intent upon revenge, and accidentally sets fire to the structure. He tries to throw suspicion upon the farmer, but two tramps point out the real culprit, having seen him enter the barn. The young laborer re-enters the employ of the farmer, whom he assists financially with the winnings of a large lottery prize, and later marries the daughter.

If you are in the Market for

SECOND HAND FILMS

Write to the largest and most reliable Dealers and Importers of these goods in the U. S.

International Film Traders
Incorporated

5 West 14th Street, NEW YORK CITY

"INFORMATION wanted regarding the whereabouts of Stewart McArthur and Mrs. Ida Eckenrode, formerly of Barnesboro Pa."

A. J. CLAPHAM
12 East 15th St., New York, N. Y.

Motion Picture Supplies

To get the right goods at the right prices call or write

H. A. MACKIE
Wholesale Dealer

853 BROADWAY
Cor. 14th St., New York

Jobber for Edison, Powers & Motiograph Machines.
All Others kept in Stock.

Call and see all makes of machines demonstrated on the mirror screen.

YANKEE.

FOR THE WEARING OF THE GREEN (Sept. 25).—Neil O'Connor, an Irish patriot, feared by the Englisb, and loved by the Irish, is compelled to aeek refuge among the hills to avoid being captured and probably hung, as a traitor.

Sir Jamea Blackadder is anxious to see Neil O'Connor caught, aa he is in love with Lady Broughton, who is the promised wife of O'Connor.

Sir James employs a notorious character, Red Rufus, to spy upon O'Connor, and offers him a large reward if O'Connor is captured; but O'Connor baa many friends, among them being Pike and Honora, two simple-hearted, loyal Irish patrlots, who aid O'Connor throughout his forced exile.

Wben Sir James shows Lady Broughton a pardon for O'Connor, and threatens to burn it up unless she becomes his wife, Honora manages to obtain the pardon, secretes it on her person and replaces same with another paper, which Sir James burns.

When O'Connor is captured and brought before Sir James, who is about to commit him to jail, in spite of the pleadings of Lady Broughton, Pike and Honora spoil this plan by producing the pardon.

MAN (Sept. 29).—When the daughter of the millionaire iron worker is saved from injury aud possible death by one of her father's employees, sbe becomes interested in the gigantic and handsome apecimen of manhood, who by sheer brntal atrength, stops a maddened horse in his beadlong flight. The young giant, besides possessing abnormal strength, has also a goodly share of brains, which be utilizes to such good effect that he eventually becomes superintendent of the steel piant.

He learns to love the girl witb a strong man's passion, and like his ancestors of the atone age, vows to make her his, in spite of all obstacles. The girl learns of his love and also of her power over this giant and, womanlike, is pleased.

As a member of a spiritualistic society, she comes in contact witb one of the lecturers, who lovea ber, and of whom the young giant is jealous. When the young giant professes his love, she coquettishly runs from him, and tells him to wait.

The professor of spiritualism and the young giant meet at the steel works, and in a moment of jealous rage, the instinct of the prehistoric man asserts itself, and he is about to throw the professor into the gaping furnace, when an apparition appears of himself and the girl in the garb of the stone age, locked in each other's arms. Again this apparition appears to the girl, who being a spiritualist, realizes that she and the young giant had been mates in the stone age, and therefore, should become mates in the civilized world.

NEW INCORPORATIONS.

New York City.—White-Whitman Mfg. Co. Capital $10,000. Directors: Arthur G. White, James A. Whitman and Effie O. Stabb.

Rochester, N. Y.—The Nickel Amusement Co. Directors: George C. Stand and Harry F. Wick.

New York City.—United Releasing Co. Capital $100,000. Directors: Leon Kauffman, Stuart M. Kohn and Isadore Finkler.

Cincinnati, Ohio.—Tbe American Film Co. Capital $10,000. Directors: J. R. Tabot, W. T. Roberts, M. J. Priant, A. B. Fraze and A. M. Allen.

Toledo, Ohio.—White Eagle Theatrical Co. Capital $10,000. Directors: George A. Kratt, Walter Grudzinski, Efil B. Davis, Karl F. Barfield and Robert Phillips.

New York City.—Crystal Film Co. Capital $150,000. Directors: L. G. B. Erb, H. L. Siobidin, and S. Fine.

St. Louis, Mo.—The Union Theater and Airdome Co. Capital $37,000. Directors: O. T. Crawford, Thomas J. O'Laughlin, Arthur J. Fitzsimmons, James Hagerman.

Cleveland, Ohio.—The Feature and Educational Film Co. Capital $10,000. Directors: E. Mandelbaum, A. Newman, A. L. Freeman, E. T. Nawk and David Hemilich.

AMONG THE EXHIBITORS.

Cincinnati, Ohio.—Meis & Cohen will erect a moving picture theater at Vine and Calhoun Streets, to cost $25,000.

Milwaukee, Wis.—Crowley Bros. will erect a moving picture theater at National Avenue and 31st Streets, to cost $8,000.

Kansas City, Mo.—Globe Theater Co. Capital $2.000. Louis Oppenheim and Samuel Oppenheim.

Houston Texas.—The Elks are erecting a new theater at Fourth and Austin Streets, to cost $30,000.

Savannah, Ga.—Savannah Picture Play Co. Capital $8,000. A. S. Guckenheimer and Jake Schrameck.

Evansville, Ind.—Main Theatorium Co. Capital $4,500. Isaac Hamburg and Philip Holz.

Milwaukee, Wis.—A new moving picture theater will be erected at National Avenue and 31st Avenue, to cost $10,000.

Atlantic City, N. J.—Atlantic Avenue is to have another moving picture show. A permit has been issued to A. Siracusa, by tbe Building Department for the erection of it at 2416-18 Atlantic Avenue, which will cost when completed about $6,000.

Duluth, Minn.—A license has been granted to W. M. Abrahamson for the erection of a high class moving picture theater at 2623 W. Superior Street.

Philadelphia, Pa.—The Franklin Theater, at 52d and Girard Avenue, has been purchased by Leon T. Carpenter and J. Hesser Walraven.

W. Stephen Bush

Has prepared and may be engaged to deliver special, complete LECTURES on

"Dante's Inferno"
(5 REELS, MILANO FILMS COMPANY)

"The Crusaders
or Jerusalem Delivered"
(4 REELS, WORLD'S BEST FILM COMPANY)

The Battle Hymn of the Republic
Enoch Arden
The Maccabees
Declaration of Independence
The Three Musketeers
Any other feature film
The Weekly Pathe Bulletin
The Monthly Vitagraph Bulletin

Address

W. Stephen Bush
Care of Moving Picture World
125 East 23rd Street New York City

LUX FILMS

The Acme of Quality

Released Friday, Sept.22,1911

Bill as an Express Messenger

Comedy Length 344 feet

A thoroughly original comedy of unusual qualities.

The Stolen Diamond

Drama Length 629 feet

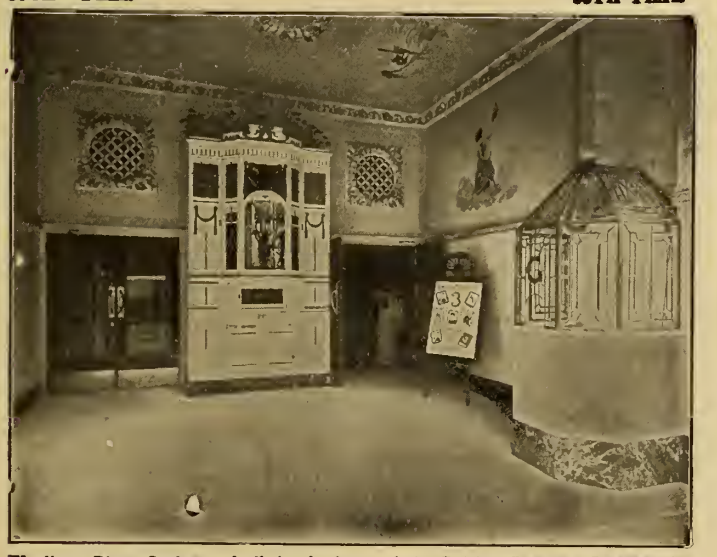
A Stirring Dramatic Production.

R. PRIEUR
10 East 15th St. New York City
Telephone Call 3427 Stuyvesant
Sold Only Through
MOTION PICTURE DISTRIBUTING and SALES COMPANY
ONLY EASTMAN RAW STOCK USED

WURLITZER

55TH YEAR 55TH YEAR



Wurlitzer Piano Orchestra built in the front of the Gaither Theater, Cincinnati

The Leading Picture Theaters are Installing
Wurlitzer Automatic Musical Instruments
They furnish better music than musicians and cut out that great expense. 50 different styles. Call at nearest branch or write for big 84-page catalog

THE RUDOLPH WURLITZER COMPANY

CINCINNATI	CHICAGO	NEW YORK	PHILADELPHIA
117 to 121 E. 4th	266 & 268 Wabash	25 & 27 W. 32nd Bet. B'way & 5th Av.	1835 Chestnut
ST. LOUIS	CLEVELAND	BUFFALO	COLUMBUS, O.
912 Pine	206 Prospect	701 Main	57 E. Main

CINES CO. of ROME

Studios and Factories, Rome and Padova

CAPITAL { Preferred Stock Lire 2,000,000
Ordinary Stock, 3,750,000
Fully Paid-up Lire 5.750.000

EXCHANGE MEN WRITE TO US FOR PARTICULARS OF OUR FIRST RELEASE

Branch for the United States of America
445 Broome St., cor. Broadway
New York City

TELEPHONE, SPRING 9232

TELEGRAPHS, CINES NEW YORK

Licensed Release Dates

BIOGRAPH.

Sept. 11—The Village Hero (Com.)..... 675
Sept. 11—The Lucky Horseshoe (Com.)..... 321
Sept. 14—The Squaw's Love (Dr.)..... 998
Sept. 18—Dan, the Dandy (Com.)..... 998
Sept. 21—When Wifey Holds the Purse Strings (Com.) 463
Sept. 21—A Convenient Burglar (Com.)..... 534
Sept. 25—The Revenue Man and the Girl (Dr.) 999
Sept. 28—Her Awakening (Dr.)..... 997

EDISON.

Sept. 8—Jones Ferry (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 9—That Winsome Winnie Smile (Com.). 500
Sept. 9—No Cooking Allowed (Com.)..... 500
Sept. 12—Off the Coast of Maine (Sc.)..... 265
Sept. 12—Under the Tropical Sun (Dr.)..... 375
Sept. 13—The Escaped Lunatic (Com.)..... 500
Sept. 13—For the Queen (Com.)..... 500
Sept. 15—The Lighthouse By the Sea (Dr.)....1000
Sept. 16—The Sheriff (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 19—The Sailor's Love Letter (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 20—An Unknown Language (Com.)..... 985
Sept. 22—The Battle of Trafalgar (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 23—The Big Dam (W. Dr.) 1000
Sept. 26—Mary's Masquerade (Com.).....1000
Sept. 27—A Cure for Crime (Com.).....1000
Sept. 29—The Death of Nathan Hale (Edu.)..1000
Sept. 30—The Maiden of the Pie Faced Indians 500
Sept. 30—Turning the Tables (Com.)..... 500

ESSANAY.

Sept. 7—Never Believe In Signs (Com.)..... 300
Sept. 8—The Wrong Glove (Com.)..... 990
Sept. 9—Broncho Bill's Last Spree (W. Com.) 980
Sept. 12—Two Men and a Girl (Dr.)..... 980
Sept. 14—The Puncher's Law (W. Dr.)..... 980
Sept. 15—The Burglarized Burglar (Com.)..... 980
Sept. 16—The Millionaire and the Squatter (W. Dr.) 980
Sept. 19—Saved from the Torrents (Dr.)..... 980
Sept. 21—All On Account of the Porter (Com.)——
Sept. 21—Everybody's Troubles (Com.)..... 980
Sept. 22—Live, Love and Believe (Mil. Dr.).. 980
Sept. 23—An Indian's Sacrifice (W. Dr.)..... 980
Sept. 26—Lost Years (Dr.)..... 980
Sept. 28—The Power of Good (W. Dr.)..... 980
Sept. 29—When He Died (Com.)..... 980
Sept. 30—The Strike at the "Little Jonny" Mine (W. Dr.)..... 980

GAUMONT.
(G. Kleine.)

Sept. 5—A Society Mother (Dr.).....1030
Sept. 9—Mated by Chess (Com.)..... 660
Sept. 9—Farming—Old and New Methods (Ind.) 377
Sept. 12—How to Catch a Bachelor (Com.).... 836
Sept. 12—From Bordeaux to Pauillac, France (Sc.) 164
Sept. 16—The Cinematograph Fiend (Com.)... 575
Sept. 16—A Mountain Torrent In Austria (Sc.) 415
Sept. 19—Jimmie ou Guard (Dr.)..... 710
Sept. 19—Crossing the Alps In a Motor (Sc.).. 285
Sept. 23—A Heart Breaker by Trade (Com.).. 710
Sept. 23—The Culture of Bulbous Flowers (Sc.) 290
Sept. 26—A Friend of the Family (Com.).... 850
Sept. 26—The City of Bordeaux, France (Sc.).. 175
Sept. 30—Hearts May be Broken (Dr.).....1015

KALEM.

Sept. 6—When Two Hearts Are Won (Com.).1000
Sept. 8—When the Sun Went Out (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 11—A Sheepman's Triumph (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 13—The Express Envelope (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 15—The Alpine Lease (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 18—The Ranger's Stratagem (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 20—Losing to Win (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 22—The Cowboy's Bride (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 25—Arizona Bill (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 27—Hal Chase's Home Run (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 29—The Blackfoot Halfbreed (Dr.).....1000

LUBIN.

Sept. 9—The Ranch's New Barber (Com.)... 600
Sept. 9—Bill's Ward (Dr.)..... 400
Sept. 11—Divided Interests (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 13—His Girlie (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 14—Al Martin's Game (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 16—Cement Rock Blasting (Ind.).....
Sept. 16—The Scheme That Failed (Com.)....1000
Sept. 18—The Senorita's Conquest (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 20—The Life Saver (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 21—The Human Torpedo (Com.).....1000
Sept. 23—Her Inspiration (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 25—The Matchmaker (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 27—A Cowboy's Love (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 28—A Counterfeit Roll (Com.).....1000
Sept. 30—A Nearsighted Chaperone (Com.)....1000

MELIES.

Sept. 7—The Hobo Cowboy (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 14—A Shattered Dream (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 21—$200.00 (Dr.) 1000
Sept. 28—The Missiou Waif (Dr.).....1000

ECLIPSE.
(G. Kleine.)

Aug. 30—Sights of Berlin (Sc.)..... 423
Aug. 30—A King for an Hour (Com.)..... 572
Sept. 6—Clever Beyond Her Years (Dr.).... 675
Sept. 6—Lake Thun In Switzerland (Sc.).... 325
Sept. 13—The Hand of the Law (Dr.)..... 665
Sept. 13—Norwich and Vicinity (Sc.)..... 330
Sept. 20—In Anelent Days (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 27—The Trials of a Tall Traveler (Com.) 458
Sept. 27—Manufacturing Fireworks (Ind.)..... 522

PATHE.

Sept. 7—The Red Man's Dog (Ind. Dr.) 675
Sept. 7—Japanese Dice and Butterflies (Sc.).. 328
Sept. 8—Culture of the Dahlia (Ed.)..... 550
Sept. 8—Arabian Types and Customs (Sc.).... 425
Sept. 9—A Tragedy at Sea (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 11—Eva Is Tired of Life (Com.)..... 394
Sept. 11—Little Moritz and the Butterfly (Com.) 295
Sept. 11—From Lourdes to Garvarine (Sc.).. 310
Sept. 12—Pathe's Weekly No. 37 (Topical)..1000
Sept. 13—A Prisoner of the Mohicans (Dr.)....1000
Sept. 14—College Sweethearts (Com.)..... 720
Sept. 14—Art Industries In Kabylie (Ind.)... 279
Sept. 15—Madame Tallien (Dr.) 689
Sept. 15—Everyday Life In Mallaca (Sc.).....310
Sept. 16—A Western Memory (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 18—The Fright (Dr.) 754
Sept. 18—Fire Brigade in Moscow (Sc.)..... 230
Sept. 19—Pathe's Weekly No. 38 (Topical)....1000
Sept. 20—An Up-to-Date Squaw (Com.)..... 754
Sept. 20—African Birds and Their Enemies (Ed.) 197
Sept. 21—Starlight's Necklace (Dr.)..... 951
Sept. 22—Old Delhi and Its Ruins (Sc.)..... 285
Sept. 22—Electric Boots (Com.) 426
Sept. 22—Surfing: National Sport In the Hawaiian Islands (Sc.)..... 285
Sept. 23—Gypsy Maids (Dr.) 900
Sept. 25—The Disappointed Old Maids (Com.).. 490
Sept. 25—Whiffles' Hard Luck Stories (Com.).. 475
Sept. 26—Pathe's Weekly, No. 39 (Topical)....1000
Sept. 27—Driven From the Tribe (Am. Dr.)..1000
Sept. 28—Gypsy Honor (Am. Dr.).....1000
Sept. 29—The Bell-ringer of the Abbey (Fairy Tale) 615
Sept. 29—Across the Polar Seas (Sc.)..... 397
Sept. 30—A Convict's Heart (Am. Dr.).....1000

SELIG.

Sept. 8—The Heart of John Barlow (Dr.)....1000
Sept. 11—Kit Carson's Wooing (Dr.)..... 990
Sept. 12—Dad's Girls (Dr.) 1000
Sept. 14—The Wheels of Justice (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 15—The Voyager (Dr.) 670
Sept. 15—A Sight-Seeing Trip Through Boston (Sc.) 330
Sept. 18—Lost In the Arctic (Dr.) 880
Sept. 18—Noted Men (Sc.) 180
Sept. 19—McKee Rankin's '49" (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 21—A Cup of Cold Water (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 22—Shipwrecked (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 25—Two Orphans (1st reel) (Dr.).....1075
Sept. 26—Two Orphans (2d reel) (Dr.)..... 986
Sept. 28—Two Orphans (3d reel) (Dr.).....1000

VITAGRAPH.

Sept. 8—Cherry Blossoms (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 9—Jimmie's Job (Com.).....1000
Sept. 11—Forging (Dr.) 1000
Sept. 12—Her Crowning Glory (Com.).....1000
Sept. 13—The Child Crusoes (Dr.) 1000
Sept. 15—Vitagraph Monthly (Sc.).....1000
Sept. 16—By Woman's Wit (Com.).....1000
Sept. 18—One Flag At Last (Mil. Dr.).....1000
Sept. 19—How Millie Became an Actress (Com.) 1000
Sept. 20—Beyond the Law (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 22—Forgotten (Dr.) 1000
Sept. 23—Over the Chafing Dish (Com.).....
Sept. 23—The Tired, Absent Minded Man (Com.) 1000
Sept. 25—By the Camp Fire's Flicker (Dr.)....1000
Sept. 26—His Sister's Children (Com.).....1000
Sept. 27—A Western Heroine (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 29—Ninety and Nine (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 30—Her Hero (Com.).....1000

THEATRE SALES CO.
211 Dearborn Street, opposite Post Office
CHICAGO, ILLINOIS
Long Distance Phone, Harrison 341
Dealers in Theaters anywhere in the United States and especially Chicago. Write or Call. Make Known Your Wants

Classified Advertisements

[Classified advertisements, three cents per word, cash with order; 50 cents minimum; postage stamps accepted.]

SITUATIONS WANTED.

WANTED—Position as motion picture operator. Can give reference. No objection to town. Address, Lock Box 124, Lima, Ohio.

YOUNG MAN—(39), married, strictly sober, wants position as manager of motion picture theater, has own machine. Can handle all details. Address, R. McKAY, 946 Manhattan Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

AT LIBERTY—About Sept. 20th, expert moving picture operator or manager. Long experience. No booze or cigarettes. Electrician. Repair machines. Best of references. Wish to hear from first-class house. Address, OPERATOR, Care Photo Gallery, Dorney Park, Allentown, Pa.

AT LIBERTY—October 1st, two A-1 operators. Six years' experience; references; married; not boozers. A-1 advertisement and card writers. Will work single. Want contracts. MAYNAN BROTHERS, Care General Delivery, Fremont, Neb.

OPERATOR—Experienced, desires position as assistant, understands electrical work and generally useful. FELDMAN, 102 West 37th Street, New York City.

AT LIBERTY—Manager, vaudeville, experienced, salary and commission. Recently sold my own theater. Address, George Bowley, care Moving Picture World, 125 East 23rd St., New York City.

THEATER FOR SALE.

Motion picture business paying $100.00 per week net profit. No other outfit of its kind in the United States. Don't answer this advertisement unless you have $1,600.00 cash to invest. Address, E. G. KAY, General Delivery, Quincy, Ill.

FOR SALE—Theater seating 225. Best location in city of 33,000. Clearing $100 weekly. Good reason. Address, KENNEDY BROTHERS, Nickelodeon Theater, Galesburg, Ill.

Moving picture theater for sale or lease, well located. 366 seats. Two No. 6 Powers machines. Full description. Terms and reason for selling on application. Box 713, Jacksonville, Fla.

THEATER FOR RENT.

FOR RENT—The Columbia Opera House, of North Adams, Mass.; population 22,000; capacity eight hundred. Large stage and suitable scenery. Opera, vaudeville and moving pictures. Address, 100 Holden St., North Adams, Mass.

EQUIPMENT FOR SALE.

At a bargain. One Powers No. 6 machine, one H. & H. transformer, 160 opera chairs, good as new. Address, LOCK BOX 505, Fargo, N. Dak.

Complete Standard American Moving Picture Machine, complete extra attachment; four moving picture lenses, two stereo lenses, two rheostats, one Taylor fiber apartment trunk, 120 foot No. 6 stage cable, 24 foot reinforced curtain, 2 full reels of film; 75 miscellaneous slides, 3 sets of condensers, 2 reels carrying cases, extra parts wire, etc. Complete outfit for travel. Cost when new $425. A reasonable offer considered. G. S. MILLER, 54 Main Street (Tel. 2206 Yonkers), Yonkers, N. Y.

FOR SALE—Edengraph picture machine. As good as new. Used only two months. Price $110.00. Grand Opera House, Dubuque, Iowa.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Will invest up to $500 in established picture show in or about New York with services. CARSON, 22 West 60th Street, New York City.

I will pay liberally for a trip to a good location for pictures or pictures and vaudeville. A postal card will do. Address, EXPANSION, c/o Moving Picture World, New York City.

Film Perforating Dies
The A. Dewes Co.
249 Center Street
Tel. 2351 Spring New York

YERKES' SOUND EFFECTS
Are used exclusively by the Monopol Film Co. for their DANTE'S INFERNO picture, and for the Kinemacolor Co.'s CORONATION PICTURES. Send for Our New Sound Effect List
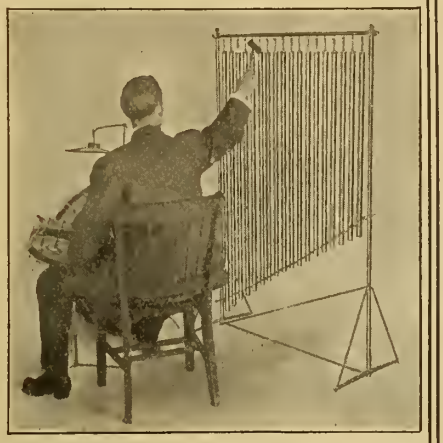
Phone Lenox 600
Yerkes Manufacturing Company, 202 East 88th Street NEW YORK

Small Chimes



Although these Chimes are light enough to be used on transient work, they are not toys by any means, but a complete set of 18 tones, one and a half octaves chromatic (C to F), with sufficient volume and power to fill any size auditorium.

LEEDY MFG. CO., Indianapolis, Ind.
Gentlemen: I received the Small Chimes O. K., and must say that they are the finest addition I have ever made to my line of traps.

I used them the same week I received them and made a big hit with the audience. No drummer in a Picture House can afford to be without them; they really are a valuable instrument.

Yours truly,
O. J. POWELL,
Theatorium, Mt. Carmel, Pa.

Chimes are not a fad—they have come to stay, and any drummer who intends to keep up with the procession will find our Small Chimes a valuable addition to his equipment.

Try a set—your money back if you are not entirely satisfied.

Price $60

LEEDY MFG. CO.
Indianapolis, Indiana.

Ornamental Theatres

PLASTER RELIEF DECORATIONS

Theatres Designed Everywhere

Write for Illustrated Theatre Catalog. Send us Sizes of Theatre for Special Designs

The Decorators Supply Co.
2549 Archer Avenue :: CHICAGO, ILL.

"INFORMATION wanted regarding the names of person or persons running moving picture shows in Maine by the name of Warren Co. They were in Greenville about August 17th, 1911. Liberal reward for information leading to the whereabouts of this company, and names of persons operating it

ACME FILM CO., 12 E. 15th St., New York

WE CAN BOOK YOU ON A MINUTE'S NOTICE

Singers, Piano Players, Drummers, Operators or anything else in the show business.
We personally try out every one, and know their ability before leaving our office.
A TRIAL WILL CONVINCE YOU

Columbia Theatrical Exchange, 405 RANDOLPH BUILDING South East Cor. Clark and Randolph
TELEPHONES: RANDOLPH 756 and AUTOMATIC 44-279 CHICAGO, ILL.

HALLBERG, "THE ECONOMIZER MAN" Exchanges NEW MACHINES FOR OLD!

Stop Tinkering Your Old M. P. Machine. Write me, stating Make, Factory Number, and Condition of your machine, also what make of new machine you desire—I WILL DO THE REST!

Any Old Machine Will Project a Picture. Any OF the Latest Models Will Give You a Good Picture. When Used in Connection with the Hallberg Standard Economizer, You Get the Best that Money Can Buy, Not only in Saving on Your Electric Bill, but in Quality of Light on Screen. If You Are Using any Other Make of Current Saver, Write for my Exchange Proposition for the "Hallberg," Stating Make You Have, and Particulars of Your Current.

All makes Moving Picture Machines, Supplies, Electra Carbons Etc., always in stock.

Electric Fans for either A. C. or D. C. - $7.50 and up
Exhaust Fans for either A. C. or D. C - $15.00 and up

Complete line of Opera Chairs and all supplies for M. P. Theatre

I EQUIP YOUR THEATRE COMPLETELY -:- WRITE FOR CATALOG W. 6

J. H. HALLBERG, 36 East 23rd St., New York

Independent Release Dates

AMERICAN.

Aug. 24—Anna Harris In the Swimming Marathon 500
Aug. 24—Aunty and the Cowboys (Com.).....
Aug. 28—The Western Doctor's Peril (Dr.)...1000
Aug. 31—The Diamond Smugglers (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 4—The Cowboy and the Artist (W. Dr.)..1000
Sept. 7—Three Million Dollars (W. Com.)....1000
Sept. 11—The Stage Robbers of San Juan (Dr.) 1000
Sept. 14—The Mother of the Ranch (Dr.)....1000
Sept. 18—The Gun Man (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 21—The Claim Jumper (Dr.).....1000

CHAMPION.

Aug. 21—When North and South Met (Dr.).... 950
Aug. 23—The Confessional (Dr.)..... 950
Aug. 28—A Daughter of Dixie (Dr.)..... 950
Aug. 30—How Tony Became a Hero (Com.)... 950
Sept. 4—Grant and Lincoln (Dr.)..... 950
Sept. 6—When the Law Came (Dr.)..... 950
Sept. 11—Charley's Buttle (Dr.).....
Sept. 13—The Red Devils (Dr.)..... 950
Sept. 18—Shenandoah (Dr.)..... 950
Sept. 20—The Stolen Horse (Dr.)..... 950
Sept. 25—The Black Horse Troop of Culver (Scenic) 950
Sept. 27—The Cook of the Ranch (Com.)..... 950

ECLAIR.

Aug. 21—The Edelweiss (Dr.) .....
Aug. 21—How They Work in Cinema (Com.)..
Aug. 28—A Marriage in the Stars (Com.)..... 755
Aug. 28—An Obliging Young Man (Com.)..... 285
Sept. 4—All On Account of a Coat (Com.).... 886
Sept. 11—How Poor Babies Are Reared in Paris (Edu.)..... 630
Sept. 11—How Teddy Lost His Bet (Com.).... 285
Sept. 18—Magic Music (Trick)..... 330
Sept. 18—When the Leaves Fall (Dr.)..... 665
Sept. 25—A Just General (Military Dr.).....1000
Oct. 2—Hearts and Eyes (Dr.)..... 630
Oct. 2—For Your Hats, Ladies! (Edu.)..... 370

GREAT NORTHERN.

July 29—The Engagement Ring (Dr.).....
July 29—A Happy Home.....
Aug. 5—The Burglar and the Girl (Dr.).....
Aug. 12—The Mother's Mark (Dr.).....
Aug. 12—Teddy Trained By His Mother (Com.)
Aug. 19—The Victory of Love (Dr.)..... 950
Aug. 26—A Traitor to His Country (Dr.).....
Sept. 2—The Foundling (Dr.).....
Sept. 9—A Dream with a Lesson (Dr.).....
Sept. 16—The Conspirators (Dr.).....
Sept. 23—Caught In His Own Net (Dr.).....

IMP.

Aug. 21—Love In a Tepee (Dr.)..... 500
Aug. 24—As a Boy Dreams (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 28—His Royal Highness (Com.).....
Aug. 28—Hot Springs, Arkansas (Sc.).....
Aug. 31—The Toss of a Coin (Com.).....
Sept. 4—The Haunted House (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 7—Duty (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 11—By the House that Jack Built (Dr.) 1000
Sept. 14—The Brothers (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 18—The Great Charleston Hurricane Flood (Scenic) 500
Sept. 18—The Bicycle Bug's Dream (Com.).. 500
Sept. 21—By Registered Mail (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 25—The Co-Ed Professor (Com.)..... 750
Sept. 25—Through the Dells of the Wisconsin in a Motor Boat (Sc.)..... 250
Sept. 28—'Tween Two Loves (Dr.).....1000

LUX.

Aug. 18—A Child's Conrageous Act (Dr.)..... 540
Aug. 25—Bill Follows the Doctor's Orders (Com.) 450
Aug. 25—What a Peunyworth Did (Com.)..... 450
Sept. 1—Bill as a Game-Keeper (Com.)..... 504
Sept. 1—The Invisible Wrestler (Com.)..... 340
Sept. 8—Bill Buys a Lobster (Com.)..... 350
Sept. 8—A Romance of a Wager (Dr.)..... 642
Sept. 15—Bill As a Bill Poster (Com.)..... 573
Sept. 15—His Mania for Collecting Antiques (Com.) 357
Sept. 22—Bill as an Express Messenger (Com).. 344
Sept. 22—The Stolen Diamond (Dr.)..... 629

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO.

BISON.

Aug. 22—A Cowboy's Loyalty (Dr.).....
Aug. 25—Pioneer Days (Dr.).....
Aug. 29—An Indian Legend (Dr.).....
Sept. 1—The Sheriff's Love (Dr.).....
Sept. 5—Little Dove's Romance (Dr.).....
Sept. 8—A Western Tramp (Dr.) .....
Sept. 12—The Lost Letter (Dr.).....
Sept. 15—Lone Star's Return (Dr.).....
Sept. 29—The Sheriff's Brother (Dr.).....
Sept. 22—The Missionary's Gratitude (Dr.) ..

AMBROSIO.
(By N. Y. M. P. Co.)

Aug. 30—The Door-Keeper (Dr.).....
Aug. 30—Tweedledum's White Suit (Com.)....
Sept. 6—Tweedledum and the Adventuress (Com.) .....
Sept. 6—Italian Artillery (Scenic).....
Sept. 13—Cain's Retribution (Dr.).....
Sept. 13—Tiny Tom Wins a Lottery Prize (Com.) .....
Sept. 16—The Horse of the Regiment (Dr.)..
Sept. 16—Foolshead—Removal (Com.).....
Sept. 20—Tweedledum's Riding Boots (Com.)..
Sept. 20—Tiny Tom as a Detective (Com.)....

ITALA.

Aug. 26—Foolshead—Chauffeur (Com.) .....
Aug. 26—For a Straw (Com.).....
Sept. 2—Clio and Phyletes (Dr.) .....
Sept. 7—Infinite Ways of Providence (Dr.)
Sept. 9—Foolshead Hypnotizer (Com.).....
Sept. 9—Toto Has a Purse (Com.).....
Sept. 16—The Horse of the Regiment (Dr.)..
Sept. 16—Foolshead Charges Himself with Removal (Com.) .....

NESTOR.

Aug. 30—The Parson and the Bully (Dr.).....
Sept. 2—Mutt & Jeff and the German Band (Com.) .....
Sept. 6—The Flower of the Tribe (W. Dr.)..
Sept. 9—Mutt and Jeff and the Escaped Lunatic (Com.) .....
Sept. 13—At Perry's Ranch (Dr.).....
Sept. 16—Mutt and Jeff and the Newsboys (Com.) .....
Sept. 20—Across the Divide (Dr.).....
Sept. 23—Mutt & Jeff and the Dog Catchers (Com.) .....
Sept. 23—Obliging a Friend (Com.).....
Sept. 27—The Young Doctor (Dr.).....
Sept. 30—Mutt & Jeff as Reporters (Com.)....
Sept. 30—Getting Even (Com.).....

POWERS.

Aug. 15—Babes In the Woods (Dr.).....
Aug. 19—The Squaw's Devotion (Dr.).....
Aug. 22—Black Cloud's Debt (Dr.).....
Aug. 26—The Indian's Love (Dr.).....
Aug. 29—The White Chief (Dr.).....
Sept. 2—Silver Tail and His Squaw (Dr.)....
Sept. 5—Red Feather's Friendship (Dr.)..... 960
Sept. 9—The Twins Squaw (Dr.)..... 975
Sept. 12—Gray Wolf's Grief (Dr.)..... 950
Sept. 16—The Horse Thief (Dr.)..... 950
Sept. 19—Lost In a Hotel (Dr.).....
Sept. 19—An Old Time Nightmare (Dr.).....
Sept. 23—Red Man's Honor (Dr.).....
Sept. 26—The Falls of Bohemia (Sc.)..... 300
Sept. 26—Imaginative Willie (Com.)..... 670
Sept. 30—The Half-Breed's Atonement (Dr.).. 970

RELIANCE.

Aug. 5—His Son (Dr.).....
Aug. 9—The City (Dr.).....
Aug. 12—The Pitfall (Dr.).....
Aug. 16—Out Of Darkness (Dr.) .....
Aug. 23—A Little Child (Dr.).....
Aug. 26—The Godfather (Dr.).....
Aug. 30—A Straight Path (Dr.).....
Sept. 2—Clouds and Sunshine (Dr.).....
Sept. 6—Temptation (Dr.) .....
Sept. 9—His Dream (Dr.) .....
Sept. 13—The Cobbler (Dr.).....
Sept. 16—Pals (Dr.) .....
Sept. 20—The Stolen Play (Dr.).....

REX.

June 1—The Monogram "J. O." (Dr.).....
June 8—From Death To Life (Dr.).....
June 15—The Twins (Dr.).....
June 22—On the Brink (Dr.).....
June 29—Securing Evidence (Dr.).....
July 6—Fate (Dr.) .....
July 13—The Vagabond (Dr.).....
July 20—Sherlock Holmes, Jr. (Dr.).....
July 27—Her Way (Dr.).....
Aug. 3—The Artist Financier (Dr.).....
Aug. 10—The White Red Man (Dr.).....
Aug. 17—The Colonel's Daughter (Dr.).....
Aug. 24—Castles in the Air (Com.).....1000
Aug. 31—The Torn Scarf (Dr.).....
Sept. 7—Picturesque Colorado (Scenic).....
Sept. 14—Faith (Dr.) .....
Sept. 21—The Rose and the Dagger (Dr.).....

SOLAX.

Aug. 18—Let No Man Put Asunder (Dr.).....
Aug. 23—A Gay Bachelor (Com.).....
Aug. 25—The Stampede (Military).....
Aug. 30—The Patched Shoe (Com.).....
Sept. 1—The Hold Up (Military).....
Sept. 6—Hector's Inheritance (Com.).....
Sept. 8—The Best Policy (Mil. Dr.).....
Sept. 13—Her Uncle's Will (Com.).....
Sept. 15—The Altered Message (Mil. Dr.).....
Sept. 20—Oh! You Stenographer (Com.).....
Sept. 22—Nellie's Soldier (Mil. Dr.).....
Sept. 27—How Hopkins Raised the Rent (Com.)
Sept. 29—An Italian's Gratitude (Dr.).....

THANHOUSER.

Aug. 15—Nobody Loves a Fat Woman (Com.)..
Aug. 18—The Train Despatcher (Dr.).....
Aug. 22—The Cross (Dr.).....
Aug. 25—The Romance Of Lonely Island (Dr.)
Aug. 29—The Moth (Com.).....
Sept. 1—Romeo and Juliet (Dr.).....
Sept. 5—Count Ivan and the Waitress (Dr.)
Sept. 8—Romeo and Juliet—Part 2 (Dr.)....
Sept. 12—The Buddhist Priestess (Dr.).....
Sept. 15—In the Chorus (Dr.).....
Sept. 19—The Lie (Dr.) .....
Sept. 22—The Honeymooners (Dr.) .....
Sept. 26—Lochinvar (Dr.).....
Sept. 29—Love's Sacrifice (Dr.).....

YANKEE.

Aug. 4—Truth Shall Prevail (Dr.).....
Aug. 7—Kathleen Mavonrneen (Dr.).....
Aug. 11—Grey Wolf's Squaw (Dr.).....
Aug. 14—A Good Natured Man (Com.).....
Aug. 14—A Children's Paradise (Scenic).....
Aug. 18—Her Father's Secretary (Dr.).....
Aug. 21—Colleen Bawn (Dr.).....
Aug. 25—Retaliation (Dr.) .....
Aug. 28—The Power of Devotion (Dr.).....
Sept. 1—A Great Wrong Righted (Dr.).....
Sept. 4—Inshavogue (Dr.).....
Sept. 8—Mesmerizing Moe (Com.).....
Sept. 8—Faded Rosea (Dr.).....
Sept. 11—Tangled Heartstringa (Dr.).....
Sept. 15—Woman (Dr.) .....
Sept. 18—The Star Reporter (Dr.).....
Sept. 22—The Girl and the Chauffeur (Dr.)....

Get Simpson's Celebrated Song Slides
OF ALL THE POPULAR SONGS
Perfection of Artistic Coloring
ALFRED L. SIMPSON
113 W. 132d St. N. Y. City

Money Makers for you. Think of the people passing by or out of your place that would drop another nickel or dime. Many styles. Catalog No. 34 tells all.
KINGERY MFG. CO.
CINCINNATI, O.

FILM FOR SALE
Over 1000 reels in stock at all times, from $2.50 up.

Three Musketeers	2 reels	$50.00
Dame of Montsereau	2 reels	50.00
Fall of Troy	2 reels	75.00

Send for catalogue.
A. J. CLAPHAM
12 E. 15th St., New York, N.Y.

Operators!
I guarante quick and satisfactory repair work on all machines. Only genuine parts supplied. Get my prices on ONE DROP OIL and BULL DOG CEMENT the best articles of their kind on the market.
H. A. MACKIE
853 Broadway, Cor. 14th Street New York
'Phone: 2478 Stuyvesant

SPECIAL ROLL TICKETS The Big Ticket. Any Printing Any Colors

5,000	$1.25	20,000	$4.60	50,000	$7.50
10,000	$2.50	25,000	$5.50	100,000	$10.00

Get the Samples Stock Tickets, 6 Cents
NATIONAL TICKET COMPANY - - - Shamokin, Pa.

We've got the Indian Sign on all the others

A Nice Little Splash, Tues. Sept. 26—with

THE FALLS OF BOHEMIA

An exquisite nature study taken by our special traveling photographer. Showing all the famous cataracts of Bohemia, a country rich in nature's beauty. Including also many views of some of the placid lakes of Bohemia that are equally as interesting in a quiet way as any of the views of the more turbulent waters.

On the Same Reel—A Scream for the Children

IMAGINATIVE WILLIE

Another boy story. One that will delight any child. Every Exhibitor should devote a certain part of his show to the delights of children. This is a tale of a boy who pretended to have been out West. He came home with all kinds of queer yarns, but his friends found him out. We are having unusual success with our juvenile pictures. They are filling the long felt want for first class comedies.

A Strong, Emotional Story—Sat. Sept. 30

The Half-Breed's Atonement

The half-breed is proverbially bad, but whether he is so by nature or whether from abuse by white and red man is a question here taken up. Bret Harte wrote a pretty poem in which he took the half-breed's part. This reel is a picture poem in which we take the half-breed's part of the argument. A story of tender pathos and sacrifice with the love of wife and child as the underlying theme of action. A real feature.

Three High Class Subjects for the Current Week
Tuesday, September 19—LOST IN A HOTEL
On the Same Reel--AN OLD TIME NIGHTMARE
Saturday, September 23—RED STAR'S HONOR

POWERS PICTURE PLAYS
145 West 45th Street, New York

GUNDLACH

Projection Lenses

Will Improve Your Picture

make it sharper and increase the illumination

TO ORDER, give the height and width of the screen, width of picture wanted and distance from lens to center of screen. State make of machine.

A complete stock is carried by

NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY, New York
ENTERPRISE OPTICAL MFG. CO., Chicago

Every lens is sold subject to approval

Gundlach-Manhattan Optical Company
808 Clinton Ave., So. Rochester, N. Y.

MOTION PICTURE MACHINES

EDISON MOTIOGRAPH POWERS

Stereopticons, Post Card Projectors
Lantern Slides, Repair Parts, Supplies
Carbons, Tickets

Catalog Free on Request

AMUSEMENT SUPPLY COMPANY
105 No. Dearborn St. - - CHICAGO

FEATURE FILM CO., 412 Superior Street Toledo, Ohio

OFFER BOOKINGS ON THE

Temptations of a Great City
Great Train Robbery
Fall of Troy

AND TWENTY OTHER GOOD FEATURES

PLENTY OF PAPER, HERALDS. : : : SUMMER RATES

WRITE TODAY

H. F. HOFFMAN

Lecturer of Special Releases
New York City and Vicinity

Now booking engagements for

Enoch Arden Dante's Inferno

and other feature pictures,

Care MOVING PICTURE WORLD
TELEPHONE, 1344 GRAMERCY

NOW READY Bound Volume No. 8 JANUARY TO JUNE, 1911

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

Price, Two Dollars EACH

Postage or Express Charges EXTRA

Supply Limited Order Now

MOVING PICTURE WORLD
125 East 23rd Street : : : New York City

WARNING

All persons are hereby notified that H. T. May is not a solicitor for the Moving Picture World. Do not pay money to him under any circumstances. When last heard from he was in Boston, Mass. His present address will be appreciated.

—Moving Picture World

WOOD FOLDING CHAIRS

All styles, hard maple. Seats fold independent of legs. Best and cheapest chair on the market for Moving Picture Shows.

Columbus Awning & Furniture Company
832 Ninth Avenue New York City

NEW FIELD
BIG MONEY
EASY WORK

DEMAND UNLIMITED.

Why don't you think up plots for Motion Picture plays? It's easy, and pays well. We teach you by mail how to write and sell your plots. Many successful graduates.

FULL DETAILS FREE.

ASSOCIATED MOTION PICTURE SCHOOLS
911 Chicago Opera House Building CHICAGO

The Iroquois Theatre Fire

at Chicago in 1903 will never be forgotten because of the terrible, needless, inexcusable sacrifice of 596 lives. Same old story of a panic-mad audience piling upon each other in the vain effort to escape through fire-doors that would not open. The Von Duprin Self-Releasing Fire Exit Latch opens fire-doors instantly at the slightest pressure on a solid bar stretching across the door, about waist high. This device has never failed—it cannot fail. Try it and see why. Try it now. A day's delay may cost hundreds of lives. The demonstration will cost you nothing. Catalog?

Safe Exit is a Universal Demand

Vonnegut Hardware Co., Distributers, Indianapolis, Ind.

MAKE 'EM YOURSELF SLIDES

Make them yourself. Written with pen and ink or typewriter. Three minutes to make a slide. Used for advertising slides, to announce future or feature programmes, for chorus slides when chorus slide is missing. We send four colors of gelatin. The slides look well and any one can make them. They are handy also for announcing vaudeville acts. In fact they may be readily used for anything you may wish to say to your audience

For the sum of three dollars ($3) cash with order, we will send by express, charges not prepaid, the following:

24 cover glass, 1 package binder strips, 1 dozen mats, 1 instruction sheet, 1 form sheet and 50 strips assorted colors gelatin—enough for from 300 to 400 slides. Order now. Address

UTILITY TRANSPARENCY CO.
1733 West 9th St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

Taylor's Theatrical Agency

51 West 28th Street
NEW YORK

—MAKING A SPECIALTY OF—

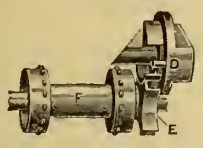
BOOKING MOVING PICTURE THEATRES

VOCALISTS, PIANISTS, VIOLINISTS, TRAP DRUMMERS, INSTRUMENTALISTS
OPERATORS, PICTURE DEMONSTRATORS, ETC.

OUR SONG SLIDE SERVICE

We buy all new releases of Song Slides and are strictly up to the minute
WRITE US NOW and get the BEST SLIDE SERVICE IN NEW YORK

Lavezzi's 100 Pointers of Film, Intermittent and Head Adjustment 50c



Lavezzi's Improved Cams, Stars, Sprockets, Aperture Plates, Shutters, Operator's Tools. Machines Rebuilt, Repairing, etc.

LAVEZZI MACHINE WORKS, 2940 Herndon St., CHICAGO

OPERATORS

DO YOU WANT TO ELIMINATE A LOT OF YOUR MACHINE TROUBLES?
You can do so with

Riner's Soft Rubber Sprocket Rollers

They help to steady the picture and keep the film on the sprocket better than any metallic roller and are easy on the film.
Riner's sprocket rollers are made for No. 5 and No. 6 Power's machine.

75 cents each or 3 for $2.00

L. E. RINER, 1341 La Salle Ave., Chicago, Ill.

SONG SLIDES

Non-Breakable—Non-Inflammable
Colored Song and Announcement Slides
Patent Applied For

Just the kind of a slide you have all been waiting for. Guaranteed against breaking from heat or the careless operator. Send for list. Made and sold only by the original inventors. None others genuine.

NORTH AMERICAN SLIDE CO., 143 North 8th Street PHILADELPHIA PA.

LARGEST PAPER! LARGEST CIRCULATION!

WRITE FOR OUR NEW ADVERTISING RATES TO-DAY

MOVING PICTURE WORLD, 125 E. 23rd St., N. Y. City

"Non Pareil" Condensers

Pure White—Clear as a Crystal.
$2.00 Pair. Postage 40c. extra.
S. B. Leland, Montpelier, Vt.

SPECIAL OFFER! Four Spiegel Motion Announcement Slides and One Patented Slide Carrier for $5.00

All Theaters must have the Spiegel Patented Slide Carrier to run the Spiegel Motion Slides. National Advertisers are using the Spiegel Motion Slides extensively.
Be prepared for the business by having the Spiegel Slide Carrier in your theater. Write for catalogue to your nearest dealer, or to

The American Motion Slide Co., Exclusive Manufacturers in the United States
611 First National Bank Building, Chicago, Ill.

Moving Picture Machine Mfgrs. & Exchs. We beg to announce that we have increased our facilities for the making of supplies for moving pictures such as:

Lamp Houses, Magazine Boxes, Reels, Arc Lamps, Rheostats, Switch Boxes, etc.

and we are now prepared to show you a saving of money such as no other concern can do. Our workmanship and material is guaranteed to be all that is desirable. Send us your samples and let us figure with you. Our N. Y. representative will call on you if requested.

THE STERN MFG. CO., 61 W. 14th St., New York
Main office and factory, 109 N. 10th St., Phila., Pa.

THE BIGGEST SCOOP OF THE YEAR

BIG ED. WALSH, the most popular hero of the diamond, accompanied by little Cleo, the wonderful three-year-old cow-puncher, captured by camera while viewing the Cow Boys' Convention at Lander, Wyo., the most thrilling and exciting Western celebration ever witnessed.
Vividly portrayed in that wonderful wild Western production, OLD WYOMING DAYS. Absolutely the livest State rights proposition on the market.

WRITE OR WIRE AT ONCE

THE WESTERN FEATURE FILM CO.

Room 304-167-W-Washington St.
Phone Main 2303, Chicago, Ill.

For reference as to Quality consult the following: The Vitagraph Co. of America, The Independent Moving Pictures Co. of America., The Powers Picture Plays Co., Nestor Co., Thanhouser Co., Rex, Champion, Melies, Gaumont, St. Louis Motion Picture Co.

Corcoran Moving Picture Tanks

Develop your films to perfection. Save Time and Reduce Your Expenses by using a "Corcoran Film Development Tank." All up-to-date houses are now installing the "Corcoran System."

Send for Price List No. 5

A. J. CORCORAN, Inc.
No. 11 JOHN STREET :: NEW YORK CITY

MOVING PICTURE MACHINES SOLD ON EASY PAYMENTS

Write us for full particulars. Here is your chance to start in the moving picture business on a small investment, or if you are already in the business you can buy yourself a new machine without missing the money. We are moving picture specialists. Write us regarding anything pertaining to the business.

Muncie Film and Supply Co.
202 1-2 E. MAIN ST. MUNCIE, IND.

American Moving Picture Machine Co.

MANUFACTURERS OF THE

STANDARD

Automatic Moving Picture Machine

101-102 Beekman Street New York

FIGHT FOR IT

BIDS are invited for the American exhibition rights of the film depict ng the fight between Bombardier Wells and Jack Johnson in England for the championship of the world. This film will be a box office winner.

Address B. M. P., care of M. P. World

NOW BOOKING
EASTERN STATES ONLY
LOUISE M. MARION
IN HER OWN NOVELTIES
PATRIOTIC AND ILLUSTRATED POEMS
REFINED ENTERTAINING
TERMS REASONABLE

Great Novelty and Drawing Card

LOUISE M. MARION
PRESENT ADDRESS
29 South 12th Street Newark, N. J.

A Good Projection

with exceptionally fine lines and contrast
IN YOUR PICTURE
you can obtain only with

LAST 25 TO 40% LONGER THAN THE ORDINARY SORT

GIVE 1/3 MORE LIGHT THAN ANY OTHER ON SAME CURRENT

BIO CARBONS

RECOGNIZED STANDARD

MILWAUKEE
114-116
Huron St.

You will quickly see the point after once using a BIO carbon

CHARLES L. KIEWERT CO.
165 Greenwich Street, NEW YORK

SAN FRANCISCO
19
Sutter St.

Courtesy N. Y. Edison Co.

I Bet You Don't Know What This Fellow is Doing. Well read the following

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT!

On October 1st, HALLBERG'S Complete 1912 Motion Picture Catalogue and Reference Book will be ready for distribution.

This book will contain 100 pages of important matter, several hundred illustrations, tables and valuable data. Novelties never before shown in a similar work are here illustrated.

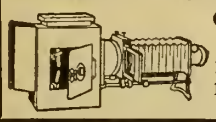
This valuable reference book will be mailed to you on receipt of 25c., which barely covers cost of mailing, etc. On your first order, amounting to $2 or more, credit will be allowed for this 25c.

Send for this book at once and get in on the first edition.

J. H. HALLBERG, 36 East 23rd St., New York

MOVING PICTURE MACHINES

Stereopticons, Slides, Accessories



CHAS. M. STEBBINS
1028 Main St.
KANSAS CITY, MO
Large Line of Edison Goods
Established 1899

Bargains Bargains

Motion Picture Machines $35 up. Lubin 1906 only $65. Powers No. 6, Edison Model B and Standard a specialty. Model B Gas Outfit. All Opaque Machines. Send for Sup. No. 33 list of Bargains in used Machines, Stereopticons, etc.

MOTION PICTURE MACHINES WANTED

Harbach & Co., 809 Filbert St., Philadelphia, Pa.

THE EXHIBITOR'S LIBRARY

Lectures for Feature Films

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD has prepared for the special benefit of the exhibitors of feature films a pamphlet, "HOW TO PUT ON THE CRUSADERS OR JERUSALEM DELIVERED." This pamphlet contains: A synopsis of the story; a complete set of suitable press notices; a complete lecture (written by W. Stephen Bush); suggestions as to musical program and effects. Price of booklet One Dollar.

SECOND EDITION of "How to Put on the Passion Play," by W. Stephen Bush, now ready for distribution. Price One Dollar per copy. The value of this book is well known throughout the moving picture field and has been enlarged in the second edition.

"Key and Complete Lecture for Dante's Inferno." Indispensable to every exhibitor who wishes to use the film of the Milano Films Company. Contains press notices of suitable and various sizes, a synopsis of the story, a special key good for reprinting and general distribution, and a most complete and exhaustive lecture by W. Stephen Bush, running evenly and smoothly with the action on the screen. Price $2.50.

MOVING PICTURE WORLD
125 East 23rd St. N. Y. City

ON VELVET

The first Orpheum Collection of Moving Picture music (dramatic and descriptive) was issued July 18, 1910. It paid for itself in five months.

"No. 2" Orpheum Collection was issued August 17, 1911. Its only advertisement so far has been a circular mailed to former patrons. Did anybody respond? The first week's sales paid for the engraving and printing. At this rate, by the time this ad appears, No. 2 will also be

ON VELVET

Can you beat it? Don't that show that "The Orpheum Collection" is a winner? This issue (No. 2) is published for piano only, contains a Chinese and several good Indian numbers, two pages of U. S. Army bugle calls and lots of fine dramatic music. Twenty-four separate leaves, same as the first issue. Send for free sample page No. 2. For the next 90 days this music will be sent post paid for 58 cents. Both issues $1.15. Don't wait too long.

Clarence E. Sinn
1501 Sedgwick St. Chicago, Ill.

SCENARIO WRITERS!

If your scenarios do not sell find out why. Perhaps your manuscript can be rewritten and made saleable, and your mistakes may be corrected in future manuscripts. The author of "Technique of the Photoplay," etc., will give your manuscript personal criticism and revision for a fee of only $2.

The work of experienced writers, that conforms to standards for theme and treatment, will be marketed for a commission of 10%. A reading fee of 50c must accompany each script, to cover cost of reading. Please take note that this fee does not cover any criticism in the event that the manuscript is not found available for marketing.

Exhibitors!

Bad Business?

Submit your difficulties to the author of "The Photoplay Theater," and other articles on management, for advice and suggestion, the result of twenty years' experience in amusement enterprises. Simple questions $1 each.

Manufacturers!

Manuscripts developed, $10 each. Send in that scenario that has your staff puzzled and a practical working script will be returned.

Epes Winthrop Sargent
21 East 20th St., N. Y. City

THAT'S THE STUFF!!

THE ORIGINAL BIOGRAPH
CARBONS
THE SPECIAL BRAND FOR PICTURE MACHINES
See that your packages and labels are as shown on cuts

L. E. FRORUP & CO., Importers
232-234 GREENWICH ST. NEW YORK

Opera and Assembly Chairs

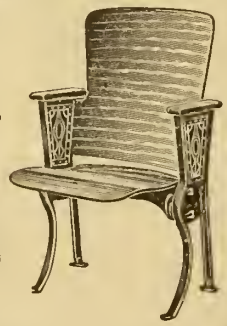
Most popular priced chairs on the market for picture show use.
Prompt Shipments. Write for Catalogue
PEABODY SCHOOL FURNITURE CO.
North Manchester - - Indiana
New York Agents: ROBERT J. EHLERS CO.
Lexington Ave. and 43d St. - New York, N. Y.

OPERA CHAIRS

FOR EVERY PURPOSE
1,000 STYLES
ESTABLISHED 1865
WRITE FOR CAT. No 31
The A. H. Andrews Co.
174-176 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill. Branches in all leading cities

WE CAN HURRY

YOUR ORDER OUT.
STAFFORD Chairs excell all others.
HEAVY FIVE PLY seats and backs.
The last-forever kind, that you are using long after you have forgotten the price.
STEEL CHAIRS TOO
We carry several kinds of good chairs in stock, all guaranteed.
ASK FOR CATALOG 305



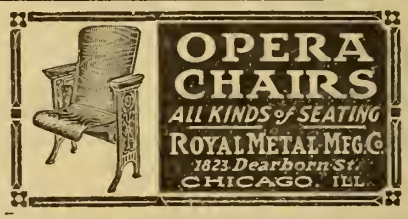
E. H. STAFFORD MFG. CO.
CHICAGO, ILL.

OPERA CHAIRS

GEO. W. BENNETT
744 W. 5th Street
CINCINNATI OHIO

THEATRE SALES CO.

211 Dearborn Street, opposite Post Office
CHICAGO, ILLINOIS
Long Distance Phone, Harrison 341
Dealers in Theatres anywhere in the United States and especially Chicago. Write or Call. Make Known Your Wants



BIGGER and BETTER

SEND YOUR SUBSCRIPTION
TO-DAY FOR
The Moving Picture Paper That Is Worth While

Domestic	-	$3.00 Per Annum
Canada	-	3.50 " "
Foreign	-	4.00 " "

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD
Box 226 Madison Sq. P. O. N. Y. City

FOLDING CHAIRS

For Moving Picture Shows, Grand Stands, Assembly Halls, etc. In sections if wanted.
Write for Catalog No. 2
The Kauffman Manufacturing Co.
ASHLAND, OHIO

CHEAP

STEEL FRAME THEATRE CHAIRS
ABSOLUTELY NON-BREAKABLE

Suitable for small Theatres and Moving Picture Shows. We carry these chairs in stock and can ship immediately.
Second Hand Chairs
Also seating for Out-of-door use
Address Dept. W.
STEEL FURNITURE CO., GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.
New York Office: 150 Fifth Avenue

It pays to discriminate when you buy
THEATRE SEATING

WRITE TODAY for Cat. V2 (Mov. Picture Chairs) and Cat. V3 (Upholstered Chairs)
Send Floor Sketch for Free Seating Plan
Widest range of styles and prices. Large Stocks
American Seating Company
218 S. Wabash Ave., CHICAGO 19 W. 18th St., NEW YORK

SCENERY

PAINTED FOR MOVING PICTURE THEATERS
P. J. DONIGAN SCENIC STUDIO, 418 S. Kedzie Ave., Chicago, Ill. Phone Garfield 2710
Write for our prices on Picture Curtains

In answering advertisements kindly mention The Moving Picture World.

SPECIAL TRIAL OFFER ON AROMA FOAM

The Powerful Perfumed Disinfectant
Immediately upon receipt of your remittance of $1.96 for a four quart order of assorted Geranium, Luxuran, Azuran and Viodor, we will ship you FREE a large compressed air sprayer and an artistically colored glass slide.
Sanitary Service Corporation
82 Wall Street, New York City
Address all communications to Laboratory, 1293 FULTON STREET, BROOKLYN, N. Y.

OH! MR. EXHIBITOR!! THINK OF THE MOTHERLESS, THE FATHERLESS AND THE

Childless homes as the result of theater panics. Protect the lives of your patrons by installing our "ANTI-PANIC" THEATER CHAIR. 26 Dead at Cannonsburg, 176 at Boyertown, 575 at Iriquois Theater, Chicago. Make these horrors impossible.
Our chair is a friend to the Public.
It advertises your theater and makes your business grow.
It is a space-saver, life-saver, money-saver. Gives 25% more seating.
IT IS THE ONLY SANITARY CHAIR
It will make your theater all aisles.
It is the world's greatest theater chair, perfected to the highest degree.
Write today for Circular A. THE HARDESTY MFG. CO., Canal Dover, Ohio, U. S. A.

Mirroroide

The 20th Century Rollable Curtain or Screen

Has The World Beat

Not Aluminum But A Pure Mercury Foil Amalgamation

It won't Crack, Peel or Tarnish.

It will last a lifetime.

Pictures 90 per cent. Brighter, with more detail, better perspective; and with a stereoptic depth minutely and clearly defined.

Haze, Flare and Eye Strain Entirely Eradicated.

Keep your theatre brightly illuminated during projection. Save ⅓ of your juice bill.

It is not only the Best But the Cheapest

Mr. Chas. Southworth,
Fairyland Theatre,
Gouverneur, N. Y.

Pictures projected on your Mirroroide Screen are the talk of the town. Bright and clear as a crystal.

Today we received a second order from Mr. Southworth.

Get samples, compare with any curtain or screen on the market, prove it to yourself that the Mirroroide Curtain or Screen is the World's Best.

Demonstration samples ¼ yard 50 cts. Ordinary samples 4 cts. in stamps.

The Benjamin-Genter Co.
Newburgh, New York

NOW READY
DANTE'S INFERNO ILLUSTRATED LECTURE
TWO STYLES
24 beautifully colored slides, - $15.00
76 " " " 40.00
Lecture free with each set. We supply heralds and one sheet posters
A. J. CLAPHAM Manufacturers Fine Art Slides 12 East 15th Street, New York

M. P. MACHINES SOLD ON INSTALLMENT.
WRITE AT ONCE FOR PARTICULARS
OUR FEATURE FILMS will DOUBLE your BOX OFFICE RECEIPTS. Send for list now. DON'T DELAY
Chicago CHICAGO FILM EXCHANGE Omaha

Musicians Wanted!
"KNACK READING MUSIC AT SIGHT" booklet. mailed for 10 cents.
Celebrated Knack System of Playing Vaudeville and Dramatic Music—Transposing—Faking—Arranging—taught by mail. Particulars Free.
KNACK STUDIO (Dept. 4) DANVILLE, ILL.

THE WORLD FAMOUS
FOLDING ORGAN
It is indispensable for traveling purposes, musical companies, concert troupes, orchestras and thousands of other purposes. Nothing better known. Send for full particulars, description and prices. Manufactured by Bilhorn Bros., 136 W. Lake St. Chicago, Ill.

COMPENSARC
That's the device that saves Moving Picture men two-thirds on their electric light bills, and yet gives better light. Did you see our ad. last week? Well, don't look it up. Just write for our
Booklet 15018
Fort Wayne Electric Works
of GENERAL ELECTRIC COMPANY
1402 Broadway
FORT WAYNE, INDIANA 733

Motion Picture Handbook
FOR
Managers and Operators
Price $1.50
Postage Prepaid
MOVING PICTURE WORLD
125 E. 23rd Street : New York City

When Your Picture Machine Needs Repairing
Why don't you send it to us?
We have the best equipped machine shop in the country and can repair any make of machine. Write us and get acquainted.
We buy second hand machines.
GEO. M. HOKE SUPPLY CO., 176 N. State St., Bet. Lake & Randolph Chicago, Ill.

In answering advertisements kindly mention
THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD

Vaudeville and Moving Picture Mgrs.—NOTICE:
I have opened an office in New York City to supply you with short cast stock companies. I can furnish you a complete stock company for the same price you are now paying for vaudeville, playing all short versions of old-time and popular plays. I furnish everything, no work or trouble for you. Have three companies now working in New York and Brooklyn. Call or address
JAS. THATCHER, ROOM 225, KNICKERBOCKER THEATRE BLDG., N. Y. CITY

Film Exchanges Take Notice
We can buy your entire FILM EXCHANGE or part, and will pay spot cash for same.

PROSPECTIVE MONEY MAKERS
Will sell you a complete line of films, machines, slides, etc., to open a first-class FILM RENTAL OFFICE, or can sell you any films you may want. Send for our latest BARGAIN LIST.
GENERAL FILM BROKERS, 23 E. Jackson Blvd., Chicago, Ill

TRADE E MARK

THE ONE BIG BOOM OF THE HOUR

is the moving picture game, and it's making money for the wise ones who play it right from the start. First—get

THE EDISON PROJECTING KINETOSCOPE

—then you'll get the crowds. And they'll keep coming and keep the money rolling in.

Because the Edison projects pictures that don't hurt the eyes—clear, non-flickering, steady, brilliant.

Because the Edison keeps the show running smoothly; it's built to stand the steady grind and built so that you can get at every part instantly—and all parts are interchangeable and guaranteed. No delays for repairs.

Edison accessories are no less reliable than the complete machine itself. Full particulars upon application.

Thomas A. Edison, Inc.
72 Lakeside Ave., Orange, N. J.

"The Only Electric Moving Picture Show in Town!"

Wouldn't that sound fine in your ads, or on your sign?

And wouldn't it bring the crowds?

You can do it if you HURRY and get your order in before the other fellow does.

Then on your curtain put a spiel like this:

DID YOU NOTICE how much clearer and steadier our pictures are than any others you ever saw?
It's because we run our picture machine with a wonderful Kimble Motor, instead of by hand -- the common way.
Costs us more; but gives YOU more for your money.
If you ever catch us asleep -- shout!!

REMEMBER, there's only ONE alternating current picture machine motor in the world—the

NIMBLE KIMBLE A C

because there's only ONE motor that gives you variable speeds—(300 to 3,000 revolutions per minute) by imperceptible gradations, instead of by steps or jerks.

And only one motor that stops, starts, reverses or changes speeds by means of a single lever.

Think of the crowd—catching "stunts" you can put over if you had your hands free to manipulate other apparatus!

You'll set them all guessing.

EASY TO CONNECT

Either belt direct from grooved pulley on motor to pulley on flywheel shaft of machine, or take off crank, slip on a 6-inch pulley; belt from that to 2-inch pulley on countershaft, with a second belt from 15-inch pulley on countershaft to motor pulley.

EASY TO BUY

The ⅛-H.P. Kimble AC variable speed picture machine motor with grooved pulley is offered, in 110-volt style, for $27.00. 220 volts for $28.50.

Countershaft (if you desire to connect that way) for $10.00—all prices f.o.b. Chicago.

Order now. We will ship promptly.

Kimble Electric Company
1118 Washington Boulevard
CHICAGO

Kimble Electric Company, Chicago.

How soon could you ship a ⅛ h.p. picture machine motor.....volts.....cycles, to operate a No. .....machine, and which method of connecting it do you recommend?

Name .....

P. O..... State.....
Moving Picture World (Date)

G. MÉLIÈS

Captain Courtesy Saves the Mission

THE MISSION WAIF

CAPTAIN COURTESY, road agent and outlaw, on whose head is offered a reward, seeks refuge from his pursuers in the Mission San Louis del Ray. Harbored there also is a beautiful girl of seventeen, adopted as a waif in her infancy. The girl has begun to love before she discovers the outlaw's identity. A tragedy follows that is at once one of the most intense dramas and beautiful stories surrounding the Mission period of Old California.

G. MELIES, 204 EAST 38th ST., NEW YORK CITY

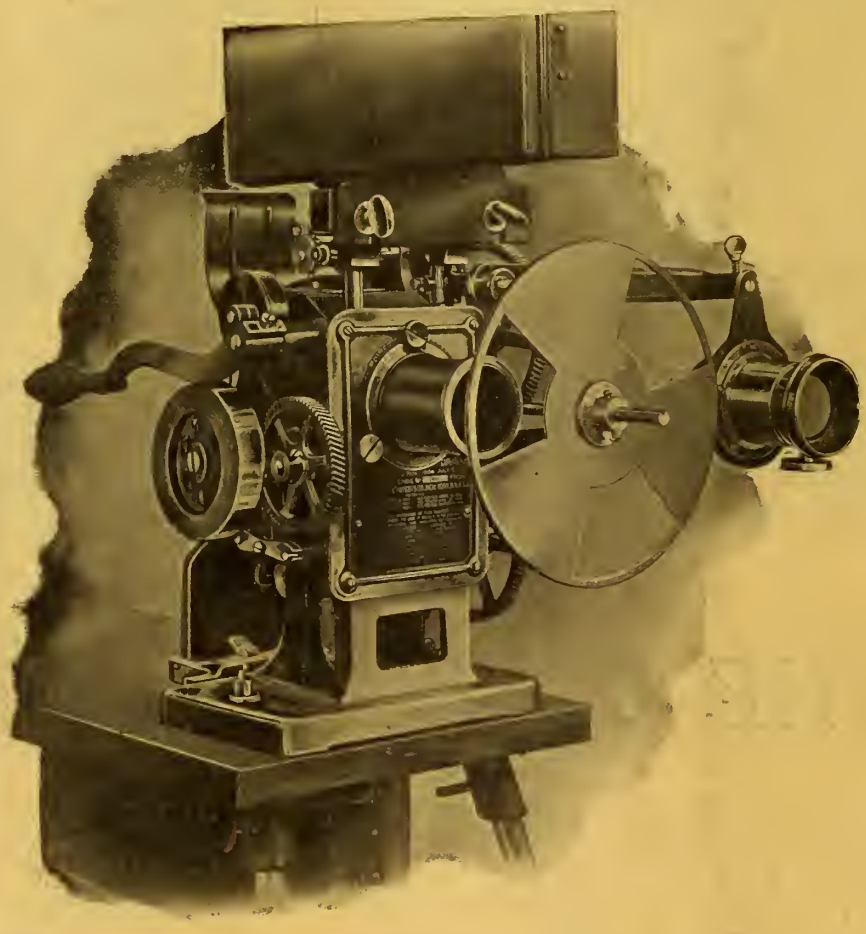
APPROX. 1000 FT 9-28-11

POWER'S CAMERAGRAPH No. 6

An International Success

Simply Perfectly

Perfect Simple



We invite comparison with other makes of machines

Power's No. 6 is in use in the foremost moving picture theatres throughout the world. Don't take our word for its excellence. Ask any one who has used it

Write for Our special proposition G, and "Proof of the Pudding" containing unsolicited testimonials from every State in the Union

NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY

115 NASSAU ST., NEW YORK

For fourteen years the leading makers of Motion Picture Machines

CAREY PRESS, N. Y.

Vol. 9. No. 12 September 30. 1911 Price. 10c.

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

THE FILM INDEX

EXHIBITORS' GUIDE

SCENE FROM "BARBARA FRIETCHIE"—(Champion)

125 East 23rd Street New York–Chicago 169 W. Washington St.

THE THANHOUSER WO-A-WEEK

David Copperfield Serial Advance Notice

The Early Life of David Copperfield = First of the series Released Tuesday, Oct. 17

Little Em'ly and David Copperfield = Second of the series Released Tuesday, Oct. 24

The Loves of David Copperfield = = Third of the series Released Tuesday, Oct. 31

Remember! Each release pictures the most dramatic incidents of the period it covers and is a complete story.

As Mr. Micawber Would Say: Any manifestations of weaknesses in the box office or excruciating symptoms of pecuniary difficulties developed by past dissatisfactions will perhaps be remedied by the felicitous appearance of David Copperfield on the screen—in short, I would say that an exhibitor would indeed show a regrettable lack of enterprise if he failed to appreciate the drawing power of my creator's masterpiece.

The Five Rose Sisters

Released Tuesday, Oct. 3rd

FIVE sisters, although successful on the stage, tire of the life peculiar to their profession, and decide, when they receive a legacy of a house and farm in the country, to retire from the footlights and buckle down to milking cows and feeding chickens.

Their life in the country is made almost impossible by the machinations of a jealous woman, but aided by the failings of a dishonest deacon, the girls win their place among the village folk, and one of the sisters wins the heart of a young clergyman.

A strong exposition of religious hypocrisy.

The East and the West

Released Friday, Oct. 6th

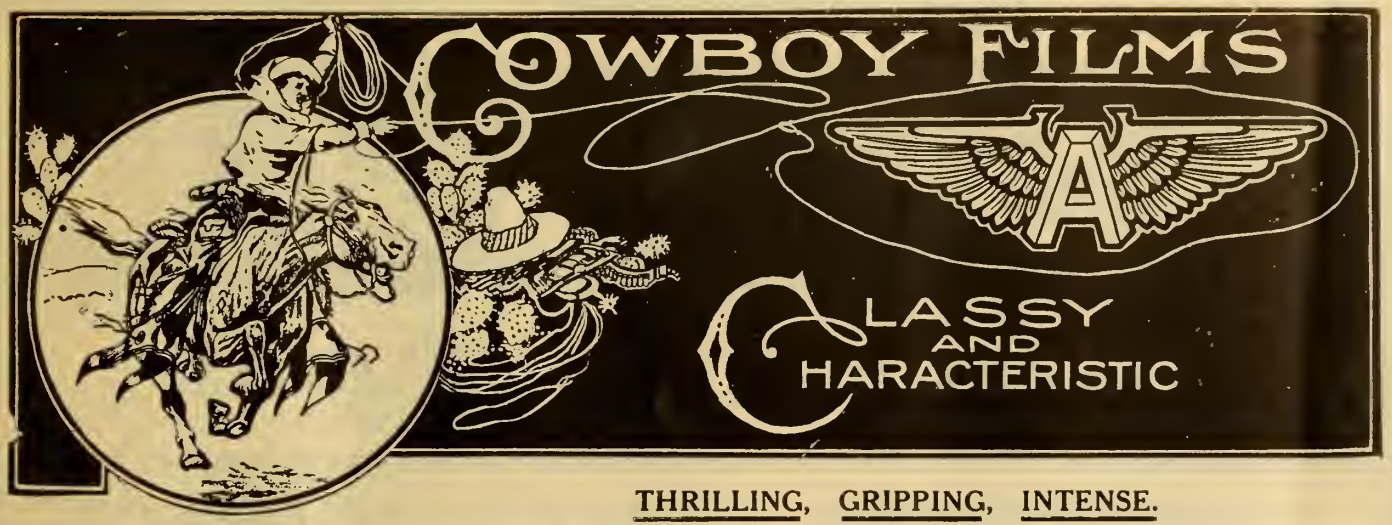
THIS is a quaint story of Japanese and American life and deals with the unrequitted love of a dainty Japanese dancer for a strong and forceful American, who in spite of Japanese wiles and seductiveness is true to the "girl he left behind."

This release is a distinct novelty and introduces an atmosphere entirely new to motion pictures.

Thanhouser Company

NEW ROCHELLE NEW YORK

SALES COMPANY AGENTS FOR U. S. AND CANADA



THRILLING, GRIPPING, INTENSE.

"THE RUSTLER SHERIFF"

The Most Noteworthy Western Production of the Season—Released This Week, THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 28th.

GET IT — GET IT — GET IT

A clever and a gripping story. Photography absolutely stereoscopic in its clearness and detail. Production that is masterly. Scenery that is ultra-magnificent. A climax that is the most effective, impressive, and brilliant ever pictured.

ALL YOU HAVE TO DO TO GET THIS FEATURE IS ASK FOR IT—BUT ASK FOR IT TODAY.

This film is released this week, Thursday, September 28th.

NOTE:—There are two Flying A Cowboy features released each week. Some of these features are better than others, but they are all good. The release days are MONDAYS AND THURSDAYS.

Your Exchange will give you both, each week, if you ask for them.

Our regular releases are described in the Film Synopsis Department of this publication.

American Film Manufacturing Company, Producers of Flying A Cowboy Pictures
BANK FLOOR, ASHLAND BLOCK, CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

Motion Picture Dis. & Sales Co., Sole Agents for the U. S. and Canada.

Solax

WEDNESDAY
MILITARY AND WESTERN

FRIDAY
COMEDY

A BREEZY MORNING
(Comedy)

Released October 4th

Here is an Especially Good Comedy, Full of Bright Laughable Humor.

AN ITALIAN'S GRATITUDE
(Drama)

Released September 29th

Splendid Life-Like Drama of Love and Gratitude.

HE WAS A MILLIONAIRE
(Comedy)

Released October 11th

An especially good comedy of a man who thought he was a millionaire.

HIS SISTER'S SWEETHEART
(Military)

Released October 6th

Big Military Picture with a tender love story.

THESE 4 PICTURES

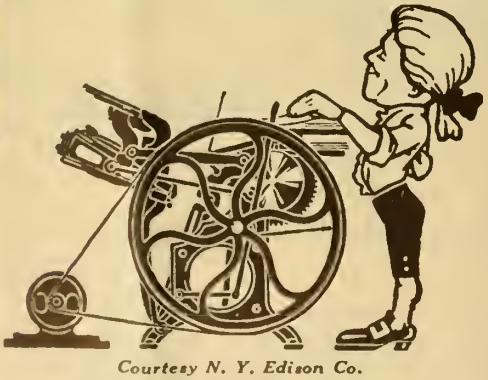
ARE ALL ESPECIALLY GOOD. WE RECOMMEND THEM TO YOU.

Solax Company

Congress Avenue, Flushing, L. I.

REMEMBER—ALL OUR FILMS ARE TINTED AND TONED.
SOLD THROUGH M. P. D. & S. Co.

WORKING OVERTIME



Courtesy N. Y. Edison Co.

J. H. HALLBERG,

But Pleased with the Job, as His Smile Indicates, although He Has Just Run Through Only the First "Art Cover" for Hallberg's 1912 CATALOGUE, and HAS 9999 More TO PRINT for You.

About October 1st, Hallberg's Complete 1912 Motion Picture Catalogue and Reference Book will be ready for distribution. This book will contain 100 8 x 11" pages of important matter, bound in beautiful art cover, several hundred illustrations, tables and data of inestimable value to present as well as prospective exhibitors. Every manager and operator should have one of these books. Novelties never before shown in a similar work are here illustrated.

This valuable reference book will be mailed to you on receipt of 25c, which barely covers cost of mailing, etc. On your first order amounting to $2, or more, credit will be allowed for this 25c.

Send for this book at once and get in on the first edition.

36 East Twenty-third Street, NEW YORK

Moving Picture Paradise

Here, held captive, are the imaginations of Master minds. Here are the life reproductions of historians, the stories that will still enthrall during years to come, the tales of Knight and Lady, of blunt business men, and of the quaint characters of travel and adventure.

They Amuse, Delight, Interest and Instruct

WE OFFER YOU THIS IN OUR

WEEKLY PROGRAM

MONDAY
Imp Eclair Yankee American Champion

TUESDAY
Thanhouser Bison Powers

WEDNESDAY
Champion Solax Reliance Ambrosio Nestor

THURSDAY
Rex American Itala Imp

FRIDAY
Yankee Solax Lux Thanhouser Bison

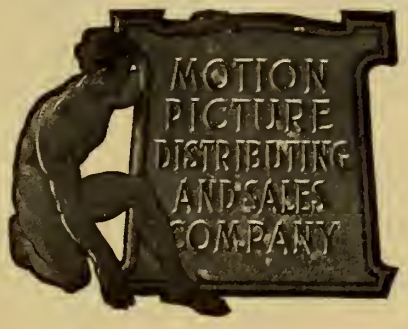
SATURDAY
Powers Itala Gt. Northern Nestor Reliance

the privilege to roam the fields of history, biography, religion, travel and fiction in whatever direction individual bent suggests, satisfying the taste of the most exacting.

The Moving Picture Manufacturers have through the aid of the Sales Company and co-operation with one another established a sale that is greater in its proportions, more far-reaching in its economical benefits, more remarkable in scope, in value and in importance than has ever been attempted since moving picture films have been made and sold.

The utmost care is used by our various manufacturers in selecting scenarios and plots. Thousands are carefully examined by the film producers in their efforts to cull only the best.

Write us now if you wish to exhibit in your theater a program that will please and interest and be appreciated by both old and young and we will refer you to the nearest buying exchange in your vicinity.



111 East 14th St., New York City

THE HEREAFTER

is an important phrase, to which we give much speculation. But what you are

Here After

is good film, and there's not much speculation involved if hereafter you

RUN REX!

Our Release for Thursday, Sept. 28th is

"THE DERELICT"

More than six or eight times life has been compared to the sea; both have their storms, their ebb and tide; both have their reefs and shoals; both have their flotsam. Yet every Derelict floating rudderless and aimless on the sea of life is human evidence of the Dereliction of his fellowmen. The picture will grip you!

If You Fail to Get "The Derelict" You Commit a Dereliction!

REX MOTION PICTURE MASTERPIECE CO.

makes one each week at
573-579 Eleventh Ave., New York City

(Although a million and eighty people are begging for two)

Sales Company says every emotional picture ever released will be licked by "The Derelict"

G. W. Bradenburgh

Cinematograph Films

233 North Eighth Street, Philad elphia, Pa

Phone, Market 334

Cable: Brad-Films, Phila.

Code: A. B. C., 5th Edition

Independent Film Service

We are not limited to our buying by any combinations. We can refuse any subject that is poor, other exchanges cannot. We buy films from twenty foreign makers. Others from three. We buy all the feature films for which state rights are sold afterward. We do not rent duped films, and do not be duped by fake combinations of manufacturers and exchanges. They do not combine for the good of the exhibitor, they are not philanthropists.

First class service, 18 reels weekly, $15—3 daily change.

First class service, 24 reels weekly, $24—4 daily change.

First class service, 30 reels weekly, $40—5 daily change.

First class service. 36 reels weekly, $50—6 daily change.

Write for list of Special releases, the very best films obtainable. We provide one sheet, three sheets, and banners for these exclusive releases. Write for lists and prices.

Bargain lists of films from $8 to $50 per reel, ready September 8.

Titles made to your order, 5 ft. minimum, 45c. each, colored.

Ajax Film cement, $1.00 per doz. bottles, works both films.

"High Speed" Professional Rewinders (no toy), $3.00 each.

"Pearl white" condensers, 70c. each.

Leader stock, red or blue, one cent per foot.

Independent Film Service
231 North 8th Street
Philadelphia, Pa.

EXHIBITORS:

We have contracted for the EXCLUSIVE AMERICAN RIGHTS for a series of film productions conceded to be the GREATEST NOVELTIES EVER ATTEMPTED IN MOTION PHOTOGRAPHY, BAR NONE. Correspondence solicited from first-class houses only, as the prices of these features will be prohibitive for the smaller exhibitor.

POPULAR ECLAIR

Every Issue Better — Away From the Ordinary

COMING MONDAY, OCT. 2d

Another Novelty Split-Reel

Hearts and Eyes
A ROMANTIC LOVE TALE

For Your Hats, Ladies!
A Tale of the Ostrich Farm

COMING, NOV. 7th

First Great U.S. Eclair

Photos Ready—Complete Set $7.50

ECLAIR FILM CO.
FORT LEE — — — NEW JERSEY

ANOTHER ENTERPRISE TRIUMPH

TOGO CALCIUM GAS OUTFIT

Complete with Rubber Tubing and Keyless Jet

SUPERIOR WORKMANSHIP and HIGH GRADE MATERIAL combined with SAFETY and SIMPLICITY place the TOGO far ahead of any other cheap outfit.

PORTABLE and ready for instant use - $25.00.

Anyone can operate it

MANUFACTURED BY
The Enterprise Optical Mfg. Co., 564 W. Randolph St., Chicago
FOR SALE BY ALL DEALERS

BARBARA FRIETCHIE

Champion release for Monday, Oct. 2nd, 1911

You all know the beautiful story of Barbara's patriotism—How the world-famous aged heroine of Civil War renown defied Gen. Stonewall Jackson by flaunting the stars and stripes from her window, and thereby braving death.

WRITE US FOR THE LITHOGRAPH HERALDS

Variety of SUBJECTS is the spice in CHAMPIONS program.

October 2nd, 1911 A Date for All Exhibitors

AS THINGS USED TO BE

Champion release for Wednesday, Oct. 4th, 1911

A film which features an attack on settlers by prowling Indians as its basic means in the reformation of a gambler by his sister's cowboy sweetheart.

DON'T PUT THESE OFF! PUT EACH ONE ON!

Sold Through Motion Picture Distributing & Sales Co.

CHAMPION FILM COMPANY

MARK M. DINTENFASS, General Manager

12 EAST 15th ST., NEW YORK City

LUX FILMS

SPEAK FOR THEMSELVES

Released Friday, Sept.29,1911

AN EXCELLENT SPLIT REEL COMBINING A COMEDY and DRAMA

BILL AND HIS FRIEND

Comedy Length 491 feet

The Little Goatherd

Drama Length 386 feet

Just what you want for variety.

R. PRIEUR

10 East 15th St. New York City

Telephone Call 3427 Stuyvesant

Sold Only Through MOTION PICTURE DISTRIBUTING and SALES COMPANY

ONLY EASTMAN RAW STOCK USED

IT'S UP TO YOU

To produce the best results possible

USE

LUMIERE CINEMATOGRAPH FILM

AND BE HAPPY

The Acme of Perfection Fully Guaranteed

POSITIVE AND NEGATIVE

3½ Cents per foot UNPERFORATED

¼ cent per foot extra for perforation

All orders shipped promptly. Send us yours

Lumiere Jougla Co.

75 FIFTH AVENUE (Between 15th and 16th Streets

PHONE 531 STUYVESANT NEW YORK CITY

Chicago Branch - 30 East Randolph St.

PATHÉ'S WEEKLY

THE MOST WIDELY READ PERIODICAL IN THE WORLD

TWENTY MILLION READERS

YOU CAN GET YOUR SHARE OF THEM BY FEATURING EVERY WEEK

PATHÉ'S WEEKLY

TRADE MARK

EDISON FILMS

TRADE MARK

Tuesday, October 3rd, 1911

Eugene Wrayburn

from

Our Mutual Friend

By CHARLES DICKENS

CAST.

Eugene Wrayburn.....Darwin Karr
Mortimer Lightwood.....Richard Ridgley
Young Barristers

Lizzie Hexam.....Bliss Milford
Charley Hexam.....Edwin Clarke
Bradley Headstone, a School Master
Charles M. Seay
The Lock-Keeper.....William West

Deals with Wrayburn's meeting with Lizzie Hexam, the jealousy of the school master, Bradley Headstone, his attack on Wrayburn and the latter's final marriage with Lizzie. A dramatic episode from the novel clearly told.

Wednesday, October 4th, 1911

The Summer Girl

CAST.

The Summer Girl.....Gertrude McCoy
Jack Stout.....John R. Cumpson
Mr. Brown.....Yale Benner

They all fall in love with her and no wonder. How the particular suitor won out is too good to be told in advance, but it certainly provokes laughter.

Saturday, October 7th, 1911

Leaves of a Romance

CAST.

An Eastern merchant.....James Gordon
His Daughter.....Laura Sawyer
Her Eastern Suitor.....Herbert Prior
Tom, her Western Suitor.....Richard Neil

A Western drama, each scene being shown in a novel and most artistic way, being framed in the outline of a leaf. It is sure to attract attention.

SCENE FROM
"EUGENE WRAYBURN"

Friday, October 6th, 1911

Foul Play

By CHARLES READE

In three reels, all released on one day

CAST.

John Wardlaw, head of the firm of Wardlaw & Son.....Robert Brower
Arthur Wardlaw, his son....Harold M. Shaw
Rev. Robert Penfold, a tutor at Oxford.....Marc McDermott
Michael Penfold, his father....William West
General Rolleston, a friend of Mr. Wardlaw.....Charles Ogle
Helen, his daughter, engaged to marry Arthur Wardlaw.....Mary Fuller
Wylie, mate of the "Proserpine"..Frank Gheen

A film which marks an epoch in the silent drama. The complete novel is clearly told on the screen and holds one's attention from start to finish. It is the story of the righting of a great wrong and the action takes place on land and sea. The climax is powerfully dramatic.

DO NOT FAIL TO BOOK IT

THOMAS A. EDISON, Inc. 72 Lakeside Ave., Orange, N. J.

GOTCH - HACKENSCHMIDT MATCH FILMS

Two reels of Perfect, Complete, Exciting, Phenomenal and Licensed Motion Pictures, showing in intimate, close up, distinct views every incident and movement of each contestant including Both Falls.

Press, Critics and Public pronounce these films Perfect

Was Hack Yellow? Did the Russian Lay Down? Did Gotch win by the Toe Hold? The pictures throw new light on the subject. The public are clamoring for these wonderful films.

State Rights are selling fast. Buy today

Thousands of Telegrams have poured in from every State and from foreign countries; those who have already secured State Rights are being literally swamped with requests for bookings. The wise ones are buying all the territory possible. Don't delay another second.

Be sure to wire today

Posters, Photographs, Press Matter, Etc.

Address

GOTCH - HACKENSCHMIDT PICTURE CO.

20 East Randolph Street Chicago, Ill.

FRANK A. GOTCH

HACKENSCHMIDT

MR. EXHIBITOR:

Do you know that we can furnish you with over 100 endorsements (original letters) from exhibitors who are using

The World's Famous

Mirroroide

Rollable Curtains and Screens

proving that Mirroroide has the world beat? Do you know we insist that you get our samples and test same with any curtain or screen on the market, bar none? Do you know that our factories are running 7 days a week, night and day, to supply the demand?

There's a reason. Not Aluminum. It's the cheapest, it's the best.

Prove it yourself, we fear no test. We will cut your juice bill ⅓. Still you can show pictures that will make your competitors' receipts drop 50 per cent.

READ THIS:

Walden, N. Y.

Mirroroide Curtain installed in my theater last week proved a great success, far beyond my expectations. I now have my theater brightly lighted, still I get a far better picture than I ever saw before. Mirroroide is a wonderful curtain and cannot be recommended too highly. My patrons have been talking about it until it is town talk. My business has increased 30 per cent. Wishing you every success with same,

C. R. DEDSBURY.
Dedsbury's Theater,
Walden, N. Y.

We publish one a week. Enclose stamp if you desire to write Mirroroide users. Demonstration samples, 50 cents ¼ yard; ordinary samples, 4 cents. Above only covers mailing. Circulars, endorsements and full information cheerfully mailed.

Orders shipped in 3 days.

Benjamin-Genter Co.
Newburgh, New York

ECLIPSE — KOSMIK FILM — Gaumont

A Gaumont Every Tuesday and Saturday
An Urban-Eclipse Every Wednesday

Current Releases

GAUMONT, TUES., Oct. 3 — About 1000 feet

Jimmie's Midnight Flight

A Comedy Drama — About 675 feet

Ajaccio, the Birthplace of Napoleon

A Travelogue — About 325 feet

ECLIPSE, Wed,, Oct. 4 — About 978 feet

A Jealous Wife

A Comedy — About 338 feet

The Grand Chartreuse

A Travelogue — About 292 feet

Ezra and the Fortune Teller

A Mystery Comedy — About 348 feet

GAUMONT, Sat., Oct. 7 — About 995 feet

The Upward Way

A Drama in Colors — About 726 feet

Cintra, a Picturesque Town of Portugal

A Travelogue — About 269 feet

ADVANCE ANNOUNCEMENTS FREE
WRITE TO

George Kleine

166 N. State St.; Old No. 52 State St.
CHICAGO, ILL.

Licensed by the Motion Picture Patents Co.

ECLIPSE — Gaumont

BIOGRAPH FILMS

Trade Mark Trade Mark

RELEASED SEPTEMBER 25th, 1911

THE REVENUE MAN AND THE GIRL

In the Kentucky Mountains

The moonshiner's daughter meets one of the revenue men and is attracted by his appearance as he is with hers. She, while rough in nature, has a tender heart, as is shown by her attention to her pet dove. The revenue man makes a daring arrest of a couple of moonshiners, which arrest the other moonshiners resent, and swear vengeance. The girl's father leads the vindictive mountaineers and is killed by one of the revenue men, who in turn meets his death. This sets the girl's fierce mountain spirit ablaze, and after her father's burial she joins the pursuit. Two days later, the survivor of the two officers, worn out with fatigue, sits on a bank by the stream, when the girl approaches. She is about to make good her threat, when her pet dove falls at his feet. He picks it up tenderly and sends it on its way, impressing the girl so that she later helps him to escape by hiding him in her room and afterwards leaving the mountains for a new life in the city beautiful.

Approximate Length 999 feet.

RELEASED SEPTEMBER 28th, 1911

HER AWAKENING

The Punishment of Pride

A pretty but dutiful daughter has one fault, vanity. She is ashamed of her poor old mother, who is decrepit and lame. Working in the office of a laundry, she meets on social terms one of the customers who, becoming quite attracted by her, is later considered her sweetheart. Ashamed of her home and mother, she has never let him visit her, preferring to meet him outside at a trysting place. One day when walking with her sweetheart, she meets her mother, but denies her. Her awakening comes a few minutes later when she sees her poor old mother knocked down by an automobile. Her mother dies from the effects of the accident, and the poor girl's grief knows no bounds as she fondles the old cane so long carried by her dear mother. Her future does not remain hopeless, for the young man vows he still loves her; but what a bitter punishment she had suffered for vanity.

Approximate Length 997 feet.

RELEASES FOR NEXT WEEK

October 2nd, 1911

Too Many Burglars COMEDY
Approximate Length 499 feet.

Mr. Bragg, A Fugitive COMEDY
Approximate Length 497 feet.

October 5th, 1911

The Making of a Man
How the Good in a Shiftless Actor Was Brought Out
DRAMATIC
Approximate Length 1,000 feet.

BIOGRAPH COMPANY,
11 East 14th Street, New York City

Licensees of the
MOTION PICTURE PATENTS CO.

GEORGE KLEINE, Selling Agent for Chicago,
166 State Street, Chicago, Ill.

LUBIN FILMS

4 REELS A WEEK

Released Wednesday, September 27th — Length about 1000 feet

A Cowboy's Love

Plenty of action in this Western love story, with plot and counter-plot, in the struggle of an Easterner and a cowboy for a girl. The girl saves Bud, the cowboy, when he has been brought very near to death by the plotters.

Released Thursday, September 28th — Length about 1000 feet

The Counterfeit Roll

Miss Man-Hater, Mr. Woman-Hater, and the little god who shoots arrows into hearts, unite to make this dandy love comedy. It's funny and delicious.

Released Saturday, September 30th — Length about 1000 feet

The Nearsighted Chaperone

A nice little scheme the young lovers devised to escape the watchful but nearsighted eye of Auntie. Beautifully portrayed and bubbling with humor. Young and old will vote it a winner.

Released Monday, October 2nd — Length about 1000 feet

His Stubborn Way

The chief character in this love-comedy was a real grouch. He was "master in his own house," and to prove it, he opposed everybody, no matter what they said or did. But his daughter and her lover managed to get around him in a most laughable way. See it!

4 REELS A WEEK

LUBIN MANUFACTURING COMPANY

Model New Studios, 20th and Indiana Avenue, Philadelphia, Pa.

Chicago: 208 N. Fifth Avenue — London: 45 Gerrard St., W. — Berlin: 35 Friedrich Str.

VITAGRAPH

LIFE PORTRAYALS

"By The Campfire's Flicker"

Monday, September 25th

A Philippine war romance of a Spanish beauty, a "red cross nurse," and a young army officer. Rich in passionate intensity, war-like activities and tropical scenery.

"Her Sister's Children"

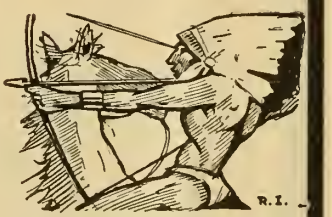
Tuesday, September 26th

Pleasing in the extreme. A delightfully refined comedy of a good-natured uncle and his two little nephews. They have a "jolly good time." The whole picture is the amusing experience of a bachelor.

"A Western Heroine"

Wednesday, September 27th

Full of clutching and spontaneous impulse. A girl of the Golden West, with nerve and courage, wins out in a race against a band of robbers, who give chase on horseback, and are foiled by her at every turn.



"The Ninety and Nine"

Friday, September 29th

A shaft of poignant thought that reaches the heart, and carries with it a lesson well expressed and beautifully conveyed.

"HER HERO"

Saturday, September 30th

Effervesces with bubbles of laughter, touches the funny spark of our "laugh tank," and starts things going at the first flash on the screen. She thinks he's a hero, but he's a "laugh."

FIVE A WEEK

Next Week Next Week

"OUR NAVY"—On Shipboard with the Jackies.....Monday, October 2nd
"THE WAGER"—A Clever Comedy.....Tuesday, October 3rd
"THE MATE OF THE JOHN M"—Sea Story.....Wednesday, October 4th
"CARR'S REGENERATION"—A Reflective Impress.....Friday, October 6th.
"UPS AND DOWNS"—Humorous.....Saturday, October 7th.

The Vitagraph Company of America

NEW YORK, 116 Nassau St.
CHICAGO, 109 Randolph St.
PARIS, 15 Rue Sainte-Cecile
LONDON, 25 Cecil Court

PATHÉ FRÈRES.

NEW YORK

A Masterpiece of Realism

Raffles Caught

A MAGNIFICENT portrayal of one of the cleverest plays ever depicted in motion pictures. The story of a gentleman burglar who is finally caught by the police through his inability to resist the appeal of a pair of beautiful eyes.

The Strongest Theme Ever Flashed on the Screen

ABOUT 715 FEET RELEASED OCT. 13

Pathe's Weekly Gets Better Every Week

Mr. Enterprising Exhibitor

Have You Booked

The Colleen Bawn

In—Three—Reels

The Greatest Feature of the Years

Don't wait until the film is old and scratched, but put it on as near release date as possible and show this

Big Headliner UNDER THE BEST CONDITIONS

The Mistress of Hacienda del Cerro

The story of an honest American and a Spanish Senorita.

Released Monday, October 9th

Approximate length 1000 feet

FOR THE FLAG OF FRANCE

A Thrilling French and Indian Historical Production.

Released Wednesday, October 11th

Approximate length 1000 feet

THE SMUGGLERS

This sensational Chinese smuggling story is based on actual facts.

Released Friday, October 13th

Approximate length 1000 feet

The A. B. C. Company, Cleveland, Ohio, will supply you with special four color pictorial paper for this big Irish production.

Hennegan & Co., Cincinnati, Ohio, can furnish couriers descriptive of "The Colleen Bawn" at low prices. Write them.

KALEM COMPANY, Incorporated

235-239 West 23rd Street, New York

LONDON, W., 86 Wardour St. :: :: BERLIN, 35 Friedrich Str.

The Leading Motion Picture Producer of the World

SELIG SELIG SELIG SELIG

FOLLOW THE FLAG

ARE YOU GETTING

Selig's Big Quartette Each Week ?

FOUR OF THOSE WONDERFUL SELIG NATURE PRODUCTIONS EVERY WEEK—AND EVERY ONE OF THEM AN ABSOLUTE SURE FIRE WINNER—BOOK EVERY SINGLE ONE

RELEASED SEPTEMBER 29th

JOHN OAKHURST — GAMBLER

AN EARLY WESTERN DRAMA DEPICTING TYPE OF MAN PRODUCED

IN TRUE DETAIL A PICTURESQUE IN THE YOSEMITE VALLEY

Code Word "ARROWS"

Length about 1000 feet

COMING FEATURE COMING

RELEASED OCT. 5th

MAUD MULLER

A poetic masterpiece pictured from a dramatization of Whittier's immortal poem. Beautiful beyond description, and interpreted by a strong company of Selig artists, headed by Miss Kathlyn Williams and Mr. Charles Clary. Length about 1,000 feet. Code word, "Ashland." Book this sure.

SOON TO BE RELEASED

"LOST IN THE JUNGLE"

Selig's great animal masterpiece is already the talk of the film world. A never to be equalled jungle masterpiece.

BOOK IT.

TRADE MARK

RELEASED OCT. 2nd

A SUMMER ADVENTURE

The story of how a little lad was saved from the Wolves—exciting and gripping—

Length about 1000 feet. Code word "AS"

RELEASED OCT. 6th

THE ARTIST'S SONS

An enjoyable glimpse into the Fascinating Life of our Real Bohemia—

Length about 1000 feet. Code word "ASHTON"

Oct. 3d The Rival Stage Lines Oct. 3d

A Genuine Comedy Treat, Picturing in True-to-Life Detail a rapidly passing phase of Western Life There is a laugh in every foot of this Film and it is One Thousand Laughs Long

DON'T FAIL TO BOOK IT

Length about 1000 feet. :: :: :: Code Word "ASCRIBE"

Selig Polyscope Co. TRADE S MARK Chicago U.S.A.

EUROPEAN OFFICES

LONDON — BERLIN — ST PETERSBURG.

FOUR-A-WEEK ESSANAY

TUESDAY — THURSDAY — FRIDAY — SATURDAY

COMING! World's Championship Baseball Series 1911 COMING!

The Greatest Sporting Picture This Year.

Released Tuesday, Sept. 26th

LOST YEARS

(Length, approx. 1,000 feet.)

A drama depicting the tragedy of unmerited punishment. A photoplay of unusual merit.

Released Thursday, Sept. 28th

THE POWER OF GOOD

(Length, approx. 1,000 feet.)

A Western drama with Mr. G. M. Anderson. A great story, superb photography, fine acting.

Released Friday, Sept. 29th

WHEN HE DIED

(Length, approx. 1,000 feet.)

An ingenuous comedy by the premier makers of funny fotoplays.

Released Saturday, Sept. 30th

THE STRIKE AT THE "LITTLE JONNY" MINE

(Length, approx. 1,000 feet.)

A great sensational strike picture made by the Essanay Western players.

COMING! "TOWNHALL, TO-NIGHT" COMING!

Watch for this big comedy hit, book it early and advertise it big.

Essanay Film Mfg. Company

521 First National Bank Building, CHICAGO, ILL.

5 Wardour Street, London, W.

(TRADE MARK—Registered)

"SUNLIGHT"

Metallic Cloth Curtains and Screens

"SUNLIGHT" screens reproduce exactly what is on the film and all of it. We secure clear cut detail—deep perspective—soft bright pictures not tiring to the eye—true color reproduction of tinted films and colored slides. About one-half of the usual amperage will secure the best results on our screens. We therefore save you one-half your power cost.

A PERFECT INSTALLATION

is secured by means of our patented "Standard" frame WITH TIGHTENING DEVICES

We guarantee a perfect picture surface. The device is adjustable and the result permanent.

No more wrinkles, grins or shadows

This frame is used for a fixed screen, or can be used as a drop curtain—you can fly it the same as any other drop. Send for booklet.

"Sunlight" Metallic Cloth Curtain Co., 1100 Fisher Bldg., CHICAGO, ILL.

GREAT NORTHERN

GREAT NORTHERN FILMS CO. COPENHAGEN

THE OLD RELIABLE

Release for Saturday, September 23rd

CAUGHT IN HIS OWN NET

A well acted realistic production of the rural type. Book it now.

Release for Saturday, September 30th

THE CONSPIRATORS

A thrilling and sensational detective story of the Sherlock Holmes type.
Secure a booking at once.

All First-class Independent Exchanges Handle Our Product
Sold Only Through Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company

GREAT NORTHERN FILM CO., 7 E. 14th St., N.Y.
(NORDISK FILM CO. OF COPENHAGEN.)

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

THE WORLD PHOTOGRAPHIC PUBLISHING COMPANY — 125 E. 23d. Street NEW YORK
(Beach Building) — J. P. CHALMERS, Editor and Manager. — Telephone call, 1343-1344 Gramercy

SUSCRIPTION RATES: $3.00 per year. Post free in the United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and the Philippine Islands. Canada, $3.50. Foreign Countries, $4.00, Post Paid.

DISPLAY ADVERTISING RATES ON APPLICATION.
CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS (No Display), Three cents per word; minimum charge, 50c.

WESTERN OFFICE: 169 W. Washington St. (Post Bldg.), Chicago, Ill. Telephone, Main 3145. Automatic Phone 32732.

Entered at the General Post Office in New York City as Second-Class Matter.

Address all correspondence "Moving Picture World, P. O. Box 226, Madison Square, New York," and not to individuals.

Vol. 10 — SEPTEMBER 30, 1911 — No. 12

INDEX TO CONTENTS.

ADVERTISING FOR EXHIBITORS.....960
ARTISTS OF THE SCREEN, THE, By Wm. H. Kitchell.....949

CALENDAR OF INDEPENDENT RELEASES..983
CALENDAR OF LICENSED RELEASES.....984
CHICAGO LETTER 962
CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS 1004
COLLEEN BAWN, THE (Kalem).....954
COLLEEN BAWN, THE, (Illustration).....955
COMMENTS ON THE FILMS (Independent)..972
COMMENTS ON THE FILMS (Licensed).....970

DAVID COPPERFIELD (Thanhouser).....952

FACTS AND COMMENTS.....948
FOUL PLAY (Edison) 950

GOTCH-HACKENSCHMIDT MATCH FILMS....964

INDEPENDENT FILM STORIES.....994
INDEPENDENT RELEASE DATES.....1004
INQUIRIES 986
IS THE TWO-DOLLAR-A-SEAT PICTURE THEATER IN SIGHT? By Robert Grau....959

LETTERS FROM AN OLD EXHIBITOR TO A NEW FILM MAKER 961
LICENSED FILM STORIES.....988
LICENSED RELEASE DATES 1002
LUBIN CO. IN WASHINGTON, THE, (Illustration) 963

MANUFACTURERS' ADVANCE NOTES 978
MUSIC FOR THE PICTURE.....958

PROJECTION DEPARTMENT 966

REVIEWS OF NOTABLE FILMS.....954

SPECIAL RELEASE AND THE SMALL EXHIBITOR, By Epes W. Sargent.....965
STANDARD FICTION IN FILMS, By W. Stephen Bush.....950
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Independent).....994
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Licensed).....988
SUPERIOR PLAYS, By Louis Reeves Harrison.957

WITH THE WESTERN PRODUCERS.....953

INDEX TO ADVERTISERS.

CARBON IMPORTERS.
FRORUP, L. E. 991
KIEWERT, CHAS. L. 991
REISINGER, HUGO 1005

ELECTRICAL SUPPLIES.
CHICAGO PROJECTING CO. 1000
FORT WAYNE ELECTRIC CO. 1000
HALLBERG, J. H. 932-986
KIMBLE ELEC. CO. 910
MACKIE, H. A. 999
MOORE BOND & CO. 982
SCHNEIDER, E. 993
ST. JOHN CORPORATION.....997

FILM DEALERS.
INTERNATIONAL FILM TRADERS 999

FILM EXCHANGES.
ACME FILM CO. .....
BRADENBURG, G. W. 934
CLAPHAM, A. J. .....1006 and 1003
FEATURE FILM CO. 995
FEATURE FILM CO., TOLEDO, O.....995
GREENE, W. E. 987
LAEMMLE FILM SERVICE.....982
SUPERIOR FILM & SUPPLY CO.....997
WESTERN FEATURE FILM CO.....997

INDEPENDENT FILM MANUFACTURERS.
AMERICAN FILM CO.....931
CHAMPION FILM CO. 935
ECLAIR FILM CO. 934
GREAT NORTHERN FILM CO.....946
IMP 982
LUX CO. 935
M. P. DIS. & SALES CO.....933
NESTOR FILM CO.....1008-1009
POWERS PICTURE CO. (Insert).....
REX MOTION PICTURE CO.....933
SOLAX CO. 932
THANHOUSER CO. 930
YANKEE FILM MFG. CO.....935

LECTURERS.
BUSH, W. STEPHEN.....985
HOFFMAN, H. F. 995
MARION, LOUISE M. 991

LICENSED FILM MANUFACTURERS.
BIOGRAPH CO. 939
EDISON, THOS. A. 937
ESSANAY CO. 945
KALEM CO. 943
KLEINE, GEO. 938
LUBIN FILM CO. 940
MELIES, GASTON 912
PATHE FRERES 942-936
SELIG POLYSCOPE CO. 944
VITAGRAPH CO. OF AMERICA.....941

MISCELLANEOUS.
AMERICAN MOTION SLIDE CO.....995
AMUSEMENT SUPPLY CO. 995
ASSOCIATED M. P. SCHOOL.....995
ANTI TRUST CO. 999
BAUSCH & LOMB 987
BERG, C. A. 999
CAMBRIDGE TILE CO. 997
COLUMBIA THEATRICAL EXCHANGE.....1003
DAVIS, H. 1001
DEWES, A. 1000
DIXON, H. J. 1001
DONNIGAN, P. J. 1003
EXHIBITORS' ADV. CO. 998
EXHIBITORS' POSTER CO. 985
GUNBY BROS. 1001
HARBACH CO. 1001
HOKE, GEO. M. 993
JENKINS, J. W. 1001
JOHNSON, W. B. 1001
KINGERLY MFG. CO. 1006
LAVEZZI & Co. 997
LUMIERE-JOUGLA CO. 935
McKENNA BROS. 993
MUNCIE FILM & SUPPLY CO.....991
NATIONAL TICKET CO. 1006
NATIONAL X-RAY REFLECTOR CO.....989
ORTHO FILM CO. 997-1001
PHOTOPLAY SYNDICATE 999
ST. LOUIS CALCIUM LIGHT CO.....1001
SANITARY SERVICE CORP.....1003
SARGENT, E. W. 999
SILVERMAN, MAYER 993
STERLING NOVELTY CO. 1000
THEATER SALES CO. 1003
TISDALE, F. M. 985
WASHBURN, G. W. 1001
WILLIAMS, P. H. 981
W. L. c/o MOVING PICTURE WORLD.....999

MOVING PICTURE MACHINE MANUFACTURERS.
AMERICAN M. P. MCH. CO.....991
EDISON, THOS. A. 910
ENTERPRISE OPTICAL CO. 934-981
POWERS, NICHOLAS 912

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.
DEAGAN, J. C. 1006-1007
LEEDY MFG. CO. 999
SINN, CLARENCE E. 1001
WURLITZER, RUDOLPH 989
ZEIDLER DRUM CO. 993
YERKES MFG. CO. 987

OPERA CHAIR MANUFACTURERS.
AMERICAN SEATING CO. 1003
ANDREWS, A. H. 1003
BENNET, GEO. W. 1003
HARDESTY MFG. CO. 1003
KAUFMAN MFG. CO. 1003
PEABODY SCHOOL FURNITURE CO. 1003
ROYAL METAL MFG. CO. 1003
STEEL FURNITURE CO. 1003
WISCONSIN LUMBER & VENEER CO.....1003

PROJECTION SCREENS.
MIRROROID CO. 938
MOTION PICTURE SCREEN CO.....973
SUNLIGHT CURTAIN CO. 946

SONG SLIDE MANUFACTURERS.
CHICAGO SONG SLIDE CO. 987
CLEVELAND SLIDE CO. 988-992
EXCELSIOR SLIDE CO. 993
HOFF, JAS. L. 993
LEVI SLIDE OO. 997
PHOTOPLAY EXCHANGE 1001
SIMPSON SLIDES 1006
UNITED SLIDE ADV. CO. 995
UTILITY TRANSPARENCY CO. 995

SPECIAL RELEASES.
CINES CO. OF ROME.....989
MONOPOL FILM CO.....Insert
NATIONAL FILM DIS. CO.....975
GOTCH-HACKENSCHMIDT 854
SPECIAL FILM CO. 985
TOURNAMENT FILM CO. 977

THEATER DECORATORS.
DECORATORS' SUPPLY CO. 993

Facts and Comments

IN another column the MOVING PICTURE WORLD has, at some length, reviewed a three-reel production of the Edison Company. In connection with this review it seems pertinent to call attention to the fact, that these reels will be released together, and be at the disposal of the exhibitor as a whole. The first reel is treated as a regular release of that company, the other two are special releases. The simultaneous release of two or more reels, constituting one subject, is at this time an experiment which, without aid and intelligent co-operation on the part of the exhibitor, is liable to fail. We believe that it will be to the exhibitor's decided advantage to co-operate by taking the three reels together. It will be a most pleasing novelty to his patrons to have one and the same subject furnish an hour's entertainment. Great possibilities for original advertising and program building are offered and should, if properly taken advantage of, bring ample financial returns. It has been shown very plainly by the success of the Dante films and of similar attractions, such as "The Crusaders, or Jerusalem Delivered," that the moving picture audience likes longer subjects and, in fact, prefers the production consisting of more than one reel. A three-reel production seems ideally suited to the needs of the exhibitor who wishes to offer something good and new, but cannot afford to raise his prices. Even with a limited seating capacity, such attractions seem to promise extra profits, for three shows can easily be given from seven to eleven.

* * *

THE current literature of the day occupies itself with the moving picture as a most interesting and important factor. To those to whom the possibilities of the picture were manifest years ago, the comments of these belated discoverers are at times amusing. One of them expresses the fear that the picture supplies no mental stimulus, and will eventually make the people "brain-lazy." The picture does make comprehension easy, and imposes a minimum of effort in return for a maximum of pleasure. The thinking done by the spectator during the running of a picture, is necessarily of the most rapid order, though it may be quite superficial. The right kind of a picture, however, stirs the mind, not only during the running of the reel, but its recollection dwells vividly in the mind after the picture has been seen, and causes thought and reflection. We believe experience shows that the steady patron of a moving picture theater, which does not make a specialty of cowboys, "chases," china-smashing and blood-curdling melodrama, is enjoying a mental exercise of great benefit. His perceptions are bound to be quickened, his curiosity is aroused and stimulated, and there are few roads, nowadays, more frequently traveled than the road that leads from the moving picture theater to the library.

*

The trend away from the cheaply sensational in films seems to be somewhat irregular, but at times it is very pronounced. Just now there has come a veritable avalanche of popular fiction in films, both here and abroad. Not only Dickens, Thackery and Hugo are again pressed into service, but Reade, Stevenson, Scott, have been filmed. It is altogether probable that this filming of standard fiction will meet with unqualified popular approval, and we may then look for a more thorough search of authors' filmable plays and stories, which will by no means be confined to the literary lights of the Victorian period. These and similar films will draw the crowds from the library into the moving picture house and gain for the picture new and loyal friends. If only the incompetent producers will keep away from these subjects, fiction in films is bound to have a long and successful run.

* * *

AN attempt was made very recently in Germany to monopolize the renting business. While the industry in that country is on a much lower plane than here or in the rest of Europe, it has lately shown signs of growing stronger, and has attracted a good many American manufacturers. Some natives, with capital, and Rockefeller-Morgan propensities, have been attracted by the possibilities of centralization and monopolization, and started the spreading of a large net, into which film renters and exhibitors were supposed to drop eagerly and gracefully. In these expectations, the men promoting a tight market, were decidedly disappointed. A great protest was raised by manufacturers, importers, renters and exhibitors, and at last accounts the scheme has been dropped, or at least deferred indefinitely.

*

A singular phase of the situation was furnished by the general representatives of those American firms, which in their country are strongly identified with the closed market. The agents for Pathe, Essanay, Edison, Vitagraph, Selig, Kalem, Lubin, Gaumont and Eclipse, are all quoted in the trade papers as being opposed to the creation of a monopoly, or, in other words, a restricted market. The Pathe representative is quoted as saying, that his principals "do not intend to join the monopolistic corporation." Gaumont's agent says, his firm "will take no part, either in the present or in any later project," and the Selig deputy declares bluntly, that his company "supports the open market." All of this cannot fail to be interesting to the American exhibitor, who has had ample opportunity to make a thoroughly practical and personal study of the restricted market in the land of the free. The attempt in Germany proved abortive, largely because of the attitude of the exhibitors, who recently formed a strong organization and held a big national convention in Hamburg in the early part of this month.

* * *

COMPARED with the Dogberry wisdom and methods of censorship abroad, our censoring here is the embodiment of liberality. The palm of stupidity in moving picture censorship must be awarded to Germany. The police of Berlin have refused to pass several films of pictures representing scenes and animals in the zoological gardens of that city. No reason was assigned for this most singular refusal, and the films could not be shown. In Leipsic an exhibitor was fined for having shown films representing scenes from the late revolution in Portugal. The curious defence was interposed, that the scenes were not at all genuine, but had been made in Germany, in imitation of the riots in Portugal. According to all accounts, the pictures were miserable and altogether apt to disgust and discourage embryonic revolutionists. The exhibitor appealed against the decision of the lower courts, and in the second appellate tribunal, after spending a lot of money, he was successful. Now he must depend upon the advertising which his appeal got for him in the newspapers, to recoup the fees he had to pay to various sets of lawyers.

The Artists of the Screen.

By William H. Kitchell.

DID you ever have the good fortune to stand behind the man with the megaphone at the making of a moving picture, and watch the people of the screen trying to put life and naturalness into a typewritten scenario? If you never did, you have an experience coming. And when you have concluded the experience you will understand why the once-despised "picture-actor" is coming into his own, and getting his name under the film-titles and his photograph into reputable magazines and into the gilt frames that decorate the lobby of every up-to-date photoplay house.

There is a reason.

Perhaps you have sat in a "still-life" studio and undergone the torture of being photographed, with a photographer—or a policeman—twisting your head sideways and requesting you to "look pleasant, please." This is bad enough. But unless you have "acted in photoplays" and have tried to look human as you embraced a girl—somebody else's girl—with Cooper Hewitt lights turning your forced smile into a ghastly grin, and with an audience of six critical studio directors "in front"—unless you have been hardened to all this and more besides, you will wonder that people can be found who will make even passable picture posers.

If it is not "all in the acting," a good share of the success of a photoplay depends upon the men and women who work it out. There are a dozen inane and unnatural plots released every week that have been "put across" solely by fine character work by the photoplayers. And there are few good stories spoiled in the making by inartistic acting. Fine acting of a poor plot is always preferable to mediocre work on a good one; and it is to the credit of the present-day photoplayers that the general run of machine-made "junk" turned out by certain studio writers has not proven the downfall of the moving picture industry.

True, there are exceptions. There are "amateurish professionals" who play openly to the camera and give visible evidence of having to be continually prompted by the stage director. There are also stars of the photoplay firmament, of more or less magnitude, whose light is kept shining because of the mistaken notion of the men "higher up" that the light is genuine, and not a "false alarm." There is the "lead" who has never acted before in front of the camera, and who walks "off-scene" and does other things that he will not do when he is taught better. There is an excuse for him; but of the others!

But these are the few and the exception. Possibly there may come a time when these misfits will be led gently out of the studios and dropped off into oblivion. And there is another hope. The present "closed-door" policy may lapse ere long, and the product of each manufacturer may be sold on its own merits, and rented likewise. This would mean the elimination of the few "penny-wise pound-foolish" manufacturers whose product is cheapening the product of the progressive filmmaker; and it would end the career of the few "artists" above noted.

Is there anything they cannot do or act? Acting in the "legitimate" in "stock" has from time immemorial been considered the most trying of the many experiences incident to an actor's career. But what is "stock," compared to photoplaying? True, there is a new play to memorize every week, and new cues to remember, as well as old ones to forget, but in the "legitimate" the actor has his limitations, artificial or otherwise, and he is generally restricted to "parts" that are in line with his supposed genius in "character." And it is not difficult to memorize words, when you have been memorizing and doing little else since childhood.

A player in "stock" once lost his pocketbook at a faro game in a small town in Colorado, and thereby lost his job. It being the harvest season, there was little doing in theatricals in the woolly West, and he applied for a position with a picture company that happened to be working among the foothills. He was "taken-on," and somehow he made good; and later he went East with the company and stuck with the Eastern studio until he could get back into "stock." He is playing an "old-man part" with a Broadway production today, and he has an intense admiration for the photoplayer.

Here is his appreciation of the "Artists of the Screen":

"I've played everything, from one-night stands in stock to vaud'ville and Shakespeare—and I've played the pictures. And I've played everything in pictures from a horse-thief to one of the Twelve Apostles. And I'm told I looked natural as both.

"They say there is no art in the pictures, and that anybody can act them. I'd like to take a few of my legitimate friends into a moving picture studio for a week, and show them what it means to be a picture actor, and how much genuine inspiration is required to get across with the scenes of a film drama. There is art there with a big 'A'—and there is hard work and more kinds of hard work than a 'legitimate' thespian has to do in a lifetime.

"I learned what I know of picture acting from the 'villain' of the Colorado outfit, who seemed, until I knew him better, to be a big, square-shouldered bully with a perpetual grouch. Which he wasn't. I watched him act. His soul was in his work, and I believe he played the pictures in his sleep. But it was before the camera that he shone. He could act, man!—act! Moreover, he could swim a flood-swollen river, rope a steer, and fall off a horse at full gallop with equal ease and nonchalance. And then when we came East, he buckled down to evening dress parts or played the 'longshoreman, and he was the Man in both. If there is no art in picture acting, then acting is an unskilled trade of a level with mud-digging!"

A little strained by enthusiasm, perhaps, but there was truth in his tribute.

For the ideal photoplayer—and there are many in the studios—is an artist with an art. Handicapped by the limitations of the camera and the studio and, sometimes, by the gross ignorance of the men who superintend the production, he works out the character that is assigned to him, under unnatural conditions and without the inspiration of applause. And that he does it well, the steady elevation in public approval of the moving picture is indicator.

If "credit is given where credit is due" the manufacturers owe more to the men and women Artists of the Screen than can be paid back in a salary check. Indeed, the best evidence of the increasing sanity of the filmmakers is that at last they are beginning to recognize the fact that the photoplayer is largely responsible for the present success of the moving picture industry, and that they are willing to accord him his due.

Standard Fiction in Films

All the Reels of Greater Length, Dealing with One Subject, Released at the Same Time, Open Up Great Possibilities for the Progressive Exhibitor

By W. Stephen Bush.

THE filming of popular fiction has always been tempting to the manufacturer and in an eagerness to produce the creations of favorite writers on the screen, the extraordinary difficulties of the task have often been either slighted or overlooked. For one who has been charmed by a fascinating tale, an old favorite, it is hard to realize in its fullest importance the fact that, for the thousands who have read the story, there are tens of thousands who know nothing at all about it. A subject in films which is addressed to but a portion of the public is, of course, foredoomed to failure. The novel must pass the test of dramatization before it can be transferred to the celluloid and in the transition it is bound to lose something.

There is about every novel, especially about the popular and successful ones, a certain atmosphere which accounts for half or more than half of its success. We travel through the pages of Thackeray, of Dickens, of Hugo, without thinking of the dramatic necessity of plot, incident and action and are quite often more interested in a fine description, in a bit of character painting, in a humurous or spirited dialogue, in the personal views of the author than in the rapid and logical development of the plot. When, however, we leave the library and go to the theater the charms of description and the author's monologues and dialogues fade away very quickly, and if we are to be delighted at all it must be by a skillful adaptation of the dramatic materials, that have been mined out of the novel. "The gentle reader" becomes exacting. He is no longer to be beguiled by atmosphere, but wants to see action. As a rule he has in his own way dramatized his favorite author and if the doings and the people on the stage run counter to his ideals he is apt to record a sharp dissent.

The spectator who has never read the work of fiction which is to be portrayed in films is easier to please, because he is naturally less critical. He judges the production without any preconceived notions. On the other hand, however, he will show no indulgence or patience whatever with any possible defects, because of the prestige and the glamour of the author's name. It is plain, therefore, that the successful presentation of a work of fiction is attended with extraordinary difficulties.

"FOUL PLAY"—(Edison).

It was with these considerations in mind and with no hopeful anticipation, that I went to view three reels, made by the Edison Company and intended to be a representation in films of Charles Reade's popular novel, "Foul Play." The novel, it is true, is uncommonly rich in plot and incident, but the fact, that the author had failed in its dramatization, even with the expert assistance of Dion Boucicault, boded nothing cheerful for its success as a moving picture film or photoplay.

Never would I have thought it feasible to tell, with anything like its proper effect, the long and complicated story of "Foul Play," in three thousand feet of film, yet this is exactly what the Edison Company has done. I rose from witnessing the three reels like one who had spent a most enjoyable evening at the theater. I felt that the enormous advantages of the three reel subject had at last been brought within easy reach of exhibitors who wished to profit and of the public who wished to enjoy. With an attraction of this kind, flanked perhaps by a little refined comedy reel, I would not be afraid to go into a first-class theater and, with a lecture added, entertain the most exacting kind of an audience. I earnestly hope, that this plan, so courageously and intelligently introduced by the Edison Company, will prove a distinct boon to every exhibitor of moving pictures and will enable him, with the aid of the lower prices, to come into formidable competition with the legitimate stage.

The Fall from Grace at the Gaming Table.

It seems meet, at this time, to give some outline of the story of "Foul Play," though I feel most regretfully, that no outline can convey to the reader the fine spirit of its author. Reade was a genuine friend of his fellows, a fearless foe of social wrongs and abuses, an unrelenting pursuer of all kinds of sham and fraud. He has without a doubt a touch of the old fashioned melodrama, but it is honest and real and therefore thoroughly convincing to the thinking, just as it is most gratifying to the sentimental.

"Foul Play" hinges on two characters, Arthur Wardlaw and Robert Penfold. The former is smooth, oily, crafty and most intensely selfish. His most fitting epitaph would be: "He did his best . . . friends." The antithesis to this character is a man of sterling integrity, a friend loyal to the grave, scrupulously honorable, a martyr to his own instincts of right and justice. It will be seen, that the contrast is drawn most sharply, perhaps in defiance of the laws of human probabilities, but exceedingly well adapted for the purposes of developing a strong and melodramatic story. Wardlaw, under great obligations to Penfold, uses the latter as an instrument to raise money, which he had recklessly lost at the gaming table. With damnable ingenuity Wardlaw induces the unsuspecting Penfold to cash a note on which he had forged his father's name. Penfold is arrested and sentenced to five years' penal servitude. Wardlaw, the guilty man, does nothing to save his friend and benefactor and seems content to have him out of the way. Both love the same woman.

The Robbers Foiled by the Ex-Convict in Disguise.

Wardlaw, on the ragged edge of bankruptcy, though highly thought of in the business world by reason of his father's reputation for integrity, seeks to retrieve his fortunes by swindling certain insurance companies. With the aid of a confederate he has a cargo consisting of bars of gold transferred from a heavily insured ship to another, which he owns, and the leaden cargo of which is substituted for the gold. The girl, whom both men love, through an accident does not take passage from overseas in the ship with the leaden cargo, as Wardlaw intended, but becomes a passenger on the other vessel with the ostensible load of gold. A member of the latter's crew, a confederate of Wardlaw, bores a hole in the ship and scuttles it. Helen, the intended bride of Wardlaw and the object of Penfold's deepest affections, is cast adrift with Penfold, who had taken passage on the boat under an assumed name and, together with a dying sailor, after much suffering and adventure they land on an unknown island. The sailor dies, but makes a complete confession before his death as to his knowledge of the scuttling of the ship by Wardlaw's sailor-confederate.

Helen and Penfold, now known as the Reverend Hazel, live on this island for many months, until by most ingenious devices they manage to get word of their existence and miserable state to a boat which, equipped by the elder Wardlaw in good faith, had gone in search of them under the command of Helen's father. Helen is rescued, Penfold's identity is discovered by Helen's father, who doubts the honesty of the ex-convict. Helen holds fast to her faith in the innocence of Penfold, who now for the first time justifies himself and in consequence is bound to place the guilt of the forgery upon the shoulders of Wardlaw. While the girl, now returned to England, is doing all in her power to clear the name of Penfold, the latter, unable to bear the strain of injustice and solitude any longer, himself returns to England.

Events now begin to crowd each other. Penfold is arrested as a convict who has returned in violation of his parole, but just then the confederate of Wardlaw confesses, the innocence of Penfold is established both by the testimony of handwriting experts and the complete confession of Wardlaw himself. The latter is rushed to an asylum for the insane and "virtue" claims its reward in the shape "of the beautiful heroine."

It is not contended, that the production is entirely free from faults, but it gives a most thrilling and vivid version of the great story. There is not an inch of dullness in the three thousand feet. The producer has not shirked his difficulties, but battled with them manfully and on the whole very successfully. The shipwreck is well done, the life on the uncharted island, with its deep psychological interest and its numerous sensational incidents, loses nothing of its charm and power in the film. There are many incidents on the high sea and all are both artistic and realistic. It is the development of the plot, however, and the skillful elimination of non-essentials, that constitute the producer's chief title to credit. It is a common saying among readers of Reade, that no one has ever read the first three chapters of any of his novels and laid down the book. That fascinating and absorbing interest in the story has been well maintained in the reproduction on the screen. Every spectator seeing the finish of the first reel will want to see the second and the third.

General Rolleston Finds His Daughter and "Rev." Hazel.

The three reel reproduction of fictional and dramatic, classic or historic subjects will, whenever the release of the reels is simultaneous, be a new and inestimable advantage to the exhibitor. Patrons of the moving picture house are constantly improving in quality and they have long been ready for the best in pictureland. The Edison Company is entitled to credit for perceiving this need of the times and so ably supplying it in this production, which almost constitutes an entire evening's entertainment. The films will be released on October 6.

A complete lecture, specially prepared for "Foul Play," is now in course of preparation and will very probably be published in these columns next week.

"DAVID COPPERFIELD" (Three Reels)—Thanhauser.

IN the filming of Dickens these reels are a revelation. The best ideals and fondest expectations of both the friend of the moving picture and the reader of Dickens have been realized. This may sound like a reckless compliment, but after one sees character after character in the famous story step from the printed page into life and motion, after one has felt the presence of the Dickens spirit and atmosphere radiating from the screen into the deepest recesses of the heart, after one has had that happy hour of laughter and tears which the great novelist knew so well to bestow, the function of criticism is wholly suspended and there remains nothing for the critic but to record, always imperfectly in such a case, the superabounding merits of the production. Other film makers, among the best in the field, have attempted to give us Dickens in pictures and, though there are good points in "The Cricket on the Hearth," in "Oliver Twist," in "A Tale of Two Cities," "Our Mutual Friend," and "A Christmas Carol," they do not even approach the present films in the power of cinematographic characterization, in the sustained excellence, in the attention to detail, in the sympathetic and complete understanding of the soul of Dickens.

If ever Dickens wrote out of the fullness of his heart, it was when he told of the misfortunes and struggles of the child and boy David, when he describes the hopes, fears and the ambitions of his youth and the friendships and loves of his early manhood. Perhaps that is one of the reasons why the story has such a strong hold on the readers of Dickens and why its characters are so well known and so much admired. These very facts, however, constituted a grave danger for the Dickens student, who intended to render the charm and beauty of the work visible to every eye, including the eye that had never conned a page of the story. It was of the first importance to reduce and condense. Unless this reducing and condensing was done with painstaking care and with an eye single to the preserving of the essential features of the story, an adaptation was only to apt to become a mutilation and a matter of special offense to the readers of Dickens. It was here the art of the makers of the films achieved a most convincing success. Every one of the characters, so dear to our recollection, stands out strikingly and picturesquely; the villainous curmudgeon Murdstone, the lovable Peggoty, the handsome seducer Steerforth, the sterling Aunt Betsy, the unhappy Wickfield, the unspeakable Uriah Heep, the unctuous and unique Micawber. The women of the story deserve especial mention; Dora, the "doll-wife," was an embodiment of the Dickens character, which Dickens himself could not have chosen more fortunately and exactly; the same holds true of Em'ly and Agnes. Even the minor characters such as poor Dick with the kite, the sloppy maid, Mrs. Gummidge, Ham Peggoty, David's mother, Creakle, the servant in Steerforth's employ, and all the others are sketched with consummate skill, a sure indication, by the way, of the artistic excellence that pervades the entire production from the first inch of film to the last. Even the little dog Jip that threatened poor David's marital happiness is there, and it is the real Jip, too.

Of course, the Dickens readers will be out in full force to see this picture and they will urge others to come and the Dickens shelf in the libraries will be depleted. But what about the great majority that have never seen a Dickens book and know nothing whatever about David Copperfield? Is the story of the films told in such a way that they too will understand, appreciate and enjoy? Is there enough of the subtle charm of Dickens on the screen to steal into their hearts and make them disciples? The answer is emphatically "Yes." The man, woman or child that has never read a line of Dickens will feel the Dickens spirit and the Dickens atmosphere, and as the first enjoyment of a story is often the keenest, they lose nothing by becoming acquainted with the great story teller through the medium of the picture. There are stories within stories in David Copperfield, but the best ones are all in the film and they are all dramatic and finely staged.

The scenes showing the wreck of the vessel on which Steerforth was a passenger, the desperate efforts of Ham Peggoty to find a path through the stormy waves and save a life, the drowning of both Ham and Steerforth and their floating bodies in the surf challenge the best displays of realism in a photoplay.

In the portrayal of the emotional scenes, in which the peculiar Dickens mixture of humor and pathos make such exacting demands on the stage director and the actor, these films are beyond all praise. I must content myself with the mentioning of only two—one the Em'ly-Steerforth episode, the other the unmasking of Uriah Heep in lawyer Wickfield's office.

Peggoty and David and His Mother.

David and Em'ly in Their Childhood.

David and Agnes.

SCENES FROM "DAVID COPPERFIELD" (Thanhouser).

David and Emily as Children at the Domicile of Mr. Peggoty.

The Courtship of Ham and Emily.

SCENES FROM "DAVID COPPERFIELD" (Thanhouser).

The Thanhouser Company have set a new standard in the filming of Dickens and I very readily believe their assurance that this has with them been a labor of love and that, imbued with the true Dickens enthusiasm, they have spent six months in producing these reels. Time is of the essence of success.

While it would undoubtedly have had many advantages to release the three reels at once, the film makers have made the best of an otherwise unfortunate situation by skillfully using the autobiographical character as a basis of division—The Childhood, The Boyhood and The Manhood of David Copperfield. That was a happy idea, though the full effect of this excellent production cannot be secured except by showing the three reels in one night. A lecture would go well with it, if it were featured as "An Evening with Dickens."

With the Western Producers.

By Russell Burgess.

Kalem.—If California had "Vots fer Wimin" it would be the easiest thing in the whole world to tell who would be the next executive of Glendale. Listen while I whisper it to you, Alice Joyce. Yes, she is the idol of Glendale. It is a small place in the foothills and they think they have something on Los Angeles by having the Kalem Company with them. And well they have, for the Kalem bunch is the best all around crew of good fellows on the Coast.

The many film fans who enjoy watching Carlisle Blackwell burn up the dust in his Regal racer in such films as "The Branded Shoulder," "Building the New Line," etc., will be doomed to forego this pleasure if Mr. B. doesn't quit shoving it in the high. Twice a stern judge has fined and warned this misguided young autoist, the last time with the parting advice that if he was caught again the license tag would be taken away, and no more driving of any kind for him in California.

The Kalem Company will be at the seaside for six weeks taking a lot of piratical and other marines. Every member of the company has been studying "Capt. Kidd" for months.

* * *

Selig.—Los Angeles is always strong for anything bearing the proud title "Made in Los Angeles." So they turned out ten thousand strong at Redondo Beach to watch the Selig Company produce three big marines at the same time.

Mr. McGee, business manager of the Selig Company, and the man who does things, succeeded in chartering the famous old coffin ship "Alden Bessie" for this work. In regard to the "Alden Bessie" it might be well to state that this old scoundrel has a shady past, present and future. Originally it was a smuggling boat and was confiscated and sold to the Japanese government for a training ship. It proved of no account and was sold for $1,200 and used for a coastwise schooner, at which time Mr. McGee, ever on the watch for local color and the picturesque, chartered her for a big pirate picture. It was planned to take the big climax scene to the drama on Sunday so as to give the vast army of film fans and curious people a chance to see just how a photoplay was produced. They breathlessly watched Betty Harte, Tom Santchi and a crew of supes walk the plank between a murderous row of cutthroats, all armed to the teeth.

You frequently hear the remark, "Kill two birds with one stone." Mr. Boggs killed three birds with a single cast in this marine. Three companies led by Iva Shepard, Sydney Ayres and Hobart Bosworth, all worked on the same boat, all producing pictures and no one conflicting with the other.

Two moderns and one pirate picture were produced. In the modern play the coast lifeguard and the breeches buoy were brought into action. Poor Sydney Ayres had the time of his life losing his goat with the regularity of clockwork. They tossed him overboard into twenty-five fathoms of water, where he tried his hardest to drown, but couldn't make it on account of the lift preserver, guaranteed to sustain 400 lbs. They pulled him on to the life raft with Betty Harte, where his animal got loose again. At every toss of the waves he would grab Betty by the shoulder and yell, "Save me, Betty!"

In producing a stagecoach play in the mountains just recently the horses shied and dashed down the hill at terrific speed, upsetting the camera and breaking it; knocked Miss Shepard over, and accomplished several dollars' worth of damage. Who was on top of the coach? None other than the poor unfortunate Sydney, who stood up and with one wild flourish of his arms plunged headlong into the dust and mesquite. Who was inside of the coach? The immaculate Al Earnest; he would have plunged out, but no chance. When the runaway was finally stopped he crawled out with his sartorial display rather the worse for wear. It took the combined logic of all hands to convince Al that he was not dead.

Frank Montgomery, recently with Bison, has been engaged by the Selig Company as producer.

Mr. Boggs is working on a number of idyllic marines built on the lines of the recent release written by him, "The Heart of John Barlow," simple in plot, but strong in dramatic action and heart interest with no other dramatic proposition than "To err is human; to forgive, divine."

Fritz is still with Selig. Although he came near chucking up his job when his part called for hitching up the old gray mare and going after a load of cannon. He was sure that he was miscast. He also has forsworn the delights of penny ante.

* * *

Pathe.—Jo De Grass has left the Pathe Studio for New York. The whys and wherefores of his going are a mystery. Jo evidently has been understudying the Sphinx.

James Young Deer succeeded in getting the Out West Club to act in one of his big Westerns. This club comprises 350 members, all seasoned riders.

Rev. John W. Coontz, pastor of Dr. Fry Memorial Methodist Episcopal Church, St. Louis, is to enlist the moving picture show as a means of enlarging his Bible school. The official board of the church has purchased a well-equipped moving-picture machine, with a wide variety of material for illustrations.

Reviews of Notable Films

"THE COLLEEN BAWN"—(Kalem.)

IT is a hopeful sign, amid the exigencies and temptations of trade, that American producers should pause in their headlong rush for gain, to add something of a more enduring nature to their account; that there is still existent a desire to excel not to be stifled by trade combinations. The past year has furnished several examples of exceptional effort, which instances have been duly recorded in the columns of the Moving Picture World. It is now our pleasure to place upon the record, in merited recognition, an achievement which may at this time be justly termed the chef d'oeuvre of American motion picture production—"The Colleen Bawn," in three reels, by the Kalem Company, a private view of which has been accorded The World reviewer.

"The Colleen Bawn," as will be readily remembered by the majority of our readers, is the title of an Irish classic drama written by that celebrated playwright, Dion Boucicault, and presented for the first time in America, March 27, 1860, at Laura Keene's Theater, New York, with the author in one of the prominent rôles. Since that time it has been played thousands of times and in almost every city of this country, and still remains an example of the highest type of Irish play. Written around well-known scenes in County Kerry, Ireland, and so truly portraying the Irish character and costumes of the period (1790), that the scenes and incidents of "The Colleen Bawn" have been fairly taken out of the realm of fiction by the Irish people and stamped with authenticity to the extent that the tourist is today shown the "Colleen Bawn Rock, Danny Mann's cottage, the ruins of the home of the Colleen on Muckross Head, and other points immortalized by the dramatist.

It was following the successful issue of the first excursion of the Kalem stock company to Ireland that the project of producing in pictures taken in Ireland, a number of Irish plays, was suggested. Though the plan entailed great expense for the transportation of an adequate company and suitable scenic equipment, the Kalem Company was willing to forego the profit a like expenditure at home would bring, for the distinction that a successful issue of the venture would earn. With this high and commendable incentive as the actuating motive, the work was undertaken upon a lavish scale. The company of players was selected with special reference to the suitability of each individual for the work to be done. It is doubtful if a more competent and experienced company of picture players of its numbers has ever before been assembled for a similar undertaking.

The difficulty of obtaining in Ireland suitable properties and scenery for pictures compelled the transporting of a great quantity of property material and costumes, so that the expense of the campaign counted up into the thousands of dollars before the players were fairly on their way. Upon arrival in Ireland the matter of maintenance of the company, the securing of concessions and the many unforeseen and unexpected emergencies called for more thousands, all of which will crowd closely upon a sum of six figures, if it does not actually exceed that amount. So much for the expense.

Of the hardships endured by the players themselves and the difficulties overcome, the complete story will probably never be told. It is the lot of the picture player to overcome obstacles, so but little thought is given to that feature of the work, heartrending though much of it be. One or two experiences of the O'Kalems have been chronicled in the Moving Picture World which fairly illustrate what the company has met with in the way of adventure in connection with their present task. All these form a part of the picture—a phase of the undertaking.

Out of this lavish outpouring of capital and the devotion to duty of the players comes, among others, the pictured story of "The Colleen Bawn" as a most fitting climax to a high endeavor, not alone typical of the company immediately

(Continued on page 956)

Scene from "The Colleen Bawn" (Kalem), Showing the Gap of Dunloe

CREGAN MEETS THE COLLEEN BAWN
REEL I
MARRIAGE OF HARDRESS CREGAN AND EILY O'CONNER AT HER MOTHERS GRAVE
REEL I
MYLES LEARNS HIS OWN LOVE IS HOPELESS REEL
FATHER TORN MAKES EILY SWEAR HER MARRIAGE LINES WILL NEVER LEAVE HER BREAST
REEL I
MRS. CREGAN GIVES DANNY MANN THE GLOVE
REEL II
DANNY TRIES TO MAKE EILY GIVE UP HER MARRIAGE LINES
INTERIOR OF COLLEEN BAWN ROCK (GENUINE)
REEL II
SCENES From The COLLEEN BAWN
(KALEM)
DANNY MANN'S CONFESSION
REEL II
RECONCILIATION
FINALE REEL II

(Continued from page 954)

concerned, but of American picture making as an enterprise, alert, resourceful and progressive.

Of the story of "The Colleen Bawn" we shall say but little. To many it is familiar and the picture is sufficiently explanatory to require a modicum of narrative. Hardress Cregan meets and falls in love with Eily O'Connor, "The Colleen Bawn," and is secretly married to her. His mother desires that he take for his wife his cousin, Anne Chute, who is wealthy and who will provide money to raise the mortgage from the Cregan estate. Danny Mann, a simple minded cripple, devoted to Hardress, senses the situation and seeks to relieve his master of the low-born wife, that he may marry the heiress. In his zeal Danny decoys the Colleen out to the rock in the lake and attempts to drown her. In the darkness he is shot by Myles na Coppaleen, who mistakes him for an otter. When attempting to retrieve his game, Myles discovers something white in the water, which leads him to rescue the Colleen.

Danny Mann, though desperately wounded, manages also to escape death and finds his way to Eily's cottage at Muckross Head, where ten days after he comes to his senses and confesses to drowning the Colleen. This confession leads to an attempt to arrest Hardress Cregan just as he is about to be married to Anne Chute, upon the charge of having incited the crime. But in the confusion Father Tom, to whom the confession was made, Myles and the Colleen enter and the affair is cleared up. Hardress acknowledges Eily as his wife and his ambitious mother accepts her, which brings the story to a happy ending. The other characters figuring prominently in the story are Mr. Corrigan, the grasping old money lender, who holds the mortgage on the Cregan estate and takes a hand in the plotting; Sheelah, a typical Irish grandmother, and Kyrle Daly, who loves Anne Chute. These parts were taken by the Kalem players as follows:

EILY O'CONNOR, "The Colleen"...Miss Gauntier
Myles na Coppaleen.....Jack J. Clark
Danny Mann .....Sidney Olcott
Hardress Cregan.....J. P. McGowan
Kyrle Daly.....George H. Fisher
Father Tom.....Arthur Donaldson
Mr. Corrigan .....Robert Vignola
Anne Chute.....Alice Hollister
Mrs. Cregan.....Agnes Mapes
Sheelah .....Mrs. Clark

The pictured story follows very closely the drama of Boucicault, with the exception that in a number of instances the picture portrays events to which the dialogue merely alludes. In these instances the picture tells the story with greater clearness. Then, too, the scope of the camera picture is at all times greater than the stage picture. The events follow each other through the three reels in such close and logical sequence that the absence of the dialogue is scarcely noticeable. This condition could not be obtained in a picture of shorter length. The scenario was written by Miss Gauntier.

In point of photographic effects there is little left to be desired. As scene after scene unfolds one is charmed with lavish beauties of nature, caught on the wing, as it were, by the eye of the camera. There is cumulative evidence of the care exercised in selection and composition in almost every foot of film. The moonlight effects are enchanting. Most notable is that where Anne is found sitting with her lover under the trees of the Anchute Castle grounds. Real moonlight could scarcely produce deeper shadows and softer lights than the camera has transferred to the film in this scene. Again, when Danny rows Eily out to the Colleen Rock, there is as perfect simulation of the shimmer of moonlight upon the water as could be well conceived. There is also some difficult work in the second reel where Danny throws the Colleen from the rock. This scene was taken from the interior of the cave—an undertaking that taxed not only the ability but the agility of the photographer as well.

It is also to be recorded that there is added value to these scenes because they are views of the identical places immortalized by the dramatist. There is Colleen Bawn Rock, the Gap of Dunloe, Danny Mann's cottage, and the cottage on Muckross Head, the cave where Myles na Coppaleen distilled his "spirits," and where he happened to be on the eventful night when Danny attempted to drown the Colleen.

Of the work of the individual players much might be said in merited praise. Miss Gauntier never appeared to better advantage than as the Colleen; always winsome and appealing in her girls' parts, she was exceptionally so in this, commanding sympathy at the first and holding the attention throughout. The Colleen is a true-hearted Irish girl, deeply in love with her high-born husband and, though her heart were breaking, she loved him so deeply that she would willingly die to save him from the disgrace she felt her presence would bring upon him. That Miss Gauntier has succeeded in making this clear will not be questioned. Her effort is to be highly commended.

Sydney Olcott easily carries off the second honors in his conception of Danny Mann, the cripple and the lackey of Hardress Cregan. Distorted in mind and body at the hands of Hardress when but a boy, Danny is still his admirer and faithful servant, anxious to further his master's interests at any cost. In giving expression to this quaint character Mr. Olcott has done more than to portray mere externals—he has given us a glimpse of the very soul of the unfortunate Danny, which portrayal reaches its climax in the confession scene in the third part—a bit of playing that fairly speaks out from the screen.

Of the work of Mr. Donaldson, Mr. Clark, Mr McGowan and Mr. Vignola, we should like to give more space than this mere mention, were that space at our disposal. Dignity and care marked their every effort and close scrutiny failed to detect false play in their several parts. Miss Mapes and Miss Hollister deserve equal praise. As "Sheelah," Mrs. Clark was splendid. Altogether, the Kalem players may well be proud of their achievement.

"The Colleen Bawn" is scheduled for release October 16, on which date the three parts will be offered at once. It is a safe prediction that instant success awaits its appearance.

Advance Views of "The Colleen Bawn."

On account of the importance of the Kalem three-reel subject, "The Colleen Bawn," and the desirability of affording exchange managers and exhibitors an opportunity of gauging its drawing powers, a series of private views for the trade only has been arranged to be given in the following cities at the places and dates named:

Buffalo, N. Y., at the Vendome Theater, Monday, Sept. 25th, at 10.30 a. m. sharp.

Cleveland, O., at the Hippodrome Theater, Tuesday, Sept. 26th, at 10.30 a. m. sharp.

Chicago, Ill., Theatorium Theatre, Wednesday, Sept. 27th, at 9.00 a. m. sharp.

Kansas City, Mo., Yale Theater, Thursday, Sept. 28th, at 10.00 a. m. sharp.

St. Louis, Mo., Grand Central Theatre, Friday, Sept. 29th, at 10.00 a. m. sharp.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Arcade Theater, Saturday, Sept. 30th, at 10.30 a. m. sharp.

Boston, Mass., at Savoy Theater, Tuesday, Oct. 3rd, at 10.30 a. m. sharp.

Philadelphia, Pa., Palace Theater, Oct. 4th, at 9.30 a. m. sharp.

These exhibitions will be held under the direction of William (Bilkalem) Wright.

NEWS BRIEFS.

The E. M. F. Automobile Company, of Detroit, are working the country fairs with their special set of moving pictures showing the making of an auto from the forging to the speed test. The International Harvester Company, of Chicago, is doing likewise; demonstrating to the farmers their heavy machinery through the medium of moving pictures.

* * *

Already many exhibitors, following the World's suggestion, are beginning a campaign of education for patrons in case of fire or false alarm. Picture patrons should be thoroughly taught that a film or machine cannot explode. Go to it, brothers!

* * *

One exhibitor in Wilmington, Delaware, is using five educational slides that are worth copying. They are as follows: A reward of $25 is offered. 1. For any person who tries to start a panic by shouting fire. 2. If persons would only think there never, or seldom, could be any damage done before you could walk out quietly. 3. All attaches are required to take part in a fire drill at least once a month. 4. All men are requested to give all the assistance they can when there is danger of a panic. There is more damage done by men and boys running and jumping on children or women than in any other way. 5. There is never as much damage done by fire as there is by running over each other foolishly. Every man or boy who volunteers to help in every way to get the people out safely will get a reward of $5, but be sure to grab the person who starts the panic or acts disorderly and get the $25.00.

Superior Plays

By Louis Reeves Harrison.

"THE REFORM CANDIDATE" (Edison).

This play deals with a live issue of interest and importance to Americans of all classes. It is comparatively easy to picture the issues of other days already portrayed by authors of recognized ability in fiction and history, but our people have gone over those grounds in literature, in school or private life, and a new presentation of has-beens can only be highly regarded when there is extraordinary artistic quality involved. It is more difficult to tell a good story of modern times of people we recognize, especially one dealing with unsatisfactory political or social condition in a truthful, convincing and entertaining way. We are curiously prejudiced against a man who starts out in good faith to improve our unclean political structure; no matter how excellent his character and record, he is usually considered to be the weakest candidate on a ticket in spite of the fact that the solid and sensible mass of our people are opposed to machine politics. It is because those people are busy pursuing their private affairs that public offices fall into the hands of men who see in them simply a source of private advantage and who yield control of government by the people to government by whatever business interest has the most money to spend in bribery and corruption. None of us is opposed to reform, but we have reason to be skeptical about the performance of election promises and have drifted into a habit of choosing between two evils the one least harmful to our private interests because the present system, created when our statesmen were animated by honest ambition to do substantial service to the country, makes it difficult for those of today to adapt old rules to new conditions.

Once in a while there is a veritable revolt against the contemptible methods used in "practical" politics and such a one is spiritedly shown in the Edison production in a way that throws the spot-light on methods employed by electric traction companies to obtain valuable franchises by felonious perversion of legislative action. The play lifts the curtain of official secrecy from practices that are going on at this very minute—it is instructive without being tiresome—and it points out with incidental irony the kind of "public service" we are getting from business organizations and the men we elect to office to be their tools. All this is done in entertaining story form, with a dramatic struggle between two opposed forces and a delightful love interest centered upon a girl who has to fight her way instead of having it prepared for her; the kind of up-to-date heroine that American audiences admire more than the clinging vine variety.

The pivotal character is not the one indicated in the title rôle—though the honors are his in the end—but is that of a girl reporting for a daily paper attired as are the better class of business and professional women in our daily lives, who conducts herself with a combination of modesty, high spirit and intelligence that is thoroughly representative of a type that we all recognize. In this matter of types the entire photoplay is exceptionally good. Especially effective is the man who plays the rôle of the financier of corrupt practices. Instead of an actor in white spats, we have a gentleman at ease in a dress suit, who looks as though he really had an asset of costly experiences in high living behind his impersonation. He looks like one of those men of immense wealth who have grown so indifferent to public opinion that they over-reach themselves in an excess of greed. He seeks to influence the reform candidate through his daughter and unwittingly furnishes the material for his own downfall to the keen-witted girl reporter. Her adventures are perilous enough to thrill, and the outcome of her splendid scoop is one that will win the approval of every right-minded man and woman in the audience. It will go.

"FORGOTTEN" (Vitagraph).

A minor chord can be made effective. Once in a while a delicate refrain from a pure-toned viola affects the audience more powerfully than the full orchestra in a crescendo movement, and this exquisite drama of childhood appeals strongly to the quality of mercy. The little-heeded truth uttered by the immortal Ruskin that "Whoever is not actively kind is cruel," is here suggested in a way that is bound to interest the thousands upon thousands who are making the environment of children a life study, yet the play is so quietly consistent, with beauty in every detail, that happiness and kindly sympathy are insensibly suggested and intensified by what is artistic or replete with varied design in scenic effect.

The defect of inconsistency, so serious in literature, is positively ruinous in the photoplay where the action is swift and the individual peculiarities of each character must be enforced within vexatious limitations of time. On this account I can conceive that "Forgotten" was an exceedingly difficult play to present. The initial motive was beautiful, the director had something to start with, but it is quite another matter to make this visible and appreciated to a mixed audience in the space of twenty minutes. Too many of our picture plays begin with nothing. They are not considered under the heading of superior plays because they are neither attractive nor offensive. They are of little more value than that of showing characters in motion or supposed emotion; but there is another class of promise that leads us to think there is something of interest coming, only to end in nothing. They are sign posts that draw us into a blind alley when we thought we were on our way to some point of interest. Here is a little play so harmoniously balanced that its beauty is not forced on our sensibilities by any outrageous exhibition of cruelty or neglect, yet our hearts are stirred by dull echoes in our souls as they never are by more sensational, less-recognizable episodes in alleged thrillers.

Very few of us believe that cowboys, engaged to herd steaks and roasts on the hoof, spend most of their time shooting up the town or rescuing distracted maidens from the savage Indians; nor are we inclined to shiver when the old fashioned villain of the Desperate Desmond type, with a cigarette dangling from his discolored lips, his left hand in the pocket of his dress pants, comes on the scene and honors the hero with a glance of deadly hatred out of the corners of his eyes. We do know of dark episodes in our lives as children, hence the swift appeal of the forgotten little one. She was born in the death throes of a much-loved wife, became the innocent object of his aversion before she was able to realize that the price paid for her existence was the annihilation of her father's fondest hopes, and was given into the care of a sister with children of her own while he sought distraction in other scenes. She bears her lot with silent suffering of spirit—not neglected, but deprived of the natural affection for which such tender creatures long intensely. This is a story of life as we know it, saturated with the essence of home spirit, and the simple tragedy of her career with its intense relief, is one of those unstudied, unborrowed glimpses of human experience that affect us like the folk songs we used to sing at twilight. The plaintive measures of this little play are cast in the simplest possible forms of stage expression, with some brilliant views of Parisian gaiety in relief, with an ending that is a tiny prayer of gratitude.

EXHIBITOR'S AND LECTURER'S KEY TO DANTE'S INFERNO.

The Moving Picture World, anxious to see the great artistic production of Dante's Inferno (Milano Films) properly presented, has printed the above-named book for the purpose of aiding the exhibitor who wishes to show the attraction in his house. The book is based upon the presentation of the reels at Baltimore and Providence under the direction of W. Stephen Bush. Lecture, music and effects all have an important share in the successful presentation and the author with considerable care and patience has gone over every single scene and given it a proper placing. The lecture, which may be easily learned, runs in exact conformity with the action on the screen and for this reason is welcome to every audience. Wherever possible the words of the poet have been followed in the lecture. In the matter of effects, experience has shown that the effects indicated in the book are, without exception, appropriate and striking. Effects worked by a competent man, carefully following the instructions laid down in the book, add very much to the force and realism of the picture. It is plain that a proper presentation will get more money and secure a longer engagement than a careless and ignorant handling. This will be doubly true by the time the films get around to the later exhibitors, for the novelty of the thing will then have worn off a little and a proper presentation will be more important than ever.

The book contains a set of press notices, full instructions to lecturer, piano player and operator, a very complete lecture and much other matter, such as special keys, a biography of Dante, some of which may with advantage be reprinted for general distribution among the audience. The price of the book is $2.50. Special rebates are given when quantities are ordered.

When told of an author who complained that one studio rejected his scenarios successively, while another accepted almost all he offered, a well-known manuscript reader stated: "That is an old, old story. Some of the greatest successes in literature have gone begging for a publisher. Take 'Uncle Tom's Cabin,' for instance."

Music for the Picture

By CLARENCE E. SINN

SPEAKING of the different way different people have of regarding things in general and moving pictures in particular, recalls something I heard the other day while Powers' "The Last Rose" was being run. One of the characters in this picture is named "Molly Shannon" and at her entrance the pianist treated us to "Where the River Shannon Flows." I couldn't see what possible suggestion the river bore to the lady or the lady to the river further than the similarity of names, and if we take that as a sufficient reason for the music in question it is going to simplify matters for us. Just learn the names of the several characters and make musical puns on them . For example: if the villain's name is "Rocks," play "Rock of Ages"; if the heroine's last name happens to be "Knight," the obvious thing to play would be "Who Are You With Tonight?"; "Nelly Banks" would be introduced by "On the Banks of the Wabash," and "Billy King" would be coupled with "God Save the King" (apologies to Wm. E.). Perfectly easy, isn't it? It could be carried further if you like. "Turkey in the Straw" suggests a scene from Turkey (if you possess an unbiased mind) and "Where is the German Fatherland?" might be used with some of these microscopical subjects—indicative of the germs, see? Ouch! Quick, Watson, the needle.

Drummer, Alabama, writes: "An article appeared in the Moving Picture World, Sept. 9th, in which the writer says: 'effects to help the picture must be few and well rehearsed for each separate and particular picture. The idea that a set of mechanical contrivances for the production of a limited number of sounds can be made to fit most pictures or even a small percentage of them is utterly absurd.' Now I am not going to argue with the writer as to the correctness of his statement. What I want to ask is: what good does it do us drummers and 'sound effect' men? To talk about any kind of rehearsal is absurd in most cases, and a thorough rehearsal is impossible in all cases so far as I have any knowledge, and I believe my experience is the same as the average trap drummer. In the smaller towns we run three and four shows per night with a matinee in some places. Occasionally we get a look at a picture an hour or so in advance of the regular performance, but not often. And one look at a picture is not a rehearsal. Our first sight is usually at the first show and then it is a case of guess work for both music and effects. The second and third shows we try to correct what was overlooked the first time and then it is time to go home. Next day the same thing with a different set of pictures. As to the limited set of mechanical contrivances mentioned, we must do the best we can. The number of sound effects on the market is limited; the number of sound effects called for in the average picture is limited too, to a great extent. There are train effects including bells and whistles, auto-horns, water effects, and others which are constantly needed. Of course, there are effects called for sometimes which we have no means of imitating correctly, in that case we have our choice of doing something or keeping still. I think the last is the best plan, but I know many drummers will agree with me that it is not always the best policy—if he wants to hold his job. I agree that it would be the correct thing to imitate all things correctly, but as I said, sometimes a picture comes along we are not prepared for, and what then? Even if a man is a good inventor the picture is gone long before he can hope to have his 'mechanical contrivance' complete and he may never have use for it again; and the next day may bring something else just as puzzling. In the cities I believe they run matinees every day and sometimes all day and the drummers have more shows to play and consequently more opportunity to perfect each picture with the traps on hand, but I don't see where even they have a chance to study and carefully rehearse each picture in advance and prepare special sound effects for them. Where are we going to get the time, and who is going to pay for the extra expense, which will be considerable? An ordinary outfit that is anywhere near complete costs from three hundred dollars upward, and the salaries paid in moving picture houses are not so large as to warrant extravagant outlay for stuff you may never use more than once. I am not finding fault with the writer's assertions so long as he says 'things would be better if done so and so,' but I don't believe he understands much of the drummer's side of the work. The absurdities committed by bad drummers don't need to come into the main question. We know they ought to be roasted, and that's all there is to it. But what I want to know is: what practical benefit are we to get from general 'knocks' with impractical suggestions? We are getting to look to the Moving Picture World for help and advice and I want to say that we often find what we want. Hoping I have not taken up too much of your valuable time and space, I am yours, etc."

The article referred to is probably the one by Mr. Bush entitled: "When Effects Are Unnecessary Noises." There is no "knock" or "roast" intended that I can see. Mr. Bush's experience gives him the opportunity to observe the picture and its accessories from many angles, and his remarks as I understand them are merely suggestive as to what would be best for the good of the picture. We must admit that to get the best results a picture should be well understood before the performance by everyone connected with the presentation of that picture, and this implies careful rehearsals. I don't say we can get them or that such a thing is practical at present, but the fact remains that to get best results we should know exactly what we are going to do before the show just the same as the musicians, stage hands, property man and electrician in a regular theater.

THE STAGE ROBBERS OF SAN JUAN (American).

1. Heavy semi-agitato till "A Plan of Revenge."
2. till "I'll Take You to the Stage Robbers."
3. Sentimental (Bendix's "Reconciliation") till change of scene.
4. Agitato p. and f. till man and woman dismount, then
5. Plaintive till change of scene.
6. Long agitato soft till they ride off, then work with action till "A Town Hero."
7. Lively (cowboy tune will answer) till she enters picture.
8. Heart's Ease (Remick pub.) till "The Escape."
9. Light agitato through two scenes.
10. Neutral moderato till man unlocks jail, then
11. The Mouse and the Clock (Witmark pub.) till "Across the Mexican Line."
12. Heart's Ease till finish.

THE BUDDHIST PRIESTESS (Thanhouser).

1. Neutral moderato ("Miami," pub. by Remick) till "The Natives Desert, etc." then:
2. Under the Harvest Moon" (Witmark pub.) till change of scene.
3. Mysterious till they rob the temple and exit.
4. Heavy (short) till "Her Parents Dead, etc."
5. "Under the Harvest Moon" till child falls asleep on altar.
6. Ping-a-ling" lively first scene then slow down with broad chords while priests prostrate themselves before her.
7. (Sub-title) "The Sacred Pigeons are Placed in Her Charge."
   Moon Song from Sullivan's "Mikado" till "Twelve Years Later."
8. Semi-devotional till priests' exit, then sentimental till: "The American Naval Officer Comes Ashore, etc."
9. Lively ("Heart of America" march, for example) two scenes.
10. "In a Lotus Field" (Witmark pub.) till "Discovered, They Take Refuge in the Temple."
11. Agitato till she leaves room, then:
12. Short sentimental till change of scene.
13. Agitato (long) p. and f. with action till priests are driven off.
14. Under the Harvest Moon" till finish.

THE SQUAW'S LOVE (Biograph).

1. Indian (Os-ka-loo-sa-loo) till Wild Flower leaves Gray Fox at river, then "Naponee" (pub. by Will Rossiter) till sub-title: "Gray Fox Asks Chief's Sanction, etc."
2. Agitato, very soft, till Indians seize Gray Fox, then p. and f. according to action through four scenes.

3. Slow Indian music till "White Eagle to Aid His Friend Carries," etc.
4. Agitato (soft, of a mysterious nature) till sub-title: "Gray Fox, Still an Outcast, Is Seized," etc.
5. Hurry till "The Chief Orders the Death," etc.; change to
6. Hurry (faster for pursuit) till "His Many Hardships," etc.
7. Mysterious till crowd of Indians take to boats again.
8. Quick hurry for chase till "The Twilight Song."
9. Indian sentimental till end.

THE DIAMOND GANG (Essanay).

1. Moderato till sub-title, "The Next Day."
2. Chorus of "Look Out for Jimmy Valentine" (pub. by Gus Edwards) till he changes clothes with janitor, then:
3. Mysterious till he falls through door into room.
4. Hurry till they leave him bound in chair.
5. Agitato (p. semi-mysterious) till "On the Trail."
6. Hurry. Subdue when street car comes on, then change to
7. Hurry (faster for running fight) p. and f. according to action. Finish with broad chords—sustained and forte.

LONE STAR'S RETURN (Bison).

1. Romantic Indian music till two Indians sit and smoke.
2. Slower Indian music till "The Lovers Are Being Watched," etc.
3. Agitato-mysterious till "Young Deer Resolves to Steal Laughing Eyes."
4. "Os-ka-loo-sa-loo" till both are in boat.
5. Light agitato through this and the next scene when Indian comes out of tent; mysterious till "The Search."
6. Light agitato till change of scene.
7. Mysterious till "Lone Star Returns to His Tribe in Time," etc.
8. Indian (same as No. 1) till finish.

IS THE TWO-DOLLAR-A-SEAT PICTURE THEATER IN SIGHT?

By Robert Grau.

The advent of the Kinemacolor pictures, and the fact that the best theaters of this country are now available for special productions of an elaborate character, clearly illustrates the remarkable development now going on in the motion picture industry and the writer is firm in his belief that this development will go on. Until the regular legitimate theaters of the highest grade all over the country will not only be as extensively occupied by motion pictures as by players in the flesh, but the scale of pricees for seats will gradually become adjusted so that there will be no difference noted as between the two—which means that the day of the two-dollar-a-seat motion picture is near at hand.

Such a prophecy made as recently as a year ago would have been ridiculed, but the prophecies of a year ago are all fulfilled today.

The motion picture has made greater progress in the last three months than at any period in its vogue and to any one who has taken the trouble to investigate, the outlook must appear to be well nigh perfect.

It is in the large summer resorts of this country that one should look for indications as to conditions at this time, for in these are found the cosmopolitan public.

Previous to this year Asbury Park and Ocean Grove were famous for the great musical events taking place in the vast auditorium in the latter and the fine array of big Broadway attractions at the casino in the former. But all this has changed now and we find that the most compelling attraction at the Ocean Grove auditorium (which seats 10,000) this year has been the motion pictures, while the Casino has been abandoned as a playhouse, but in its place have come two moving picture resorts, both packed to the doors all open hours.

In the last year, greatly through the public spirited efforts of Mr. Andrus, of the Ocean Grove Association, a superb new pier has arisen in the latter resort, and with commendable foresight Mr. Andrus has erected here the most concrete and artistic moving picture theater that I have had occasion to observe in a long time. It so happened that in looking about for a manager to whom he could intrust the direction of this establishment Mr. Andrus recalled that Mr. Salo Ansbach had made a success of a similar enterprise in Jersey City on property owned by himself, and it was Mr. Ansbach's record at the Monticello Theater in Jersey City, that induced its owner to choose him as the director of the new Scenario Theater at Ocean Grove. The latter is the most perfectly conducted cinematographic resort imaginable. At first the admission prices were 5 and 10 cents, but the grade of film used and the entire conduct of the house quickly demanded an increase to 15 cents at night and 10 cents at matinees. The house seats 600. An empty seat is an absolute rarity, yet no one is allowed to stand. Mr. Ansbach himself acts as usher, and he is constantly on the alert to raise the level of his offerings on the screen. Rehearsals of the films take place every morning and an orchestra of grand opera musicians is utilized.

It is here and at other resorts of a similar character that the intense interest in the motion picture at this time is made so vividly apparent. The public simply passes up the great musical events, and the plays direct from Broadway theaters, but stampedes to the picture theaters, until all of these have been seriously thinking of increasing the prices, which is most commendable, for such procedure is certain to be accompanied by an equivalent enhancement in the entertainment offered. Not one of these theaters offers a single vaudeville act and therein lies the success. Oh, you exhibitors! When will you be convinced that "straight pictures" should be your slogan?

The readers of the Moving Picture World surely recall the writings of this contributor, in which the evils of presenting vaudeville acts were emphasized. A good 'cello player will draw more money than the best vaudeville headliner, and bear in mind, that we are now evolving into the era of the moving picture headliner. In one more year (if indeed we have to wait that long), we will see reserved seats in the moving picture theaters, and reservations made a week in advance, and the spectacle of a line of ticket purchasers in waiting at the box office on their way to business will be on view. It has got to come; nothing can stop it. The patronage at the Herald Square Theater, attracted by the Kinemacolor pictures, is not of a transient character. The audiences come to the theater from everywhere in automobiles, carriages, and they arrive at the playhouse at the exact hour of commencing the performance. Seats are sold at the hotels, and premiums are paid for choice locations. Such is the moving picture of today.

The spectacle of an audience carried to such a state of enthusiasm that "bravos," such as are heard at the Metropolitan Opera House on a Caruso night, can now be witnessed any evening at the theaters, where the Kinemacolor pictures are on view.

The policy of the Pathe Freres, wherein they introduce their leading players to the spectators on the screen before the presentation of the photo-play, is an evolution well worth emulating, for this will gradually result in the players becoming favorites with the audience and this means that after all the players can achieve fame by their efforts in photo-plays.

The New York Times, in a full page article in the magazine section on Sunday, Aug. 20, sounded a true note indeed when its accomplished writer prophesied that the moving picture would obliterate the regular theater unless the latter element recognized the conditions now confronting its managerial forces.

DO YOU WANT THE "REAL THING?"

The Thanhouser Company received a peculiar application recently from an individual who styles himself "The King of Tramps." Thanhouser could not see his way clear to engage the king, so he passed the application along, through The World, to his brother manufacturers. Here is the king's letter:

Marathon, Florida, August 21st, 1911.

Dear Sir.—I wish to know if, at any time, your company might be able to use me for a part in some of your pictures. I am Boomerang Bill, The King of Tramps. I have beat my way in every State in the United States, Canada and Mexico, have beat my way to Gibraltar, Naples, Genoa, Cape Town, Sydney, and many other ports too numerous to mention.

Just 60 days ago I was the only one who ever beat the P. & O. steamships from Key West, Florida, to Havana, Cuba, and return, to Tampa, Florida. I am known all over the country. The New York World had a two-column write-up and my picture, in regard to me last April, also the New York Times. I have been wrote up all over the country by the best of papers and magazines. I refer you to J. Odell Hauser, of the New York Times. Mr. Mackay, editor of the Rail-Road Man's Magazine. Otto Floto, of the Denver Post. The Salt Lake Trihune. The Key West Citizen. The Kansas City Times. The Key West Journal. The Key West Citizen. The Tampa Times Union. Mayor Fogarty, of Key West. Mayor McKay, of Tampa, and many, many others. If you can use me in any of your productions, I assure you I can deliver the goods. I can ride the rods (underneath) or the top of any train in United States, going at any rate of speed. Can show you how I stole a Chinaman's hat check while he was asleep in a smoking car, and I rode 206 miles on the hat check. Wishing to hear from you soon, for I was told to write your company first, and if your company can't use me, I want to look elsewhere. I am,

Mr. George Cole, Marathon, Florida.

PICTURES IN ROLLER RINK.

R. R. Winter, manager of the Somerset roller rink, Somerset, Pa., opened his place of amusement on September 16th for the season of 1911-12. He wants to hear from exchanges having anything special to offer for one, two and three night stands. The house will run pictures and vaudeville.

Advertising for Exhibitors

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT.

IT is not so much what is done as the way it is done that counts. There are two houses in a certain section of lower New York not five blocks apart. One man brags about the display he makes and the other merely does the best he can. One man has space for some sixty sheets of paper, while the other can use but two three-sheets and two one-sheet boards, yet the man with eight sheets at his disposal does effective advertising and the other wastes space and money.

He has a corner building devoted to his theater so far as front and side are concerned—a taxpayer structure that houses no other interest. It was built for another purpose but abandoned by the original lessee and turned into a theater. On the wide front are four three-sheet boards with two more and some one-sheets in the lobby, and the rest on the side of the building, all of them being three-sheet boards.

With such space at his command he could do wonders, but the only wonder is that he does not, and the answer is that he thinks that if he puts paper on these boards he is advertising his show; yet, with four or five times the average space at his command, there isn't even a free bulletin to tell what he has inside. You do not even know whether he has Licensed or Independent pictures, and yet he pays well for his service and spends a lot for paper.

Don't Deal in Generalities.

The trouble is that he buys only the stock stuff, not the stock paper as the dramatic advance man knows it, but the stock paper as it is known in the photoplay trade, the sort of stuff to be had from half a dozen concerns and in infinite variety. It is useful paper and, rightly used to supplement the half-sheet litho, it is a boon to the exhibitor; but such paper of necessity deals in glittering generalities, and that is the only sort this exhibitor uses. He pastes up the sheets and leaves them to the weather until the display begins to look shabby and then he pastes more just like the first. It is mostly all the cheaper sort in one or two colors, intended merely to supplement the live stuff, but this is all he ever offers and the passer-by has grown so used to "Great Western To-day," "Always the Best Show in Town" and the like that he never stops to read.

What color is the store on the corner below your theater? Can you tell? The chances are that you cannot. It is just a store front. If they had painted it a week before, you might remember, but it's been the same color ever since you knew it—and you don't know what the color is. That is just what the trouble is with this theater. The display is always the same, a dull monotony of color and announcement that attracts no attention.

The Better Display.

The other man is wide awake. He uses stock paper along with the special lithographs, but he uses it intelligently. One of the three-sheet boards has a stock design with "To-day" above it. This is stripped with streamers having the printed name and trademark of the various companies and a white space in which to letter the title of the photoplay. The lettering is neatly done with a marking pen in red ink and with black, grey and red the board is snappy and attention compelling. The other board is frame stuff and carries two lithographs of the day's offering and the two one-sheet boards also have frames to make the half-sheet lithos into one-sheets. On special occasions a banner is used over the front of the entrance, but only on special occasions, and by not abusing that fact the regulars know that the banner means something extra good and make a special effort to see the show that day.

Everything in front of that house means something, and it is all well displayed. You see people stop and look at the picture, read the sign and go in. Something has attracted their attention, but no one is going to hang over a sign that says "coolest place in town" when you're wearing a spring overcoat with your straw hat. Anyhow, you've seen that sign up there ever since you bought that straw hat.

Make a Marking Pen.

The marking pen work referred to above seems to make a better showing than the rubber stamp alphabet that is commonly used. They cost from fifty cents to $2, according to what you get, but an old clock spring, a bit of wood, a couple of yards of twine and the tools in the operating-room are all that are needed for a home-made affair. The spring should be from 3/8 to 5/8 inches wide and you need two pieces a couple of inches long. Bind the pieces to a stick from 1/8 to 3/16 inches thick and with a file cut the free edges down and square with the side. Rub it on an oil stone until the burr is smoothed down and you have a pen that will make a mark as broad as its width when used across, or a narrow mark when used the narrow way.

A few trials will suggest several shapes of letter or you can get a book of alphabet styles at an art store. For ink, use package dyes dissolved in water to the proper tint and thickened with glycerine or white sugar. If you want a fancy letter nick the pen surface with a three cornered file before you rub it down. Of course you bind the curves to fit together and use the end of spring that is not tightly wound.

With two or three pens with different faces and half a dozen different colored inks, the man who can print fairly well can do his own lettering, and be independent of the sign painter. The pen is better than the brush since it avoids the splotchy appearance of crude brush work.

On the subject of home-made devices it might be mentioned that border for wall paper, if chosen with taste, will make fine frames for lithographs that are too small for the boards. The border should be cut evenly and the edges trimmed with a mitre square. The cutting is best done with one of the revolving trimmers, to be had where you get your paper.

Paper with a design not too pronounced can be used as backing for larger boards, but border should never be so pronounced as to be more prominent than the lithograph it encloses.

Montgomery's Contest.

One of the livest wires in the photoplay business is Montgomery. He is a veteran showman and his string of houses through Florida and adjacent states is growing rapidly. They're all real houses and something to brag about, but he doesn't trust to the houses or the shows he gives in them. He's after the people who do not know how good they are, and he's after them hot foot, although he probably has more "carriage" trade than any house north or south of Mason and Dixon's line.

His latest is a popularity contest; which is a loaded proposition unless you handle it right, but when rightly handled there is nothing more effective in arousing interest. Here are the details of his plan for the benefit of others who may want to try it in whole or part:

From September 10th to 20th one of the local papers prints a nomination coupon. This coupon must be brought to the theater in the afternoon as Montgomery very frankly states that the idea of the contest is to build up the matinee business. Each nomination coupon is good for ten votes. Any woman may be nominated. After the nominations are closed no more entries will be accepted and the recording of the votes is thus simplified.

After the nominations are closed the paper will print a vote coupon each day. These must be voted at the theater at the matinee of the day on which the coupon is printed, by some person who has purchased a ten-cent admission ticket, but one person may vote more than one coupon. The ticket itself is good for ten votes.

Coupon books are sold for fifty cents, each good for one hundred votes, and each book good for ten child's or five adult matinee admissions any time between now and April 1, though the contest will close before Thanksgiving, when the prizes will be distributed.

The prizes are an automobile, a yearly pass for two, a yearly pass for one, which carries with it a round trip ticket and Pullman berth to Atlanta, to inspect the new Montgomery theater there, and single passes good for periods varying from one to eleven months.

Some Interesting Angles.

It is a clever scheme and develops many fine points. The use of the newspaper coupon gets the leading paper interested to the extent of daily free space in return for the additional paper sales. This means a half column or more a day from now until the end of November.

But the coupon must be voted on the day of issue by some person who purchases a ten-cent ticket (also good for votes), which means that each contestant will have at least one friend in the theater each afternoon. With a first prize of such magnitude, the contest will be sharp and the entrants numerous.

Even better is the coupon book scheme. Some of the contestants will purchase these books literally by the hundreds in their eagerness to keep ahead and the town will be filled with pass books. Many new patrons will use them and when the books are exhausted they will keep on coming because they have formed the habit and meantime Montgomery is drawing down interest now on some of the business he is going to do the first three months of next year.

Big Return for Small Cost.

It is about the best example of a well-framed contest that has come to this writer's notice, for it brings patronage and publicity at the cost of one automobile, a railroad ticket and two pullman berths and less than $100 worth of admissions at the most.

The contest only runs about ten weeks where some exhibitors would stretch it out to six months and let everyone get tired of it before the decision came.

The advertising page that starts the campaign is a model. It starts off:

"Look me straight in the eye and answer this question:
"Have you ever known
"Of a contest of this kind?
"My opinion is that you have not."

There follows a list of the prizes and just five words to boom the Atlanta house. Then comes a cut of the car with boxes on either side, one devoted to the makers and one to the car itself. The latter ends with:

"This car is made in Detroit and guaranteed by the manufacturer, by Julian Howard, of Jacksonville, from whom I bought it, and by myself—Montgomery."

Then comes the explanation:

"See the car in front of the Grand Theater.
"I'll buy it back for $1,000 if you don't want it.
"My object in giving this contest is to induce a larger attendance in the afternoon. The theatre is cooler then, and not so crowded. This being my object, votes in this contest will be accepted only from 1 to 6 p. m."

There is no lurid advertising for or about the theaters, The rest of the space is given over to the details of the contest. Twice in the page the houses in Jacksonville, Atlanta, Columbia and Savannah are alluded to in a perfectly legitimate manner, but that is all. Montgomery has learned the most valuable lesson of knowing when to keep out.

There is no use trying a similar contest with a gold watch or a hundred-dollar piano for a prize. If that is done it should be well done and on a scale to clinch the impression that your theater does only big things from programs to contests. There are other business getters for smaller houses. Leave the big things to the big house.

LETTERS OF AN OLD EXHIBITOR TO A NEW FILM MAKER.

Saratoga Springs, September 19, 1911.

Elsewhere in the North fall makes little ceremony about introducing itself to you personally. A rude blast will drive the blood from your toes and you know most positively that the reign of coal and furnace is at hand. Not so in this blessed nook, which the Archangel seems to have forgotten, when he went about touching things in paradise with his flaming sword. Here you will be wandering through the redolent fields some September afternoon and the air will caress you with balmy wavelets that make you stay in the open as long as possible, even after the shadows have begun to lengthen. There are little currents of coolness, but oh, so gentle and soothing.

Tempted by this vast sun bath, which Nature prepares for the loyal Saratogian, I walked with a friend through the chestnut groves of Yaddo Park, where the small boy will soon be seen hunting for the fuzzy covers on the ground. This friend is a great lover of the moving picture, though experience with the prosaic and concrete in the industry has somewhat impaired his idealism. What he said was so beautifully true, but alas to those, whom it concerned it would sound most horribly disagreeable. Said he: "Do you know, that some of the manufacturers—he did not forget to describe the class—are carried away with admiration for themselves? The saddest part of it is that they believe this admiration is common and that they are actually basking in the sunshine of popular favor, when as a matter of fact, their films have made the mob tired and the judicious grieve. It's an affliction, nothing more and nothing less. A mental affliction. It will, unless quickly checked, sow the seeds of some new and interesting brain trouble, enriching the textbooks of alienists with novel and more or less startling terms."

I questioned my friend's diagnosis and ventured the opinion, that there was no need of new scientific terms to describe this mental malady, because it may be found in the category of what the experts call "harmless delusions."

My friend begged to dissent and called my attention to certain symptoms, which are, he said, unmistakably new and characteristic.

Quoth he: "The first symptom seems to be a peculiar smile of superiority. This smile hardly ever leaves the patient and has been observed even in his sleep. An air of kindly patronage and toleration goes with the smile. An unfailing symptom is a fierce and ungovernable desire to speak of his films. You simply cannot get him away from that subject. No matter what key you strike, it always reminds him of "our film, which brought us so many letters of commendation from a host of pleased exhibitors." Try to introduce the statistics of the corn crop and he is sure to tell you of the wonderfully green tint in his pictures, which the hated rivals simply cannot imitate.

Another symptom is his insistence on showing you his "best and latest" film, the last in a formidable series of "best and latest" films. If in order not to irritate the patient you resign yourself and look at the masterpiece you will have little chance to say anything about it, good or otherwise, while the patient is either running it himself or some one is running it in his presence. The patient will do all the talking. "Say," he will exclaim with all the fondness of a mother examining the early dental development of a promising offspring, "ain't this just grand. Now just watch the hero twisting the villain's neck. What do you think of that for realism?" You are not supposed to reply, except very rapidly in the affirmative, when the torrent of laudation will be resumed with increasing enthusiasm. Contradiction makes the malady only worse and may lead to a violent outbreak.

Another bad source of irritation to the patient is the mentioning of a good film, made by a competitor. The patient will turn a look of profound pity upon you and if you are mean enough to pursue the subject he will show a far-away look in his optics and as likely as not leave you standing where you are and calmly walk away."

"Is there no remedy?" I asked not without some little alarm, for my friend's experiences coincided remarkably with some of my own.

"It depends on the age of the disease," replied my fellow-sufferer." "Instances have been known, where in the early stages of the disorder a few cold drops of criticism have arrested the progress of it and the patient has had a complete recovery. In the advanced stage of the illness there is no known remedy. Cases are on record of a patient having been cured by a swift succession of awful bumps and therein really lies the only hope."

We gazed upon the surface of a lily-covered pond. A thousand merry insects enjoyed the late fullness of the waning summer, sending innumerable circles along their zig-zag path on the sheet of water. A red squirrel gave us a swift and curious glance and then pursued its busy task among the tops of the chestnut trees. A timid sandpiper was doing a most graceful Marathon on the soft edges of the terraced little lake and the sun gave us a thousand greetings on its westward journey. We concluded to sit down on an old half-hollow tree and talk of other things than films and their makers.

Through it all I hear the call of the jingle in the box office and know that the next month will be October. I think though I will stay long enough to write you just one more epistle, as you are kind enough to say that the others have pleased you.

O. E.

PIPE ORGANS MAKE GOOD.

One of our subscribers, Mr. Arnold D. Seammell, of Spokane, Wash., writes us that the pipe organ provides a most suitable accompaniment to pictures of a dramatic character, and is especially effective when the pathetic parts of the dramatic films are reached. Pipe organs can also be used to advantage with a comedy picture. He says he is one of the musicians at the Clune Theater, which is under the same management as the Casino, a block away, and both of these houses are splendidly equipped with pipe organs and pianos. They are making a great hit with the audiences of these houses.

CHICAGO LETTER.

By Jas. S. McQuade.

ALDERMAN J. Bauler, of Chicago, the advocate of 70-cent gas and penny telephones, has now come forward as promoter of a moving picture theater in the city hall. He claims that a theater should be established in the city hall, where moving pictures can be exhibited and censored. He believes that manufacturers should be compelled to exhibit their films there and that a fee should be charged for their inspection. He will outline his plan before the city council, it is said, at its next meeting, Monday, September 25.

It appears that Alderman Bauler has the impression that members of the censor board are now obliged to visit the plants of manufacturers for the inspection of films. But such is not the case, as all films are inspected in private projecting rooms, each of which is within two or three blocks of the city hall. In these rooms all the product of Licensed and Independent manufacturers, domestic and foreign, are exhibited before the censors, and to as many exhibitors as can spare the time to view the pictures in advance of renting them.

Just what extra good can be accomplished by viewing the pictures at the city hall, it is difficult to see. The same men would censor the films, with just the same independence as now—certainly not greater, for the Chicago board of censors has always been firm and rigorous and, at the same time, fair. The better facilities offered the censors would not be such as would justify the expense of fitting up a theater in a room in the city hall, the use of which would represent a large annual rental. There is also the cost of operation to be considered.

Is it the intention to fix the fee charged the manufacturers (which already has been referred to) so that it will cover all the expenses enumerated and, perhaps, something more?

The manufacturers have already expended considerable money on private projecting rooms and there have been no complaints, and no just cause for complaint, against the facilities offered. The members of the censor board are also members of the city police force and they draw their pay from the appropriation made for the force, so that no saving will result from this direction by the change.

What then can be Alderman Bauler's object? If his plan can neither raise the standard of censorship nor reduce its cost to the city, why burden the moving picture industry with it? If its purpose is to bring the censorship of moving pictures under the control of local politics, it should be promptly squelched, for censorship, to be worth anything, must be based on worthiness and on worthiness only.

Chicago stands first in the country today for her wise discrimination in the censorship of films. Let her remain so.

Don't Use Misleading Signs.

The Boston Theater, on West Madison Street, had a sign in front all day Sunday, September 17, which read as follows: "Views of Gotch-Hackenschmidt Match Inside." Under this sign, on the same easel, was a group of photographs showing various positions of the wrestlers during the match. Quite a number of people were misled by the sign, for the "views" were only still photographs snapped near the ringside.

Such unscrupulous, catch-penny methods always act like a boomerang. They are abhorred by legitimate managers as being dishonest, and by wise managers because they never pay. This circus and carnival trickery may pass in one-night stands, where the "boobs" flutter around the sure-thing men like moths round a flame, but it won't go in a city where every man is as clever as the next, and where he can get even on the morrow or the next day.

Honesty is the best policy.

The Church and the Moving Picture.

In the issue of September 16, attention was drawn to a malicious attack on picture theaters by the Rev. Mr. Harker, of Freeport, Ill., in which he characterized the Sunday picture theater as being worse than the Sunday saloon or the brothel. Since making reply I have read an article by the Rev. Frank Fairfax in The United Methodist, an English publication, the article in question dealing with the people's amusements.

The Rev. Mr. Fairfax is an Englishman, and a well-cultured mind makes him tolerant of his fellowmen on matters that may not command his hearty sanction. He is particular in emphasizing that the people's pleasures must not be labeled "bad" unless there is clear evidence, and that prejudice must not take the place of evidence. Will the Rev. Mr. Harker please pay attention?

"A picturedrome is certainly better than the tap room" writes the Rev. Mr. Fairfax in his article. And we do not thank him for the concession. But again we invite the attention of the Rev. Mr. Harker, of Freeport, Ill., who descends to infamous depths in order to establish the moral status of the picture theater. Again must we ask him for evidence.

The following extracts from the article in The United Methodist will be well worth perusal by readers of the World:

"We religionists inveigh much and often against the popular quest for pleasure. We set it down as an indubitable mark of the materialism of the age—which is, doubtless, very true. But hardly any of us would deny the right of the people in these days, to seek some sort of pleasure. . . . In fact, our churches, almost without exception, cater in small ways for this sort of thing. I would suggest therefore that we Christians honestly try to make a distinction between pleasure demonstrably bad and pleasure not bad, but which our own active life perhaps finds no room for. . . . Some pleasures might be labeled 'bad,' but only when clear evidence, not prejudice, can show that a man is less a man for indulging in them. . . . This, I believe, is the only really sound argument the churches can bring against theaters and music halls; and, in strict justice, church 'socials' and even the better class concerts are liable to be assailed from this quarter. But, as I said, we must have evidence that, from the Christian point of view, the end is bad.

"There are pleasures, we must admit, which play a conspicuous part in modern life that cannot, on any honest reckoning, be called bad. They may not be greatly ennobling, they may not fire a Christian man's imagination, but they do help in a tolerably decent way to fill up a gap in the lives of the people. I have in my mind a concrete example—the Kinematograph Show, Picturedrome, Electric Theater, or whatever it is called. I went to one quite recently. It was handsome outside, highly artistic, in fact. ('Ah. yes,' sighs a good old Methodist, 'the devil takes care to make things artistic!') Inside it was clean, well ventilated, comfortable, cheap—the 'swells' sitting behind in the sixpenny seats (I was not a 'swell'). The pictures of the week's events I missed seeing, but was assured that they are always fairly accurate. I chuckled silently at a remark on the program: 'Keynote—Refinement.' But it was a just advertisement; there was nothing that in the slightest degree pandered to the vulgar mind. While the orchestra was playing some quite good music, including a selection from the immortal Wagner, we had a variety of moving pictures fully in accord with the management's standard of 'refinement.' There were the comic items: 'Hungry Hank's Hallucinations,' an incongruous dream of a dirty tattered tramp; 'Soldiers Three,' the adventures of some Scotch laddies who had a day off; and 'Bill tries to do his own washing,' the title of which vividly suggests the thing. Anyone who has seen a kineomatograph show will know, without any detailed description, that for something uproariously funny, you cannot better these moving pictures. . . .

"The fact is—if we will only take the trouble to find it out—that the people's taste in amusements is distinctly improving. Even the London office boy has a soul above the unclean. As I said, this particular kind of people may not be in our line. But, granted that people have a right to be amused, it is a happy feature that amusement is becoming, in small ways, educative.

"Thus far our Christian tolerance and our common sense. A picturedrome is certainly better than the tap room. But a picturedrome is not a prayer meeting and you cannot easily confound the popular applause of a hero and the hissing of a stage demon with the devout sentiments of a Christian saint. It is a long leap to saintship; there is the difference of a tremendous principle between the ordinary pleasure seeker and the Christian who is in the world, but not of it.

"How shall we incarnate the difference? As already hinted, not by breathing anathemas against the people's enjoyments; neither by a rigid exclusion of all amusement in ourselves. Surely, by a spirit which plainly testifies that our amusements have quickened us in Christian service; have not vulgarized us, but taught us something additional about our brothers and sisters of the crowd; have not brought us down to a selfish and materialistic level, but rather reminded us all the more of the Christian level to which the people may be raised. If our religion is what it ought to be, we can be as human as our neighbors, yet with this difference; we, too, may find pleasure, even where the people find their pleasure, but without compromising our higher nature."

Chicago Film Brevities.

William H. Swanson was served with notice of suit by Thomas A. Edison, Inc., through his manager, Thomas Mitchell, enjoining him from manufacturing a projection machine which it is claimed infringes on the Edison machine. The case has been set for the first Monday in October. Mr. Mitchell has an interest in the Morton Film Exchange, this city.

T. H. Gouletti, of Manila, P. I., called at the Chicago office last week, just before departing on his homeward trip. As has been previously mentioned in these columns, Mr. Gouletti purchased exclusive rights for "The Crusaders" in the Philippine Islands.

J. C. Berz, correspondent of the Laemmle Exchange, is on the sick list and Manager Fleckles has shouldered his work, in addition to the general managerial duties. Mr. Fleckles announces that the Fall business has opened satisfactorily and that the demand for the Charlestown Flood films is large.

C. M. Fox, manager of the Haish Auditorium, DeKalb, Ill., was seen at the Laemmle Exchange last week. He reported that the Auditorium showed to fine business all summer, with pictures only. Mr. Fox is now showing vaudeville and pictures at 10 and 20 cents.

The Liberty, a new house built by Mr. Klein, a prominent photographer, of Milwaukee, will be opened Saturday, September 23rd. The Liberty seats about 700 people. Mr. Klein has secured a Licensed service from the branch of the General Film Co., at 17 S. Wabash Ave., this city. Mr. Klein also owns the Lisbon, another house in the North Side residential section, in Milwaukee.

Stevens & Cunningham opened their new house, the Campus, in Champaign, Saturday, September 16. This house will cater especially to students of the Illinois University, and programs of educational, literary, topical, industrial and scenic subjects will be offered. Service has been secured from the branch of the General Film Co., at 17 S. Wabash.

The Capitol, a new Independent house in Springfield, Ill., owned by Bernstine & Evans, will be opened Saturday, Sept. 30. The Capitol will seat 400 people.

The E. J. Wagner Amusement Co., of Milwaukee, is now building a new house, the Idle Hour, on 11th Avenue and Washington St., Milwaukee. It will be in readiness for opening on Saturday, Sept. 30th. Manager F. C. Aiken, of the G. F. Co.'s branch at 17 S. Wabash Ave., who is furnishing service and who has seen the building, pronounces the Idle Hour a beautiful house. It is patterned after the Princess Theater, of the Saxe enterprises, Milwaukee.

B. Argeropolos, of Kewanee, Ill., will open his new house. the Olympia, Saturday, Sept. 23. The Olympia will seat 200 people. The program will be pictures strictly. Service has been arranged with the G. F. Co.'s branch at 117 N. Dearborn St.

Messrs. Cohen & Engel, of Chicago, have purchased the Madison Theater, 1361 E. 55th St., this city, and have arranged for Licensed service with the G. F. Co.'s branch at 117 N. Dearborn.

Miss M. Berrington, formerly a member of Selig's Western stock company, purchased the Lincoln theater at 3134 Lincoln Ave., this city, last week. Possession was taken Monday, Sept. 18th. Miss Berrington's brother-in-law, Mr. Sheldon, is a partner. Licensed service will be furnished by the G. F. Co.'s branch at 117 N. Dearborn St.

F. B. Fissinger, formerly connected with the General Film Co.'s branch, St. Louis, has been appointed traveling representative for the G. F. Co.'s branch at 17 S. Wabash Ave., this city.

Phil Gleichman, manager of the Cadillac Film Co., Detroit, visited the city one day last week. He stated that the rental business is very fair in his city. He also informed me that Independent customers in his section are learning to look askance at cheap vaudeville, and favor a purely picture program. As an illustration he mentioned the Colonial theater, on Gratiot Ave., Detroit, which cut out vaudeville early in September. The owners, who are new in the picture game, soon found that their patrons were dissatisfied with cheap vaudeville acts. A. Cohen, the manager, was loudly applauded by the audience when he announced that cheap vaudeville would be discontinued.

The Lubin Comedy Company in Washington.

Reading from left to right they are as follows: Billy Louis, Spottiswood Aitken, Elsie Glenn, Geo. Reehm, May Hotaling, Walter Stull, Gladys Cameron, Bernhardt Niemeyer, Arthur D. Hotaling, Director.

GOTCH-HACKENSCHMIDT MATCH FILMS

Picture a Mighty Conflict of Giant Force Controlled by Cunning Brains.

Reviewed by Jas. S. McQuade.

Many who have read reports of the Hackenschmidt-Gotch wrestling match have no doubt formed an opinion that the bouts were tame and of small interest. This was not so, however, as the moving pictures of the event will show. Anyone who sees these pictures will be impressed at once by the tremendous action prevailing throughout; and he will give a gasp of surprise at the sudden termination of the second bout, after the sturdy and spirited defense made by the mighty Hack against the fast and furious onslaughts of the Iowa farmer.

The pictures show very clearly all the particulars of the final struggle in the second bout. The camera was just in the right spot to catch every move, being situated so as to command an unobstructed view of Hack's shoulders. No one in the grand stand, or elsewhere, could tell how the end came, because the feet of Hack were towards a large majority of the spectators. All they could see was Gotch in possession of his famous toe hold, then deliberately throwing the imprisoned leg of Hack loose, as he threw himself forward and seemingly pinned the lion's shoulders to the mat.

The pictures show that, as Gotch secured a firm grip on Hack's toe and began to twist the leg, the referee, Ed Smith, bent his head as if to listen to words spoken by Hack. Gotch also seems to be listening and suspends the twisting operation. Next he throws the imprisoned leg from him. Then we see Hack sink back on his shoulders to the mat, without an attempt to bridge or otherwise save himself, Gotch sprawling on top of him to make the fall a technical one.

That the match was most disappointing cannot be denied, but it is equally true that the twenty minutes of wrestling showed the marvelous quickness of Gotch, his fierce aggressiveness and his great superiority over the Russian. And it also displayed the mighty strength of Hack and a wonderful speed for a man of his bulk. That story about strained tendons in one of his legs may be true, but, until Hack lay down, in that fateful second bout, one never would have thought that he could have carried his massive frame through that terrific melee of 20 minutes, with such swiftness and such tenacious resistance, on one whole and one game leg. The only sensible view to take of the affair is, that Hack knew he was outclassed and beaten, and that, in preferring defeat with an unbroken leg to defeat with a broken leg, he chose the lesser of two evils.

The pictures, which were taken and turned out by the Selig Polyscope Company, for the Motion Picture Patents Company, will be shown on about 1,850 feet of film, in two reels. The photography throughout is faultless, and there is not a single foot of padding or uninteresting subject matter in the two films. The camera men used excellent judgment in this respect, taking only such preliminaries as would be of interest, and including splendid panoramic views of the great gathering, of over 25,000 people. They have caught the mad rush of spectators and police to the ring stand, when Gotch was declared victor, with better effect than could any pair of the 50,000 eyes that gazed on the scene. Indeed, those who view the picture, as already hinted, will see much more and that far more clearly and distinctly, than did the thousands who paid $10 for a seat.

The fine fettle in which Hack entered the ring will be shown by the great ease with which he gets out of three dangerous holds gained by the champion. Just watch him on these three occasions, when he has been thrown to the mat, or crashed on it, and ask yourself if it did not look, at that time, as if the bouts would keep the spectators in their seats until sundown. That's exactly what many at the ringside thought.

No, these pictures do not chronicle the incidents of a tame affair. They image pent-up, human, dynamic forces that clash in mighty conflict, while skill and cunning and swiftness and brain control them. They hold you with a grip that does not relax until you witness the tremendous ovation given the victor.

State rights for these films are being rapidly sold by the Scene from Gotch-Hackenschmidt Match Picture (Selig).

Gotch-Hackenschmidt Picture Company at 20 East Randolph Street, Chicago.

It will be of interest to exhibitors to know that the total receipts for the match were $87,053; that Gotch's guarantee was $21,000, and that the Empire Athletic Club cleared $18,616.

Hack's percentage amounted to $43,437, but he had sold his interest to his manager, Curley, for $11,000 and $2,500 expense money. Curley also received one-quarter of the club's net profits, making his total winnings on the match $34,591.

CENSORING POSTERS IN FORT WORTH, TEXAS.

Down in Fort Worth there is an ordinance forbidding the display of deadly weapons on the billboards. The above illustration is made from an American poster showing a sensational stage holdup in which the display of "hardware" has been deftly concealed by Manager R. A. Healy, of Healy's playhouse, who has painted a bouquet of flowers in the hands of the several participants. It is a wonder that no objection was made to the actors carrying concealed weapons.

FOREIGN NOTES.

The "American Pavilion" at the Turin Exposition contains an elaborate operating room, where moving pictures of American make are shown at certain hours every day. The program is changed frequently and is shown at the entrance to the pavilion. Most of the pictures are of an educational character, dealing with scenery, agriculture, etc.

The Italian authorities have suppressed a film which purported to give views of the daily private life of the King and his family. Pictorial yellow journalism is at a decided discount in the land of art.

Many of the London moving picture houses are introducing "Schoolboy Matinees," which are meeting with great success. Specially selected pictures are shown every afternoon from 1 p. m. to 6 p. m. There are two shows every afternoon, the second commencing at 3.30. The ordinary prices of admission are charged and there is no interference with the usual evening entertainment.

THE SPECIAL RELEASE AND THE SMALL EXHIBITOR.

How Exploitation of Notable Films Makes for a General Improvement in Business—Does Not Hurt Minor Houses.

By Epes Winthrop Sargent.

Some of the smaller exhibitors are regarding with hostility the exploitation of the special coronation reels by the Kinemacolor Company and the presentation of the Inferno subject in the theaters usually devoted to dramatic performances. They argue that they cannot offer these films at their established rates of admission and that, in showman phrase, the greater attractions are "getting all the money."

To a very small extent this may be true, for some of the regular patrons of the small houses may be attracted to these more pretentious displays; but in its broader aspect the featuring of these two subjects will react directly in favor of the small exhibitor both to his financial gain, and his standing in the community.

While it is an established fact that the photoplay theater offers one of the most attractive propositions to capital and is capable of yielding an almost immediate profit, it is a fact not so well realized that the very cheapness of the admission price is one of the detriments to the business, although the present prosperity of the photoplay is apparently founded upon the cheapness of the admission price.

The success of the five cent show is due to the fact that it offers a splendid entertainment at an absurd price of admission, but it does not necessarily follow that the entire prosperity of the pictures is due to this low admission; indeed, it may be stated that the greatest drawback to the pictures in the past two or three years has been found in the association of the photoplay in the minds of most amusement seekers with the element of cheapness.

While the nickelodeon has attracted thousands of patrons, other thousands have shunned the pictures because they regard them as something cheap and therefore unworthy of notice. Heretofore most of the special displays at advanced prices have been reels made of prize fights, and there are hundreds who regard with amazement the exploitation of motion picture displays at prices ranging from twenty-five to seventy-five cents or a dollar. The mere advertisement is an eye-opener to many and the man who regards as cheap everything that is not expensive, comes to a belated recognition of the established fact that the admission is the only cheap thing about the pictures.

Once attracted by the special subject, the convert is apt to become a "fan" of the most pronounced sort and, in the absence of another high priced special, he naturally turns to the cheaper houses and brings with him more money than was drawn away by the initial attraction.

The tendency at present is toward the twenty-five cent show in a specially built theater and away from the converted store with its lesser admission and cheaper program, but there are many sections where the five cent show will still be the money maker though it will no longer represent the highest attainment of the picture business.

It is probable that some of the houses that now have recourse to cheap and nasty vaudeville will come to the straight photoplay program and leave the vaudeville to those managements making an effort to convert their picture shows into "small time" vaudeville theaters. It may even be possible that New York, a city of 5,000,000 inhabitants, will have at least one pretentious theater where the lover of the photoplay may enjoy the pictures without having to suffer from two inferior vaudeville acts between each two reels.

From another point of view the business generally will be bettered since the high priced houses will increase the demand for first-run subjects. This not only means larger sales and greater profits to the manufacturer, who thereby will be enabled to put more money into his product, but it will so increase the exchange's stock of "commercials" that the year-old filler reels may be retired and the program made up from reels but two or three months old.

The presentation of photoplays is not and never has been strictly a five cent business any more than it may be argued that drama is but a 10-20-30 cents proposition because those prices are favored by the stock companies presenting last season's two dollar successes. The photoplay is only now coming into its own; is about to enter a period of greater prosperity than ever before enjoyed, and the special reels will gain credit for this advance since in very large degree it is the "special" that will educate the masses to the full possibilities of the pictured drama in general.

Projection Department

Edited by F. H. RICHARDSON

OPERATORS' UNION ADDRESSES.

No charge for insertion of name and number of union, and name and address of secretary.

L. U. 162, San Francisco, Cal. Headquarters, No. 68 Haight St.

L. U. 143, St. Louis, Mo.; F. J. Fuller, Fin. Sec., 6219 Ella Ave.

L. U. No. 182, Boston, Mass. Headquarters, Room 7, 724 Washington St.

L. U. No. 60, Cleveland, O. Headquarters, Herald Bldg., 310 Prospect Place.

L. U. No. 181, Baltimore, Md.; Frank Lewes, Sec., 1835 E North Ave.

Aux. L. U. No. 35, New York City. Headquarters, 109 Third Ave.

New Law.—Some time ago Mayor Gaynor appointed a committee to look over the situation and compile a law to govern motion picture affairs in Greater New York. Heretofore New York exhibitors, operators and others connected with the motion picture business in New York City have been at the mercy of a hodge-podge of rules evolved by various departments of the city government, mixed with a very little law in the form of ordinances, and neatly topped off with several legislative acts by the state government. The result has been something rather wonderful to behold. Its practical operation has been an outrage on exhibitor, operator and manufacturer. We have repeatedly called attention to the deplorable state of affairs, in this department, and, at least partly due to our agitation, the matter was finally brought to the mayor's attention by his own officials, the result being the appointment of a committee as before stated.

This committee is composed of estimable gentlemen who undoubtedly desire to do the right thing. They have worked hard on the somewhat difficult problem and, much to our surprise, the editor of this department was called into consultation last week concerning features of the proposed law relating to operatng rooms. Moreover it has been promised that the final draft of the committee's work will be laid before us for criticism and suggestion.

This statement is not made from any desire to boast, but simply to show that our demand that those compiling proposed laws consult with practical moving picture men has, in at least one instance, at last been heeded. The committee is, as I have said, composed of able men, but no matter how able they may be, it is not within the range of reason to suppose they, not themselves being operators, exhibitors or in any manner connected with the practical end of moving picture affairs, can know how some things which look well in theory will work out in practice. They have used sound sense, and have taken the right course, and as a result they will escape the odium of presenting a lot of utterly foolish, impractical nonsense, miscalled laws, such as decorate the statute books of altogether too many cities.

But after the committee's work is done, then comes another struggle to get the result of their labor enacted into law without emasculation. The right sort of law will contain features unwelcome to many because they will be compelled to make changes involving outlay of money. They will, without doubt, offer strenuous objection. They will probably use every endeavor to have the law hashed up to meet their own selfish interests, utterly regardless of the good of the business as a whole. It is a sad fact that the politicians who compose our lawmaking bodies give far greater heed to pleasing their individual constituents, utterly regardless of whether those constituents be right or wrong, than to enacting legislation they believe to be for the good of the community as a whole. However, regardless of what may happen to it afterwards, the work of the mayor's committee promises to be distinctly good, when finished.

Needed Improvement.—While it is a fact that motion picture machine manufacturers are already putting out phenomenally good equipment, considering the price they receive, there is still one other thing we must call attention to.. viz: the need for two doors on the lamphouse. Time was when we knew nothing of the added convenience of the second lamphouse door, but already some manufacturers have adopted this improvement and we have seen its benefit. We therfore are no longer satisfied with the old one-door arrangement. We even know of operators who have had the second door installed at the expense of the house, so excellent did they find the idea to be. We well know the expense to the machine maker of changing dies, tools and plans, but nevertheless it must be done. The manufacturer who expects continued success to crown his efforts simply must keep up with the procession in improvement of his apparatus. The two-door lamphouse demand is a reasonable one and from the operator's point of view is a strong inducement when equipment is being decided on.

Lamp Grounded.—LaCrosse, Wis., writes: "I have an Edison Type B outfit and have two lamps, but one of them I cannot use. Three weeks ago I put on a new lower carbon arm and ever since then the lamphouse is charged badly when I try to use that lamp. I put the mica in carefully and am sure it is all right, also the mica washers under the screwheads. Can you suggest any solution of the difficulty?"

Yes. Inside the holes of the carbon arm, through which the screws go, should be an insulating bushing. In the Edison lamp this is a white substance. Take off the carbon arm and you will probably find this insulation either gone entirely or at least injured, allowing the screw to come in contact with the carbon-arm metal and convey current to the lamp proper. Get some sheet mica. Cut a narrow strip just the width of the thickness of the metal. Roll this up on a pencil, using enough so that there will be just room for the screw left, and bush the hole with it. If you find that this is not the trouble then I would get new insulation all around as there may possibly be something wrong with the insulation itself.

Condenser Breakage Again.—Alexandria, Ontario, writes: "I find the Moving Picture World to be a great magazine, and take much interest in its reading, particularly the Projection Department. Can you give me any information as to why my rear condensers crack so often? I bought three since I began operating a year and a half ago. Is my arc too strong or have I got too much power for the strength of the rear lens? I have fifty-five foot throw, picture 10 feet and it is so clear that eyelashes of actors may be seen. What do you think of that? Enclosed find $1.50 for handbook."

Condenser breakage is dealt with elsewhere this week. The stronger the arc (greater amperage) the greater the liability of breakage, of course, since the heat is greater. I would not call three condensers in eighteen months by any manner of means excessive. As a matter of fact, I would usually throw away a condensing lens after six months' usage anyhow, since it is more than likely to be roughened sufficiently to diffuse considerable light. The roughening may not be visible to the eye, but it is there all right, unless very great care has been taken in cleaning. You are fortunate in having a lens giving such splendid definition.

Repair Shipment.—St. Louis, Mo., writes: "Am thinking of shipping my machine to factory for a general overhauling (Powers Six). Is it advisable or necessary to send along such things as the crank, framing lever and shutter, or can they be just as well kept here, thus saving express charges and lessen liability in shipment?"

If I were you I would send the complete machine. The difference in express would amount to practically nothing at all and while it is not necessary to send crank and framing lever, still I would send 'em along. The shutter ought to be included by all means, since it probably needs new screws and anyhow it is best to have it in making shop test of machine.

Travel Ghost.—Missouri (name of town suppressed) asks: "I am in a small town and am new at the business, which explains my asking what may seem a foolish question. We have but 1,200 population and, while I can probably make it 'go' by careful management, I simply cannot employ a competent operator and must run my own machine or hire someone equally ignorant. I am studying, however, and hope to perfect my projection knowledge in some degree at least. The Department and handbook have been of inestimable benefit. In fact, without them I could never have given this little city (my home town, by the way) a show. As it is, they say I am equaling the projection of a nearby city which has four shows employing supposedly competent operators. What I want to ask you is this: I have an Edison Type B machine and there are streaks of white down from the letters of titles, also flashes of white down from white objects in picture. I am sure this is wrong and think it is the shutter. I am afraid to touch it, however, lest I make matters worse. Kindly advise me and, if it is the shutter, how may I set it? It is an outside shutter.

You are placed in exactly the position of hundreds of other small-town exhibitors, Neighbor. In a town of that size there is not sufficient business available to permit the payment of an operator's salary, as you say. By close, careful management a really creditable show may be maintained in such a town provided the owner himself and members of his family take the parts of operator, ticket-seller and musician. You are correct in supposing the trouble to lie in the shutter. It is not set right. Loosen the three small screws in the nickeled shutter-hub just enough so you can slip (revolve) the shutter in the hub by applying some pressure to the rim. Put in a film and, after slipping the shutter just a little, try it on a title. If the streaks from the letters are worse you have slipped it the wrong way. Keep slipping it a little and trying it until all the streaks disappear. Then tighten up the screws again.

Rule Book.—The Department of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity of the City of New York has just issued a booklet of 212 pages containing the rules of the department concerning matters electrical within Greater New York. This book is one long and badly needed. It is not as complete as we could wish on matters pertaining to moving picture theaters, but nevertheless will be of much assistance to exhibitors and operators. The clauses dealing with picture houses are not quoted verbatim, merely their meaning being given: (1) Where two separate current supplies are available there must be connection to both, one being used for general lighting, the other for emergency (exit, etc.), circuits. If only one is available then service for emergency lights must be taken from a point ahead (on street side) of the main service fuses. Emergency lights include all exit, lobby and other lights, in parts of the theater to which public has access, kept burning during the performance. (2) Switchboards must of the dead front type and made of non-combustible, non-absorbent material. (3) Arc lamps must conform to usual stage requirements. Stranded cables must be provided with approved lugs. Arc lamps must be so constructed that it cannot come into contact at any point with lamphouse walls. A competent operator must be in charge of each lamp except where they are located within ten feet of each other when two lamps may be managed by one man. (4) Rheostats must be plainly marked with their rated capacity both as to volts and amperes, mounted in suitable ventilating guard set to give not less than one inch clearance between casing and resistance element. (5) Wires of projection circuits to be not less than No. 6 B & S gauge and leads to lamp and rheostat, or its equivalent device, must be protected by a plug cut-out or open link fuses, the latter enclosed in an approved cabinet with self-closing door. Cartridge fuses will not be allowed. (6) Rheostats must conform to requirements for theater arcs (see 4). Reactance coils, motor-generators and similar substitutes for resistance coils must be considered as parts of the moving picture machines, and their location must be approved. (7) Magazines of approved type must be used above and below. Their doors must be spring hinged. (8) Automatic fire shutters must be used on all machines. (9) Extra films must be kept in individual, tight-closing metal boxes. (10) All machines must be operated by hand power, except where special permission is had, in writing, from the department to use a motor. (11) Operating rooms must be of suitable, approved fireproof material, well lighted and well ventilated. They must be large enough to allow operator to walk freely on either side or back of the machine—(Ha! ha! ha! Please don't examine into the enforcement of this clause too closely. It might be very embarrassing.—Ed.) All openings into operating room must be arranged so as to be entirely closed by doors or shutters constructed of the same or equally good fire-resisting materials as the walls themselves. Doors or covers must be held normally closed by springs or their equivalent. (12) Reels in process of re-winding or inspection must be enclosed in magazines similar to those used on machines, or their equivalent.

This seems to be all the direct reference to motion picture theaters, though of course a whole lot of general rules concerning wiring, switches, cut-outs and general electrical equipment applies. The printed rules are principally at fault in what they lack. This, however, is no doubt due to either division of, or total lack of authority.

In this connection let it be noted that the new State "law" commented on elsewhere, while a farce as a whole, has one excellent provision. It prohibits the little 4x6 operating rooms, of which this city has quite a number. I wonder what those who have taken a solemn oath to uphold (enforce) the law will do about it. I wonder!

Bad Light.—Newcastle, Wyoming, writes: "Just a line or two if I am not bothering you too much. I have just recently installed a Fort Wayne Compensarc and for the first five or six nights my light was just fine, but for the last few evenings it has been very poor. I have tried several different carbon settings and have also changed the make of my carbons, thinking maybe that would give better results. I am using 110 volt and 60 cycle A. C. I also want one of those screens that fit on the lamphouse door which enables the operator to watch and keep control of the craters. Would you please tell me the firm that manufactures them and what their price is?"

You say, Newcastle, that your light was "just fine" for the first five or six nights after installation of compensarc. Unless something else has gone wrong this would point with almost certainty to some fault in the compensarc itself. Look over your wires and connections very carefully, testing all connections to see that they are perfectly tight. Test your lamp to see that it is not grounded. Test the compensarc to see that it is not grounded. To do this, attach two insulated wires to an ordinary lamp socket, in which insert a lamp of the lowest candle power you have. Remove insulation from half an inch of the ends of the wires. If lamphouse is grounded, insulate it and touch one wire to frame (not carbon arms) of lamp, back of (on dead side) insulation. Then touch a water pipe or some other grounded metal with the other wire. If lamp burns the arc lamp is grounded. Switches must be closed, of course. Make same test with compensarc, touching wire to its frame and to grounded metal, but before making test, if not already insulated. place some insulating material under it. Are you sure your lamp-leads are in good shape? Maybe they are badly burned close to the lamp. If dark brown and soft (no spring to the wires) cut off the burned part. If you are using the compensarc on the sixty-ampere notch, you must remember that the lamp leads may, under the combined action of heavy current and heat from the arc, lose a large part of their conductivity in a short time. If your wires from compensarc to lamp are of less size than No. 6, change them to No. 6 immediately.. If you have No. 8 lamp leads I think after a few days you would find them to be pretty warm and that would operate to cut down your amperage at the arc materially. If none of these suggestions apply, then the trouble is undoubtedly in the compensarc itself and that will be a matter its maker will have to deal with. The Utility Transparency Company, 1733 West 9th St., Brooklyn, N. Y., will supply you with an excellent screen for your lamphouse door. Price is $1.50 by registered mail. It is the best thing I know of for the purpose.

Names.—Rock Island, Ill., writes: "Not long since a certain company held a contest designed to settle upon some permanent name, or designation, for motion picture theaters. The result was given to us in the form of "Photoplay," but this seems not to have proven entirely satisfactory since but a very small percentage of exhibitors have adopted it or made any effort to popularize the name. I have watched your work in your handbooks, in the Projection Department of the Moving Picture World, and in the various articles you have written pertaining to the business very carefully. Now this matter of a permanent designation for motion picture theaters I regard as of considerable importance and I, for one, would like to know your views concerning it and what name you would consider most appropriate."

I appreciate your kind words, Rock Island. I have tried at all times to confine my remarks to exactly one thing—sound sense. If I have succeeded I am more than pleased. As to the name question, I, too, regard the matter as being of importance and I do not and never have considered the word "Photoplay" as exactly the thing. As applied to the theater it naturally requires the affixing of the word "theater." As applied to the picture itself it is excellent, but that, as I understand it, was not what was sought. Personally I like the English term "Picture Palace" better, by far, than any other motion picture theater designation that has yet come to light. It is satisfying to the ear, expresses the meaning and, to my mind entirely fills the bill. The "Lyric Picture Palace," "Orpheum Picture Palace," "Montgomery's Picture Palace," etc., has the right sound and tells us what is meant without a wasted sound. If I ever again own a picture theater I shall, unless something better comes to light meanwhile, call it a Picture Palace, regardless of what others may do.

Questions.—Newark, N. J., asks: "Is there a revised edition of the handbook out? I have a ground in my lamp, but cannot trace same with test lamp since it will not light from either arm, yet when I am grounded I get a severe shock. How may I tell which arm is grounded? Can a condenser be used instead of a stereo lens and which side should be next the screen? Could a loose spring on guide roller on Powers 5 gate cause picture to jump?"

No, there is no revised edition of handbook out and there will not be for quite a while. From what you say I would infer that your lamp is grounded through carbon dust laying on the insulation. Such a ground will not light a test lamp, but will give you a sharp shock just the same, this by reason of the fact that it can only carry a very small amount of current. It is also possible that your lamp is only grounded occasionally by the lower carbon arm or lower carbon coming into contact with front of lamphouse. Also if you have the stop on lower arm removed you get a ground if lower carbon sticks through far enough to touch the carbon dirt in bottom of lamphouse. Examine the lamp closely and clean off the insulation if any carbon dust lies on its top. It is also possible that a strand of the cable touches the lamphouse wall or that you have one or both of the insulating rings which belong in holes where cable comes through, out, and that cable insulation is thin, allowing slight current leakage into the metal. Yes, a condensing lens may be used as substitute for stereo in case of emergency. If you mean the guide roller on top of gate, held over by spiral spring, it could not. It might, however, allow of a swaying motion from side to side or allow sprocket holes to show part or all the time on one side.

From the Far North.—Athabasca Landing, Alberta, Canada, writes: "We have our own troubles in this the most northern picture theater in Canada, excepting only Alaska. I have a number of questions to ask and as conditions here are different from those of other places, will give you an outline of things so you will possibly be able to figure them out. We make our own 'juice,' using an 8 horsepower Foos special electric engine having two 590 pound flywheels. This engine runs a 5 kw. General Electric generator supplying 44 amperes at 110 volts. Have switchboard with volt and ammeter and field regulating rheostat to lower or increase voltage. We use 22 amperes for the projection arc (D C), using a Powers non-adjustable rheostat which came with the machine outfit. Machine is Powers No. 6 with tableboard and full No. 6 equipment. Have a 43 foot, 2 inch throw. The screen we obtained from the film exchange and it was too thin, so we gave it a coat of thin glue size and then started to put on a coat of aluminum, but did not have enough, so it is very unevenly coated. Have tried a piece of duck cloth, but the picture was dark on that, showing up much better on the aluminum, except that it does not show up gray at all. What would you advise us to do with the screen? I mounted my lamp on table in the regular way and found that unless I only used a lower carbon about two inches long I was unable to keep the screen clear. The lamp could not be brought low enough. In an endeavor to overcome this I placed a 1½ inch board under the lamphouse and now can keep a clear sheet, but light ray slants down from condenser to aperture as shown by sketch. Will this effect results? I claim it will while others say no. Am using ⅝ cored carbons above and ½ inch below. Have a lot of trouble with my lower carbon burning as per sketch. What is the cause? Are my carbons the right size? How would it do to use a Motiograph lamphouse? Would the condenser be in line with the aperture?"

I would either purchase some good aluminum screen from a reliable manufacturer, coat your present screen with alabastine or some other white calcimine preparation or else get heavy, bleached bed sheeting. As for the lamp I fail to see how you can get anything even approaching good results with your light-ray slanting down like that. You are placing a tremendous optical strain on your entire lens system. Unless local law forbids, remove the stop on lower carbon arm so that carbon can extend through. Cover inside of bottom of lamphouse with ⅛ inch sheet asbestos, keeping same clean, and use a lower carbon which will just clear bottom of lamphouse when fresh one is put in (fresh carbon, I mean). Even though it does not project above the holder more than two inches you can run two or three films with that, using 22 amperes, and then pull it up. However, unless there is something wrong with the lamp you ought to be able to have 2½ inches of carbon above the holder, and still center with the condenser all right. The reason you can use a longer carbon with the board under the lamphouse is that you must raise the arc away up above the condenser center to force the light ray down to the aperture. It is a very, very bad condition. If I were you I would remove that board immediately. The sketch shows what is known as a "tit" on your lower carbon. This is a cap of graphite caused by keeping the carbons too close together. You cannot have good light so long as it remains on the carbon. Being graphite it is hard to burn off. Knock it off with a screwdriver is the best way and carry a longer arc. Your carbons are all right, provided the lower one is solid, not cored. However, for that weak amperage I would try ½ inch cored above and ⅜ solid below, provided you can get them without too much trouble. The solid carbons must not be too hard. They must be regular projection carbons. Those used for street lighting will not do at all. You cannot expect anything very swell in the way of light with 22 amperes unless you project a very small picture. In fact, from the conditions described, I should say your light must be very poor indeed. You could use a Motiograph lamp and lamphouse, but I doubt if it would pay to make the change.

Pathe Professional.—From Richford, Vt., comes the following: "I wish to remove the lower sprocket of my Pathe machine but find it impossible to remove the pins in any part of the machine without either breaking or springing something. I have found when running films with bad patches I lose the lower loop. I can stop this by placing my finger on the film a little lower than the roll. Could I not fasten something on the small gate where the rolls are to prevent this? The jumping is not very pleasant and people will not stand for it. I do not lay it to the takeup, as I am sure it has proper tension."

As to removal of lower sprocket, Richford, I shall not attempt to tell you how to do it, since it is necessary to practically take the whole mechanism apart to do it. The chain, the lower shaft carrying same, most of the gears on operating side, the main support rods and the castings which carry lower sprocket shaft all have to be removed to get the sprocket shaft out. The Pathe machine is very well made mechanically and the pins can readily be driven out with proper punch, holding some heavy object against the hub, close to the pin on opposite side. If you are a mechanic and very thoroughly acquainted with the Pathe mechanism, removing the shaft is not difficult; otherwise you had better send the mechanism to New York. It is more than likely that the loop-losing is due to a worn sprocket. I don't understand how you manage to get your finger on the film below the lower rollers, as it is all enclosed, I believe, and the lower guard gate cannot be opened without releasing the film from the lower sprocket. Send the machine in for repairs is my advice. The lower sprocket is not pinned on but is forced on the shaft under pressure, I believe, and sprocket and shaft are sold together.

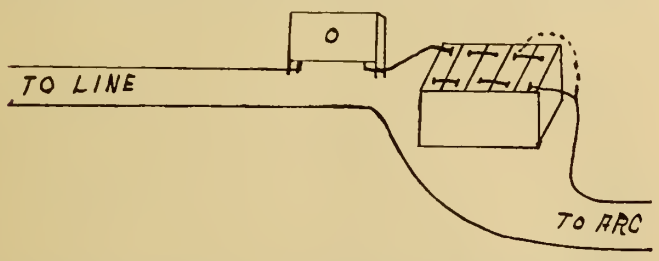
Condenser Breakage.—Etowah, Tenn., writes: "Have Edison One-Pin machine and D. C. Am having lots of trouble with my condensers breaking. Could you explain how to prevent this? The Moving Picture World, through its Projection Department, gives information no other paper supplies, therefore I could not run my machine without it."

I would strongly advise you to procure a copy of the handbook, Etowah, and on pages 79 and 80, as well as elsewhere, you will find this subject treated. Price is $1.50, for sale by the Moving Picture World. Condenser breakage is a complicated question and the breakage may be due to many causes. If your lamphouse is well ventilated keep holes in condenser casing open, or pretty nearly so. If lamphouse has poor ventilation, do not allow much in the condenser mount. Keep hood of lamphouse clean so that hot air can escape. Never open door of lamphouse immediately after shutting off the arc if it can be avoided. Never allow draft from fan to blow directly on lamphouse. If metal ring mount is used, see to it that lenses have 1/16 inch play when placed in mount. Some have had success by placing new lenses in cold water, bringing to a boil and boiling for some time and then setting aside to cool off slowly. With others this has been of no apparent value. Some have succeeded by placing new lenses in the cook stove oven at home and leaving them for several days, while others have broken some of their lenses by the operation and found no added value in those remaining. As a general propositin, the editor is of the opinion that excessive heat due to (a) use of condensers of short focal length, thus bringing arc close to lenses; (b) poor ventilation in lamphouse, is largely responsible for the trouble, except where lenses are tight in round metal mounts. That will break them almost every time. See letter on same subject from Hagerstown.

Condenser Breakage-Remedy.—Hagerstown, Md., writes: "Have noted trouble some operators have with condenser breakage. I was troubled thus, but soon got rid of it. When putting in lenses have them just loose enough to rattle; also have good ventilation in the condenser mount. If back lens breaks most place new lens in front, putting front lens behind.

As I said in answering Etowah, Tenn., no set rule will fit all cases when it comes to condenser breakage. What you say about having lenses loose applies to round, metal ring mounts only. This style of mount is fast disappearing from use. Placing the new lens in front is good, provided you have both lenses of same focal length. We thank you, however, for sending in your solution of the trouble. Like Etowah, I would advise you to invest $1.50 in the handbook and study the problems, as well as many other things therein presented, as a whole.

Bad Light.—Eureka Springs, Ark., writes: "Have your handbook and would not take five times what it cost and do without it. I have a little trouble I would like you to help me with. Have an Edison, Type B, outside shutter, with Stebbins special stereopticon lens. Throw is fifty feet. Am using 550 volt D. C., controlled by Edison Underwriters' Model, Type B, No. 709 rheostat and a No. 4 rheostat hooked up as per diagram. I am not getting clear, white light.



"I use your method of setting carbons and have condensers 1/16 of an inch apart. I have a bad ghost, however, and the light is dark on all four corners. When I attempt to remove the ghost the corners get darker and when I clear up the corners the ghost is worse. Condensing lenses are clean and clear and through stereo the light is very good. Can you locate the trouble?"

Eureka, like many another, has evidently tried to give me full details, but has failed on one of the essential points, viz: the width of the picture. Don't you see, gentlemen, that knowing the throw and width of picture I can figure out exact focal length of objective and know what condensing lenses ought to be used. A very important point indeed. You have the resistance all hooked in series. Just what amperage you are getting is problematical. I am inclined to think not enough. Would suggest that you change connection as shown by dotted line. Try two 7½ condensing lenses. Try two 6½ and try one 6½ and one 7½ together, the 6½ next the arc. I can only guess at what is needed, not knowing throw or width of pictures. Try moving the whole lamphouse back as far as it will go—also as far ahead as it will go. Use a ⅝ cored carbon above and ½ inch solid below, being careful not to get solid carbons that are too hard. The half-inch solid Electras I have found to be just right; perhaps those of other brands are also. In one of these things, or maybe a combination of two or more of them, I think you will get relief.

Big Talk—Little Knowledge.—Pueblo, Colorado, writes: "An individual in this city, posing as an operator, claims he has worked with 110 and 220 A. C., 30 cycle; also 110, 500 and 9,000 D. C., yet is unable to give definition of a cycle. He goes around town blowing about being a good operator, but his projection is punk. A little attention to this kind of pest would not come amiss from your pen."

Well, brother, this is like a message from home, for I lived in your city seven years. Left there in 1903. Is Joe Glass or George Morris still there? As to the proposition propounded in your letter will say that if the gentleman has hitched up to 9,000 volts D. C. he has performed a feat that stamps him as a first-class artist, since it would require about 400 horsepower to pull his arc under that voltage, using 30 amperes and the necessary resistance. Talk of that kind is mere drivel, of course. He might, first of all, explain where he found 9,000 volt D. C. You say his projection is not good. Well, that settles the matter, doesn't it? Hot air is a very cheap commodity, but it is results on the screen that count. My view is that space is too valuable to waste on hot-air merchants. I would refer you to poem published on page 800, September 16 issue. It seems to fit the case quite well. Twenty-five and thirty cycle current is in use in many places, while 500 volt D. C. is occasionally hooked up to, though the waste is enormous.

Help, Constable.—Baker, Oregon, writes: "Washington was perhaps justified in swelling up over the fact that he was able to own an umbrella. I have been wondering, though, if a close inspection of same would reveal his own name on the handle! Operators out here are pretty well paid, as a rule, I think. I know I am sometimes the proud possessor of as many as two pairs of socks (whole ones too, mind) at one and the same time, but won't send picture of them. Instead I will inflict the following:

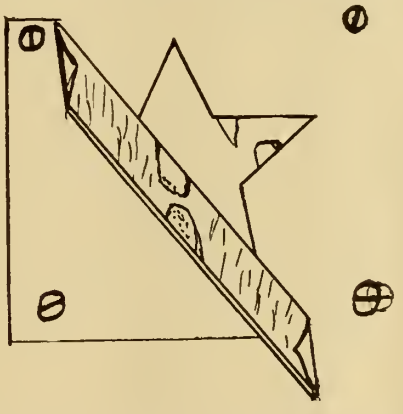
Moving pictures of every kind,
Operators of kindred mind,
Volumes of business rain or shine,
Is result of reading the printed line
Not found except in this friend of mine—
Good old "World" and Projection Department.

Projection's improving all over the sphere,
Induced by letters from far and near,
Citing cases of trouble, and "what we did here"
To keep the show moving throughout the year
Until Manager said 'It is surely a dear'—
Richardson, the World and Department.
Even the ushers are reading the dope,

While the manager is outside smoking his rope;
Oceans of money some day is his hope.
Really, he's coming to front in a lope,
Learning on pay-day to hand out more 'soap,'
Due to Richardson, World and Department."

Man, how dare you! And me the acting Business Agent of the Poet's Union. Where's your card, sir? Considering what appears in last issue, from Washington, your comment on the parasol is something of a joke. Send photo of socks as soon as you can catch both pair out of the wash at once.

Visible Arc.—Brooklyn, N. Y., writes: "Inclosed find sketch which speaks for itself. Maybe it will be of value to the profession. Personally I find it a great convenience. On lamphouse door (Powers Six), around the star-shaped port, are four small screws holding ruby glass carrier. I removed the two nearest the latch and cut a piece of tin in shape indicated by sketch, punched two holes in same to coincide with holes of screws removed, and fastened the tin to the door with the screws. I next cut a small piece of glass the proper size, placed it on the tin and bent the latter over so as to hold the glass in place. No use breaking your back to see the arc when this little device is working."



While that device has been published in this department before, it may be of benefit to our newer readers to reprint it, hence we thank Brooklyn for submitting it. However, while the device will do the work all right, and may be attached to lamphouse door of any make, still the door screen mentioned in previous article is very far superior in that one has full, direct view of the arc while seated in ordinary operating position, all the time and without a particle of eye-strain. You can look at it for an hour without hurting your eyes in the least. There have been a number of arc projectors described in the department. The trouble is, however, that while perfectly practical for a one-machine room, they cannot very conveniently be used on both machines where two set side by side. Moreover their lens projects from the back side of the lamphouse and the apparatus is liable to be accidentally broken. The screen named sets in the door itself, is not in the way, answers every purpose and will last for years. This matter is one intimately connected with good projection, particularly with A. C., and demands attention. The projectors and reflectors described and illustrated in this department from time to time do the work all right, but in my opinion the door screen is the best.

Comments on the Films

Licensed.

"The Culture of the Dahlia" (Pathe), Sept. 8.—This film shows how plainly what those who know anything about the cultivation of flowers should have no difficulty in following in cultivating the dahlia. The stimulus afforded by this film should be helpful.

"Arabian Types and Customs" (Pathe), Sept. 8.—A travelog giving an excellent reproduction of the manners, costumes and customs of the Arabs. Like all of Pathe's films of this class it is helpful and instructive and deserves to be classed among good educational productions.

"The Ranch's New Barber" (Lubin), Sept. 9.—In this comedy a lady barber is shown as coming into Red Dog. She succeeds in securing all the hair, whiskers and money of the cowboys and decamps, leaving a note to the effect that she has gone to trim more whiskers. Bill is the unlucky one. He is sent on an errand by his wife and accidentally gets into the barber's parlor. One side of his face is shorn when his wife appears and drags him from the chair more forcibly than gracefully. She finishes the shaving process, and there is no doubt of the thoroughness of her work after she has finished. The face shows it plainly enough. This comedy kept them laughing in one New York house.

"Bill's Ward" (Lubin), Sept. 9.—A Western mining drama, with the love of an elderly man for his ward as its feature. A younger man arrives from the East and they fall in love with each other. The elder objects at first, but when the young man saves his life he no longer refuses, and presumably the young people are satisfied with their choice.

"Mated by Chess" (Gaumont), Sept. 9.—Here is a story of a feud between two families that is amicably settled over a game of chess. By accident the two fathers of the young people become engaged and put up the two young people as the stake. They each win a game and accepting this as a good omen they consent to the announcement of the engagement.

"The Lucky Horseshoe" (Biograph), September 11.—In this comedy a landlord on his way to collect rents is shown picking up a horseshoe. The possibility of good luck appeals to him strongly, more particularly as he finds what appears to be a valuable diamond ring immediately afterward. Because of his supposed good fortune he is liberal with his cash, intending to recoup himself when he sells the ring. His chagrin is very funny when he learns that the ring is worth just ten cents. It is not an important picture.

"Foraging" (Vitagraph), September 11.—Pictures of this type, which represent how a man in high position remembers old friends, whether they have been successful or not, and helps them when occasion offers, are always popular and this will prove no exception to that rule. Bob is down and out and steals a loaf of bread. He is brought before Judge Ainsley, who recognizes him as an old friend, pays for the bread, and shortly has the unfortunate man on his feet again.

"A Sheepman's Triumph" (Kalem), September 11.—The early scenes of this picture have much of the thrill and some of the deep interest of an epic. The scene is set for a struggle between cow men and sheep men. The two can't live in the same country, for sheep eat a pasture up; cows die behind them. In the midst of this struggle, as shown in the picture, a love story develops. The sheep man's son rescues the cow man's daughter from stampeding cattle, her father's. This rescue has no convincing reality. The cattle have already stopped and the girl is in no danger. The result of this incident brings even the two inimical fathers together. The photographs are not so well planned or made as it was possible to make them, but they are very interesting, and the story while not important is fair.

"His Girlie" (Lubin).—Sept. 13.—A lively comedy with a fake kidnapping that scared one young woman into a faint and frightened the young man responsible for it so he won't be likely to undertake it again. Betty's father thought she was much too young to marry, so refused the young man the house. The young man concocted a scheme to kidnap her which might have worked, only her father decided to take her away for a time and turned over his house to a newly married couple for their honeymoon. The kidnappers took the young bride and there was trouble enough.

"The Hand of the Law" (Eclipse), September 13.—The principal attraction in this picture is undoubtedly the scenery. It is a story of smuggling, with some thrilling captures and counter captures. The shot by which the girl mortally wounds the man whose hurts she had dressed a few hours before, rescuing her lover from his perilous position, is sensational. The contest between the peasants and the smugglers in the attempt to release the coast-guards is lively, too. Some of the scenery is striking and is remarkably well photographed.

"Norwich and Vicinity, England" (Eclipse), September 13.—A series of excellently photographed views of this old English city. Some are disposed to think it the most interesting of all the ancient English towns. The original walls were built before 1300, but the city long since outgrew its former narrow limits and most of it in these days has a rather modern appearance.

"A Prisoner of the Mohicans" (Pathe), September 13.—An Indian story with a race for life, first in a canoe, then by swimming, as the principal feature. A girl is stolen by the Indians. Her riderless horse tells her parents what has happened and they start out in pursuit, assisted by an Indian whom she had helped when in dire straits.

"The Escaped Lunatic" (Edison), September 13.—A bit of comedy in which an escaped black lunatic figures. The quilting bee discusses the escape and is much afraid the lunatic will call upon them. Mr. Cobb has been helping with a stove and is much the worse for an encounter with the soot. The women see a black man enter the cellar and hold the door down until the constable arrives, when Mrs. Cobb recognizes her husband. Fortunately, Mr. Cobb is good-natured and the ending is happy.

"For the Queen" (Edison), September 13.—Here is a pretty children's story. It is all about a May party. The king and queen are chosen to the satisfaction of everyone excepting a small boy who wanted to be king. He nurses his wrath until opportunity occurs when he steals the queen's crown and bouquet. The king seizes his trusty sword and hurries away to make the knave give up the treasures. He succeeds, but gets lost. All the long afternoon the queen waits the return of her valiant knight; but he comes not. Night falls and she is told by those in charge she must go home. The parents of the little king have become alarmed and notify the police. The queen also goes to the police station. While there the king is brought in fast asleep. He is awakened and, seeing the queen, he presents the trophies with all the dignity possible. In return the queen offers him her hand as a fitting reward.

"College Sweethearts" (Pathe), September 14.—A well-acted and very amusing farce comedy. Bill and May are expelled from their respective colleges for flirting with each other. Bill's father casts him out on the cold world. He merely intends to give the youngsters a lesson. Bill gets a job as under butler in May's house. Then the fun begins.

"Art Industries in Kabylie" (Pathe), September 14.—A very instructive film showing a good deal of the industries found in Kabylie, a city in Morocco, not far from the Mediterranean coast. A map is included.

"A Shattered Dream" (Melies), September 14.—Hardly could a more significant theme be found for a work of art than the theme used in this picture. With much success in some places and less in others, it shows something of the relationship that that social consciousness of which the Church has always been an exponent has with pitiably weak mortals, in the presence of the unsocial, anarchistic consciousness. The priest, Father Martin, stands for the consciousness that all men are one. The gamblers of the picture stand for the evil that preys on men. The gamblers tempted the clerk and he fell. He came to Father Martin and was saved, or we are led to believe so, at a great sacrifice. Father

Martin's characterization is fine; the player brings out the kindliness and nobility of the priest very clearly. What may be called the other side of the picture isn't done so well. However, the picture of the priest will make the picture popular and it is highly commendable.

"The Burglarized Burglar" (Essanay), September 15.—A rattling good story of an impecunious but very nervy literary man. It is original, fresh and amusing. The burglar comes from the house of the girl's father and chased by the police takes refuge in the literary man's room, who holds him up for much jewelry, which he takes to the girl as a birthday present. That's a new and dandy situation. The picture is a gem in its way, very much worth while.

"The Express Envelope" (Kalem), September 13.—A railroad story very much like the Biograph "Lonedale Operator." The struggle of the girl operator in the lonely station is different and her rescue by the freight enginner, her sweetheart, is also different. It's a fair story, but not so exciting as "The Lonedale Operator."

"The Puncher's Law" (Essanay), September 14.—A picture which is, in a degree, rough, but the close will have the sympathy of every man who has red blood in his veins. A girl deserts her cowboy sweetheart and marries a gambler. In a short time she realizes her mistake and is thrust from the house when ill. Vainly she tries to induce her husband to take her back, but he refuses and she falls by the wayside in a dying condition, where she is found by her former lover. After she dies he hunts out her husband, forces him to go to the house and see her body and then gives him the choice of a vial of poison or bullets from is revolvers. Probably every man who sees this picture will agree that he received only his deserts. It was an effective way to mete out punishment, not warranted in law, but dictated by emotion.

"The Voyager—A Tale of Old Canada" (Selig), September 15.—An opening scene showing a remarkable tumult of waters of a mountain torrent introduces us to a beautiful forest country in which this adventure and love story is set. Nearly all the scenes of it show a quickly flowing stream or dense forests that shadow it. The photography is fine and the background alone would make the picture notable. Yet the story is also effective. The hero's rescue of the heroine from the Indians is more like a scene from one of Cooper's stories than like the usual photoplay rescue. It is very interesting. The film is very good and commendable.

"Seeing Boston" (Selig), September 15.—This is the only film on Boston that this reviewer has seen. The old landmarks are fairly well photographed. It is good and interesting.

"The Cinematograph Fiend" (Gaumont), September 16.—He is bound to come. Perhaps he won't be like this one. If he is there won't be many of him; it's too strenuous. This one was an enthusiast; he kept on grinding upside down or whatever way it came, for, as a leader points out, nothing can stop an operator. Neither fire nor water could. It is fairly amusing.

"An Austrian Mountain Torrent" (Gaumont), September 16.—A very excellent scenic of a wild mountain torrent. It can be described as a stirring picture.

"Al Martin's Game" (Lubin), September 14.—There are some things in this picture that seem to be almost exact duplications of things already seen in other pictures of the last six months, but the situation has a good deal of freshness. It is a romantic story of the desert. A comedy touch was given to the early scenes which is very pleasing. The acting and photography are good. The film is acceptable.

"The Sheriff" (Edison), September 16.—In the first few scenes this picture seems bound along the old oft-trodden path, but, as produced and acted, it quickly develops a significance that is a very pleasing surprise. The story is too well pictured and too truly human to be trite. The Western sheriff's wife's brother held up the stage. The wife used a woman's wiles to give her brother time to escape. The picture has beautiful scenes, is clean, human and worth while.

"Cement Rock Blasting" (Lubin), September 16.—Copley, Pa., has a rich deposit of cement rock. Big charges of explosive, 8½ tons of it, are lowered into a series of deep holes. The immense blast rips open the side of the hill. An excellent industrial film.

"The Scheme That Failed" (Lubin), September 16.—It's a picture of a prank of two young men who were old enough to know better. This is the chief reason why the picture fails to get over very effectively. The young men make their employer think his daughter has run away in order that they may play detective and find her. It is not important.

"The Millionaire and the Squatter" (Essanay), September 16.—It was a beautiful piece of wild land that the millionaire bought. The squatter refused to vacate his cabin. The marshal got the drop on him and his furniture was thrown out. It is the part the squatter's daughter plays that gives human beauty to the picture. This is very skillfully put over by Miss Fields. It is a pity the camera work is so poor in this ejection scene, for it was worthy of the very best photography. The denouement makes a pleasing love story. It is a very commendable film.

"The Ranger's Stratagem" (Kalem), September 18.—An Indian story, in which a white girl stolen when a child plays an important part. The young ranger sends her to the stockade to warn the settlers whom he directs to care for her while he attends the Indian council as a visiting chief. When discovered he hides in the lake, breathing through a reed. The Indians believe him drowned and go to the attack. He arrives in time to help in the defeat of the tribe and gets his reward in the white girl's hand. The feature of this story is the strategy displayed in hiding in the lake and breathing through a reed. That may have been done many times in actual practice, but it has never appeared in a motion picture before.

"Madame Tallien" (Pathe), September 15.—This company is always good in films dealing with French history and the one here shown is no exception to the rule. This picture presents a few scenes from the Reign of Terror in France and shows two women, one an aristocrat of high degree, thrown into prison. The inspector in making his rounds falls madly in love with her and effects her release, after which she marries him. Later she secures the release of her friend who accompanied her to prison. A very lively scene between husband and wife follows, but beauty's charms are too much for the resolution of the susceptible individual and he succumbs. Thus the film ends happily and apparently all is well.

"Everyday Life in Malacca" (Pathe), September 15.—A travelog presenting numerous interesting features of the daily comings and goings of these people. The photography is admirable and the selection of subjects was made with a view of arousing as much interest as might be. This film should be included in an educational collection.

"The Alpine Lease" (Kalem), September 15.—A picture of the oil country which includes a thrilling rescue of a girl from the top of an oil derrick while the flames are shooting up around her. Her father buys a worthless lease and keeps prospecting until he strikes a pocket. The neighboring owner claims the well is on his property. The claimant's foreman, disapproving of his superior's methods, searches the records and discovers that the Hensen title is good. Meanwhile, the lucky man has been partially crazed by the claims of his neighbor and starts for the well with some purpose in view. The girl follows and climbs the derrick. Her father accidentally sets fire to the oil soaked derrick and she is in a precarious position. However, her lover, the foreman, appears in time to take her down from her perilous perch. It is a good story, well told.

"The Vitagraph Monthly" (Vitagraph), September 15.—This month's release includes a number of stirring events such as a plunge over Niagara Falls in a barrel, a deer hunting trip, showing how preparations are made, how the guides work, what the dogs do and various things about such an event is another series which will be appreciated. This film received more applause in Keith's Union Square Theater than any number on the vaudeville program.

"A Western Memory" (Pathe), September 16.—The feature of this picture, the showing of a man the grave of his former sweetheart after years have separated them, develops unusual pathos. That is about all there is to the picture. It is the usual love story, with the young man called away, leaving a broken-hearted girl behind. Then years after he finds her grave, and the legend states the fact that she desired to be buried there. There is, however, a stronger degree of emotion aroused by the picture than seems possible under the circumstances. It somehow touches the heart and that, as all will concede, is the main thing in a work of this character.

"By Woman's Wit" (Vitagraph), September 16.—If all wives who find their husbands want to stay too much at the club adopted as sensible a course as this one there would be fewer domestic troubles. She deceived him into thinking that she had company when he was out and he was glad to make up and stay at home. It is an excellent illustration of human nature and the Vitagraph players have made its presentation seem very realistic.

"Jimmie on Guard" (Gaumont), September 19.—Jimmie is left to guard the farm. It is as human as Jimmie, the little gypsy girl, a big turkey, the mother pig and a lot of little pigs can make it. That isn't all there is to it, but it's the best part. It's a good picture.

"The Sailor's Love Letter" (Edison), September 19.—A deep and pathetic situation is pictured on this film—a love story that was almost a tragedy. The mystery of human life is behind it and it has the sea for its background, the edge of the sea where the billows break. That last scene is a great picture. It is a very worthy film.

"Crossing the Alps" (Gaumont), September 19.—Pictures of the Alps country as seen from a motor car. A marvelous picture. A feature. It's a picture that will be long remembered.

"Off the Coast of Maine" (Edison), September 12.—A very good scenic, showing pictures of the ocean in a solemn mood. It is well worth seeing.

"Under the Tropical Sun" (Edison), September 12.—This is a Cuban love story, with very interesting backgrounds. In fact, these pictures are highly educational, showing much of Cuban life, and though the story is slight, the film on account of them is truly worth while. The photography is excellent. It is a good film.

"How to Catch a Bachelor" (Gaumont), September 12.—A pretty story, a romantic comedy, something on the order (roughly speaking) of "She Stoops to Conquer." Some very beautiful pictures of gardens and natural scenery are shown. The acting, photography, etc., are good and the picture is likely to be very acceptable.

"From Bordeaux to Panillac" (Gaumont), September 12.—This scenic pictures a trip by steamboat from Bordeaux France, to Panillac. These scenes are pretty, but they are not instructive enough to be of very great importance.

"Pathe's Weekly No. 37," September 12.—This week the regular topical contains a picture of the Kaiser at the head of the standard bearing company. Also a picture of Atwood leaving Nyack, N. Y., for the last reach in his famous flight. There are pictures of two motor races and of two railroad wrecks. Besides, there are other things of lesser importance, like water jousting on the Rhein.

"How Millie Became An Actress" (Vitagraph), September 19.—A character farce. Millie wanted to be an actress, but got no encouragement from the manager. She applies for a job as waitress at the boarding house where he is spending the summer. She does certainly astonish the manager and he changes his opinion about her abilities. The audience seemed to like it very much. Ralph Ince as the manager is the making of the picture.

"In Ancient Days" (Gaumont), September 20.—The strange dream of an Egyptologist. A mummy had been given to him and in a dream he lived the tragic story of a pharoah whose plans for his daughter's marriage had driven her to suicide. It made the professor modify his ideas about his own daughter's marriage. The idea isn't new, but the picture is very graceful and pleasing. A good film.

"McKee Rankin's '49'" (Selig), September 19.—A story of '49 and later. It has a complicated plot, but is produced with much skill and is clear if watched closely, although one of its leaders is a little confusing. Mr. Hobart Bosworth plays the "'49," a character that suggests Rip Van Winkle. This old miner has a ward, a foundling who is an heiress, but that isn't known at first. Because the advertisement seeking the heiress was changed another girl of the mining village is thought to be the one who will inherit the money and the schemer marries her. In the end it is the miner's ward who is proved to be the heiress. There is a romance and it ends happily. The scenes are very well conducted and pleasing. It is a good picture and was warmly received.

"Saved from the Torrents" (Essanay), September 19.—It is an express train that is saved from a risky bridge crossing a fearfully swollen stream. The story is dramatic. It has a background of village life. The girl who saves the train, at first, tries to keep it from being stopped by the police, who want her criminal, but repentant, brother. Then she hears of the dangerous bridge over the rapids. She and her sweetheart rush to save the train in a hand-car. It is a very interesting, well conducted and photographed picture.

"Pathe's Weekly" (September 19).—The topical picture this week shows Bob Burman lowering his world's record for a mile on a motor car. We also are given a glimpse of Eades, the millionaire hobo, also the courthouse where the recent Beattie trial was held, the Labor Day parade in New York City; Charleston, S. C., after the recent storm. There is a picture of the launching of the "Rivadavia," the world's biggest battleship, built at Quincy, near Boston; one of King George and the Queen in Ireland. There are some pictures of sports and it ends with pictures of the new fall styles from Paris.

"One Flag at Last" (Vitagraph), September 18.—The best thing in this picture is Mr. Ralph Ince's impersonation of President Lincoln. It is very good. The audience applauded warmly. It's a well-conducted story of the Civil War, with a Southern heroine and a Northern hero. The hero is aided by the girl when wounded and in hiding; in his turn he obtains from Lincoln the release of her brother, a captured Southern officer. The final scene is a reconciliation of North and South under one flag and a happy joining of the two lovers. It's a good film.

"The Senorita's Conquest" (Lubin), September 18.—A very interestingly acted bandit is one of the chief figures in this romance of the Mexican border. The situation is fairly fresh. The girl at first intends to decoy the sheriff and put him at the mercy of the bandit, but as it chances falls in love with him. The bandit learns of this and forces her to write a decoy letter, which brings the sheriff into the bandit's power. The girl frees the sheriff, but remains in the inn. The sheriff comes back with the boys to save her only in the nick of time. The scene at the first encounter with the bandit's men is exciting. The picture is likely to please very much.

"The Fright" (Pathe), September 18.—The situation of this remarkably strong photoplay is human and very intense. The actress finds a thief under her bed. She manages to get outside and lock the door. The police who come at her call follow the fleeing man through a realistically conducted search over the roofs, actually pictured high above the city. The burglar is not found. He has dodged back and just below the actress's window is hanging by a slowly loosening gutter. He calls frantically. The actress hears him after the police have gone and by means of her curtain helps him to climb back. He gives up the gems he has taken and she lets him depart. It is very truly a picture of a fright and is a picture well worth while.

"Don, the Dandy" (Biograph), September 18.—What might be termed a counterpart to this comic sketch, picturing the cure of a mollycoddle, was produced by this same company several months ago and dealt with a heroine, more or less inexperienced and out of the swim, whom a friend trained with pleasing results. It is this college boy's father who makes a man of him, a very foolish youth. The Biograph Company is very fortunate in its players. The situation as drawn is not very important, but as it is produced, has many sparkling passages. The film furnishes good entertainment.

"Lost in the Arctic" (Selig), September 18.—An intensely interesting picture of the far north. It has a well-designed and fairly dramatic, though slight, plot; but shows so much of Eskimo customs and also so vividly pictures the experiences of exploring parties on the ice fields that it will be a very pleasing number on any bill. It is also instructive. The photographs must have been taken under difficulties. Some of them are very good. One scene shows the death of a polar bear. It's a good film.

"Notable Men" (Selig), September 18.—Champ Clark's smile pleased the audience. Uncle Joe Cannon, Vice-President James Sherman and his friend, Senator Bailey, were shown together. They seemed popular with the audience.

Independent

"The Buddhist Priestess" (Thanhouser), September 12.—Here is a film which is out of the ordinary, an American-Japanese story. A child is left alone by the death of her parents of plague and wanders into a Buddhist temple, where she falls asleep. The natives believe their god which had just been stolen has sent a priestess to earth, and for ten years she rules the temple as she chooses. Then an American naval officer discovers her and a love episode soon develops. When he goes to take her away the natives object and there is a lively time ahead for the couple. But the pigeon they have trained to carry love messages to the ship carries a message to the sailors and the jackies arrive in time to rescue the officer and his prospective bride from a very perilous position. Not acted in all its scenes very well, there is one incident that caused much enjoyment and laughter.

"The Horse Thief" (Powers), September 16.—The objection to this film is the same which has been pointed out before. But in this instance it is doubled. Not only one sheriff, but two, break their oaths by setting a prisoner free. The first time the sheriff releases a half-breed because in a foray he did not kill his wife. The half-breed declares he will become a better man and sure enough he does. Ultimately he is elected sheriff. Before he leaves his benefactor he tears a card and gives half to him. In searching a prisoner after taken for cattle rustling, after he is sheriff, he finds the other half of the card and remembering the occasion when it was torn he sets his prisoner free. This reviewer believes this insidious influence against law is injurious to many. True, the number of such films is few, but there are still too many. They ought to be eliminated from all programs.

A Few Who Are Using Our MIRROR SCREEN

Empire Theater, Detroit Mich..... 1
Blue Mouse Theater, Baltimore, Md..... 2
Orpheum Theater, Indianapolis, Ind..... 3
Hix-Gravely Co., Montgomery, Ala..... 4
Majestic Theater, Memphis, Tenn..... 5
Circle Theater, Washington, D. C..... 6
Wonderland Theater, Greenburgh, Ind..... 7
Hippodrome Theater, Springfield, Ohio..... 8
Majestic Theater No. 3, Memphis Tenn.... 9
Arcade Theater, Richmond, Ind..... 10
Garfield Theater, Chicago, Ill..... 11
Palace Theater, St. Paul, Minn..... 12
Hippodrome Theater, Ft. Wayne, Ind..... 13
La Petite Theater, Kankakee, Ill..... 14
Rockford Theater, Rockford, Ill..... 15
Saxe Amusement Co., Milwaukee, Wis..... 16
Capt. W. Aments, Jackson, Tenn..... 17
Novelty Amusement Co., Philadelphia, Pa.. 18
Janet Theater, 617 North Ave., Chicago, Ill. 19
Renner & Diebel, Youngstown, Ohio..... 20
G. H. Bailey, Billings, Mont..... 21
E. G. Moore, Orpheum Theater, Groat Falls, Mont. 22
Wm. Cutts, Alcazar Theater, Butte, Mont.. 23
Ashland Theater, Chicago, Ill., 1656 W. 12th St. 24
Joe. Brokaw, Angola, Ind..... 25
Lyric Theater, 276 State St., Chicago, Ill.. 26
J. M. Hammond, VanSickle, Ind..... 27
H. M. Newsome. Birmingham, Ala..... 28
Victor Theater, 43rd & Ellis Ave., Chicago, Ill. 29
Mr. Chas. Zuelzke, Mystic Theater, Findlay, Ohio 30
Royal Theater, Muncie, Ind..... 31
Fred Bartholamae, Garfield Theater, 5531 S. Halsted St., Chicago..... 32
W. W. Smith, Springfield, Mo..... 33
James Sullivan, Elgin, Ill..... 34
W. E. Soles, Vaudette Theater, Woodstock, Ill. 35
Moore & Greaves, Denver, Colo..... 36
Moore & Greaves, Cheyenne..... 37
Wm. Georgious, Arris Theater, Mansfield, Ohio 38
S. G. Smith, Theatorium, New Lexington, Ohio 39
W. E. Deakon, Zanesville, Ohio..... 40
J. Ray Samuel, Iliad Theater, Kansas City, Mo. 41
James Conners, Janesville, Wis..... 42
Webster & Davis, Beloit, Wis..... 43
Louis Stuerle, Broadway Theater, Louisville, Ky. 44
C. W. Snodgrass. Wichita, Kan..... 45
W. E. Smith, Bijou Theater, Fond du Lac, Wis. 46
Lindsay & Condon De Kalb, Ill..... 47
Empire Theater, Louisville, Ky..... 48
Jos. E. Hennings, Anderson, Ind..... 49
Merbach & Keuhn. Kaukanna. Wis..... 50
F. R. Ritchie, Dowagiac. Mich..... 51
Martha Machemer, Three Rivers. Mich.... 52
Varieties Theater, 112 Third Ave., New York City 53
H. W. Warner, Royal Theater, La Salle, Ill. 54
Savoy Theater Co., Terre Haute, Ind.... 55
J. P. McCausland, Pastime Theater, Walla Walla. Wash. 56
Haase & Schloh, Irving Theater, 1016 Fulton St., Brooklyn. N. Y..... 57
W. E. Smith, Bijou Theater, Fond du Lac, Wis. 58
The Goerke Co., American Theater, 153 Market St., Newark, N. J..... 59
Chas. E. Schatz. Meadville. Pa..... 60
Sherwood & McWilliams, Madison, Wis... 61
L. J. Applegath & Sons. Toronto, Canada. 62
M. W. Sandusky, Casino Theater, Rome, N. Y. 63
M. R. Angell. Clinton, Iowa..... 64
Hall Bros., Pueblo, Colo..... 65
J. E. Boyle, Dreamland Theater, Dubuque, Iowa 66
J. A. Burns, Huntington, W. Va..... 67
Leroy Tudor, Marion, Ind..... 68
Chas. Namur, Colonial Theater, Des Moines, Iowa 69
Hoof & Johnson, Olympia Theater, Rockford, Ill. 70
W. C. Kasper, Fairyland Theater, Cleveland, Ohio 71
Kunz Bros., Grand Theater, Springfield, Ill. 72
A. H. Lewis, Corona Theater, Cleveland, Ohio 73
W. J. Slimm, Hough Ave. Theater, Cleveland, Ohio 74
Harding & Goldberg, Princess Theater, Omaha, Nebraska 75
W. B. Gandy, Lima, Ohio..... 76
H. G. Beal, Oaks Theater, Boise, Idaho.. 77
Wm. Huddy, Riverside Theatorium, Evansville, Ind. 78
Carr & Schad, Reading, Pa..... 79
Otto Miller, Chester, Pa..... 80
Chas. H. Rabe, Keystone Theater, West Hoboken, N. J..... 81
Bryan & Adams, Lyric Theater, Cedar Rapids, Iowa 82
A. & L. Sablosky, Bijou Theater, Wilmington, Delaware 83
Pastime Theater, Easton, Pa. 84
Wilbur Walker, San Luis, Obispo..... 85
Bay Ridge Amusement Co., Dreamland Theater, 4410 3rd Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y... 86
Proctor Bijou Dream Theater, Newark, N. Y. 87
J. E. Haggard, Nevada, Mo..... 88
John T. Young, Million Dollar Pier, Atlantic City, N. J..... 89
Brown & Savage, Royal Theater, Atlantic City, N. J..... 90
Raphael & Zuegschmidt, Bijou Dream, Pittsburgh, Pa. 91
Harry E. Davis, Milton, Pa..... 92
L. & A. Schippacassem, National Theater, Akron, Ohio 93
Star Theater Co., Harrisburgh, Pa..... 94
Moline Amusement Co., Moline, Ill..... 95
Fannie Spiers, Girard Theater, Philadelphia, Pa. 96
Silverman Bros., Altoona, Pa. 97
D. C. McClellan, Idle Hour Theater, Pekin, Ill. 98
Frank A. Fisher, Philadelphia, Pa..... 99
Lyric Theater, Harrisburg, Pa..... 100
E. S. Harris, Carthage, Mo..... 101
Frank L. Harris, Parkersburg, W. Va..... 102
E. M. Henly, Bijou Theater, Muscatine, Iowa 103
J. R. Brannen, Colonial Theater, Evansville, Ind. 104
Mr. J. M. Van Sickle, Gary, Ind..... 105
Edw. A. Horne, 450 Cherry St., Macon, Ga. 106
Knickerbocker Theater, 102 Main St., Rochester, N. Y..... 107
Robins Bros., Bijou Theater, Youngstown, Ohio 108
F. S. Sampson, Penn Yan, N. Y..... 109
N. H. Gibbons, Aurora Theater, Lawrence, Kan. 110
Ezra Rhodes, Surprise Theater, South Bend, Ind. 111
Dan Deegan, Dreamland Theater, Geneva, N. Y. 112
A. Ardmstrong, Star Theater, Newton, Ia. 113
Photoplay Theater, Erie, Pa..... 114
L. S. Barnes, Gem Theater, Kalamazoo, Mich. 115
H. J. Brown, Class A Theater, Seattle, Wash. 116
Randall Smith, Edisonia Theater, Springfield, Mass. 117
Yale Theater Co., Muskogee, McAlester, Bartlesville. Okla.. and Ft. Smith, Ark. 118
W. L. Terry, Dixie Theater, Waco, Tex.. 119
Crown Theater, San Antonio, Tex..... 120
A. H. Lewis, Princess Theater, Cleveland, Ohio 121
Henry Connors, New Empire Theater, Coney Island. N. Y..... 122
C. L. Southerland, Casino and Bijou (Transparent), Indianapolis, Ind..... 123
David Samuels, Jersey Shore, Pa..... 124
W. H. Linton, Ilion, N. Y..... 125
Consolidated Amusement Co., Baltimore, Md. 126
Dreamland Theater, Portsmouth, Va..... 127
Star Theater Co., Harrisburgh, Pa..... 128
P. G. Atsalas, Nixon Theater, Youngstown, Ohio 129
W. W. Dunnavant, Warren, Ohio..... 130
A. H. Lewis, Orpheum Theater, Cleveland, Ohio 131
Star Amusement Co., Noblesville, Ind..... 132
Mozart Theater, Elmira, N. Y..... 133
F. W. Kister, Surf Ave., Coney Island, N. Y. 134
J. F. Perleman, New Castle, Pa..... 135
Theatorium, Passaic, N. J..... 136
Lancaster Amusement Co., Family Theater, Lancaster, Pa. 137
Lilly & Mitchell, Oneida, N. Y..... 138
Lilly & Mitchell, Canastota, N. Y..... 139
W. L. Rubert, 12th St. Theater, Kansas City, Mo. 140
W. R. Lander, Sioux City, Iowa..... 141
Happy Hour Theater, Syracuse, N. Y. 142
Scenic Theater, Dayton, Ohio 143
J. P. Papayanakos, Wonderland Theater, Watertown, N. Y. 144
Ocean Grove Camp Meeting Assn., Ocean Grove, N. J. 145
R. M. Davidson, Binghamton, N. Y..... 146
Morris Lince, Ottumwa, Iowa..... 147
Palace Theater, Oskaloosa, Iowa..... 148
P. F. Sarver, Sidney, Ohio..... 149
Wesley Edwards, Sharon, Pa..... 150
Frederick Haffner, Casino Theater, North Beach, L. I..... 151
John Whittaker, Casino Theater, Canarsie, L. I. 152
Royal Theater, St. Joseph, Mo..... 153
John Stark, Bijou Dream Theater, Celina, Ohio 154
Unique Theater, Wilkes-Barre, Pa..... 155
Jacobson & Albier, Centerville, Iowa..... 156
Harry T. Harrell, 1248 E. Washington St., Indianapolis, Ind. 157
M. J. Duffy, Troy, N. Y..... 158
H. H. Peardson, Gem Theater, Troy, Ohio 159
Markowitz & Brandt, Clinton Theater, 154 Clinton St., New York, N. Y..... 160
Majestic Amusement Co., Memphis, Tenn. (Two) 161
M. W. Shaeffer, Hanover, Pa..... 162
Louis Sitnek, Lyric Theater, Uniontown, Pa. 163
Palace Theater, Peru, Ind..... 164
John Tate Powell, Princess Theater, Charlotte, N. C. 165
H. Rakov, Syracuse, N. Y. 166
Bretz & Yeager, Carlisle, Pa..... 167
Eugene A. Neidert, Yauco, Porto Rico.... 168
Mr. K. Knudson, Oxnard, Cal..... 169
Leslie & Foerstige, Colonial Theater, Rochester, Pa. 170
Star Theater, New Castle. Ind..... 171
Edward Faust, Bluffton, Ind..... 172
Louis Phillips, Royal Theater, 4216 13th Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y. 173
A. J. Hoch, Gem Theater, Buffalo, N. Y... 174
H. E. Birch, Bijou Theater, McConnelsville, Ohio. 175
Wm. A. Stanton, Vicksburg, Miss..... 176
Mrs. H. W. Hendricks, Vaudette Theater, Connersville, Ind. 177
W. R. Sheedy, Sheedy Theater, Brocton, Mass. 178
H. F. Prentice, Fountain Theater, Terre Haute, Ind. 179
Savoy Theater Co., Terre Haute, Ind..... 180
C. E. Adams, Lebanon, Ind..... 181
Joseph Sweeney, Eagle Theater, Middletown, Ohio 182
Silverman Bros., Altoona, Pa..... 183
Simeral Amusement Co., Steubenville, Ohio 184
Heim & Zeigler, Gem Theater, Fremont, Ohio 185
Fred W. Gilroy, Star Theater, Ogdensburg, N. Y. 186
J. P. Papayanakos, Wonderland Theater, Watertown, N. Y..... 187
H. E. Levey, Comet Theater, 100 3rd Ave., New York City, N. Y..... 188
C. A. Smith. Chillicothe, Ohio..... 189
Mullen & Mulvey, Aurora, Ill..... 190
Peter Bender, Alliance, Ohio..... 191
W. M. Sauvage, Lyric Theater, Alton, Ill. 192
American Theater, East Liverpool, Ohio.. 193
John M. Strub, Grand Theater, Beaver Falls, Pa. 194
M. Switow, Novelty Theater, Louisville, Ky. 195
Advanced Amusement Co., Comedy Theater, 46 E. 14th St., New York, N. Y. 196
Edward Craak, Oklahoma City, Okla..... 197

Address all Communications to the MOTION PICTURE SCREEN CO., Shelbyville, Indiana

FRANK MANNING,
Exclusive Eastern Sales Agent,
355 Bedford Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

F. P. BLOOMFIELD,
General Traveling Agent,
Muncie, Indiana.

"Cain's Retribution" (Ambrosio), September 13.—A story of murder and the horrible experience which followed it. The murderer, through jealousy, kills his rival. Then, haunted by fear and visions of the dead man, he goes to the precipice where the man was killed and hurls himself to death. It is not a pleasant film, but upon the theory that tears are as attractive as smiles sometimes it may prove popular.

"Tiny Tim Wins a Lottery Prize" (Ambrosio), September 13.—The smallest actor wins a prize which suddenly transforms him into a wealthy man. He starts out to enjoy life and this film is concerned with detailing his numerous interesting adventures. One with a jealous husband is quite thrilling. The film has a vein of humor running through it which should make it popular.

"Her Uncle's Will" (Solax), September 13.—Here is a will story that is different. The terms require that the girl shall marry the foreman of her uncle's estate. If she refuses she loses the money. If he refuses she gets it. An obstacle is the fact that she was about to be married to another and the lovers are much puzzled over the problem until the girl's brother comes to the rescue and suggests that he dress as a girl and make love to the foreman. He does this so successfully that the foreman leaves in disgust and signs a paper declaring he will not marry the girl under any condition. Then the lovers are happy.

"The Red Devils" (Champion), September 13.—Here is a lively story and one that will appeal to any audience. To begin with it puts them in touch with an old fashioned traveling circus, with all the figures which formerly made such shows popular. The red devils are four acrobats, whose acts are startling. Then enters a beautiful rider on a beautiful horse. Out on the road the caravan wends its way to the next stand, but suddenly it is stopped by a band of Indians. The red devils tumble out of the coach and by their curious antics hold the savages in check until the woman can get word to her sweetheart, a soldier, and a troop of cavalry hastens to the rescue and the lover gets his reward.

"The Mother of the Ranch" (American), September 14.—The features of this film are the branding of calves to get a herd of cattle, which has been done by more than one, who has come to grief as this one did by murder and its punishment. Not all have added murder to their thievery, and not all have met such swift retribution. The man's mother, a sweet-faced, white haired old lady, arrives just after the murderer has been buried. Not desiring to let her know the truth they give her the locket and tell her he died a heroic death. They take her to the grave and leave her. Later they invite her to remain with them and become the mother of the ranch, and she, having no other ties, gladly accepts the invitation.

"Faith" (Rex), September 14.—The suggestions in this picture make it appear one of the strongest dramatically which has been released in some time. The old question of humanity, the faith in the infinite and what it represents, is handled in an impressive way. A minister loses faith, resigns and strays far from his former environment. He finds gold, but it does not bring happiness. Then he determines to seek it elsewhere and starts for the cities. Arriving one night at a roadside house, in a country infected with the worst of desperadoes, he expects treachery, refuses to eat and sits long before the fireplace, determined not to sleep. He hears a voice and, listening, discovers it is the little girl saying her prayers. Instantly all fear vanishes. Faith has resumed her sway. And he asks himself some searching questions, then goes to his home, finds his family and begins his work all over again. It is impossible to answer satisfactorily all the questions which will be raised by this film. But they obtrude themselves and will impress different ones differently. The film clearly teaches, however, that simple faith is the basis of all that is dearest and best in life. It is a sermon on the screen.

"The Stolen Play" (Reliance), September 20.—There is a good story in this picture; but, as conducted, one gets but a jerky impression of it. The changes are abrupt and there seems to be a good deal of going in and out of rooms, the same rooms. Nor is the story as pictured very convincing in all its parts. It is perhaps not the kind of story to which the photoplay is very well adapted. Its purpose is commendable and it is fairly acted and photographed (especially the first scene). Yet it is a fairly interesting and commendable film.

"The Missionary's Gratitude" (Bison), September 22.—An exciting Indian story with surprises, captures, escapes, etc. A Cheyenne, hiding from Sioux, who are keenly watching the water, swims out and rescues the passing missionary, whose canoe is overturned. He is promptly recaptured. Later the missionary with the help of a Sioux maiden helps the noble captive to escape again and they flee with him to safety after a hard pursuit by the Sioux braves in canoes. The pictures have much beauty. One of its scenes, the Sioux watching the water for the fugitive, is highly commendable. The players seem to be true Indians. The incidents are thrilling. The whole is very commendable indeed as a popular film.

"The Stolen Diamond" (Lux), September 22.—A South African story on similar lines to the American Westerns. The thief of the diamond tries to lay the blame on the owner's daughter's sweetheart. The old sheriff (an interesting looking old man) solves the question and fastens the blame where it belongs. He also does some quick work with his revolver. It is a fairly interesting film. It is well photographed.

"Bill, Express Messenger" (Lux), September 22.—Bill's exploits on a delivery tricycle are not so interesting as the bits of Paris that are shown with them. The film seems to include a glimpse of the Paris sewers. The camera work is good.

"Nellie's Soldier" (Solax), September 22.—A military melodrama that is set in a forest reserve. The county sheriff is in league with a ring of timber thieves. The soldiers come to protect the government's property. The sergeant and the sheriff struggle for a revolver in the office of the pretty telegrapher. It is accidentally discharged and a by-stander killed. The girl plays a thrilling part in saving the sergeant from being hanged by the sheriff on a fake charge of murder. It is a very fair Western story.

"The Star Reporter" (Yankee), September 18.—Those who like a sharp, impromptu fight will be pleased with the climax of this picture. The star reporter, a woman, has just found the stolen jewels in the room of the sailor, who looks like a buccaneer. He bursts in. She has to fight for her life. Tables are overturned and crockery broken. It is convincingly realistic. Police enter in time to save the reporter. The story is old fashioned, but there are some very good scenes in the picture. People will not be likely to leave while the picture is on the screen, for though, taken as a whole, not convincing, it is a "regular thriller."

"Mutt and Jeff and the Dog Catchers" (Nestor), September 23.—If you have liked any of them you'll like this. We advise you to see it. It is very short, but very funny.

"Obliging a Friend" (Nestor), September 23.—A kitchen farce. It doesn't seem to be very well photographed nor very funny compared with the other film on this reel. It is just so so.

"Across the Divide" (Nestor), September 20.—It's a picture of terrible things well acted and clearly pictured before us. It is like an old style novel; but its incidents are made to tell with a good deal of effectiveness. The acting is good as are the photography and scene composition. It is a good specimen of its kind of badman's conversion, and Western hold-up story that is not very convincing but thrilling.

"The Way of a Maid" (Reliance), September 23.—A love story of a minister and a young woman who is also loved by a wealthy creditor of her father's. The minister leaves his fashionable church and takes a slum mission after he hears from the girl's father that she is to marry the rich man. The girl finds him later, and they are married. It is very interesting and the backgrounds are fairly fresh. It is a commendable film.

"Red Star's Honor" (Powers), September 23.—The half-breed did the shooting and accused Red Star, who on account of it is going to be hanged. A white man takes his place while he goes to bid Antelope good-bye and nearly gets hanged. A little Indian girl saw the murder committed and brings the crime home to the right culprit. It is certainly not a convincing picture.

"The Gun Man" (American), September 18.—Very excellent photographs of scenes that often have an intimate quality that makes them seem like corners of real life. It is partly photography, partly the natural acting, and partly wise care for the background. The camera man remembers when he is photographing a bit of a porch that he is doing it to make the human eye think that it sees without the help of mechanical apparatus. He shows a knowledge of

SEE ADVERTISEMENT ON PAGE 931.

ANNOUNCEMENT No. 8

THIS nation's greatness sprung from the ideals of the founders of the nation; their political theories were questioned, but HISTORY has made answer.

The launching of an EXCLUSIVE PROGRAMME marks an ERA in the MOVING PICTURE WORLD of equal importance relatively—it marks the breaking away from the old theories of SERVICE, and the growth of an idea which will place its supporters in a position of security and strength in the MOVING PICTURE POLITICAL SEA. There may be those who question the wisdom of such theories, but every day now we are making HISTORY.

The NATIONAL FILM DISTRIBUTING COMPANY is proclaiming the tidings of EXCLUSIVE SERVICE, and putting in the field 21 reels of Quality pictures each and every week to feed our supporters, so that they have both the theory and substance of successful business; 21 reels of distinctive quality EACH AND EVERY WEEK served on DISTINCTIVE EXCLUSIVE LINES.

EXHIBITORS, NOTICE!

You will be notified from time to time of the City and Theatre where you can see our programme in your respective States. Take a look at the goods. This is all we ask of you upon that call. We have surprised the entire film world at every phase of action.

THE REASON WHY

MONDAY—"PLANTATION," "CLARENDON," "MONO."
TUESDAY—"ROSE," "DEUTSCHES BIOGRAPH," "HELIOS."
WEDNESDAY—"FEDERAL," "MONDIA," "LATIUM."
THURSDAY—"WASHINGTON," "HEPWIX," "FILM d'ART."
FRIDAY—"MOHAWK," "CRICKS AND MARTIN," "ACQUILLA."
SATURDAY—"OKLAHOMA," "DEUTSCHES BIOSCOPE," "SAVOY."
SUNDAY—"CALIFORNIA," "MESSTERS," "COMERIO."

Demand the best. You are entitled to same. Place the Moving Picture Industry on a qualified basis. Dignity and Merit.

We have received nothing but praise from the exhibitors who have had the pleasure of attending the Public Exhibitions given in such cities as have been announced in previous "ads."

Mr. Exhibitor, be the first to receive and have NATIONAL EXCLUSIVE FILM SERVICE in your house. It will guarantee a great increase in your box office receipts. EXCLUSIVE SERVICE is now at hand and that long-felt want in the MOVING PICTURE WORLD has at last been satisfied.

Special: BE PREPARED TO GET THAT NATIONAL GAZETTE ON SUNDAY.
WATCH FOR WEDNESDAY'S EDUCATIONAL.
OUR EXCHANGES HANDLE OUR MANUFACTURERS' SPECIAL FEATURE.

Wire or Write Your Wants Look for the word "National"

NATIONAL FILM DISTRIBUTING CO.

NATIONAL FILM DISTRIBUTING COMPANY

34-36 West Houston Street New York City

NATIONAL FILM DISTRIBUTING CO.

scope as well as of light and shade. The picture of the gunman watching for the cattle rustler was balanced with an artist's eye.

"Bill as a Bill Poster" (Lux), September 15.—This favorite comedian obtains employment as a bill poster. The assiduity with which he places bills in every possible nook and cranny creates a good bit of sport. Suddenly he is blown up, but after some disastrous consequences is himself once more.

"His Mania for Collecting the Antique" (Lux), September 15.—A lively comedy showing a man purchasing a suit of armor and deciding to walk home in it. It protects him from the angry attempts of various persons to repay him for some real or fancied wrong. A strong man finds that he is no match for the man in armor. But when he arrives at home his now thoroughly aroused wife discovers that his head is not encased in mail. She makes good use of this discovery.

"Lone Star's Return" (Bison), September 15.—An Indian picture with only Indians as actors. It tells a love story, and how an abductor was taken, with the sweetheart of another, by members of the other man's tribe. The pursuing Indian finds the man and girl bound among his own people. He orders the girl released, but after a conference the unfortunate brave is led away to be executed. An interesting film.

"In the Chorus" (Thanhouser), September 15.—A picture of theatrical life which possesses all the elements of a sermon. Its chief point of interest is when the mother, who has lived fast, discovers in the shy newcomer in the chorus, her own daughter and takes her away from its pitfalls, back to the family who have brought her up, without revealing her own identity. Imprinting one last kiss upon her she steals forth into the night, determined to change her mode of living so that she may some day return and claim this young woman as her daughter. The film will arouse the emotions and lead the audience to tears, in many instances. Indeed, in the section of the house where this reviewer sat handkerchiefs were used freely.

"Mutt and Jeff and the Newsboys" (Nestor), September 16.—First as speculators, where they win $200 and lose $199, then as newsboys the two humorists get into their usual number of scrapes. Jeff decides to part company with Mutt and eventually gets a news-stand that is profitable. Meantime Mutt, in short trousers, is having the time of his life to make things go selling papers, and ultimately is arrested and carried away to court because as a boy he undertook to buy a drink. Jeff comes to the rescue and succeeds in getting his "son" out after a series of extremely ludicious situations.

"The Conspirators" (Great Northern), September 16.—A Sherlock Holmes detective story which has a number of thrilling situations. Perhaps the most interesting is where the robbers pull a string and drop the detective into some place unknown. However, he is speedily rescued by the police, the gang is captured and the unfortunate lawyer is returned to him family unhurt. And all this came about through the arch conspirator neglecting to throw away a telegram he had written to send to his confederates. The assumption of a number of different disguises by the detective is a clever bit of work and adds greatly to the interest of the film.

"The Flower of the Tribe" (Nestor), September 16.—An Indian picture which is filled with action and exciting situations, while the Nestor photography has thrown glamour over it and the entire film seems like the appearance of the actual events before the audience. Silver Star, an Indian maiden, is saved from a ruffian by the white settlers. In carrying her away they have killed her father, the old chief, and when she returns and tells her tribe the true state of affairs the young chief, who has already directed the war dance, will not believe her and puts her under guard. However, she escapes and informs her friends. They succeed in beating off the Indians. Silver Star has paid her debt of gratitude, even at the expense of the lives of the best of her own people.

"Pals" (Reliance), September 16.—The story of two boys taught to steal by a Fagin. It appears that they are not criminal in their tendencies since they steal bread to appease their hunger, but return the purse of a woman which contained a large sum of money. This proved a lucky incident for them since she and her husband eventually take both in and give them a good home. The story possesses considerable human interest, but will be objected to because it unquestionably represents how some house burglars do their work. The sentiment against pictures which illustrate any kind of crime is growing rapidly and eventually will be strong enough to force them off the screens.

"Gray Wolf's Grief" (Powers), September 12.—Here is an emotional Indian story, telling of the grief of an Indian when his squaw dies of tuberculosis. He has a vision and rides the bumpers of the train to the city to see her, arriving in time to allow her to breathe her last in his arms. Then he takes the body home and buries it near the tepee, where they passed many happy hours together.

"Two Men and a Girl" (Essanay), September 12.—Here is a film in which unreasoning jealousy is made the principal theme. The thrilling feature is where the girl shoots the knife from the hand of the wouldbe murderer. It is another version of the eternal triangle. The jealous one, wringing his hand in pain, slinks away defeated. The girl falls into her lover's arms content.

"At Perry's Ranch" (Nestor), September 13.—Jack Roberts has hard luck, but finally lands on a ranch in the West. There, though small, he is shortly a favorite and does so well that he can send for his mother. Before she comes, however, he gets into trouble with the foreman over the ranchman's daughter and is challenged to a duel. Knowing himself to be a poor shot, he sets up a target and begins blazing away. A bullet goes wide and wounds the foreman. He accuses Jack of undertaking to murder him and so when the mother arrives she finds her son in the hands of the sheriff. Her plea with the foreman is sufficient to induce him to tell the truth and he drags himself to where the boys are and declares that Jack's story is correct, whereupon he is released with the plaudits of the company.

"The Cobbler" (Reliance), September 13.—The poor cobbler wins a prize of $10,000 in a lottery. He sends his daughter to a boarding school and falls into indolent and ultimately dissolute habits. The girl visits her chum's home and falls in love with her brother. His father investigates the family and orders the young man to break the engagement. Shortly the cobbler, his money all gone, goes back to his bench. There the young man finds him when, loyal to his love, he goes to her home and wins her.

"Tiny Tom, Detective" (Ambrosio), September 20.—A bright comedy with the favorite Tiny Tom in the role of a successful follower of Sherlock Holmes. He traces the burglar by a necktie and succeeds in restoring to its owner all the stolen money, while the burglars are apparently hurried away to prison.

"Tweedledum's Riding Boots" (Ambrosio), September 20.—A slap-stick comedy with poor Tweedledum in trouble again. He can't ride, and so he loses his sweetheart. He can't get his riding boots off and manages to break most of the furniture and upset the house generally in his attempts. Assistants are treated to shower baths, a portion of the house is pulled down. After it is all over the boots come off themselves. These two comedies on the same reel pleased a New York noon-day audience so much that applause was liberal.

TAKING THE "FORT RILEY" PICTURES.

The accompanying illustration shows the Champion camera forces as equipped for taking the pictures of the National Guard encampment at Fort Riley, Kan., which is booked for release on Oct. 9, 1911. The work was done under the supervision of Director Davis and a series of excellent motion views of the maneuvers were secured.

GET TO THE FRONT

BANG! BANG! The Bull's Eye!

Shoot the Chutes to Success!

And the only bull about it!

NOW, written backward, spells WON!

If you have eyesight, insight and foresight, reach over the lunch counter and connect with

Cheyenne "Frontier Days"

Those Cheyenne boys ride—and then some! Gallop with them to success! You won't have to spur them on! Hit the trail and trail! Get the kale!

"OH, SAY! CAN YOU SEE" as we do, that it's a real rapid-fire REPEATER of a reel—and the right calibre.

Do yourself a favor and snatch
"FRONTIER DAYS!"

State Rights For Sale By

THE TOURNAMENT FILM COMPANY
TOLEDO, OHIO

GET W-EYES

Come Early to Avoid the Riot!

Manufacturers Advance Notes

"THE STRIKE AT 'LITTLE JONNY' MINE" (Essanay).

G. M. Anderson.

MELODRAMA with all the features that combine to thrill an audience and win applause—hero, heroine, the innocent persecuted, wrongs righted, properly spiced with thrilling scenes and situations—is the Essanay's release this Saturday, Sept. 30, "The Strike at the 'Little Jonny' Mine." The villain is not mentioned in the above description, but he is here—not in person—but personified in Greed and Pride. Looking further into the story we find a big theme exploited, organized labor on one side unwisely using its power and self-satisfied capitalism refusing to recognize labor as a unit in arbitration. The story is timely, because of a similar circumstance which exists in a certain labor dispute that is now in progress.

In "The Strike at the 'Little Jonny' Mine," G. M. Anderson, the Essanay's popular Western player, is Jim Logan, a miner, popular among his fellows and a strong factor in the newly organized union of miners at the "Little Jonny." At the opening of the story, Jim is bidding his sick wife (Gladys Field) goodbye, as he leaves for work, his lunch bucket on his arm.

Arriving at the mine, Jim finds the other men, loitering about, their faces showing sullen looks, while off to one side, a labor agitator is haranguing the crowd. Jim then learns that the petition for a different scale which had been forwarded by the union officials to the mine superintendent, J. C. Phillips (Arthur Mackley) has been returned with a caustic letter ordering that their union must be dissolved with the penalty of the discharge of all employees if this is not done.

Jim's heart sinks as he thinks of a strike of the miners at this time. Every penny of his wages and of his meager savings has been eaten up by doctor bills and the loss of even a week's work would find them facing starvation. However, he is in sympathy with his pals and feels that their cause is a just one. He is sure, too, that, if properly approached, Phillips can be moved to concede in their demands and before the labor agitator finds it possible to move his listeners to violence, he has won over a majority of the men to his way of thinking and has volunteered to take the petition to Phillips himself.

With the crowd waiting outside, Jim enters the mine superintendent's office and presents the petition. Phillips tears up the paper and dragging Jim to the door, opens it and thrusts the miner into the crowd, yelling in a frenzied rage: "This is my answer."

For a moment the mob is stricken dumb, when suddenly one miner yells in rage, shaking his fist at his employer: "You wait for our answer." Then there is a waving of fists and oaths and curses fill the air. Missiles hurled in the direction of the superintendent force him to hurriedly withdraw to safety in his office. A few minutes later, the howling, shrieking mob, "seeing red," invade the nearest saloon and over their liquor discourse on a plan of revenge.

Jim, with a sad heart, returns home and tells his wife of the desperate situation which now confronts them. His wife, however, is all smiles when she produces a note and a check, which is familiar to him, and allows him to read:

"Mrs Logan—While I am not in sympathy with your husband or the other strikers, I am sorry for you, an innocent victim of their violence. Accept this check with the compliments of the 'Little Jonny' Mine. Respectfully,

"J. C. Phillips,
"Superintendent."

As Jim finishes reading the note the mob of drink-frenzied men, led by the labor agitator, appears on the scene threatening violence. Failing to divert them from their purpose, Jim sets about to protect the superintendent. He goes to the mine office himself and his wife sets off to summon the sheriff. Gaining the office ahead of the mob Jim warns

The Strike at the "Little Jonny" Mine (Essanay).

Phillips of his peril and together they prepare to make a defense. A fierce fight ensues, in which Jim is finally worsted, but before the mob can lay hands on the superintendent the sheriff arrives and the mob is dispersed.

Later Phillips, having recovered from the effects of the fight, meets the men and the differences are settled amicably, Jim being personally rewarded for his bravery.

LAEMMLE WILL RETURN IN OCTOBER.

President of the I. M. P. Company Enthusiastic as to the Future—Has Had Fine Trip.

Carl Laemmle, the energetic president of the I. M. P. Company, writes from Berlin, Germany, that he will return to America about October 15, with his health very much improved and eager to take up the work of producing films. During his stay abroad he has journeyed all over Europe in the interest of the Independent Moving Pictures Company of America, and the Independent output generally, and says the future looks bright. During his stay he has been busily engaged in taking note of conditions and promises to bring home some ideas that can be utilized in the improvement of Imp films. Mr. Laemmle is not satisfied to stand still in the producing of stories, but aims to progress, being satisfied that the moving picture industry is just in its infancy. He has spent some time at Carlsbad, taking the baths, and has enjoyed his trip, renewing old acquaintances in Germany while traveling with his family.

LEVI'S "SPOT LIGHT" SLIDES.

Here is a new wrinkle in the song slide game. Every singer of illustrated songs knows something about the inconvenience of singing in the dark. Not that any song singer is afraid of the dark, but it is a sort of nuisance and not a bit pleasant to be in a total eclipse when you are a part of the show; neither are the lighting arrangements for the singer always of the best. To overcome these unsatisfactory conditions the Levi Company have hit upon a happy idea. It is so simple that the wonder is no one thought of it long before: nothing more than a hole in the slide mat that lets a spot of light through for the singer to stand in.

Singularly enough, there have been no innovations in slide making in a number of years. True, designs have improved, the posing and coloring has reached a higher artistic plane, but mechanically, the slide has remained the same. Now comes this little, but clever, idea and makes a pronounced hit, not only with the slide singer, to whose great advantage it works, but to the audiences as well, who rather like the chance to get a glimpse of the singer.

At the Lincoln Square Theater, New York City, last week the first set of "Spot Light" song slides were introduced and they were a tremendous success. The first slide thrown on the screen showed the singer standing at the lower left corner in a bright spot light and as each succeeding slide carried this spot in exactly the same position, he became a part of every picture and was seen throughout the entire song. His voice and expression were good, the slides beautiful and the act was the hit of the bill.

The "spot light" is made in the slide—it is not a special device requiring attention of an operator. The idea is also used in lecture slides and will be a feature of the lecture series put out by the Levi Company.

Another clever feature coming from the Levi Company is called Golden's Song Revue. It has been crowding Loew's Circle Theater in New York for the past four weeks. Ask Levi about it.

NEW POSTER SERVICE.

The Exhibitors' Poster Service, 611 First National Bank Building, Chicago, is entering the motion picture field with a poster service. The new concern offers to supply a large standard size full sheet poster for each one of the entire licensed output of 36 reels per week by express prepaid at two dollars a week.

SOLAX ENGAGES NEW COMPANY OF PLAYERS.

Secretary Magie, of the Solax Company, informs us that the production department of that company is undergoing a complete reorganization. A new director had been engaged and a special effort is being made to assemble a company of players from the very best talent that can be found. The Solax people are confident that they will soon be able to produce a line of pictures that will compare favorably with anything that is to be found on the market today.

Scene from "The Black Horse Troop of Culver" (Champion).

"THE SLAVEY'S AFFINITY" (Lubin).

A charming love story is "The Slavey's Affinity," which will be released by the Lubin Company Wednesday, October 11. Miss Lawrence and Mr. Johnson are at their best in the title roles.

It is the story of a little boarding house drudge named Peggy and her worship for Allen Bennett, a struggling young lawyer whom she conceived to be an earthly paragon, fit only to associate with millionaires and angels. So infatuated was the little creature that she sought permission from her idol to be allowed to clean out his office. The permission was granted and thus did Peggy gain entrance in the paradise. She happened to be there when young Bennett's first client called, a Mrs. Stuart, who sought a legal release from the bonds of matrimony. Being almost hysterical, it was necessary for the young lawyer to comfort her. While so engaged, his fiancée, Alice Lane, called. She saw the young man and entirely misconstrued his motives.

Scene from "The Slavey's Affinity" (Lubin).

She hastened home and sent a note breaking off their engagement. When Peggy handed Allen the note that evening his first thought was to run to Miss Lane' house. A mop bucket which Peggy had left on the steps caused his downfall. Concussion of the brain was the result. But Peggy had found the note which he had dropped and discovered the cause of his wild rush.

She knew that Mrs. Stuart would call again at Bennett's office the next day, for she had been just outside the door on the occasion of the first interview. So Peggy went to Bennett's office at the appointed hour, met Mrs. Stuart—who happily had made up her differences with her worst half—and explained the whole affair. Together they went to the home of the broken-hearted Miss Lane, whose heart was mended in about five minutes. Then she hurried to the bedside of Bennett and they were happily reconciled, while the faithful Peggy, struggling between bitterness and happiness, realized that gentlemen angels and poor little drudges are not made for each other.

ESSANAY TO TAKE FEDERATION PICTURES.

Announcement was made in a recent issue of the Moving Picture World that the American Federation of Labor had contracted with the American Film Manufacturing Co., of Chicago, to make a series of pictures illustrating the arrest of the McNamaras at Indianapolis in connection with the Los Angeles Times dynamiting affair. We are now advised by Mr. George K. Spoor, president of the Essanay Company, that the statement is incorrect and that the Essanay Company is making the pictures referred to. The World is pleased to make the desired correction.

DAFFYDILLS.

If our cashier fell into a tension spring, would the current saver, the magazine roller and the mica washer, or would the carbon holder and the slide carrier?

If our cashier asked the above, would a reel hanger?

"THE MISSION WAIF" (Melies).

Thursday, September 28th, will bring the Melies feature subject, "The Mission Waif," a film that has been heavily advertised by that company and pronounced their greatest drama since their production of "The Immortal Alamo." It is a play in which the Melies actors are employed to their best advantage, especially William Clifford, who takes the lead, and who is admirably suited for the part. He is shown herewith as Captain Courtesy, the bandit and road agent.

The story surrounds the Mission San Louis del Ray in the days of the Indian uprisings during the Mission Period of

William Clifford in "The Mission Waif."

Old California. A bandit gains admission to the mission and wins the love of a girl harbored there since her adoption as a waif in infancy. Upon finally discovering his identity she orders him from the mission, bewailing the deceit of her first love. He, discovering an Indian attack, returns to protect the mission and the girl he loves. He saves them both, but forfeits his own life in the effort.

The film introduces some striking light effects and beautiful outdoor scenes, and will be long remembered as one of this company's best releases.

SEE ADVERTISEMENT ON PAGE 931.

INDEPENDENT EXHIBITORS ONLY

READ MY SENSATIONAL OFFER

I will send you one poster for every Independent Film released from July 10th, 1911, to September 9th, inclusive. Total of 43 posters for

Two Dollars and Fifty Cents

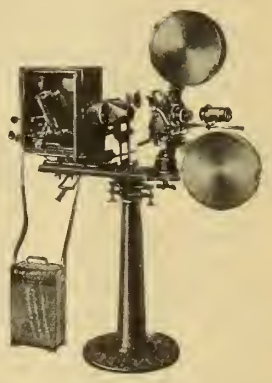
MONEY MUST ACCOMPANY ORDER

These Posters are 8 x 28 inches in size, made of 100-pound enameled paper. Each one showing an actual scene of the most important part of the film, besides a complete synopsis of the story, the name of the film and manufacture.

Owing to the fact that these Posters are being offered at such a low rate, exhibitors should send their orders at once, as the supply is limited

P. H. WILLIAMS, Room 210—35 S. DEARBORN ST. CHICAGO, ILL.

BUILT BETTER RUNS BETTER IS BETTER



THE WILLOUGHBY AMUSEMENTS COMPANY

To Clement Mason, Esq.,
Clement-Mason Cinematograph Co., Ltd., Sydney, Australia.

Dear Sir: It affords me extreme pleasure to inform you of the high regard I hold for your latest importation, namely, THE MOTIOGRAPH. I have operated with all the latest Cinematograph Machines and have come to the conclusion that your MOTIOGRAPH is the essence of that perfection which we operators have long desired. For perfect mechanism, simplicity of action, fireproof qualities, portability, price, and an absolutely flickerless picture I at present fail to see how this machine can be improved upon.

I sincerely trust that this true expression of my faith in THE MOTIOGRAPH may lead to its adoption throughout the Moving Picture World.

Wishing you every success which you richly deserve, I am,

Yours faithfully,
Fred Smyth.

7th June, 1911.

THE ENTERPRISE OPTICAL MANUFACTURING CO.

564-572 WEST RANDOLPH ST. :: :: :: CHICAGO, ILL.

For sale by every Live Dealer

AUSTRALIAN AGENT — Clement Mason, Sydney, Australia

NOTICE !

—I herewith announce the installation of a Free Employment Bureau in the Laemmle Film Service offices. No charge will be made for the employment of Managers, Operators, Pianists, Singers, Ticket-takers, etc. The very highest references are required and the benefit of the entire Laemmle organization is now at your command, either in getting help or work. Write or call, tell what you want and let us do the rest, with our compliments.

NOTICE !

—If you desire to sell, let, purchase or lease a theatre or site in any part of the United States or Canada, get in touch with any of the Laemmle Film Service offices at once. We shall be glad to be of assistance and will make no charge for services.

NOTICE !

—If you are not satisfied with Independent films, it is because you are not getting the right sort of service. Why not hook up with the biggest and best film renter in the world? It doesn't cost you any more and it brings you the kind of program you ought to have. This very day is the best day to take your step toward prosperity.

Carl Laemmle, Pres.

The LAEMMLE FILM SERVICE

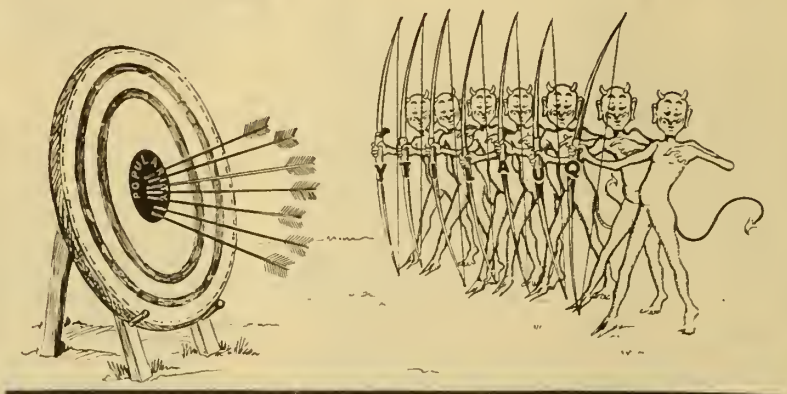
New number

204 W. Lake St., Chicago, Ill.

Sykes Block. Minneapolis, Minn. 1517 Farnam St. Omaha, Neb. 515 Mulberry St. 1110 Wyandotte St. Des Moines, Iowa. Kansas City, Mo.

The biggest and best film renter in the world

Imps Hit the Bullseye Twice Every Week



Think! How many film manufacturers in this wide world have brought out two really good films every week for the past fifty weeks? You can count them all on the thumb of one hand. And that thumb represents the "Imp." What's the use of gambling with uncertain brands of film when you can get a sure thing at no greater cost? Why not get two Imps every week? If you can't get them by fighting for them, why not try paying a little more?

"The Rose's Story"

(Copyright, 1911, by I. M. P. Co.)

Here's a real fall pippin! Completely out of the ordinary, away from the routine. Read the synopsis elsewhere in this issue and imagine what a production such a story has been given by Imp folks! Released Monday, October 2nd.

"Through the Air"

(Copyright, 1911, by I. M. P. Co.)

A real, genuine, blown-in-the-bottle airship races with a chugging automobile in this love story. It will make your patrons sit bolt upright. They'll talk about this film and send their friends to your house! Get it! Released Thursday, October 5th.

HAS YOUR EXCHANGE BOOKED YOU for the

Charleston Hurricane and Flood Scoop?

INDEPENDENT MOVING PICTURES CO. IMP AMERICA

Independent Moving Pictures Co. of America.
102 W. 101st St., New York. Carl Laemmle, Pres.
Important motter is being sent out to our mailing list. Are you on that list?

Demand Two Imps Every Week

MOVING PICTURE MACHINES & LANTERNS

NO GASOLINE OR MANTLE MORE RELIABLE THAN ELECTRIC BRIGHTER THAN CALCIUM

OZO-CARBI LIGHT PATENTED

NO ETHER OR SATURATOR— THE BEST LIGHT FOR LANTERNS AND MOVING PICTURES.

OPENS NEW FIELD FOR MOVING PICTURES.

SPECIAL SLIDES MADE TO ORDER

Moore Bond & Co.

36-N Franklin St. Chicago Ill. Send for Catalogue L.

Another Independent Manufacturer

A new film producing company has been quietly working in the neighborhood of New York City for some time and their product will no doubt be placed upon the market within a few weeks. The personnel of the new concern, the Majestic Film Manufacturing Company, consists of people who are already well known to many of our readers. Mr. H. E. Aitken is president. Mr. Aitken is from Milwaukee and is well known to the trade through his connection with the Western Film Exchange and other enterprises. Thomas D. Cochrane is vice-president and general manager. Mr. Cochrane is known through his former connection with another independent film manufacturing concern, but more so through his activities in connection with the formation of the Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company, of which he was president for the first term. His ability as an organizer, which has been demonstrated, is again shown in the fact that he has gathered together a strong stock company, headed by Owen Moore and Miss Mary Pickford, generally known as "Little Mary." (This, by the way, will explain to many of our correspondents the present whereabouts of this charming actress before the camera.)

Mr. Thomas D. Cochrane.

A World representative buttonholed Mr. Cochrane one day this week as he was hastening to the factory to pass upon a negative. Thomas D. was asked for some facts for publication, but was as secretive as ever and merely said that "the Majestic films would talk for themselves when the time came." This offhand reply was perhaps more convincing to the hearer than if he had listened to a highly eulogistic account of what the Majestic Company intended to do. There are a few evident facts, however, about this company which point to a realization of the prophecy of its promoter. There is the ripe experience of the men at the helm, who no doubt are fully aware of the quality of the product they now have to compete with and also just what the market will absorb; there is the past record and the popularity of the members of the producing company and last, but not least, the fact that the photographic end of matters is in hands which will insure the highest quality in that respect. The World representative was promised an early view of some of the work of the Majestic Company, and our readers may expect to see an impartial review of same in an early number.

Calendar of Independent Releases.

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 25th, 1911.

AMERICAN—The Circular Fence (Com. Dr.) 1000
CHAMPION—The Black Horse Troop of Culver (Mil.) 950
ECLAIR—A Just General (Mil. Dr.) 1000
IMP—The Co-Ed Professor (Comedy) 750
ECLAIR—Through the Dells of the Wisconsin in a Motor Boat (Scenic) 250
YANKEE—For the Wearing of the Green (Dr.) .....

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 26th, 1911.

BISON—Lucky Bob (Dramatic) .....
POWERS—The Falls of Bohemia (Scenic) .....
POWERS—Imaginative Willie (Comedy) .....
THANHOUSER—Lochinvar (Dramatic) .....

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 27th, 1911.

AMBROSIO—Alice's Dream (Comedy) .....
AMBROSIO—Tweedledum's Auto Skates (Comedy) ..
CHAMPION—The Cook of the Ranch (Comedy) 950
NESTOR—The Young Doctor (Dramatic) .....
RELIANCE—For His Sake (Dramatic) .....
SOLAX—How Hopkins Raised the Rent (Comedy) ...

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 28th, 1911.

AMERICAN—The Rustler Sheriff (Dramatic) 1000
IMP—'Tween Two Loves (Dramatic) 1000
REX—The Derelict (Dramatic) .....

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 29th, 1911.

BISON—White Fawn's Peril (Dramatic) .....
LUX—Bill and His Friend (Comedy) 491
LUX—The Little Goatherd (Dramatic) 386
SOLAX—An Italian's Gratitude (Dramatic) .....
THANHOUSER—Love's Sacrifice (Dramatic) .....
YANKEE—Man (Dramatic) .....

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 30th, 1911.

AMBROSIO—The Law of Retaliation (Dramatic) ....
AMBROSIO—A Strange Invitation to Dinner (Com.)
GREAT NORTHERN—The Conspirators (Dramatic).
POWERS—The Half-Breed's Atonement (Dramatic)..
RELIANCE—Weighed in the Scale (Dramatic) .....
NESTOR—Mutt and Jeff as Reporters (Comedy) .....
NESTOR—Getting Even (Comedy)..... .....

NEW FILM CEMENT.

The One-Drop-Oil Co., of Chicago, announce that they have put on the market two kinds of cement under the "Bull Dog" brand; one for N-I film and the other for the common celluloid film. The N-I cement will not work well on celluloid, having a tendency to cause the film to buckle and the common film cement will join N-I film only temporarily. But the new article works well on celluloid film making a strong flat patch which will not buckle. Licensed exhibitors who are receiving both kinds of film, should have both kinds of cement on hand.

ECLAIR DIRECTOR DIES SUDDENLY.

Gaston Larry, technical director of the American Eclair studios, who came from Paris recently to take charge of the manufacturing department, died Wednesday, Sept. 13 after an operation for mastoiditis. The funeral was held at Calvary Church on Sept. 16, and burial was made at Calvary Cemetery, Brooklyn, N. Y. A wife and daughter the latter but ten years of age, survive. Mr. Garry was a man of rare experience in the motion picture business and for six years prior to his engagement with the American Eclair company, he was in the employ of Pathe Freres.

The Board of Trade of Harrisburg, Pa., is considering the introduction of "social centers" for the public in that city with moving pictures as the principal feature.

SEE ADVERTISEMENT ON PAGE 931.

Calendar of Licensed Releases.

CURRENT RELEASES.

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 25th, 1911.

BIOGRAPH—The Revenue Man and the Girl (Dr.) . 999
KALEM—Arizona Bill (Dramatic) 1000
LUBIN—The Matchmaker (Dramatic) 1000
PATHE—The Disappointed Old Maids (Comedy) 490
PATHE—Whiffles' Hard Luck Stories (Comedy) 475
SELIG—Two Orphans (1st Reel) (Dramatic) 1075
VITAGRAPH—By the Camp Fire's Flicker (Dr.)..... 1000

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 26th, 1911.

EDISON—Mary's Masquerade (Comedy) 1000
ESSANAY—Lost Years (Dramatic) 980
GAUMONT—A Friend of the Family (Comedy) 850
GAUMONT—The City of Bordeaux, France (Scenic) .. 175
PATHE—Pathe's Weekly No. 39 (Topical)..... 1000
SELIG—Two Orphans (2nd Reel) 986
VITAGRAPH—His Sister's Children (Comedy) 1000

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 27th, 1911.

EDISON—A Cure for Crime (Comedy) 1000
ECLIPSE—The Trials of a Tall Traveler (Comedy) ... 458
ECLIPSE—Manufacturing Fireworks (Industrial) 542
KALEM—Hal Chase's Home Run (Dramatic) 1000
LUBIN—A Cowboy's Love (Dramatic) 1000
PATHE—Driven from the Tribe (American Dramatic). 1000
VITAGRAPH—A Western Heroine (Dramatic) 1000

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 28th, 1911.

BIOGRAPH—Her Awakening (Dramatic) 997
ESSANAY—The Power of Good (Western Drama) ... 980
LUBIN—A Counterfeit Roll (Comedy) 1000
MELIES—The Mission Waif (Dramatic) 1000
PATHE—Gypsy Honor (American Drama) 1000
SELIG—Two Orphans (3rd Reel) (Dramatic) 1090

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 29th, 1911.

EDISON—The Death of Nathan Hale (Educational) ..1000
ESSANAY—When He Died (Comedy) 980
KALEM—The Blackfoot Halfbreed (Dramatic) 1000
PATHE—The Bell Ringer of the Abbey (Fairy Tale) .. 615
PATHE—Across the Polar Seas (Scenic) 397
SELIG—John Oakhurst, Gambler (Dr.)..... 1000
VITAGRAPH—Ninety and Nine (Dramatic) 1000

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 30th, 1911.

EDISON—The Maiden of the Pie Faced Indians (Com.) 500
EDISON—Turning the Tables (Comedy) 500
ESSANAY—The Strike at the Little Johnny Mine (Western Drama) 980
GAUMONT—Hearts May Be Broken (Dramatic) 1015
LUBIN—A Nearsighted Chaperon (Comedy) 1000
PATHE—A Convict's Heart (American Drama) 1000
VITAGRAPH—Her Hero (Comedy) 1000

ADVANCE RELEASES.

MONDAY, OCTOBER 2nd, 1911.

BIOGRAPH—Too Many Burglars (Comedy) 499
BIOGRAPH—Mr. Bragg, a Fugitive (Comedy) 497
KALEM—The Phoney Strike Breakers (Comedy) 1000
LUBIN—His Stubborn Way (Comedy) 1000
PATHE—Little Moritz Is Too Short (Comedy) 525
PATHE—Rangoon, India (Scenic) 400
SELIG—A Summer Adventure (Dramatic) 1000
VITAGRAPH—Our Navy (Topical) 1000

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 3rd, 1911.

EDISON—Eugene Wrayburn (Dramatic) 1000
ESSANAY—Grandma (Dramatic) 1000
GAUMONT—Jimmie's Midnight Flight (Com. Dr.) ... 675
GAUMONT—Ajaccio, the Birthplace of Napoleon .(Sc.) 325
PATHE—Pathe's Weekly No. 40 (Topical) 1000
SELIG—The Rival Stage Lines (Comedy) 1000
VITAGRAPH—The Wager (Comedy) 1000

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 4th, 1911.

EDISON—The Summer Girl (Comedy) 1000
ECLIPSE—A Jealous Wife (Comedy) 338
ECLIPSE—The Grand Chartreuse (Scenic) 292
ECLIPSE—Ezra and the Fortune Teller (Comedy) ... 348
KALEM—The Saving Sign (Dramatic) 1000
LUBIN—The Idle Boast (Dramatic) 1000
PATHE—Crazy Dope (American Com.) 663
PATHE—Circus in Australia (Scenic) 325
VITAGRAPH—The Mate of the "John M." (dramatic). 1000

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 5th, 1911.

BIOGRAPH—The Making of a Man (Dramatic) 1000
ESSANAY—Master Cupid, Detective (Dramatic) 1000
LUBIN—His Exoneration (Dramatic) 1000
MELIES—The Stolen Grey (Dramatic) 1000
PATHE—The Squaw's Mistaken Love (American Dr.). 1000
SELIG—Maud Muller (Dramatic) 1000

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 6th, 1911.

EDISON—Foul Play (3 reels) (Dramatic) 3000
ESSANAY—The Sheriff's Decision (W. Dr.) 1000
KALEM—The California Revolution of 1846 (Dr.) 1000
PATHE—Flirts (Com. Dr.) 813
PATHE—Trained Dogs (Novelty) 180
SELIG—The Artist's Sons (Dramatic) 1000
VITAGRAPH—Carr's Regeneration (Dramatic) 1000

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 7th, 1911.

EDISON—Leaves of a Romance (W. Dr.) 1000
ESSANAY—Townhall Tonight (W. Com.) 1000
GAUMONT—The Upward Way (Dramatic) 726
GAUMONT—Cinta, a Picturesque Town of Portugal (Scenic) 269
LUBIN—Revenge Is Sweet (Comedy) .....
LUBIN—From the Field to the Cradle (Ind.) 1000
PATHE—For Massa's Sake (Am. Dr.) 1000
VITAGRAPH—Ups and Downs (Comedy) 1000

NEWS BRIEFS.

Moving picture houses have been made safe by state regulation and improvements in machines. Now the thing to do is to keep out of such amusement places those who cry "wolf" without cause.—Clinton (Mass.) Item.

Atlanta Court of Appeals has stamped with approval the ordinance which the city council enacted some months ago, and which requires that ladies shall remove their hats in local theaters after 6 p. m. The court says it is constitutional, and that goes.

The U. S. Indian office at Washington, D. C., becoming alarmed at the high death rate among the tribes from infectious diseases, due to ignorance, has decided to instruct the red man in hygienic ways of living by means of moving pictures.

The National Film and Distributing Co., of New York, has opened a branch office in New Orleans, located at 823 Union Street, under the management of Mr. H. W. Lamb.

SEE ADVERTISEMENT ON PAGE 931.

WARNING

All persons are hereby notified that H. T. May is not a solicitor for the Moving Picture World. Do not pay money to him under any circumstances. When last heard from he was in Boston, Mass. Information as to his present address will be appreciated.

—Moving Picture World

THE POSTER PROBLEM SOLVED

—742—

Our opening week found 742 customers on our list. Letters and telegrams arriving daily establish the truth of our last week's announcement that we have really "Solved the Moving Picture Poster Printing and Distribution Problem." The Department of Police, City of Detroit has issued a bulletin to film manufacturers and makers of film posters. Our Posters are not offensive in any way and will pass the strictest censorship. Our company is composed of exhibitors who know the exact requirements fully. We know by experience and have studied conditions carefully. We have a mission to fulfil—To give ourselves and ten thousand other exhibitors throughout the country a satisfactory and improved Poster Service. We wish to cooperate with all Exhibitors' Alliances and Associations. No contracts required. Our Poster Service is placed wholly upon its merits. Full Standard one-sheet size—28 x 42; no special frames necessary. No preliminary expense. Just plain $2.00 per week in advance, and we send, express charges prepaid, to any point in the United States a set of 36 colored posters. One for each of the 36 licensed releases.

EXHIBITORS POSTER SERVICE
611 First National Bank Bldg. Chicago, Ill.

EXHIBITORS, YOU NEED

SPECIAL

inducements for your customers. The regular service of

FILM

does not help you in your business. Your neighbor shows the same. Our furnishes nothing but specialties and such films as have never been exhibited before. Wake up and write for particulars, the time is

COMPANY

LIMITED

First Come, First Served

SPECIAL FILM COMPANY, Ltd.
5 West 14th Street New York City

W. Stephen Bush

Has prepared and may be engaged to deliver special, complete LECTURES on

"Dante's Inferno"
(5 REELS, MILANO FILMS COMPANY)

"The Crusaders
or Jerusalem Delivered"
(4 REELS, WORLD'S BEST FILM COMPANY)

Lectures on All Features

SPECIAL NOTICE: On Friday, October 6th, the Edison Company will release a three reel production, consisting of a dramatized version of the great story, "Foul Play," by Charles Reade. Exhibitors running a three or four reel program are in a position to make these releases the subject of a "special feature night with lecture." In view of the decided successes scored by artistic films of greater length, both in moving picture houses and in the big theaters of the country, it seems quite probable that such a feature will prove a source of profit. I have prepared a set of press notices and matter for announcement slides, which will be sent to every exhibitor who wishes to have them in connection with my services as lecturer. If unable to come myself, I am in a position to send a competent substitute, but will endeavor to answer all calls personally as far as possible. Send applications at earliest possible moment.

W. Stephen Bush
Care of Moving Picture World
125 East 23rd Street New York City

A DAYLIGHT CURTAIN

INSTALLED FREE OF CHARGE

As an introduction of the Tisdale Enterprizes to the Moving Picture trade, one of our specially prepared "Daylight" curtains will be given away free of expense to one theatre in each city.

The Tisdale curtain is not an aluminum screen, nor a metallic preparation, but a substantially constructed curtain of specially prepared chemicals, warranted to produce the finest results and assuring clear pictures, with proper perspective, depth and tone.

BE THE FIRST IN YOUR TOWN—by writing today for our special free offer.

The F. M. Tisdale Enterprises
Curtains Advertising Slides
Special Attractions
401 Chemical Building Chicago, Ill.

HALLBERG, "THE ECONOMIZER MAN" Exchanges NEW MACHINES FOR OLD!

Stop Tinkering Your Old M. P. Machine. Write me, stating Make, Factory Number, and Condition of your machine, also what make of new machine you desire—I WILL DO THE REST!

Any Old Machine Will Project a Picture. Any OF the Latest Models Will Give You a Good Picture. When Used in Connection with the Hallberg Standard Economizer, You Get the Best that Money Can Buy, Not only in Saving on Your Electric Bill, but in Quality of Light on Screen. If You Are Using any Other Make of Current Saver, Write for my Exchange Proposition for the "Hallberg," Stating Make You Have, and Particulars of Your Current.

All makes Moving Picture Machines, Supplies, Electra Carbons Etc., always in stock.

Electric Fans for either A. C. or D. C. - $7.50 and up
Exhaust Fans for either A. C. or D. C - $15.00 and up

Complete line of Opera Chairs and all supplies for M. P. Theatre

I EQUIP YOUR THEATRE COMPLETELY -:- WRITE FOR CATALOG W. 6

J. H. HALLBERG, 36 East 23rd St., New York

INQUIRIES

Correspondents are advised that no attention will be paid inquiries which do not give the name and address of the writers. For the purpose of reply, initials or noms de plume may be used.

Inquiry as to the private affairs of photoplayers will not be answered. This includes the question aa to whether or not they are married.

No inquiries of a general nature will hereafter be answered by mail and only in apecial cases when a stamped self-addressed envelope is enclosed. Many correspondents ask the same question and we have initiated this department to save our own time and yet help out our readers when we can.

Arthur:—We understand that the Lubln Western pictures were made not far from the home studio, but they certainly have all the earmarks of the Rocky Mountalu product. (2) James Young Deer, the Pathe Western director, is not a newcomer. He was previously with the Vitagraph, Blograph and Lubin companies.

X. Y. Z.:—The soldiers in Melies "The Immortal Alamo" were not "Texas Rangers." They were the pupils of a military school famous throughout the Southwest. The pictures were made in and about the Alamo, but there were some scenes that of uecessity were made in the studio. (2) The company is now in California, horses and all.

G. M. A.:—We are glad to know that you are "an interested reader of The Moving Picture World," but your request for information on writing a photoplay suggests that your interested perusal overlooked the series of elght storles recently rnn dealing with this subject.

Author:—Sometimes manufacturers pay $100 for a script and even more when the theme is worth it, but $35 or $40 is more apt to be the top price and $25 is good. Compared with the regular magazine prices the pay at those rates is good.

G. M. K.:—The Gaumont has no American studio as yet. It is probably the Eclair company. They are building.

K. L. Y.:—No, Arthur Johnson was not recently killed. While we are about it, Miss Turner is not dead. Mr. Costello is not dead. Miss Pickford is not dead. Miss Lawrence is not dead. Marion Leonard is not with any picture company. The man who looks like Costello is Leo Delaney. Frnnk Lanning is not au Indian. This will settle the rumor clnb for this session.

Louie:—Thc lady is Muy Hotalling. She is not a newcomer to the Lubin forces, though it is comparatively recently that she has appeared prominently lu thc pictures. She has heen playing in Luhin productions off and on for several ycars.

A. B. N.:—The Edison Crusader pictures were made last spring while the company was in Cuba.

J. R.:—Adele de Garde and Kenneth Casey, of the Vitagraph, are not related. (2) Miss Gladys Fields is the Essanay leading woman in the Western product. (3) See answer to K. Y. L. ahove.

Excited:—Frank Dayton of the Essanay company is no novice. He scored a hit in "The Lost Paradise," followed Henry Miller in the lead in "Shenandoah," and had other important parts in the Charles Frohman companies. (2) The stout comedian is Henry Cushman, whose theatrical activities were largely confined to the Pacific slope, where he was for long with the Tivoli Opera Company. (3) No matrimonial information.

Pater:—It is possible that a future issue will contain some reference to a home picture machine. In any event the Edlson Company will presently put an entirely practical machine on the market, using gas or electricity. Special films will be used.

B. M. B.:—Charles M. Seay and John W. Cumpson were the antagonists in Edison's "A Famous Duel." (2) Paul Kelley, not Kenneth Casey, was the boy in the Vitagraph's "Jimmie's Job."

D. E. M.:—It was a real Jap in Edison's "His Misjudgment." (2) Thomas W. Henshew wrote the story and the Edison company developed the scenario. It appeared in the Associated Sunday Magazines about a year ago. (3) Mr. Henshew is an English writer.

M. N.:—There was no trick in the shooting in "Back to the Primitive." The animals had been condemned to death because of bad temper and were utilized in the picture, so it was neither a trick nor wanton destruction. (2) Miss Williams is not an animal trainer, merely a nervy actress.

L. P. G.:—The Selig fire pictures were made in Los Angeles last Spring. By arrangement with the Fire Department the Selig company was ordered out on second alarms until the required scenes were obtained.

Mrs. N. V. S.—Florence Finch was the Widow in Vitagraph's "The Woes of a Wealthy Widow." (2) Miss Turner has not been "replaced" as leading woman for the Vitagraph. There are several leading women since there are five releases each week. (3) See answer to K. Y. L.

Edna:—Miss Gene Gauntier was the leading woman in Kalem's "Rory O'More." She will be the lead in all of the Irish subjects. She makes a dainty colleen, but she is an American. See answer to K. Y. L.

F. K. E.:—The I. M. P. company can let you have a photograph. We do not know the price. Write and ask them, enclosing a stamped envelope for a reply.

M. P. G.:—Zena Keife was the girl in the Vitagraph's "The Long Skirt." (2) The Powers company is advising its contributors that it wants only Indian and Cowboy stories.

A. G. D.:—Miss Pickford was still with Imp the last we heard. (2) See answer to K. L. Y.

F. Z. F.:—George and Judson Melford, of the Kalem company, are father and son. (2) Edison's "The Star Spangled Banner" is not a part of their historical series. It was issued for the Fourth of July. (3) Mary Fuller is still with the Edison company.

August.:—The Pathe Freres have no patent on Micro-cinematography. They have made a specialty of this work and other manufacturers courteously leave the field to the discoverers. The pictures are made in the French studio.

Regular:—See answer to K. Y. L.

B. R. T.:—William Shea is the Davy Jones of the Vitagraph series. Miss Mabel Normand was the Betty, but she is no longer with that company.

T. N. M.:—Miss Rita Davis has not heen with the Lubin company for several months. (2) Spottiswoode Aiken is the character man you mention. (3) Noah Reynolds was Archie in "Archibald the Hero." George Reehm was the desperado in the same film.

V. Y. W.—Customs differ in different studios. Not all the scenery is black and white. Different light tones are used in place of white to break the deadness, and some studios even use scenes painted in colors. The days of the dead white and intense black are gone, we hope, forever. Some interiors are now made with stock doors and windows and are papered after the scene is set up. It is a slow method, but effective. Apply to any manufacturer, stating your experience.

G. M. L.:—It was Helen Gardner, not Florence Turner, who played with Charles Kent in the Vitagraph's "The Death of King Edward III.

Amy, A. B. T. L. A. S. G. G.:—Most companies demand stage experience and the absolute novice stands no chance whatever with scores of experienced players awaiting opportunities. Better save time and postage and give up the idea.

Adele:—Address the player in care of his company. We cannot give personal addresses.

J. H. A.:—It is Frederic Sautley who played the Bertie parts. He is still with the Kalem company. (2) Who told you that Alice Joyce was a member of the original juvenile Pinafore company? We do not believe that she had yet been added to the census when the original craze started.

A. D. C.:—Photoplays are not produced with the scenes in regular sequence, but all scenes in one setting are played before the next is taken up unless this involves a change of costume and the same costume is used in adjacent sets. This last only applies to the studios where there is plenty of room for several sets for each director.

Fan:—You'll recognize Hal Chase in the Kalem film featuring him. It is the actual player and not a photographic double. There is a law about photographing persons that was not intended to apply to photoplays, but which does, that would operate against a fake even if the Kalem company was disposed to fake, which it is not. Be assured that it is Hal himself. Why worry so early? The reel has not yet been released.

Dion:—See answer to K. Y. L.

I. D. M.:—The Pathe vaudeville pictures are French music hall stars. The "Long and Short" picture apparently featured the "Marco Twins" or some team which has appropriated that act. It appears, however, to be Jim Marco. (2) The American studios of the company confine themselves to American photoplays. We do not believe that they would care to take American vaudeville, but you might communicate with the company.

Chink.—A Japanese has been used in several Edison pictures, and the Pathe Freres have offered a play written and produced by Japanese actors. There are probably other films in which Japanese players have been seen.

G. M. B.—The most popular leading woman in the film companies is _____. You can fill in the blank to suit yourself.

Nan.—There is no law that we ever heard of, prohibiting the use of babies in the film.

SEE ADVERTISEMENT ON PAGE 931.

Yankee Film Co., New York City
Gentlemen:-
A word of praise for your excellent film "The Star Reporter". This picture pleased them from "Soup to nuts". Make a few more like this one and we will try and buy the building next door, to accomodate the crowd. Giving you plain facts, this was the greatest of its kind I have ever seen and is sure to please many other exhibitors who may not get time to let you know.
Hoping to get more of them and wishing you continued success.
Very truly yours,
TOM MOORE,
The Moore Amusement Co.,
Plaza Theatre,
Washington, D. C.
MONDAY FRIDAY
Greater Pains are taken in the small details of the YANKEE Productions than in the main data of other films.
OCTOBER 2
She Never Knew
An exceptionally pretty photo-play of a lost gift which brought happiness to a young and neglected wife.
Code word "She"
Beautifully Toned and Tinted
OCTOBER 6
The Goose Girl
A rural drama portraying a country boy's loyalty amid trying difficulties.
Code word, "Goose"
Toned and Tinted Throughout
YANKEE FILM CO.
344 E. 32nd St., New York City

Build a Bigger Business

The way to do it is to give better pictures than "the other fellow." And the way to show the best pictures is to use the

Bausch and Lomb Projection Lens

This is the perfect moving picture lens—the result of our fifty years of experience in lens manufacture. Brings out every detail of the films perfectly—makes it a pleasure to see them—instead of irritating the eyes with flashy, streaky, spotty pictures like the ordinary lens gives. You can get bigger crowds and keep them—you can build a bigger business and so make more money with the Bausch & Lomb Projection Lens.

Write for our interesting Booklet 00 on Projection Lenses. It contains a host of useful information about moving picture work.

Our name, backed by over half a century of experience, is on all our products—lenses, microscopes, field glasses, projection apparatus, engineering and other scientific instruments.

Bausch & Lomb Optical Co.

NEW YORK WASHINGTON CHICAGO SAN FRANCISCO
LONDON ROCHESTER, N.Y. FRANKFORT

W. E. GREENE FILM EXCHANGE, Inc.

The Oldest and Largest Independent Film Exchange in New England

Notice to Exhibitors

We are prepared to take care of any amount of summer business in New England. You don't have to worry about your film service when you are trading with us; we do the worrying for you. The pick of the output of the Sales Co. is at your service. Write, wire or call at

W. E. Greene Film Exchange
INCORPORATED
228 Tremont Street, Boston, Mass.
Telephone 3790 2187 Oxford

Our Entire Stock

And present purchases consist mainly of the world famous Scott & Van Altena and DeWitt C. Wheeler slides, hence a service from us means the very best to be had in the line of high class photography, varied posings, and beautiful coloring. Such a service combined with our absolute guarantee to furnish only one theatre in each city, (Chicago excepted) should appeal to you. We ship your entire weekly supply of sets in one consignment.

¶ Rental rates and catalog upon request.

CHICAGO SONG SLIDE EXCHANGE
6th FLOOR, POWERS BLDG.
37 So. WABASH AVE. - Dept. 1 - CHICAGO, ILL.

Licensed Film Stories.

ESSANAY.

GANDMA (Oct. 3).—Clinton Reeves, a young city broker, plans a year's tour of Europe on business and intends to take his young wife with him. The four-year old daughter, Helen, is the only obstacle to their trip, but Grandmother Reeves writes them from the farm, that she will be delighted to have the little one atay with her while they are away. This is agreed to and a week later Helen goes to the farm to visit grandma. The little girl, although petted and pampered by her father and the servants at their city home, has never really known true motherly affection, and the tender, unselfish love bestowed upon her by the old lady on the farm soon makes her forget her society mother in Europe. When Reeves and his wife return from Europe they immediately send for Helen and it is with great reluctance and many tears that the little one bids her grandma goodbye. Mrs. Reeves, Jr., notices the change in her daughter, who pines for the freedom she enjoyed on the farm, and devotes as much time as her social duties will permit to Helen. This is very little, however, and Clinton, finally exasperated at his wife's neglect of the baby, scolds her for it. They are in the height of their quarrel when grandma enters and is shocked and disheartened when she learns the cause of it. After the arrival of grandma, however, Helen is happy. But her mother is incensed and jealous and accuses the old lady of alienating the baby's affections. It is soon made clear to the mother that Helen will love her just as much if she bestows a little more time to the child's pleasure, which she resolves to do and with happy results. Grandma, having accomplished her purpose, again returns to the farm, happy at the result of her missionary work.

MASTER CUPID, DETECTIVE (Oct. 5).—In the office of George Reese & Co., brokers, there are employed two clerks. For some time Reese has missed money, but refuses to believe that either one of his apparently trustworthy young men should prove to be a thief. Taking pains that neither Morgan or Davis shall know of his investigations he sets a trap, resolved to bring the matter to an immediate conclusion. Calling up the National Detective bureau, he asks for a detective. In the meantime Gladys Reese, the daughter of the employer, calls on her father. As she is waiting for an opportunity to see her father she finds a note addressed to Morgan from another brokerage firm demanding money to cover margins on certain investments the young man has made. When she learns later that her father has lost certain sums of money she resolves to play the detective and catch the thief. Learning that the National Detective bureau has charge of the case, she visits the manager of the concern and obtains permission to work on the case. The next morning she goes to work at her father's office, dressed as a boy. Neither of the clerks suspect her identity and when Morgan, seeking to place the blame of former robberies on Davis, and rifling the cash box puts a roll of bills and the key to the box in Davis' pockets, she watches him and at an opportune time slips the key and money into Morgan's overcoat pocket. Reese discovers the new theft and sends for a policeman. Davis is first searched and Morgan's chagrin and surprise is easily noted. Morgan is then searched and the money found on him. As he is dragged away by the policeman, Gladys pulls off her wig and makes known her identity.

THE SHERIFF'S DECISION (Oct. 6).—Steve Jameson, a cowboy, is having a lonely meal on the range one day when suddenly he is surprised by a stranger, who rushes covertly out of the bushes and begs him, in an excited manner, for food. The newcomer is a Mexican and his strange demeanor and excited manner suggest to Steve that he is a fugitive. Hastily bolting the food and water the young fellow runs on, while Steve looks after him curiously. Not until ten years later do they meet again. Steve, who is now sheriff of the county, is in love with a Mexican girl, Nita Sanchez. Steve's love-making is handicapped by her other admirers, five or six cowboys, but Nita's father always contrives to get rid of the other undesirable suitors to give the sheriff an opportunity to win his daughter. One day a Mexican musician, giving the name of Manuel Garcia, comes to town and is taken by the boys to play for Nita. Nita soon loses her heart to the handsome young troubadour and the two plan an elopement. They are surprised by the sheriff, however, as they leave the Sanchez home, who finally resolves to give up the girl to the man she loves. All this time Steve has been puzzling over the Mexican's face, which seems hazily familiar to him. Try as he will, however, he is unable to recall where he has seen the young Mexican before, until, when he arrives back in town, he is handed a telegram from the sheriff in a neighboring town, asking him to arrest one Manuel Garcia, wanted for a murder committed some ten years before. Like a flash the truth comes to Steve and he recalls the chance meeting between him and the fugitive Garcia on the range ten years before. Quickly turning his horse, Steve rides to the country parson's home, arriving just in time to stop the wedding and to arrest Garcia. Despite Nita's pleas to release her lover, Steve refuses to yield and drags the criminal away with him to jail.

TOWN HALL, TONIGHT (Oct. 7).—Another of the Essanay's funny "Snakeville" comedies. Two wandering Thesplans, whose one lone trunk bears the legend "Schulz Brothers, In Vaudeville," are hitting the grit back to New York. They are sore and tired when they reach "Snakeville," they decide to stop over night, and if fortune favors them to give a performance and get enough money to ride back to Broadway. Thereat they bill the town and make ready for the performance at the Town Hall that evening. Their efforts to please the critical Snakeville audience are futile and before they have rendered their first selection the audience howls them off the stage and all leave. Furthermore, the management in the box office has decamped to the "Red Eye" saloon, with all the proceeds of the performance and they are in as bad a fix as before. The next morning one of them is arrested for stealing a pie from a kitchen window and thrown into jail. The other, the little short fellow, plans to get him out and masquerades as old mother. She then visits the sheriff and informs this latter that "she" has just arrived from the East looking for her wandering son. The photo shown the sheriff is that of the prisoner in the jail. The sheriff is easily moved to release the prisoner and starts a collection to get the poor fellow and his dear old mother back East. Not until they are safe on the back end of the platform of the departing train does the "old lady" reveal her identity. Then pulling off her wig, she does a few capers and the huncoed citizens on the station platform fall in each other's arms.

KALEM.

THE PHONEY STRIKE BREAKERS (Ost. 2).—Hugh, foreman of a cattle ranch, is in love with Molly, his employer's daughter. While Molly reciprocates his affection she is inclined to put him off. Hugh, thinking that he must resort to something desperate to win her love and consent to marry him, conceives the idea of calling a fake strike on the ranch. He straightway goes to Mr. and Mrs. Blanchard for whom he is working and tells them his plans. Looking upon Hugh with favor as a future son-in-law, they decide to help the plot along. Hugh calls a council of the cowboys and sets forth his scheme, little knowing that Molly from around the corner of the barn was learning their plans in detail. Molly decides to start a counter plot. Mounting her horse she rides to various nearby ranches and collects a party of girls. Equipping themselves with complete cowboy outfits they start for the Blanchard ranch. Then when the cowboys start their phoney strike Molly and her strike-breakers ride on to the range and do the strikers' work. This takes Hugh and his friends by surprise and they ask the Blanchards what these men are doing and on being given a non-commital answer Hugh and his cowpunchers ride after the supposed strike-breaking cowboys and learn to their consternation that they have been hunconed and that the strike-breakers are girls.

THE SAVING SIGN (Oct. 4).—Brown goes prospecting with an Indian as his guide. When they camp for the night, Brown sees the Indian going through a sacred rite and asks the meaning of it. The Indian explains it is the sign of the Great Spirit, handed down by his fathers and brings good fortune.

Next day Brown discovers gold and the Indian attributes it to the "sign." When they return, after Brown has left notice of his claim, he informs his wife and daughter, Ruth, of his discovery. Brown is inclined to be superstitious and shows Ruth the "sign."

The Indians become hostile and the settlers and prospectors move into a stockade. Ruth objects to the discipline and decides to run away. She is captured by Indians, but leaves an unmistakable trail by dropping her beads, cap and apron.

At the Indian camp, the savages prepare to hang Ruth by the thumbs. We see the settlers observe Ruth's absence and follow her by the trail. When Ruth's hands are unbound at the stake, she looks upward and makes the "sign." The Indians are amazed. The settlers arrive just as the Indians are thrown into consternation by Ruth's "sign." The Chief delivers her to the white men and buries a tomahawk as a sign of peace. We see Ruth taken home as the Chief kneels over the buried hatchet and solemnly repeats the "sacred sign."

THE CALIFORNIA REVOLUTION OF 1846 (Oct. 6).—Felicia disagrees with her father, Commandant Vallejo, as to whom she will marry. Her father has picked out Senor Juarez as a suitor, but she is in love with Harry Cutler, a young American.

A note sent by the American to Felicia falls into the hands of Juarez. Juarez waylays Cutler, assaulting him and leaving him for dead. The American, however, is found by friends and nursed back to health. Cutler plans to outwit Juarez by raising the Bear Flag, capturing Sonoma and proclaiming the California Republic.

Felicia and Juarez's wedding day is set. As it approaches, Cutler writes Felicia to delay the wedding as long as possible. The wedding day arriving, the Americans make their raid, capture the town and instead of Juarez, Cutler marches to the altar with the beautiful Spanish Senorita, Felicia.

The Bear Flag, adopted as the official ensign of California at the late session of the State Legislature, was first raised by a band of thirteen American settlers in 1846 when they seized the Pueblo of Sonoma, then commanded by General M. G. Vallejo, and there proclaimed the California Republic.

LUBIN.

HIS STUBBORN WAY (Oct. 2).—Samuel Blumstead, a grouchy, orders his wife to stop fanning herself, shut the window, and also made his daughter, Myrtle, stop playing the piano, as he claims it gets on his nerves. He also made Edward, a friend of Will, who is Myrtle's sweetheart, stop playing the piano when he called. Will, seeing that it will be a difficult problem to ask for the hand of Myrtle, concocted a scheme in which Edward is to pose as Myrtle's sweetheart. Edward put the question to Mrs. Blumstead, who promptly gave her consent. In the meantime, Will made the old man understand that his father was a great friend of his, and further cultivated his acquaintance by playing chess and allowing himself to be beaten by old Blumstead. Will, eventually, asked Mrs. Blumstead for the hand of Myrtle, who refused, having given it to Edward. Mr. Blumstead, immediately vetoed his wife's desires, and gave the hand of Myrtle to Will, the real lover.

THE IDLE BOAST (Oct. 4).—A farewell banquet was held by a number of college men, at which they agreed to meet ten years later and tell of their successes or failures. One of them, Bob Livingstone, in a spirit of bravado, declared that unless he was a millionaire by that time he would shoot himself.

Fate seemed to take his jest in earnest, for within a few years Bob's brokerage firm had failed and he was penniless. Before this occurred Bob had fallen in love with Mae, his pretty stenographer. She clung to him in his adversity and later they were married, Bob having secured a position as bookkeeper. Life went rather hard for the ambitious young man and his lot seemed even more bitter when he read of the big financial coup made by Jack Norton, one of his classmates. He had become a millionaire. His wife was his one comfort.

The ten years passed and Bob received an invitation to the anniversary banquet. Ashamed of his failure, he was unwilling to attend until Mae persuaded him to do so. After dressing he placed a loaded revolver in his pocket. At the banquet Jack Norton told with great gusto the story of his success in amassing a great fortune. Bob's thoughts were very bitter. Just as the successful Norton was finishing his speech there was a knock on the door. A detective entered and ordered Norton and his partner to follow him. The two millionaires had gained money, but not within the law. Soon after the officer had taken them out two shots were heard—they had killed themselves.

Bob awakened to the fact that money is by no means everything in the world. He went home completely changed, realizing his own great wealth in the possession of a good home, a loving wife and a beautiful child.

HIS EXONERATION (Oct. 5).—John Morgan, a banker, married the second time, thereby getting a stepsou by the name of Charles, whom he employs in his bank. Charles accidentally discovers that his stepfather is short $50,000, and knowing that he loves his wife dearly, takes the blame for the shortage upon his shoulders.

Charles soon arrives in California. He falls in love with Marjorie, the daughter of a ranch owner. Jake Kilrain is also a suitor for her hand. One day, Charles, calling at his sweetheart's home, meets Kilrain, and in an altercation knocks him down. Kilrain, reading a New York newspaper, discovers a piece which says that the police are looking for Charles. He shows this to Marjorie, and threatens to deliver her lover into the hands of justice, unless she consents to marry him. Their engagement is soon announced.

Harry, Marjorie's brother, overheard Kilrain boasting of how he made Marjorie come to him. Harry secures a copy of the paper, thereby getting the name of John Morgan. Harry wires him to the effect that his stepsou is in danger of being brought to justice. Later he receives a telegram from Mr. Morgan, saying that his son is not to blame. Morgan then succumbs to a bullet from his revolver.

Harry informs Charles of his deed, and together they ride to the church at which the wedding is to be held. They arrive just in time

Announcement Slides
We Make The Classiest Slides ever shown on any curtain.
They are New and UP TO DATE.
Send for SAMPLES of our work
CLEAVELAND SLIDE CO.
Davey Bldg Washington C.H.,O.

WURLITZER

55TH YEAR 55TH YEAR

Wurlitzer Piano Orchestra built in the front of the Gaither Theater, Cincinnati

The Leading Picture Theaters are Installing

Wurlitzer Automatic Musical Instruments

They furnish better music than musicians and cut out that great expense. 50 different styles. Call at nearest branch or write for big 84-page catalog

THE RUDOLPH WURLITZER COMPANY

CINCINNATI	CHICAGO	NEW YORK	PHILADELPHIA
117 to 121 E. 4th	266 & 268 Wabash	25 & 27 W. 32nd Bet. B'way & 5th Av.	1835 Chestnut
ST. LOUIS	CLEVELAND	BUFFALO	COLUMBUS, O.
913 Pine	306 Prospect	701 Main	57 E. Main

CINES CO. of ROME

Studios and Factories, Rome and Padova

CAPITAL { Preferred Stock Lire 2,000,000
Ordinary Stock, 3,750,000
Fully Paid-up Lire 5.750.000

EXCHANGE MEN WRITE TO US FOR PARTICULARS OF OUR FIRST RELEASE

Branch for the United States of America

445 Broome St., cor. Broadway

New York City

TELEPHONE, SPRING 9232

TELEGRAPHS, CINES NEW YORK

No. E-405. List $10.50.

Ask discounts of your Electric dealer. If he does not carry, write us direct.

Engineering Reports Free.

"DAYLIGHT PICTURES"

WITH ANY CURTAIN OR MACHINE

AT SMALL COST WITH

The Eye Comfort System of Indirect Illumination

Since the first advertisement in this paper, a few months ago, theatres in all sections of the country have installed this system. All enthusiastic, and acknowledge that theatre lighting has been revolutionized.

Even illumination throughout your theatre can be obtained without a light in range of vision.

No glaring side lights to detract from the detail of your picture, and more perfect depth and perspective are assured.

Our engineering department will furnish you, free of expense, reports and recommendations on request.

BETTER LIGHT AT LESS EXPENSE

Investigate—Write today

NATIONAL X-RAY REFLECTOR CO., 235 Jackson Blvd., Chicago

Gentlemen:—Send full information regarding lighting of our theatre.

LENGTH ..... WIDTH ..... CEILING HEIGHT .....

NAME ..... ADDRESS .....

before Marjorie says the word that would be irretrievable. Explanations follow, in which Charles is exonerated from the false charge, and is married to Marjorie.

REVENGE IS SWEET (Oct. 7).—Deacon Detwald found two tramps loafing on his property and ordered them away. When they refused he called a constable and had them arrested. But the Deacon had overlooked Lazy Bill, who was nosing under a wagon. Lazy Bill was a patriot in Hoboland and he determined to revenge his pals. He found an open window in the Deacon's house, from which he could reach a suit of the Deacon's clothes. Lazy Bill quickly donned the somber garments of respectability, then he set off happily to the emporiums of certain wine and liquor dealers. He gave liberal orders for beer, wines and spirits to be delivered at the Deacon's address. Then he notified the minister of the Deacon's church to call at the Deacon's home.

When the Parson arrived the wet goods were being delivered. Oh, horror! Oh, hypocrisy! Was it possible that the good man was a secret inebriate? The Deacon tried to explain, but what were explanations in the face of facts in bottles and jugs and demijohns? The Deacon's wife entered and promptly fell in a faint. This was too much even for Lazy Bill, who was peeping through the window. He scrawled an explanatory note and sent it in. The Deacon's reputation was restored; his wife regained consciousness, the Minister's suspicions dissipated; everybody was happy, including Lazy Bill.

FROM THE FIELD TO THE CRADLE (Oct. 7).—An interesting industrial picture of greatest educational value, showing the process by which milk is delivered to the millions. It shows the safeguards erected by sanitary scientists to protect health; the old unsanitary methods are also shown. The modern system pictured includes mechanical milking, the handling in the dairy, filtering, weighing, cleaning and sterilizing the bottles by machinery, filling them, loading the wagons, delivering the milk to the customer, filling baby's bottle and "quick lunch," in which the baby is doing his part.

SELIG.

JOHN OAKHURST, GAMBLER (Sept. 29).—John Oakhurst, a gentleman gambler, long identified with early Western life, meets Alma. His admiration and love for the young girl are true and sincere. Carried away by the glamour of the gambler, she jilts George Clarry, her former sweetheart. Later, at the gaming tables, Murphy and Davis attempt to rob Oakhurst of his winnings, but their plans are frustrated by George. Oakhurst realizes he is unworthy of Alma's innocent love and he shows his manly character and gratitude by reuniting the young couple. He then departs, heavy-hearted, but a bigger, better and stronger man for having known a real woman.

A SUMMER ADVENTURE (Oct. 2).—College over, Jack Zimmerman bids his sweetheart, Emily Payne, goodby for the summer and goes to work as one of his father's surveyors. Emily visits her parents on the farm. Jack's travels bring him in the vicinity of the Payne farm. Emily has taken her little brother, Philip, out for a walk in the woods, unaware that it is infested by wolves. She meets Jack and they go for a ride in his auto. Philip is forgotten. The father, returning home, encounters the wolves, who tree him. He shouts for help, and Jack comes to the rescue. Now, thoroughly frightened, they search for little Philip. At last they find him, fast asleep in the lair of the absent wolves, a little wolf cub clutched tightly in each arm.

THE RIVAL STAGE LINES (Oct. 3).—Mary Cameron and John Rydon become engaged. Charley and Harry, rejected suitors, go to Nevada and become rival stagecoach owners. Mary and John both arrive in Sage. John offers the express contract to the stage making the fastest time between there and Cactus. Mary says she will favor the one who wins.

Charley has arranged with some cowboys to hold up his rival's stage in fun, and the same plan has been adopted by Harry, who arranges with some friendly Indians. The plans miscarry, each band holding up the wrong stage. During the ensuing mixup John gets up on the stage and drives off, arriving at Cactus first himself, thus winning the girl.

MAUD MULLER (Oct. 5).—With all that poetic charm of which Whittier was absolute master, he pictures to us a midsummer day's casual meeting between Maud Muller, a simple country lass, and the Judge, refined, dignified, and born to the purple. The Judge tarries a moment by Maud's bay deh to quaff a cup of spring water. Perchance he lingers a little longer than necessary, at any rate, as they separate each becomes conscious of a pitiful longing that has lodged in their hearts. The years roll on—Maud marries a man unlearned and poor, the Judge weds a woman of his own caste, who lives for fashion, while he lives for power, and still, in the heart of both the Judge and the country lass there lingers that aching void—that pitiful yearning that will never realize satisfaction—and many a time and oft into the mind of each comes this thought, "And of all sad words of tongue or pen, the saddest are these: 'It might have been.'"

THE ARTIST'S SONS (Oct. 6).—Rob Wagner, one of the foremost painters of this country and author of this scenario, personally supervised this production at the Selig Studios in Los Angeles. The producer's ideas dominate this picture, correct in every detail. Mr. Wagner's own children played the sons. Every property and picture used in the enormous studio and gallery scenes were brought direct from Mr. Wagner's studio. The portrait canvases alone are valued at over $10,000. The story is sweet and lovable and is imbued throughout with a wonderful realism and picturesque atmosphere. The story takes us in rapid succession through scenes in the artist's home, studio, gallery, etc., and gives us an intimate view of that much envied, and much misunderstood land of enchantment—the artist's bohemia.

ECLIPSE.

A JEALOUS WIFE (Oct. 4).—Jack, the husband, receives a letter announcing the proposed visit of a certain Fifi. Ethel, the wife, reads the note. References to Fifi's fondness for Jack leads Ethel to reproach him bitterly. She decides on suicide and takes the contents of a bottle labeled "poison." Fortunately a cautious servant had replaced the contents by water. Jack forthwith sends for a doctor, but the proceedings are interrupted by the maid, who explains the substitution and announces the arrival of Fifi, a tiny toy dog.

THE GRAND CHARTREUSE (Oct. 4).—A famous Carthusian monastery of France, better known under the name of La Grande Chartreuse. It is situated about fourteen miles north of Grenolde at a height of 4,268 feet above the level of the sea.

The film takes us first through the town of Chartreuse, then along one of the wonderfully well made French mountain roads and up through the hills to the monastery, which, by the way, was founded by St. Bruno in 1084 and the buildings of which were erected in 1676.

EZRA AND THE FORTUNE TELLER (Oct. 4).—A trick production which will find particular favor in these days when subjects show such a tendency to become stereotyped. Novel in every scene and full of effects which baffle description. It is a triumph in the art of stagecraft and is assured a hearty reception wherever shown.

GAUMONT.

JIMMIE'S MIDNIGHT FLIGHT (Oct. 3).—Jimmie and Toto on their return from school Friday evening hand their report cards to their parents, and sad to relate, Jimmie is very reluctant to show his. We are not surprised at this when we see that he has not received even one good credit for his work at school. His father after scolding him harshly threatens him with dire punishment if he doesn't mend his naughty ways, and sends him off to bed. Jimmie, very wrathfully, steals away from home and soon overtakes a company of gypsies, who induce him to join them. He joyfully does so, but soon learns that he will have to work hard to earn a living. They dress him in ragged clothes, and send him out to beg.

One day, tired and thirsty, he passes a farm and notices a woman milking. Watching his chance he creeps into the yard and seizes the milk pail and refreshes himself with a good drink of the sweet new milk. The farmer's wife catches him in the act and has him arrested. The gendarmes hustle him homeward, where he is welcomed by his very anxious and worried parents, and finally pardoned. Jimmie is very repentant and makes up his mind to be a better boy in the future.

AJACCIO, THE BIRTHPLACE OF NAPOLEON (Oct. 3).—Ajaccio is the chief town of Corsica, one of the departments of France. It is located on the west coast of the island, and has a harbor well sheltered on all sides save the southwest. The principal buildings in the town are the cathedral, the town house and the citadel. It was in Ajaccio that Napoleon Bonaparte was born. In fact, his old home is still standing and very well preserved. The people who are very loyal to his memory erected a statue in his honor in 1850.

THE UPWARD WAY (Oct. 7).—This film deals with the life of Giovanni Battista Lully, the Florentine violinist, who was born in 1633 and died in 1687. When he was seventeen years old, he left his home in Italy and went to Paris, where he found a place in the orchestra of the French Court. Although friendless and a stranger, his strong personality and decided originality in the composition of music, soon made a place for him in the artistic circles of the French capital, which afterward led to wealth and honor.

He was a contemporary of Molière, in fact they were friends, and Lully composed interpretive music for several of Molière's dramas. He is the author of some twenty operas, which held the attention of the public of his day, and many of them are now played with great success. He introduced several new instruments into the orchestra, and took the leading part in many of his own operas.

CINTRA, A PICTURESQUE TOWN OF PORTUGAL (Oct. 7).—Cintra stands at the foot of a rocky mountain and is remarkable for the picturesque beauty of its situation and the healthfulness of its climate, which renders it a favorite resort of the wealthier inhabitants of Lisbon. On one of the adjacent summits stands the Penha castle, erected by King Ferdinand of Coburg on the site of a former convent, and on another are the ruins of a Moorish castle. There is also an ancient royal palace described as a medley of Moorish and Christian architecture and long famous as the summer residence of the court.

EDISON.

EUGENE WRAYBURN (Oct. 3).—We see the meeting of Lizzie, the progress of her love for Wrayburn, the introduction to Bradley Headstone and his growing jealousy, Lizzie's escape from London and attempt to hide herself so that Wrayburn shall not find her. We see the little doll's dressmaker, her friend, give Wrayburn the address. We see him find her, followed by Headstone and finally Headstone's attack upon Wrayburn and the lock-keeper, whose suspicions have been aroused by Headstone's dress, which is a duplicate of his own, following him and witnessing the crime. We see Lizzie's rescue of the unconscious Wrayburn as he goes down the river with the tide, Headstone's terrible death as he and the lock-keeper struggle beside the canal and eventually, locked in each other's embrace, plunge in together. And last of all, we see Wrayburn's awakening to the fact that he really loves the girl and there is a happy ending.

THE SUMMER GIRL (Oct. 4).—Jack seems to be the favored suitor of the Summer girl, until one day when Brown arrives upon the scene and tries his level best to outdo Jack. Jack takes her to a dance, where Brown immediately monopolizes her company, leaving poor Jack without a partner. Brown also "butts in" when Jack is taking her out rowing.

Jack's turn for revenge has come at last. Brown makes an appointment with the "Summer Girl" to meet at their trysting place 3 p. m. Two hours previous to his appointment with the girl, a friend of his asks him to go swimming for a little while. Brown asks Jack to accompany them, but he feigns a headache. While the two are in the water, Jack dresses as a lady and sits on a bench beside their clothes. When it is time for them to emerge, they find to their amazement that they cannot reach their garments, as the lady (who is Jack) is sitting beside them, so they remain in the water.

After sitting there for some time, Jack leaves for the hotel, discarding the female attire on the way. At the hotel he meets the girl, who is very much put out by Brown's conduct, and swears that she will never speak to him again. She keeps her word, and Jack is the happy winner.

FOUL PLAY (3 reels) (Oettober, 6).—Part 1. Arthur Wardlaw, the son of a rich London merchant, graduates from Oxford heavily in debt from gambling. Under a plea of lending his tutor, Robert Penfold, money, he forges his father's name to a check for a large amount drawn to Robert's order, getting the latter to cash it and gives him the amount above the loan. The crime is laid to Robert, and as Arthur fails to help him he is sentenced to five years' servitude in exile. Arthur is engaged to marry Helen Rolleston, the daughter of General Rolleston.

Part 2—Robert Penfold, under another name, is a convict on parole in Australia. Arthur Wardlaw, who has involved the firm of Wardlaw & Son by speculation, arranges to have a ship belonging to the firm scuttled for the insurance. Through a strange series of happenings Helen, Arthur's fiancee, sails on this very ship and Robert saves her. They are cast on an uninhabited island.

Part 3—General Rolleston arriving in London finds to his horror that his daughter, Helen, has been wrecked at sea. He starts to search the ocean for her. Meantime Robert and Helen are living happily on their island and a mutual love has sprung up. Robert has dispatched a number of wild ducks with messages attached giving their location. Through one of these the general finds them. In the closing scene, an unusually strong one, Arthur is confronted with his double villainy, a great wrong is righted and Robert Penfold comes into his own.

LEAVES OF A ROMANCE (Oct. 7).—In the film we see a young woman and her father, Eastern people of means, at a hotel in the far West. In the party is a young man, whose marked attentions to the girl are obviously not to her liking. One day while sauntering along she is perplexed as to the right path to take. Pausing at a brook she meets a young Westerner, who is resting with his horse, and asks him the directions. The easiest way is straight across the brook, and gallantly he assists her across. This leads to a little conversation and it is evident that there is a mutual attraction. A few days later the young Eastern man, while out walking with the girl, becomes so offensive in his attentions that she starts to go home alone. This does not deter him and it is getting to a point where she is almost in fear when the young Westerner appears on the scene and interferes. The news of this reaches the girl's father, who is strongly in favor of a marriage with the Eastern man, and in order to keep his daughter from any further communication with the Westerner, decides to leave for the East in the morning. The young girl, distressed at leaving her Western admirer, manages to send him a leaf from her scrap book. The rest follows as it properly should. The Westerner assists the girl to escape from their hotel in the evening and they go on horseback to the nearest minister, where they are married.

BURN
25 TO 40%
LONGER THAN ANY OTHER

All Things Can be Improved Upon
—EVEN CARBONS
A genius—the greatest expert carbon maker, produced

GIVE ⅓ MORE LIGHT
ON SAME CURRENT

BIO CARBONS
RECOGNIZED STANDARD

THE MOST RELIABLE FRIENDS OF THE PROGRESSIVE OPERATORS

MILWAUKEE
114-116 Huron St.

CHARLES L. KIEWERT CO.
NEW YORK, 165 Greenwich Street

SAN FRANCISCO
19 Sutter St

MOVING PICTURE MACHINES SOLD ON EASY PAYMENTS

Write us for full particulars. Here is your chance to start in the moving picture business on a small investment, or if you are already in the business you can buy yourself a new machine without missing the money. We are moving picture specialists. Write us regarding anything pertaining to the business.

Muncie Film and Supply Co.
202 1-2 E. MAIN ST. MUNCIE, IND.

American Moving Picture Machine Co.

MANUFACTURERS OF THE

STANDARD

Automatic Moving Picture Machine

101-102 Beekman Street New York

FIGHT FOR IT

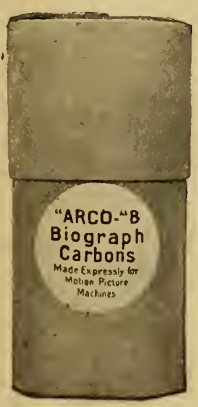
BIDS are invited for the American exhibition rights of the film depict ng the fight between Bombardier Wells and Jack Johnson in England for the championship of the world. This film will be a box office winner.

Address B. M. P., care of M. P. World

NOW BOOKING
EASTERN STATES ONLY
LOUISE M. MARION
IN HER OWN NOVELTIES
PATRIOTIC AND ILLUSTRATED POEMS
REFINED ENTERTAINING
TERMS REASONABLE

LOUISE M. MARION
PRESENT ADDRESS
29 South 12th Street Newark, N. J.

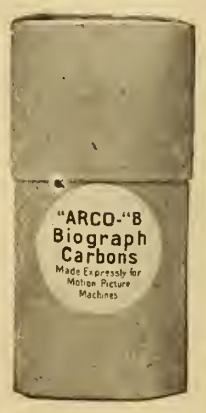
Great Novelty and Drawing Card



THAT'S THE STUFF!!

THE ORIGINAL BIOGRAPH
CARBONS
THE SPECIAL BRAND FOR PICTURE MACHINES
See that your packages and labels are as shown on cuts

L. E. FRORUP & CO., Importers
232-234 GREENWICH ST. NEW YORK



VITAGRAPH.

THE MATE OF THE "JOHN M." (Oct. 4).—Jim, the mate of the ship "John M.," is in love with Mandy, the daughter of Captain Dale. Before she leaves for boarding school, she hurries to the ship to say goodbye to it, her father and Jim. Six years have now passed, and Mandy has grown to a big and handsome girl. As Captain Dale is going to make another trip, Mandy asks him if she cannot go along. Mandy's school chum's brother wishes to go also, and the Captain gives his consent. Jim grows a little jealous at the young man's presence on board.

The ship strikes a rock, tearing a big hole in it, and causing the water to pour rapidly into it. The crew, together with the Captain, his daughter and Mandy take to the small boats. All can get in with the exception of Jim, who shows his willingness to stay with the old ship.

The boats carrying the shipwrecked crew are soon picked up by a passing vessel, and Captain Dale and his daughter eventually arrive at Cape Cod their home. Mandy cannot forget Jim, and continually visits the shore in the hope of seeing him. Her hope is soon gratified, and as the film ends, we see her clasped in his arms with old Captain Dale caressing them.

CARR'S REGENERATION (Oct. 6).—John Carr is discharged from the hospital cured. Through a friend, he secures a position working at the Public Playgrounds. Carr is a veritable "grouch." He is disrespectful to the women who visit the grounds and worse to the children.

When John Carr realizes what his ugly temper and disrespect for others means, his conscience asserts itself and he tries to make amends by a complete regeneration, which he gradually brings about, and we behold in him a changed man, no longer despised, kind to the children and with a higher regard for the feelings and authority of others.

UPS AND DOWNS (Oct. 7).—Unless Marion Norman's intended husband can support her in the same style in which her father has, Mr. Norman will not agree to her marriage with Billy Wallace, and threatens to disinherit her if she disobeys him. Marion has been a spoiled child and used to having her own way and she marries Billy.

They start housekeeping on Billy's small income and they certainly have their "ups and downs" when the young wife tries to do her own housekeeping and furnish her home with all the luxuries to which she has been accustomed. Regardless of their income, she insists upon flowers for the table, which breaks the bank, and notwithstanding, orders all sorts of choice delicacies from the butcher, the baker and the candlestick maker. When she finds her wardrobe diminished, she does not hesitate, but secures on credit whatever she needs.

She puts her clothes to soak in the tubs, lets the water run over and almost floods the house. She burns her hands while trying to cook and between bills and ills, she is in a pretty bad way. At last she is obliged to tell her father of her predicament. He has had time to think over his harshness in opposing his daughter's marriage and in disregarding her position, and he quickly avails himself of the opportunity to show his better nature by coming to her rescue and helping the young people get on their feet and live happily and comfortably.

OUR NAVY (Oct. 3).—In this reel we are given a fine view of our Jack Tars at work and at play aboard ship. In the washing down of the decks they do it all with a vim. The coaling of the great battleship "Delaware," just previous to sailing for the naval parade of the coronation exercises of King George the Fifth, although a very laborious task, there are many amusing features in the doing of it. Their target practice at Chesapeake Bay is extremely interesting and exciting. One incident that is particularly interesting, is the launching of the new battleship "Florida," as it is released from its stays and glides majestically down the ways into the water and floats triumphantly on its surface. After labor comes the pastimes of the Jackies, and they rush out on the diving spar and leap like so many toads into the cooling bath-tub of the universe, and sprlug from the side rails like a swarm of bees.

Visiting day, when all their friends call upon them, is a privilege that they all enjoy. Submarine inspection affords a pretty sight. Boxing is indulged in for the sake of the sport, and they put up some very good bouts. Periodically they have their entertainments of all sorts. One of the most entertaining is the amateur minstrel show, in which the talent of the ship display their originality and ability, pulling off some pretty good stunts in a very pretty and comfortable theater especially arranged for the occasion. In their short leave they get a cup of "happiness" is full and they enjoy it to the limit and so does everybody else who sees them cooking the lies of their liberty.

THE WAGER (Oct. 3).—This is a good one, and is worked out by Masters, who wagers Macy [illegible] to Gladys, that he will kiss her when Macy is not [illegible], on their wedding day. The occasion is a dinner party of champagne. To this dinner party all the friends are witnesses at the invitations sent out by Masters, who wagers Macy [illegible] to Gladys. Macy tells Gladys about the wager and asks her guard. She is very much annoyed at Masters' presumption, and does not [illegible] when she meets him.

[illegible] for an engagement party, to which all her young friends are invited. She is anticipating a visit from an elderly aunt from the country, whom she has not seen for years, and who is very anxious to be present at this occasion. As an additional affront to Masters, he is not invited, but learning of the aunt's expected visit, he disguises himself as the aunt, and during the festivities, he is ushered into the room. His disguise is perfect, and Gladys welcomes him, introducing him to Macy. The "old lady" takes Gladys in her arms, and as a matter of deference, asks Macy of "she" can kiss his fiancée. Naturally the young man gives his consent, and Masters deliberately places a resounding osculatory impression upon the lips of the fair Gladys.

Just after this has occurred, the real aunt appears upon the scene. At first there is a lull and then there is an outburst of surprise. Explanations are demanded by Gladys and Macy, which are answered by Masters, taking off his bonnet and wig. At first Macy is angry, but the guests tell him that the joke is on him, that he has lost his wager, and he might as well admit it. Gracefully Macy accepts his defeat, shakes hands with Masters, and everything goes merrily on, with renewed zest and increased jollity. Later, down at the club, the wager is paid and the boys all drink to the health of Gladys' aunt.

MELIES.

THE STOLEN GREY (Oct. 5).—Frank Donald, a young Englishman, who spent his summers at his Western ranch, was fond of taking long rides through the woods on his favorite mare, a beautiful grey. On one of these occasions, he left the grey by the roadside, whilst he made his way through the thickets to the brook to drink. Pedro, a half-breed, was eagerly waiting this opportunity, and when Frank stooped to drink, made away with the mare.

Several months elapsed when Dolan, a respected ranch owner, visited a camp of horse dealers and purchased a beautiful grey mare, with which he surprised his daughter, Doris. She tried out the mare, and upon returning, tied it in the front yard, while she sought her father, to express satisfaction, and thank him for the beautiful present.

The ever alert Pedro, now saw his chance to divert suspicion. Knowing that Donald followed close behind, with some cowboys, he slipped a branding iron on the grey's saddle as it stood in Dolan's, and rode hastily away on his own horse. Dolan noted Pedro's strange actions and gave chase.

Scene from "The Stolen Grey" (Melies).

Meanwhile, Donald and the boys discovered the grey and the tell-tale iron at Dolan's. Doris innocently told them in which direction her father had gone, and they immediately followed. Donald, however, remained to claim the mare, much to Doris' surprise. Upon learning the truth from her, he realized with horror that a horse thief's fate was about to befall an innocent man. Directing her to ride the grey, he mounted his own horse, and together they rode madly to stay a hastily formed sentence.

The rope was already about Dolan's neck when Doris and Frank came into sight. The grey stopped short. Doris took steady aim, the rope cracked, and Dolan fell to safety. Pedro, the real culprit, was then sought, while Frank remained to receive the father's thanks and the daughter's admiration.

BIOGRAPH.

TOO MANY BURGLARS (Oct. 2).—Mrs. Brown is decidedly careless with her jewelry, leaving it lie around in easy access to any one who might enter. Wishing to teach her a lesson, Mr. Brown writes a letter to his actor friend to enter his house as a burglar to scare her. But on second thought Brown decides to play burglar himself. While, however, finds the letter and sends it, and [illegible] a real burglar appears upon the scene, who thanks him for hubby's friend and treats him royally. The actor enters almost simultaneous with Brown, and, each thinking the other the real article, a fight ensues. Meanwhile, the real burglar, hearing the skirmish, flies to a clothes closet until he is forced out by moth powder. The episode ends happily for everybody but the real burglar.

MR. BRAGG, A FUGITIVE (Oct. 2).—Bragg has the physical culture fad, but when it comes to a showdown he weakens. Shame, however, forces him to resent an insult offered Mrs. Bragg by the butcher, and he punishes him. The meat purveyor falls, and Bragg, getting blood on his hand, thinks he has killed him, and for a while is a self-accused fugitive from justice. Mrs. Bragg, with the aid of the police captain, keeps up the hallucination, until he is cured of his "strong-arm" mania.

THE MAKING OF A MAN (Oct. 5).—A barnstorming company is playing at the village theater and a young girl becomes fascinated by the leading man. There is a dance given during the stay of the company in the town, and the girl meets the actor, who attends. His the old story—her infatuation grows into love. Her father, who has a terrible aversion for actors, becomes almost despotic when he finds that his daughter is smitten with the actor, and his unreasonable discipline causes her to leave home to follow him. The actor realizes that he hoastly loves the little girl, and so he marries her at once. Her father, however, forces her back home as she is under age. The actor determines to make himself worthy of her, and his ambitious efforts meet with success. He returns to claim his wife, but is told she is dead—for she was considered dead by her family when she finally left home in search of him. Fate, however, brings them together in a most unlooked for manner.

PATHE.

LITTLE MORITZ IS TOO SHORT (Oct. 2).—Little Moritz, bearing a letter of introduction to a gentleman with a charming daughter, makes his appearance at the house to ask him for the young lady's hand, but is cruelly turned down by the girl's father, owing to his insignificant size. In despair, Moritz casts about him for some means of increasing his stature, and finally spying a pair of stilts, proceeds to don them, and likewise appears of elongated dimension, and makes his reappearance at the house, where he amazes everybody with his surprising growth. His petition is granted, and everything is progressing beautifully, only poor Moritz falls over and can't get up; this, of course, leads to the discovery of his duplicity, but the father, appreciating a good joke, grants his permission now.

CRAZY DOPE (Oct. 4).—A certain chemist, with a weird looking assistant, has discovered a series of elixirs which have the wonderful property of increasing a man's efficiency in the direction in which his natural abilities turn. An advertisement brings a tremendous number of clients; a musician, an artist, an orator, an actor, and finally a pug fist. This last gets so pugnacious that he cleans out the entire shop, all but the weird assistant, who, finding himself alone, goes into the laboratory, and mixing all the elixirs, takes a drink. It is absolutely impossible to describe the result.

SQUAW'S MISTAKEN LOVE (Oct. 5).—An old miner, leading some of the younger men across the mountain to the gold fields, permits his daughter to accompany him, in the disguise of a man. She and another are left in charge of their camp, while the miners seek for gold. The camp is surprised by the Indians, however, and the old man's daughter and her companion are taken prisoners by the Indians. Things look mighty bad for them, but the Indians have not counted on a strange love affair; one of the squaws falls in love with the girl dressed in man's clothes, and this leads her to help them to escape. As they do they are pursued, which leads to a pretty fight between the Indians and the miners, and a real love affair between the girl and her companion in trouble.

FLIRTS (Oct. 6).—Two girls and two fellows, officers in the army, think they are all deeply in love, and many are the promises that are exchanged and sad the partings when they are ordered to join their regiment; each vows undying fidelity to the other. But the officers make love to other girls, and the girls accept the attentions of other fellows, and things are in a fair way to become badly mixed for life, when the disappointed couples meet. Each is angry with the other until they all recognize the fact that they are in the same boat, when loving explanations end in reconciliations for all concerned.

FOR MASSA'S SAKE (Oct. 7).—Col. St. Clair, being on his deathbed, leaves his entire estate to his son Harry, except for 8 niggers Uncle Joe, his wife and their six sons, to whom he gives their freedom. Harry retains them in his employ and later has reason to be thankful for having done so. Harry has a wild passion for gambling, and, finally losing $10,000, which he cannot pay, signs notes for the amount, to be paid by 4 o'clock

ADVERTISING SLIDES
We claim to produce the CLASSIEST Advertising Slides ever shown. Send for SAMPLES.
CLEAVELAND SLIDE CO.
125 Court Street, Washington C. H., Ohio

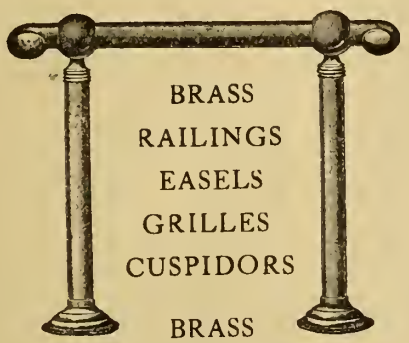
SLIDES that ADVERTISE

Particulars on request

EXCELSIOR SLIDE CO.

61 West 14th Street New York City

McKENNA



BRASS
RAILINGS
EASELS
GRILLES
CUSPIDORS

BRASS
KICK PLATES
STAIR TREADS, DOOR SILLS

McKenna Bros. Brass Co.

PITTSBURGH, PA.

In Answering Advertisers Kindly Mention
Moving Picture World

Make your own local Moving Pictures

For the theater manager, for the lecturer, scientist and for the manufacturer at large. New Moving Picture Cameras, Printers, Perforators, Developing outfits, Tripods, Tilts, large and small, Winders, Rewinders, Measurers, Menders, latest Projecting machines and single arc dissolvers, negative and positive film stock, perforating, printing and developing done, special lenses—best equipped laboratory and machine shop in the world. Send for descriptive catalogues why you should make films,

EBERHARD SCHNEIDER

219 Second Ave. near 14th Street. New York

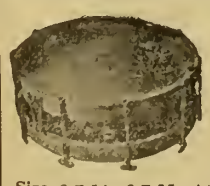
Machines and Films For Sale

3 Second-hand Power's Machines, $90 to $170
1 Newly Rebuilt Head - - - $50
6 Second-hand Edison Machines, $85 to $110
Lot of Films For Sale Cheap

MAYER SILVERMAN
105 Fourth Ave., Pittsburgh, Pa., U. S. A.

We Offer 300 more to the Trap Drummers

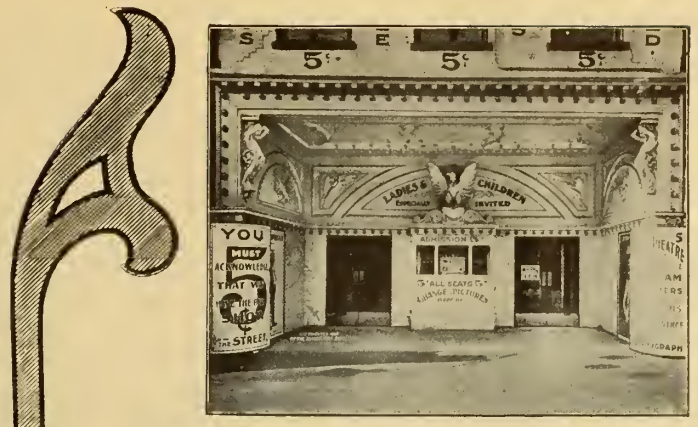


Get your order in at once. At our special offer price—$10.0

This high-grade Orchestra Drum, 10 thumb screw rods, transparent drum heads, solid shells, maple, rosewood, walnut.

Size, 3 x 14—3 x 15—4 x 15—4 x 14. This offer for September and October.

E. P. Zeidler Drum Co., Cleveland, O.



Ornamental Theatres

PLASTER RELIEF DECORATIONS

Theatres Designed Everywhere

Write for Illustrated Theatre Catalog. Send us Sizes of Theatre for Special Designs

The* Decorators Supply Co.

2549 Archer Avenue :: CHICAGO, ILL.

When Your Picture Machine Needs Repairing

Why don't you send it to us?

We have the best equipped machine shop in the country and can repair any make of machine. Write us and get acquainted.

We buy second hand machines.

GEO. M. HOKE SUPPLY CO., 176 N. State St., Bet. Lake & Randolph Chicago, Ill.

In answering advertisements kindly mention
THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD

When You Open the Season Get

Hoff's Photoplayer Slides

Beautiful Photographic Lantern Views of the Leading Picture Players.
The following are now ready:

SET A Edison Players	SET B Kalem Players	SET C Lubin Players	SET D Vitagraph Players
Mary Fuller	Gene Gauntier	Florence Lawrence	Florence Turner
Mabel Trunelle	Alice Joyce	Arthur V. Johnson	Maurice Costello
Marc McDermott	Carlyle Blackwell	Eleanor Caines	Charles Kent
John R. Cumpson ("Bumptious")	Robert G. Vignola	Harry C. Meyers	Julia Swayne
William Bechtel	George Melford	Albert McGovern	Van Dyke Brooke
Herbert Prior	Jack J. Clark	Spottiswoode Aitken	William Shea

PRICES	In Sets	Assorted	PRICES	In Sets	Assorted
Per set of six	$2.50	$3.00	Per dozen	$4.00	$5.00

Sent securely packed in patent damageproof case to any part of the United States on receipt of price.

JAS. L. HOFF, Prop. P. O. Box 70, Madison Sq. Sta. New York

the following day, promising to forfeit his estate if he cannot meet his obligation. Old Uncle Joe, knowing Harry's inability to pay, sells himself and his family into slavery, and turns the amount of purchase money over to his young massa, to meet his obligation. Harry eventually goes West, earns a fortune in the gold fields, and comes back to rescue his faithful servants from a cruel master and the drudgery of the cotton fields.

PATHE'S WEEKLY, NO. 40 (Oct. 3).—Sandy Hook, N. J. The convention of the governors of the United States at Spring Lake, New Jersey, visit Fort Hancock with their families, to witness the target practice of the 12-inch disappearing guns. The projectiles weigh over half a ton each, the powder charge is 266 pounds (4 bags of 69 pounds each), and the moving target is about eight miles away. Four shots fired and three hits. Cost $1,200.00 for each discharge.

London, England. Although the dock strike is over, troops are still on guard at the railway stations.

Geneva, Switzerland. Thomas A. Edison motoring through the Alps.

Trieste, Austria. The Austrian battleship Viribus Unitis, is successfully launched.

Syracuse, N. Y. President Taft speaks at the State Fair to 40,000 people.

Atlantic City, N. J. The Shriners hold their annual convention in the City by the Sea. The Lulu Temple of Philadelphia, leads the procession.

New York, N. Y. Calbraith Rodgers leaves on his attempt to cross the continent from New York to San Francisco in an aeroplane, for the $50,000 prize.

Watong, Oklahoma. The second annual Arapahoe and Cheyenne Indian Fair. A portion of the camp. Two-mile race for braves, changing horses and saddles at the end of one mile. The starter—An Arapahoe Indian. Representatives of the Cheyenne nation pass in review. Competition in cleanliness and costuming for a $3.00 prize.

Independent Film Stories

AMBROSIO.

THE MASK OF THE RED DEATH (Sept. 23).—The city of Naples is in the grasp of the plague, and the terrified people are mowed down by the awful disease. The king with his court flees to a distant castle, where death is mockingly defied, behind locked doors. Death, a shadowy spectre, carrying his scythe, stalks into the castle, presenting a weird and awe-inspiring sight, and casts the plague upon all except a poor woman and her two little children, whose pleadings moved the king to take them along and who, alone, prayed to be spared.

ALICE'S DREAM (Sept. 27).—Alice, a beautiful dressmaker, musing on her hard lot, falls asleep and dreams that she was the heart of a wealthy admirer, who lavishes his wealth upon her. Through an accident, her face becomes terribly disfigured, and her lover abandons her. She awakens as her sweetheart, a poor but honest workman, calls, and realizes that his loyal heart is worth more than all the riches in the world.

RELIANCE.

THE WAY OF A MAID (Sept. 23).—Helen Jenkins loves a minister, but her father wishes her to marry Van Buren, a wealthy young man. He writes a letter to the minister, telling him his daughter is engaged to Van Buren, and the minister disappears. Helen finally yields to the pleadings of Van Buren and becomes engaged to him. One day, while working in the slums, she discovers the minister preaching in a mission. Explanations are made. Van Buren releases her from the engagement, and Helen weds the man she loves.

FOR HIS SAKE (Sept. 27).—To save her artist lover from starvation, a young girl weds a rich old man, who buys his pictures. Not knowing her sacrifice, the artist becomes famous and publicly snubs the girl. On his death-bed the old man sends for the artist and divulges how he forced the girl to marry him and the lovers are reconciled.

BISON.

LUCKY BOB (Sept. 26).—Farrell is discharged from the construction company and Bob gets the job. Bob wins the favor of Nell, the superintendent's daughter, incurring the enmity of Jack, the foreman, who loves her. Jack bribes Farrell to tamper with the hoisting drum, causing a serious accident and Bob, in charge of the machine, is blamed. Nell, however, has seen the plotters and denounces them. Farrell confesses, and Jack, escaping, is pursued by the sheriff's posse in sensational scenes and lassoed.

WHITE FAWN'S PERIL (Sept. 29).—The Medicine Man sends the warriors out for an Indian princess to be used as a sacrifice. They capture White Fawn, killing her lover, and return to their camp. The victim is tied to stakes and a fire kindled about her. Great Bear, who has fallen in love with the pretty captive, cuts her bonds, throws her in a canoe and escapes, pursued by the frenzied Indians. After a sensational chase the two reach White Fawn's tribe, and the pursuers are forced to turn back.

REX.

THE DERELICT (Sept. 28).—Frank Blake, a young fisherman, walking by the sea, comes across a few bodies washed ashore from a wrecked vessel out upon the waters. One among them, a girl, is still living, and at once he carries her to his cottage, where he and his mother resuscitate her. The girl is the girl of his dreams, the incarnation of his ideal, the consummation of vague visions born in fairy wreaths of smoke in the hill of twilight hours. And as time, the greatest of all aviators, flies by, he learns to love her as a man loves but once in his life. Day by day she regains more of her health and strength. He proposes, when——

A villager finds a chest, washed ashore from the wreck, and brings it at once to the Blake home. With much excitement the villagers open it and discover in it the log of the ill-fated ship. The secret is out—the girl is found to be a leper, who was being transported to an isolated island when the wreck occurred.

The father demands that the girl leave at once, but the lover tells of his determination to go with her. In spite of the girl's protestations and her plea to stay with his father, he leaves with her and they both put out in a boat, headed for a little island. That night, as he is sleeping in the rude temporary camp he had constructed, she weighs in her mind the man's sacrifice for her, and determines to pursue the only course at her disposal to alter his. She goes back to the remorseless sea that had before yielded her up, to be its own bride forever.

SOLAX.

HOW HOPKINS RAISED THE RENT (Sept. 27).—Tom Hopkins, broke, hungry and out of work, is told by his landlady that he must pay his room rent or get out. He salves her along and leaves the house to see what the cold world has to offer. He meets a fat lady with many bundles, and politely stepping aside to allow her plenty of room, he bumps into a rubbish barrel, tearing a big hole in his trousers. Hungry, no job, and now his clothes are to the bad, he walks on down the street until attracted by the food in a restaurant window. After much pondering, he decides to take a chance—go in and eat, and then—— Tom orders a goodly meal, thinking he "might as well be hung for a sheep as a lamb." He eats his fill and when the waitress punches a check, to kill time he closely examines it. His fingers happen to locate a small nail protruding from the edge of his chair. He looks at it, then at the tear in his trousers, which has been covered by his coat. Ah! Ha! an idea. "Nail in chair—Tear in Trousers"—Why not? Tom suddenly rises, discovers tear. The proprietor is called, who generously takes Tom's check and tears it up. Tom is still indignant and proprietor slips him five. Tom accepting under protest. Proprietor offers Tom a cigar, but he takes several, and after lighting one and warning the proprietor against such "carelessness" he starts for home.

Landlady, with frozen face, meets him at front door, but is all smiles when Tom nonchalantly hands her the five. He passes up to his room, in good standing now, to repair the rent that raised the rent, and enjoy another perfecto.

AN ITALIAN'S GRATITUDE (Sept. 29).—Toney, his wife, and two beautiful children, are of the better class of Italian street musicians. Daily they play before the house of Dr. Wilson, whose little daughter Mabel, becomes very friendly with the Italian children.

Toney's little boy is seriously injured while climbing to a window for pennies. Dr. Wilson saves the child's life, but it is left a cripple.

Later, while the musicians are playing near the doctor's house, little Mabel is run down by a heavy truck. Toney, grief-stricken, followed by his family, carries the child home. Later she dies. Toney and his wife decide they are to blame for the death of the doctor's child, and argue that as the doctor saved their child and they killed his, they owe him a child. They offer their eldest, a beautiful child of Mabel's age, to the doctor. He is greatly touched by Toney's generosity, and craving a child's love, the doctor does not take the girl, but accepts the crippled boy.

After that Toney and his family play before the doctor's home and the children blow kisses to each other.

LUX.

BILL AND HIS FRIEND (Sept. 29).—Bill is invited to a fancy dress ball by a friend, who arranges to meet him at nine o'clock. His friend is to be dressed as a bear. Some other friends get to know of this fact, and procure a real live bear, which they place in the merry one's way as he trips to the ball. In his light heartedness he easily imagines that it is his friend inside the bear-skin. Consequently the real bear has a good time as Bill liberally endeavors to quench his friend's thirst, imagining it to be dry work shut up in such a skin. The bear is a fine specimen and also a good actor.

THE LITTLE GOATHERD (Sept. 29).—A little child leaves her grandparents and leads her goats to pasture. She meets a wandering artist, who wishes to paint her portrait. They repair to a mossy bank, where they sit for hours, the little girl amusing herself by watching the wonders of the woodland, whilst the artist deftly proceeds with his picture. Meanwhile, the goats have strayed into the field of a neighbor, who is angered by the damage they cause. He proceeds to the little goatherd's grandparents, and they then realize that their little grandchild is lost and start to search. Finally they part the branches of an o'erspreading tree, and, there, forgetful of all mundane things, sit the enraptured child and the artist. Peace is restored by the artist, who soon pays for the damage caused by the goats, and all ends peacefully and happily.

AMERICAN.

THE CIRCULAR FENCE (Sept. 25).—Jack Stevens, a young man from New York, is spending a short vacation at the "Housetop I Ranch," owned by Mrs. Elliott, a widow. The time passes pleasantly, the cowboys treat him cordially and the widow's daughter, Elsie, is his constant companion. The boys start for the round-up and Jack expresses a wish to Elsie to see this interesting phase of Western life. His opportunity comes some time later, when Mrs. Elliott asks him to take the money for the pay roll to the foreman at the round-up. En route, he passes through the town and sees a sign posted by the Sheriff, offering $5,000 reward for the capture of Rattlesnake Ike, a dangerous bandit that has been terrorizing the ranchmen of the country. Jack engages the sheriff in conversation, and when he tells him that he is going to the round-up, the sheriff gives him a map of a short cut to the camp. He starts out again and follows a fence as indicated in the map. A half-hour later he is back at his starting point.

Puzzled, he places his handkerchief on a post near the gate and once more completes the circuit of the circular fence, coming back to the gate. He passes through the gate, making his way to a hut to study his map and get his bearings.

Rattlesnake Ike, hidden among some rocks, sees the stranger pass, and follows him with the intention of robbing him. Jack arrives at the hut, and hanging his gun on his saddle, gets his pack and starts to open it. Rattlesnake Ike comes up and engages him in conversation. Jack asks him the way to the round-up, explaining that he has the pay roll. Ike covers him with his gun, and robbing him of the money and map, escapes on Jack's horse. He rides back over the trail and inadvertently goes inside the circular fence. Like his predecessor, he makes the circuit of the fence, coming back to his starting point. He hangs Jack's gun on the gate and starts out again. Jack, making his way back over the trail on foot, finds the gun hanging on the gate, and securing it, conceals himself, knowing that when Ike has completed the circuit he will surely pass the place again. Twenty minutes later he holds up the thief and recovers the money. He then forces Rattlesnake Ike to enter the noose of the lasso and starts for town at a brisk trot and Ike is compelled to follow.

When Jack arrives in town he turns over his prisoner to the sheriff, and is much surprised to learn that his erstwhile bandit is the notorious Rattlesnake Ike and that he has earned the $5,000 reward. Elsie Elliott is very much pleased with his exploit, and agrees to become Mrs. Jack Stevens.

THE RUSTLER SHERIFF (Sept. 28).—The citizens of San Juan County are very much aroused by the repeated depredations of a gang of cattle rustlers. Posse after posse, led by the sheriff, followed the rustlers into the mountains, but the outlaws always managed to elude their pursuers.

Charley Walton surprises the rustlers in the act of running off his stock and opens fire. One of the rustlers turns in his saddle and fires point blank at Walton, killing him instantly.

Shortly after, Maud Walton, his daughter, accompanied by her lover, Jack Beemis, riding along the boundary, comes upon the ranchman's lifeless body. The distracted daughter kneels beside her dead father and her lover, deeply distressed by her grief, swears to track down the men who committed this crime and bring them to justice.

The rustler who fired the fatal shot, rides to a secluded spot, and removing his false beard, and pinning on a star, transforms himself into the sheriff. When Jack arrives in town to notify the sheriff of this fresh depredation, he finds him delivering a harangue to the boys about the rustlers, and insisting that if they will only follow him he will round the outlaws up.

Jack leads the sheriff and the posse to the scene of the recent crime, and shows the sheriff the trail as indicated by the trampled grass and hoofmarks of the cattle. The sheriff disregards Jack's advice, claiming that it is a rustler's trick to disguise their real trail, and, he leads the posse in the opposite direction, toward the timber land. Jack becomes suspicious of him, and when their search ends in failure, he determines to play a lone hand and locate the rustlers himself. He calls at his sweetheart's home, and obtaining her father's gun, he starts for the mountain country, riding along alert and watchful, he sees a man disappear into a secluded glen. Dismounting, he approaches carefully, and sees the sheriff disguising himself into the outlaw. Following him, he sees him join the gang and obtain his share of the booty. The sheriff plans a raid on the Bar X cattle, but his followers are afraid to attempt the job. He laughs contemptuously, and assures them that there is nothing to fear, as he himself will lead the pursuit. Jack quietly steals away, and riding to town, he notifies the boys of what he has seen and heard.

SPECIAL OFFER! Four Spiegel Motion Announcement Slides and One Patented Slide Carrier for $5.00

All Theaters must have the Spiegel Patented Slide Carrier to run the Spiegel Motion Slides. National Advertisers are using the Spiegel Motion Slides extensively.

Be prepared for the business by having the Spiegel Slide Carrier in your theater. Write for catalogue to your nearest dealer, or to

The American Motion Slide Co., Exclusive Manufacturers in the United States

611 First National Bank Building, Chicago, Ill.

Don't Forget

To mail that letter tonight, enclosing $3.00 for one year's subscription to the

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

125 East 23rd St. - - NEW YORK CITY

Features You Can Feature

That's what your business needs. Wake up! You fellers who are in a rut.

Get in the Buzz Bus—and Book a FEATURE WEEKLY.

Go in training on counting money—you'll need it if you start booking our magnetic, coin getting,

FEATURE FILMS

We buy them all—Cheyene 1911, Romeo and Juliet, Clio and Phyletes, Train Robbers, Passion Play and thirty others.

Today is the time, before your competitor beats you to it. Heralds—Colored Announcement Slides, Banners and Lithographs sent in advance. Send for prescription now.

THE FEATURE FILM COMPANY

TOLEDO, OHIO.

"DOCTORS OF HAS BEENS."

MOTION PICTURE MACHINES

EDISON MOTIOGRAPH POWERS

Stereopticons, Post Card Projectors
Lantern Slides, Repair Parts, Supplies
Carbons, Tickets

Catalog Free on Request

AMUSEMENT SUPPLY COMPANY

105 No. Dearborn St. - - CHICAGO

FEATURE FILM CO., 412 Superior Street Toledo, Ohio

OFFER BOOKINGS ON THE

Temptations of a Great City
Great Train Robbery
Fall of Troy

AND TWENTY OTHER GOOD FEATURES

PLENTY OF PAPER. HERALDS. : : : SUMMER RATES

WRITE TODAY

NOW READY Bound Volume No. 8 JANUARY TO JUNE, 1911

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

Price, Two Dollars EACH

Postage or Express Charges EXTRA

Supply Limited Order Now

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

125 East 23rd Street : : : New York City

SONG SLIDES

FOR RENT

ALWAYS THE LATEST

By using our slides you are sure of Prompt, Efficient and Courteous Service.

Install our service immediately and see the results.

GET THE LEAD on your competitors by getting your week's supply in one shipment.

Particulars upon request.

UNITED SLIDE ADVERTISING CO.

61 West 14th Street New York City

WARNING

All persons are hereby notified that H. T. May is not a solicitor for the Moving Picture World. Do not pay money to him under any circumstances. When last heard from he was in Boston, Mass. His present address will be appreciated.

—Moving Picture World

H. F. HOFFMAN

Lecturer of Special Releases
New York City and Vicinity

Now booking engagements for

Enoch Arden Dante's Inferno

and other feature pictures,

Care MOVING PICTURE WORLD

TELEPHONE, 1344 GRAMERCY

NEW FIELD
BIG MONEY
EASY WORK

Why don't you think up plots for Motion Picture plays? It's easy, and pays well. We teach you by mail how to write and sell your plots. Many successful graduates.

DEMAND UNLIMITED. FULL DETAILS FREE.

ASSOCIATED MOTION PICTURE SCHOOLS

911 Chicago Opera House Building CHICAGO

MAKE 'EM YOURSELF SLIDES

Make them yourself. Written with pen and ink or typewriter. Three minutes to make a slide. Used for advertising slides, to announce future or feature programmes, for chorus slides when chorus slide is missing. We send four colors of gelatin. The slides look well and any one can make them. They are handy also for announcing vaudeville acts. In fact they may be readily used for anything you may wish to say to your audience.

For the sum of three dollars ($3) cash with order, we will send by express, charges not prepaid, the following:

24 cover glass, 1 package binder strips, 1 dozen mats, 1 instruction sheet, 1 form sheet and 50 strips assorted colors gelatin—enough for from 300 to 400 slides. Order now. Address

UTILITY TRANSPARENCY CO.

1733 West 9th St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

They plan to ambush the rustlers and capture them if possible. The surprise is complete and the rustlers badly defeated. The wily sheriff escapes and the cowboys pursue him to the mountains. Up the steep and rocky mountain side he runs, followed by the cowboys, now on foot. They lose track of him entirely, but continue their search, knowing that he cannot be far away. They are startled by a rumbling sound, and looking up, they see an enormous rock come rolling down the slope. When all is quiet they rush up to find the rustler pinioned beneath the tons of rock. Jack Beemis steps up and removes the false beard, disclosing the face of the sheriff, and the cowboys turn away in awe, feeling that divine retribution has overtaken the evil doer.

CHAMPION.

AS THINGS USED TO BE (October 4).—Tom Hanson is a true type of Western gambler, riotously drunk half his waking moments. Harry Martin is a better product of the West. Harry loves Tom's sister and for that reason, tries to reform him. In return for this, Tom learns to hate him, and to such an extent that he attempts to poison his sister's mind against him. In this he partly succeeds, by cleverly throwing suspicion on him as a thief.

In spite of this, it falls to Harry's lot to have it in his power to save Tom from death at the hands of Indians, and he does this in a noble and courageous manner. When Tom learns that Harry was his gallant rescuer, remorse takes possession of him and he confesses the dastardly trick he played on Harry, and the latter is thus restored to the heart of his sweetheart and her parents. He magnanimously forgives the wayward Tom, and a most affecting scene transpires.

The gambler decides to change his life for the better for he has gradually seen the goodness of men in Harry. With this change, the old folks are made happy, and it is needless to say that Harry and his sweetheart find true bliss once more.

BARBARA FRIETCHIE (October 2).—One of the brightest examples of true patriotism was exhibited by a woman in a most remarkable manner during the Civil War. The heroine was Barbara Frietchie. It occurred in the town of Frederick, Md., where every household was divided in its sympathies.

George Mason, whose mother was a Frietchie, was an ardent Unionist, but his brother William was strong for secession. Virginia Iredale loved George, but her sentiments were opposed to his. This gave William a footing with her which he strove to improve by every means in his power.

It was about the time of General Lee's prospective invasion of the North. In accordance with that idea, General Stonewall Jackson had turned the faces of his men northward. Everywhere in Maryland he was acclaimed with joy, though not so vociferously as further South. Jackson met with no hostile demonstrations, though thousands were so inclined. In the big town of Frederick, there was not one protest against the Confederate invasion—but stay! there was one, a dear old lady of eighty years, whose great big loyal heart led her to do an act of heroism that was sublime!

Jackson, at the head of his hosts, entering Frederick that balmy September day, beholds the starry flag floating from a modest brick dwelling. Others have seen it, too. A score of muskets belch forth as one shot and the Stars and Stripes hang by a cord from the shattered flagpole. In a flash the window is raised, framing therein an aged but sweet face. A pair of feeble hands grasp the broken pole and once more the Stars and Stripes defiantly flutter. Then are uttered those well-remembered words: "Shoot if you must, this old gray head, but spare your country's flag." The butts of a hundred muskets leap to the shoulders of the Gray Coats, but the next instant the stentorian tones of brave General Jackson ring out: "Attention! Who touches a hair of yon gray head dies the death of a dog!" Then with a salute, he and his men marched on. Barbara Frietchie belonged to history.

This glorious act decided Virginia Iredale as to her course in love and politics. Virginia thought she loved her Southland more than the Union, but when she saw the old flag waving in Aunt Barbara's hand, she knew at once where her real sympathies were, and as a result of this decision, her fair head found a resting place on the broad and manly bosom of George Mason.

NESTOR.

THE YOUNG DOCTOR (Sept. 27).—Under Dr. Martin's old-fashioned treatment, Jim was steadily growing worse. Bob felt quite sure that if Jack Walton had but received his "Sheepskin" and would come on West in answer to his urgent invitation, the patient would quickly get well.

Fortunately Jack had received his precious diploma that very week, and the moment he got his friend's letter, he started for the West, where, true to Bob's prediction, Jim was soon on the road to recovery.

Jack's first case, however, had not given the young doctor the entire satisfaction he had anticipated, for Dr. Martin had angrily thrown up the case rather than take him into consultation. So stubborn was the old doctor that even after Jack had demonstrated his skill with more than one patient, he remained unyielding. It was only when Mrs. Martin lay at death's door and all hope had been given up that the old doctor called the young man to his aid.

Luckily the good woman's life was saved, and later Dr. Jack Walton's sign was hung beneath that of Dr. Martin—for Miss Edith Martin had been instrumental in uniting the two doctors in family as well as professional ties.

MUTT AND JEFF AS REPORTERS (Sept. 30).—Mutt and Jeff's specialty is "doing" the "easy thing." So they make the rounds of the big "Dailies" looking for the reporter's cinch. Two of the "Star's" star reporters are missing, and Mutt and Jeff arrive at the psychological moment, which means they connect.

Jeff is assigned to do the society and theatrical stunt, while Mutt, who is brave and game, is to mingle with low-browed chaps and unearth the foul doings of the denizens of the underworld. The former meets with unqualified success, making a decided hit with dames of high degree and dramatic and operatic stars of great renown. When he turns in his report—a dandy scoop—the "Start" engages the little fellow at an enormous salary; and Jeff, conscious of his immense worth, automobiles away with one of the swellest members of the gentle sex.

In the meantime, Mutt has not been idle. He gets on the scent. Ah! a suspiciously dark cellar crowded with a suspicious looking bunch of dark, scowling men, criminals to be sure! Mutt breaks in upon them, and they—cab drivers holding a meeting—fall upon the "thin guy" and pummel the daylight out of him. Black and blue, beaten almost beyond recognition, but proud for having uncovered a band of criminals, Mutt manages to make his report, which earns the disapproval of the "Star" and he gets "fired" with neatness, despatch and footwork.

There, out in the bustling street, poor Mutt sees with envious eyes the fast disappearing auto bearing away the smiling Jeff and his lady friend.

GETTING EVEN (Sept. 30).—Betty Thorne had declared that if she and Bob Wiley only continued tormenting her father long enough, eventually he would consent to their marriage. But so infuriated did Major Thorne become at their persistence, that one day he actually took his cane to the young man. Tom, however, sprang through the door, and the Major's blow fell upon the head of poor Parson Goodman, who entered at that moment. Excusing himself as best he could, the irate father summoned the gardener, instructing him to eject Tom from the premises.

But having heard these instructions from his hiding place, the lover decided to let himself out through the kitchen. Here, the sight of Policeman O'Grady's coat and hat lying upon a chair, where the officer had flung them as he sat down, to a cup of tea with Maggie, quickly changed Tom's mind. Snatching them up, he hurried into the next room; there, with the aid of a little soot from the fireplace, the incorrigible young scamp walked boldly into the next room and accused the Major of assault and battery. Then, before he could get a good look at the officer, Betty came forward and hustled her confused father off, telling him that she would arrange matters with the policeman.

As the Major re-entered the room, however, the truth dawned upon him, for he beheld his daughter's face covered with soot, and glancing at the officer, saw that his big mustache was now merely a black smudge. Again the cane was raised. This time Betty succeeded in staying his arm until Tom had safely deposited his borrowed clothes upon the kitchen chair and O'Grady had them on ready to depart when Major Thorne and the gardener grabbed him from the back and without much ado, threw the astonished officer through the window.

Battered, bruised and angry, the Irishman picked himself up and limped back into the house; and had not Betty and Tom been busy urging Parson Goodman to hasten with their marriage ceremony, they might have heard O'Grady's club descending upon the Major and his assistant, as he marched them triumphantly off to the station house.

POWERS.

A MATRIMONIAL IDYL (Sept. 26).—A satirical domestic comedy depicting the perils of love at first sight. A young lady is reading in a hammock, when a handsome stranger passes by, both innocent of the awful fate that awaits them. A flirtation takes place that leads to serious results, for after the courtship we see them before the altar agreeing to take each other for better or for worse, or worst, as it happened. The wife couldn't cook and the husband had no patience, both of which prove to be nonconductive of wedded bliss. A baby arrives to add his mite to the noisy household. Many are their trials and tribulations, all of which bring out the ludicrous side of married life with the result of much merriment to the onlooker. A novel feature of the picture is the introduction of sub titles in rhyme, which serve to brighten up that usually uninteresting though necessary part of most pictures.

THE CALL FROM THE HILLS (Oct. 3).—Clayton Erb is a musical genius, but his talents are not taken seriously or appreciated in the mountainous country that he calls his home. His father is quite impatient with the young man and considers the hours that he spends with his violin as hopelessly wasted and that much time gone that could be more profitably employed in manual labor that would bring in some return.

Clayton is ordered one day by his father to fell trees in the forest, which the youth does very reluctantly. His heart is not in his work and he soon neglects his work and picks up his violin. Strains of wonderful music are soon echoing in the wood and are heard by a wealthy young woman who happens to be motoring along that way. She becomes enraptured with his music and recognizes in Clayton a genius. Learning that he is too poor to pay for a musical education, the lady gives him her card and goes on after promising to assist him if he cares to call upon her.

Clayton stands watching the lady until she disappears, when his father comes upon the scene and scolds him for neglecting his work. A quarrel follows and the father tells him to give up his music or his home. Turning it over in his mind, the young musician thinks of the lady's offer and decides to go; trudging down the road with his violin under his arm.

After a lapse of time Clayton has made much progress and is making his debut at a select gathering in the city at the home of his benefactress. He has become an accomplished musician and is a sensation as he plays to the piano accompaniment of the generous young woman. Between the numbers it is easy to see that Clayton has fallen deeply in love with her. His love is not reciprocated, as presently appears upon the arrival of a young man who immediately becomes the object of the young lady's attentions. In the next few moments the violinist realizes that her regard for him is purely platonic and his heart sinks within him.

The two lovers repair to a palm room to exchange greetings. Clayton in his confusion wanders in that direction and there unobserved sees them in fond embrace. The discouraged musician stagers out on the lawn. He realizes that he is out of his element and his mind wanders back to happier days in his home in the forest and he hears the call; the call from the hills.

In the meantime a simple country sweetheart that he had left behind has been pining away for him. She lays between life and death on her humble bed and the doctor does all he can, but somehow medicine does no good. Death is expected at any moment by her anxious family, when sounds of a violin are heard. Faintly at first; then louder, until Clayton absent-mindedly wanders in, playing as he used to do in days gone by. To his surprise he learns that he is both the cause and the cure for the sickness of his sweetheart, and her call was the call from the hills.

A BRANDED INDIAN (Sept. 30).—A half-breed gambler is sent on an errand from the ranch. Riding on horse along the road he meets an Indian and suggests a game of cards. They gamble until the half-breed loses all. He then bets the horse, which does not belong to him, and loses that. He proves to be a bad loser and determines to get even. Returning to the ranch the half-breed tells the cowboys that the Indian held him up and took away the horse. The cowboys take the trail and capture the Indian, intending to mete out to him the fate of all horse thieves.

Bringing the redskin back to the ranch a fire is built to heat the branding irons preparatory to a lynching. The innocent Indian is made to suffer the humiliation and agony of being branded as a thief and the men are about to hang him when the ranchman and his daughter put a stop to it and set the red man free. The sympathetic daughter treats the wound and binds it up, for which the unfortunate man is grateful.

The Indian vows to hate the white race and become an outlaw and pay back the score. From ambush, later, he shoots one of the cowboys who tried to hang him, and the horse gallops back with the rider hanging limp in the saddle. The cowboys give pursuit. Meantime the half-breed gambler takes advantage of his opportunity to force his attentions on the ranchman's daughter. The chase drives the hunted Indian to the spot in time to take in the situation. Forgetful of his own safety he interferes with the half-breed and they engage in a duel, which leaves the half-breed a dead man. Though mortally wounded he picks up the fainting maiden and carries her back to the ranch.

When the cowboys arrive the Indian's life is ebbing away. They want to shoot him, but an explanation causes them to desist. Instead of shooting him down like a dog they fire a volley in the air, a salute upon the death of a hero.

THANHOUSER.

THE FIVE ROSE SISTERS (Oct. 3).—Grease paint, the spotlight and applause lose their fascination for the Five Rose Sisters, a dancing team full of vivacity, ability and pluck. They decide to leave the stage for a home of their own as soon as they are blessed with this good fortune. This blessing opportunely comes to them in the shape of a legacy from a dead uncle.

The legacy consists of a house and farm on the outskirts of a small village. The girls are both anxious and happy to exchange for the more salubrious and cheerful existence of the country, their worrisome, wearing and purposeless life in the city. So they move to the country and soon forget about one-night stands, quick lunches and quick changes.

The people of the village in which this winsome

SPOT LIGHT SONG AND LECTURE SLIDES ARE MADE EXCLUSIVELY BY THE

Levi Co., Inc., 1560 BROADWAY NEW YORK CITY

First "Spot Light" Release "Save Your Kisses 'Till Sunday Night"

BUY DIRECT OR ORDER FROM YOUR EXCHANGE PRICE $5.00 PER SET

100 POINTERS

On how to repair. Ways to adjust and get the best results from your machine head. Also includes Lavezzi's improved repairs. It is alphabetically arranged and fits the pocket. Cloth cover. A NECESSITY. 50 cents.

LAVEZZI MACHINE WORKS, 2940 HERNDON ST., CHICAGO

LARGEST PAPER! LARGEST CIRCULATION!

WRITE FOR OUR NEW ADVERTISING RATES TO-DAY

MOVING PICTURE WORLD, 125 E. 23rd St., N. Y. City

SAVE MONEY and use our

Program Board

with Interchangeable Porcelain Letters

Make your own program

You cannot afford to do without one.
Announcements quickly changed.
Prices and full particulars on application.

Agents Wanted.

THE CAMBRIDGE TILE MFG. CO.
COVINGTON, KY.

TRANSARC

Price $50.

Dimensions, 8½" x 10½" x 11"
Core Loss, 55 Wats.
Volts at arc, 35.
Amperes, 30-40-50-60.

Construction

The core is of the "SHELL" type construction with highest grade of steel lamitations, exposing the outside surface to the air, while the coils mounted therein are carefully wound and treated in the most approved manner and protected from any possible damage thereto, being mountel inside the core. For illustrated catalogue and full information apply to

THE ST. JOHN CORPORATION
180 Broadway, NEW YORK CITY
Sole Distributors for MOHAWK ELECTRIC CO., Albany, New York.

INDEPENDENT FILMS FOR RENT

2,000 feet, 6 times a week.....$14.00
2,000 feet, 7 times a week..... 15.00
3,000 feet, 6 times a week..... 17.00
3,000 feet, 7 times a week..... 18.00

Free Lithographs Free Song Slides

We pay express one way.

SUPERIOR FILM SUPPLY COMPANY
410 to 420 SUPERIOR ST., TOLEDO, OHIO

A Satisfied Exhibitor writes:

"Saturday my banner day. Your films are corkers and the guy does the booking is on to his job. I'm strong for the New Superior." If you are not getting all that's coming to you in film service communicate with us; we will do the rest.

Special Inducement Will supply without additional cost one feature each week.

The ORTHO FILM COMPANY, Inc.

Headquarters: 40 EAST 12th STREET, NEW YORK

We require first class representatives in every locality to demonstrate our wonderful improvement in photography. We redevelop, clean and soften both flammable and inflammable films. We remove scratches, blemishes, rain, flickers and all other defects from the film. Any old film, no matter how brittle, after it has passed through our Hochstetter Process is as good as the first run. Our prices are very moderate. Good salary and commission to able, active workers.

Answer by mail only, will not be considered otherwise.

OLD WYOMING DAYS

A visit to the scenes of real wild western celebration at the last great Cow Boy's Convention with BIG ED. WALSH, the greatest hero of the American diamond.

See Lander, Wyo., the fringe of our western border, where the startling, death daring antics of the true westerner prevail, and the most thrilling excitement reigns supreme.

THE GREATEST MONEY MAKING FEATURE ON THE MARKET
STATE RIGHTS SELLING FAST

THE WESTERN FEATURE FILM CO., Room 304, 167 W. WASHINGTON ST., CHICAGO, ILL. Phone, Main 2303

Quintette make their home, are hospitable and genial, and make welcome and comfortable the sisters, from the tall and graceful Rose, to the little and buxom "Rosebud." They become prominent members of the local church and are harmonious additions to the church choir.

The young pastor of the church takes a kindly interest in one of the sisters, who is an accomplished organist. His attentions to one of the "Roses," arouses the jealousy of the deacon's daughter. The green-eyed monster so took possession of her that she made capital out of the first opportunity. By one of those peculiar coincidences, it is she who learns of the past occupation of the sisters. She exposes the dancers at a choir meeting, and naturally the simple village people are horrified. They ostracize the sisters from their society because of their former stage connections. The girls, however, are self-satisfied creatures, and ignore the pridishness and snobbery of the village folk. They remain content and happy in their lonely farmhouse.

However, the little Rose who played the organ at church, misses the pleasure of this diversion. So, one day, unable to withstand the call of the pealing anthem, she goes to the church, slips in while no one is about, and steals to the organ loft, where she satisfies her unusual craving until she is overcome by the appeal and thrill of her hymns. For a long time she sat alone in the organ loft and wept bitterly.

Suddenly she is startled into quiet by the cautious movements of a stealthy person on tip-toe, proceeding to the vestry room. She quietly hides near the organ loft, and observes the deacon in the act of taking possession of the church funds.

The girl rushes back to her home at top speed and arranges with her sisters for the capture of the thief. When the dishonest deacon, with the money concealed under his coat, drives by the girls' farm on his way out of town, he is stopped by these plucky and determined young women. They force him to return to the village and not only confess to the crime, but "pony up."

The minister and the villagers welcome back into the fold all of the Five Roses, and decide that former dancers are respectable members of society, in spite of having earned an honest livelihood with their toes. And by way of emphasis to their welcome, the young minister marries the organist member of the Rose family.

THE EAST AND THE WEST (Oct. 6).—The spirit of democracy prevalent at some of our large American colleges, makes possible the association of students of different nationalities and religious. Although there is still a degree of snobbishness traceable in the social life of some colleges, the college which the hero of "The East and the West" attended, is one of the most democratic.

It was therefore natural that our hero should chum with a Japanese student, who worshipped Buddha. Both boys found each other's company congenial and interchanged considerable information during their close association as roommates.

The strong friendship formed at college, the boys continued after graduation. The Jap spent a part of his time, before sailing back to the "Flowery Kingdom," at the home of his friend. Before sailing, he invites his chum to be his guest on the trip East. Of course, the American accepted the invitation and his father, who is a theatrical producer, was happy to have his son go and polish his education by traveling through foreign lands.

When the Westerner arrives in the sunny East, he is much interested and impressed by the Eastern customs, and the character of the people. He is introduced to a relative of his host—a pretty and vivacious Japanese girl. She attracts his disinterested admiration by her graceful dancing and petite and chic appearance. He does nothing that would convey the impression to the girl that he is in love with her, because he remembers "the girl he left behind." The impressionable Japanese damsel is carried away, however, by the force of the American's manners, and loses her heart to him. Poor, suffering girl, her love is not returned.

The American is much impressed by the girl's skill as a dancer. So, when he decides to go back to God's country, and not conceited enough to imagine that the girl would fall in love with him, he tells her that if she would like to try to win glory on the American stage, he would tell his father to give her a chance. He sails back to America and his sweetheart. In the course of time he makes good his promise to the girl of the East.

She comes to America, and when she makes her debut on the stage here as a dancer, she wins considerable applause and is momentarily happy. But when she hears of the engagement of her idol to an American girl, her hopes are shattered, and no longer desirous of fame or glory, she decides to sail East. Her plans are expedited by the arrival of a letter from her father, commanding her to return and marry the chum of the American—who was secretly in love with her. Obedient to her father's commands, and happy to fill the vacuum created by an unrequited love, she sails home.

SHE NEVER KNEW (Oct. 2).—Having been infatuated with a famous dancer, Jack Gordon had no thoughts of his home and neglected wife. The wife, ignorant of the infatuation, and believing the 'oft-told tale of business," pitied her husband and sought to make things more pleasant for him.

On the occasion of her birthday, she had prepared a splendid little dinner for her husband and was chagrined to learn that he would not be home "on account of business"; but instead of business, he went to keep an appointment at the home of the dancer, where there was to be quite a gathering of people. He intended to surprise her by presenting her with a beautiful jeweled bracelet, but when he sought through his pockets he found that he had lost it. The dancer became enraged at being humiliated in the presence of her friends and insultingly dismissed him from her presence. He leaves in a rage, vowing never again to see her.

Although disappointed by her husband being absent at the occasion of her birthday, the wife is made happy at the presence of her father. The old man finds a box on the floor which the husband had dropped before leaving, and when the wife opens this and finds a beautiful bracelet, she becomes happy at the thought that her husband has not forgotten her birthday and joyously shows it to her father, who deftly removes a card which shows that the present was meant for some one else. He acquaints his son-in-law with this fact, and makes him promise to sever all connections with the dancer and become a devoted husband, which the young man gadly does.

THE GOOSE GIRL (Oct. 6).—Flattered by the attentions of a wealthy summer guest, the little country girl who was lovingly known as the "goose girl" (being in constant attendance upon a flock of geese), forgets the loyal devotion of her sweetheart, who is a hard-working plumber, and when an opportunity presents itself, she comes to the great metropolis and marries the man who coaxed and flattered her into coming.

Her marital bliss proves of short duration, as her husband soon tires of her, and within two years she is in want, with a young baby to take care of. In this plight, her former sweetheart, the young plumber, accidentally finds her. The young plumber is called upon to do some repairs in an office building, and meets the man who had deserted the little country girl, and left her in want, while he lives in prosperity. Finding the safe open, the plumber extracts a large sum of money and gives it to the deserted wife. He is later accused of the crime, and shows the authorities, as well as the broker, where the money is. The broker recognizes his wife and child, and

THE WISE EXHIBITOR BELIEVES IN GOOD ADVERTISING

and from the number of orders that have come in from all parts of the country there seems to be plenty of wise ones. Every mail brings a great many orders which go to swell the list of live exhibitors, and from present indications this system seems bound to become

THE UNIVERSAL SYSTEM

We sell you the frame for ten dollars and furnish you with a poster for each and every film released. Each poster consists of a half-tone cut showing an actual scene taken from the film, together with the name of the subject and a complete synopsis of the story. The posters are printed on one hundred pound enameled paper and are lithographed in from three to six colors. For this high-class poster service we make a charge of

ONLY—TWO—DOLLARS—PER—WEEK

Exhibitors Advertising Company

Suite 604-605-606, 117 North Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

NEW YORK ADDRESS

Room 815, 145 West 45th Street, New York

Towns Without M.P. Shows

We have just completed a list of towns in five States, Iowa, Illinois, Indiana, Wisconsin and Michigan, that have no moving picture theaters.

Each State contains about 30 towns varying in population from 1,000 to 3,000.

We will sell complete list of each State for $5.00 or all five States for $15.00.

Cash must accompany order. Money refunded if a M. P. Theater is in any town we name in list.

Order Quick
First Come, First Served

Anti-Trust Film Co.
128 W. LAKE STREET
CHICAGO, ILL,

SLIDES—Advertising and Descriptive
Easily and quickly made by a new method, fully working formulae, together with five of the STRONGEST TRADE PULLERS ON EARTH. ALL BRAND NEW AND ORIGINAL. Just what you need to tune up your business. Recent experiments have shown nightly increases in receipts, ranging from 10 per cent. to 30 per cent. Especially designed for the small town and city suburb trade. Complete in typewriter form. Postpaid 50 cents. Address C. A. BERG, originator, 1104 So. Main St., Los Angeles, Cal.

SCENARIO WRITERS!

If your scenarios do not sell find out why. Perhaps your manuscript can be rewritten and made saleable, and your mistakes may be corrected in future manuscripts. The author of "Technique of the Photoplay," etc., will give your manuscript personal criticism and revision for a fee of only $2.

The work of experienced writers, that conforms to standards for theme and treatment, will be marketed for a commission of 10%. A reading fee of 50c must accompany each script, to cover cost of reading. Please take note that this fee does not cover any criticism in the event that the manuscript is not found available for marketing.

Exhibitors!
Bad Business?

Submit your difficulties to the author of "The Photoplay Theater," and other articles on management, for advice and suggestion, the result of twenty years' experience in amusement enterprises. Simple questions $1 each.

Manufacturers!

Manuscripts developed, $10 each. Send in that scenario that has your staff puzzled and a practical working script will be returned.

Epes Winthrop Sargent
21 East 20th St., N. Y. City

WILL BUY OR LEASE

prints of the following famous works by

CHARLES DICKENS

"Old Curiosity Shop"
"David Copperfield"
"Oliver Twist"
"Tale of Two Cities"

Also POWERS CAMERAGRAPH

Send all particulars in first letter. Otherwise no attention paid.

Address

W. L., Room 903, 507 Fifth Ave., NEW YORK CITY

Motion Picture Supplies

To get the right goods at the right prices call or write

H. A. MACKIE
Wholesale Dealer

853 BROADWAY
Cor. 14th St., New York

Jobber for Edison, Powers & Motiograph Machines.

All Others kept in Stock.

Call and see all makes of machines demonstrated on the mirror screen.

If you are in the Market for

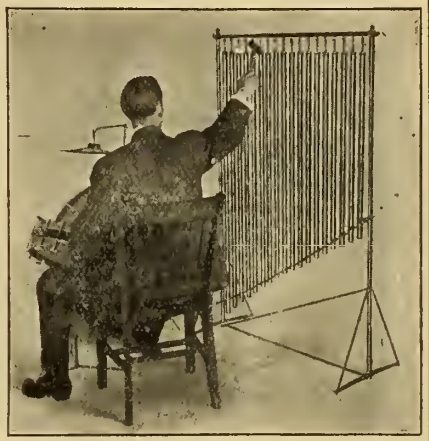
SECOND HAND FILMS

Write to the largest and most reliable Dealers and Importers of these goods in the U. S.

International Film Traders
Incorporated
5 West 14th Street, NEW YORK CITY

Of all "writing-for-pay" work picture play writing is easiest. No literary style needed. Film makers pay for ideas alone. Our course tells you all about the profession and form of scenario. Complete for $1.00. Photo-Play Syndicate, Box 20, Cleveland, Ohio

Small Chimes



Although these Chimes are light enough to be used on transient work, they are not toys by any means, but a complete set of 18 tones, one and a half octaves chromatic (C to F), with sufficient volume and power to fill any size auditorium.

LEEDY MFG. CO., Indianapolis, Ind.
Gentlemen: I received the Small Chimes O. K., and must say that they are the finest addition I have ever made to my line of traps.

I used them the same week I received them and made a big hit with the audience. No drummer in a Picture House can afford to be without them; they really are a valuable instrument.

Yours truly,
O. J. POWELL,
Theatorium, Mt. Carmel, Pa.

Chimes are not a fad—they have come to stay, and any drummer who intends to keep up with the procession will find our Small Chimes a valuable addition to his equipment.

Try a set—your money back if you are not entirely satisfied.

Price $60

LEEDY MFG. CO.
Indianapolis, Indiana.

realizing their need and his own cowardly conduct, decides not to press the charge against the plumber.

After her husband's death the former country girl and her baby return to the farm, where the loyalty and self sacrificing conduct of the young plumber earns its reward.

GREAT NORTHERN.

THE CONSPIRATORS (Sept. 30).—Mr. Wilson, an attorney-at-law, receives a communication from a client, a millionaire, Benjamin Carter, who is a confirmed invalid. He is requested to call as quickly as possible to arrange for the sale of his client's stocks and bonds. His secretary, Harry Clark, who is a member of a gang of nefarious scoundrels, during his absence, reads the letter from Carter and hastily prepares a message to his associates, apprising them that there is an opportunity for a good haul. His first message does not suit him, and he crumples this up and throws it on the floor. This ultimately brings about his undoing. The secretary leaves the office and joins his confederates, and soon their plans for action are matured. As Mr. Wilson is hailing a cab, preparatory to calling on his client, the gang overpower him and confine him in the premises of old mother S's, in Dock Street. Armed with his employer's bag, the secretary then proceeds to call on Carter. At the lawyer's office, however, a trusted servant has picked up the incriminating note, which says that Wilson must be detained. He immediately informs Mrs. Wilson, who at once summons Sherlock Holmes. Holmes speedily determines a course of action, and going to the client, takes that gentleman's place, disguising himself to represent the infirm old millionaire. When the secretary calls, Sherlock Holmes overpowers him, making him a prisoner, after which he proceeds to the place where Wilson is detained. Other members of the gang rush in, but are covered by the detective's pistols. Suddenly, one of them pulls a cord by the window and Sherlock Holmes disappears into space below. Just then the police arrive, and after a struggle, finally overpower the ruffians. They are forced to disclose Holmes' whereabouts, and eventually the prisoners are led away for safe keeping and Wilson is happily restored to his family.

IMP.

THE ROSE'S STORY (Oct. 2).—Gerald Kianey is a roué and travels with a fast set, having plenty of money to indulge his tastes and going the pace that kills.

He is somewhat satiated with the life he is leading and his better nature asserts itself at times. He leaves his club, where the wine is flowing and the tables are strewn with poker chips, and motors out into the country.

In a pretty wooded dell, by the side of a quaint old well, he meets Myrtle Edgar, a simple country maiden, pretty, pure and demure. It is a revelation to him. The girl is a new type—unlike any woman he has ever seen. She shyly gives him a drink of the cool water. Endeavoring to take liberties with her, he is repulsed, kindly but firmly, and that is a new experience for the debonair clubman. It is a welcome innovation and he sees in her only the pure and holy. Roses grow in profusion in the pretty spot and she plucks one and fastens it on his lapel.

The rose acts as a talisman. Whenever he is tempted to do wrong, he regards the flower. His friends rail at him and wish to learn his secret, but he guards it jealously; gradually dropping his old acquaintances and leading a more quiet life. The memory of the sweet country girl is always before him.

At a swell society function, he suddenly thinks of her and is distrait. He leaves his handsomely gowned partner and walks out into the night, the memory of Myrtle haunting him. He seeks her out and makes an honest declaration of his love, but she intuitively divines there is a disparity in their station. He tells her of his past life and she puts him on probation.

They are married and after a few years of wedded life a child comes to gladden their hearts. One night the wife is conning a book and finds between the leaves a pressed rose. She questions him and he tells her it is the rose she gave him at the old well, the flower that made a man of him and brought him a true and trusting wife, making his life brighter. (Copyrighted by Independent Moving Pictures Co. of America. 1911.)

THROUGH THE AIR (Oct. 5).—Flo Garret accompanies her father, Ned Bullard and others on a prospecting trip into the gold country and assists in the cooking and keeping the camp tidy. Flo is an athletic young woman, who can ride and shoot, and Ned loves her. His affections are not returned and he is furious at times.

Near the camp, Jack Baldwin, the aviator, has his airship housed and is making frequent flights while experimenting with his dirigible. He meets Flo and they are mutually attracted.

While prospecting Flo's father discovers gold in abundance and he and companions stake out a claim. Bullard and the partner conceive the idea of putting the old man out of the way and filing on the claim. Ned returns to the camp and attempts to force his attentions on the girl and she rides away.

The old prospector returns and he is shot by Ned in a struggle, who steals the papers. Flo is a witness to the act and, after making her father comfortable, she mounts her horse and rides to frustrate the intention of the scoundrels. She drops from her horse exhausted before the quarters of the young aviator and tells the story.

In the meantime Ned has ridden to the railroad station, but finds the train just departing. He secures a high powered motor car and, offering the driver a big bonus, is whirled away in the direction of the office of the recorder.

Jack Baldwin takes in the situation and lends his aid. Armed with a duplicate description of the mine, he mans his airship, soars away, and the race for the office of the recorder is on. It is a highly interesting speed contest. Ned has the advantage of several miles start, but Jack passes him and arrives at the office of the official first and files on the claims in the name of Flo.

The daring young aviator wins the girl and the thanks of the old prospector as well, while the villains leave the country, with Flo and her father in peaceable possession of the mining claim. (Copyrighted 1911 by Independent Moving Pictures Co. of America.)

ECLAIR.

HEARTS AND EYES (Oct. 3).—While cleaning her gloves, which she was to wear at a ball, Cecelia meets with an accident and becomes blind. Her slim resources are soon exhausted, and being unable to work, the poor girl is soon brought to distress. Led by her little sister, she is forced to beg. Young Doctor Humbert, noticing the young girl one day, becomes interested, and persuades her to go to his offices, where he operates upon her, and in time the girl recovers her sight. Meantime, the young doctor has fallen in love with his pretty patient, but feels it is a rather delicate matter to declare his affection for the girl under the circumstances, and cannot gain sufficient courage to do so. At the same time Cecelia acknowledges to herself a love for the doctor, which she dare not hope even may be returned. All seems very hopeless when, upon leaving the room one day, Dr. Humbert, thinking himself unobserved, out of the ardor of his love, throws a kiss to the girl of his choice. Cecelia, however, has been watching his departure through a mirror, and noting the action, quickly turns and faces her lover. There is that in the eyes of each which breaks down all reserve, and soon they are clasped in each other's fond embrace—the old, old story.

FOR YOUR HATS, LADIES (Oct. 2).—Ladies, grand and beautiful, do they know the trouble and unending labor that is contiagent upon the production of the magnificent plumes which apron their hats? This interesting film will let you into the secret. First, you are courteously escorted over an ostrich farm, and shown how the feathers are plucked from the huge bird, which strenuously objects to the operation. Then you behold the sorting of the feathers to be shipped to Paris. Then you are allowed to take a peep while they are being dried, joined and curled. At last the finished feathers arrive at the milliner's shop, and there is nothing for you to do but Pay the Bill, Gentlemen.

POSITIVELY the best terminal ever devised for motion picture arc lamps. GUARANTEED to prevent burned off wires.

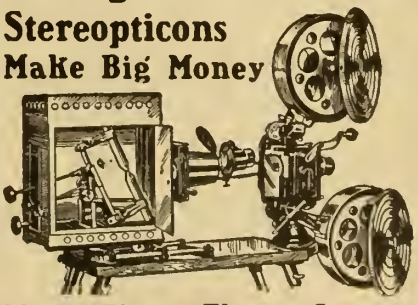
Price $1.00 per pair postpaid

YOUR MONEY BACK IF YOU WANT IT

STERLING NOVELTY CO., 500 Main St., Warren, Ohio

THE BEST BY TEST

Moving Picture Machines
Stereopticons
Make Big Money

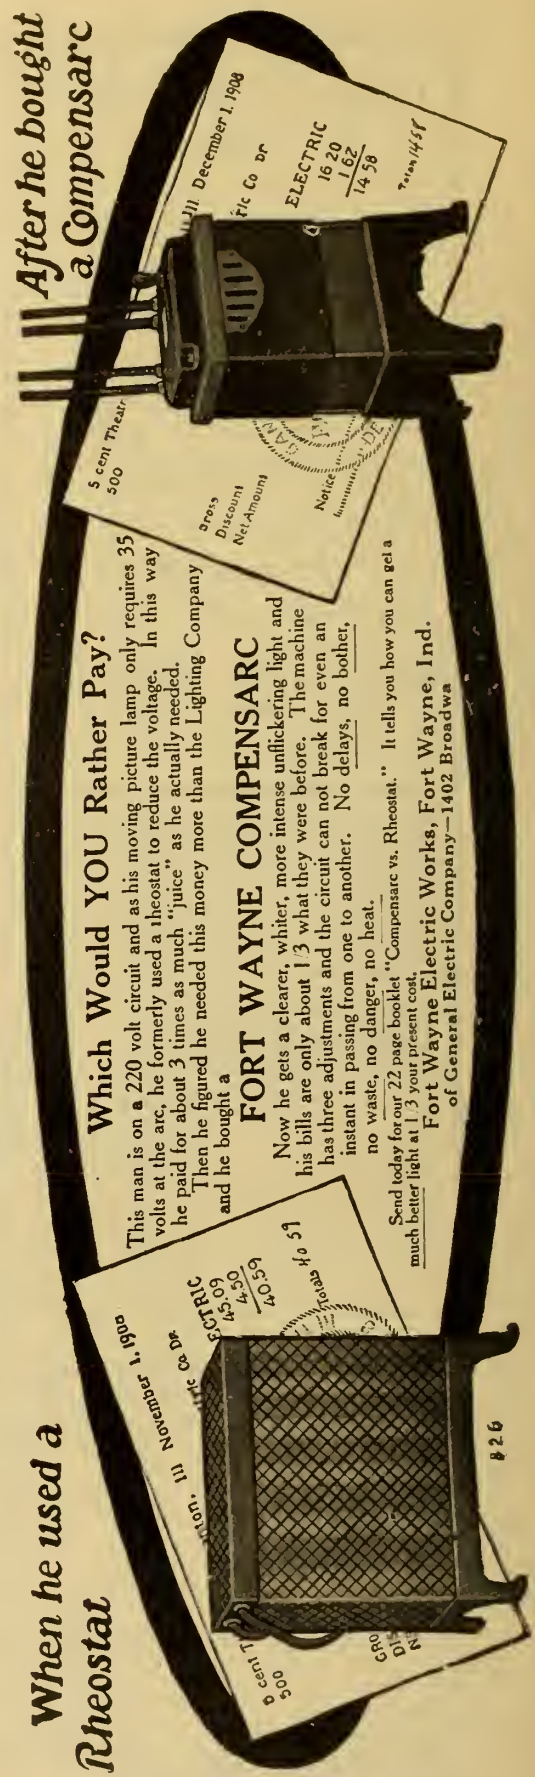


Motion Picture Theatre Supplies

We carry on hand at all times the largest and most complete line of Repairs and Supplies for all Standard Machines, also Tickets, Carbons, Screens, Chairs, etc. Can ship at once. Special Slides made to order. We also handle Motiograph, Edison and Powers Machines. Write today for THEATRE CATALOGUE.

CHICAGO PROJECTING CO.
219 S. Dearborn St. Dept. A. Chicago, Ill.

After he bought a Compensarc



Which Would YOU Rather Pay?

This man is on a 220 volt circuit and as his moving picture lamp only requires 35 volts at the arc, he formerly used a rheostat to reduce the voltage. In this way he paid for about 3 times as much "juice" as he actually needed.

Then he figured he needed this money more than the Lighting Company and he bought a

FORT WAYNE COMPENSARC

Now he gets a clearer, whiter, more intense unflickering light and his bills are only about 1/3 what they were before. The machine has three adjustments and the circuit can not break for even an instant in passing from one to another. No delays, no bother, no waste, no danger, no heat.

Send today for our 22 page booklet "Compensarc vs. Rheostat." It tells you how you can get a much better light at 1/3 your present cost.

Fort Wayne Electric Works, Fort Wayne, Ind. of General Electric Company—1402 Broadway

When he used a Rheostat

Film Perforating Dies

The A. Dewes Co.
249 Center Street
Tel. 2351 Spring New York

FOR SALE—Moving picture theater, Waukesha, Wis., $600, $20 month rent; 10,000 population; also one at Watertown. Any make of film, $5 a reel; song sets, $1; Model B gas outfits, $15, $20, $25; plush opera chairs, $2; light reducers, $15; used machines. Lubin, Edison, $40; new, $100; new Powers No. 6 and Motiographs, the $225 priced ones, our price, $175. For Rent—any make film, $1 per reel weekly. Will Buy—machines, Passion Play, Johnson-Jeffries Fight, Tale Two Cities, Life of Moses, Uncle Tom's Cabin, and others.
H. DAVIS, Watertown, Wis.

Films for Rent
All Supplies at Cost
Write Now
PHOTOPLAY EXCHANGE
61 West 14th St. New York, N. Y.

Theatre For Rent
IN JAMAICA DISTRICT
BROOKLYN, N. Y.
MOVING PICTURE THEATRE
300 Seats. Best location. Ready for business. Great opportunity. Rent $125 per month. No bonus. Write at once.
GEO. F. WASHBURN
630 Washington St. Boston, Mass.
OR
GEO. L. HOBART
Jamaica New York

NEW BOOTH LAW
We can save you Time and Trouble by communicating with
H. J. DIXON
1510 B'way, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Motion Picture Handbook
FOR
Managers and Operators
Price $1.50
Postage Prepaid
MOVING PICTURE WORLD
125 E. 23rd Street : New York City

ST. LOUIS CALCIUM LIGHT COMPANY
Established 1873
Oxygen and Hydrogen Gas furnished in tanks for Stereopticon and Moving Picture Machines. All orders to any part of the United States filled promptly.
516 Elm Street, ST. LOUIS, MO., U. S. A.

EXHIBITORS
BIG MONEY PROPOSITION FOR YOU
Send your address for our mailing list
ORTHO FILM COMPANY, Inc.
40 E. 12th Street NEW YORK

BIGGER and : : BETTER
SEND YOUR SUBSCRIPTION
TO-DAY FOR
The Moving Picture Paper That Is Worth While

Domestic	-	$3.00 Per Annum
Canada	-	3.50 " "
Foreign	-	4.00 " "

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD
Box 226 Madison Sq. P. O. N. Y. City

DRUMMERS
Our new 32-page Catalog P of drums and traps is now ready Send for it. Lowest prices in the U. S. on high grade goods.
Jenkins Music Co., Kansas City, Mo.

STOCK ROLL TICKETS
8 Thousand any denomination delivered anywhere in U. S. $1
CASH WITH ORDER
Johnson, 16 Beach St., Boston, Mass. Est. 1880

Bargains Bargains
Motion Picture Machines $35 up. Lubin 1906 only $65. Powers No. 6, Edison Model B and Standard a specialty. Model B Gas Outfit. All Opaque Machines. Send for Sup. No. 33 list of Bargains in used Machines, Stereopticons, etc.
MOTION PICTURE MACHINES WANTED
Harbach & Co., 809 Filbert St., Philadelphia, Pa

ATTENTION!
Anyone who is in possession of a film that is scratched, dirty, flickery or poor photography, send it to the ORTHO FILM CO., 40 East 12th St., New York City, to be redeveloped, cleaned and softened and see the improvement that can be done by the HOCHSTETTER ORTHO PROCESS. Demonstrations given free.

ON VELVET
The first Orpheum Collection of Moving Picture music (dramatic and descriptive) was issued July 18, 1910. It paid for itself in five months.
"No. 2" Orpheum Collection was issued August 17, 1911. Its only advertisement so far has been a circular mailed to former patrons. Did anybody respond? The first week's sales paid for the engraving and printing. At this rate, by the time this ad appears, No. 2 will also be

ON VELVET
Can you beat it? Don't that show that "The Orpheum Collection" is a winner? This issue (No. 2) is published for piano only, contains a Chinese and several good Indian numbers, two pages of U. S. Army bugle calls and lots of fine dramatic music. Twenty-four separate leaves, same as the first issue. Send for free sample page No. 2. For the next 90 days this music will be sent post paid for 58 cents. Both issues $1.15. Don't wait too long.

Clarence E. Sinn
1501 Sedgwick St. Chicago, Ill.

THE EXHIBITOR'S LIBRARY
Lectures for Feature Films
THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD has prepared for the special benefit of the exhibitors of feature films a pamphlet, "HOW TO PUT ON THE CRUSADERS OR JERUSALEM DELIVERED." This pamphlet contains: A synopsis of the story; a complete set of suitable press notices; a complete lecture (written by W. Stephen Bush); suggestions as to musical program and effects. Price of booklet One Dollar.
SECOND EDITION of "How to Put on the Passion Play," by W. Stephen Bush, now ready for distribution. Price One Dollar per copy. The value of this book is well known throughout the moving picture field and has been enlarged in the second edition.
"Key and Complete Lecture for Dante's Inferno." Indispensable to every exhibitor who wishes to use the film of the Milano Films Company. Contains press notices of suitable and various sizes, a synopsis of the story, a special key good for reprinting and general distribution, and a most complete and exhaustive lecture by W. Stephen Bush, running evenly and smoothly with the action on the screen. Price $2.50.
MOVING PICTURE WORLD
125 East 23rd St. N. Y. City

NOTICE TO JUNKERS FILM TITLES
made in any length
3 FOOT FOR 25c.
Perforating, printing and developing for the trade at reasonable rates
GUNBY BROS.
199 Third Ave. New York

Classified Advertisements

[Classified advertisements, three cents per word, cash with order; 50 cents minimum; postage stamps accepted.]

THEATER FOR RENT.

In Jamaica District, Brooklyn, N. Y. Moving Picture Theater. Seats 300; inclined floor; attractive place; unusual opportunity; best location in Jamaica; opposite City Hall and next to Post Office. Rent, $125 per month. No bonus. Live Place. Apply to George L. Hobart, Jamaica, N. Y., or George F. Washburn, 630 Washington St., Boston, Mass.

THEATERS FOR SALE.

Moving picture theater; capacity 175, in city of 35,000 population; at a sacrifice. Address, H. E. FLATHER, 141 Smith Street, Perth Amboy, N. J.

Moving Picture Theater for sale. Seating capacity, 500. Fully equipped. Best location in the city. Address, Manager of the Pastime Theater, Lawrence, Mass.

EQUIPMENT FOR SALE.

FOR SALE—A Complete picture outfit, 150 capacity. A huge bargain. Must be sold quick. Write for particulars. Address, F. HANRAHAN, Shelby, Ohio.

FOR SALE—150 excellent folding seats in short sections, suitable for any hall with flat floor. Address, 199 North Main Street, Fall River, Mass.

FOR SALE—Electric fans for A. C. and D. C., perfect condition. 16 inch, $9.50; 12 inch, $7.70; 10 inch, $6.80. Also new fans. Address, COSMOS ELECTRIC CO., 136 Liberty St., New York City.

SALE OR TRADE—One Wurlitzer Automatic Harp. Will sell for $300, or will consider on about 300 20 inch opera chairs. Must be in good condition. Address, BURT FIALA, 11 Burlington Ave., Dayton, Ohio.

FOR SALE—An electric piano player, as new, cost $600; let for $350 to quick buyer. A bargain. Address, JOSEPH MIRANESIC, Dunlo, Pa.

SITUATIONS WANTED.

YOUNG MAN—(39), married, strictly sober, wants position as manager of motion picture theater, has own machine. Can handle all details. Address, R. McKAY, 946 Manhattan Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

AT LIBERTY—About Sept. 20th, expert moving picture operator or manager. Long experience. No booze or cigarettes. Electrician. Repair machines. Best of references. Wish to hear from first-class house. Address, OPERATOR, Care Photo Gallery, Dorney Park, Allentown, Pa.

AT LIBERTY—Manager, vaudeville, experienced, salary and commission. Recently sold my own theater. Address, George Bowley, care Moving Picture World, 125 East 23rd St., New York City.

Experienced trap drummer at Liberty. Play drums, bells, xylophones and effects. Address, DOUGLAS E. WARWICK, 331 Central Ave., Austin, Ill.

AT LIBERTY—A-1 baritone singer, experience as moving picture and vaudeville house manager. Good, honest, sober man. Address, R. W. R., care Moving Picture World, New York City.

Lady pianist wants position in Moving Picture Theater or vaudeville house. Orchestra work preferred. Experienced. Address, T. TILLOTSON, 1829 Seventy-first Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

HELP WANTED.

WANTED—Good scenario writers for special work. Address, NATIONAL MOTION PICTURES COMPANY, Indianapolis, Ind.

MISCELLANEOUS.

WANTED—To buy music rolls for 65 note Regal Electric Piano. Must be in good condition. SAVOY THEATER, Shamokin, Pa.

Managers of moving picture theaters, let me tell you how to boost receipts without risking a penny. Address, GEORGE, Box 462, Syracuse, N. Y.

Will pay cash for Optigraph heads. Must be in good condition. Give lowest price in first letter. Address, NATIONAL MOTION PICTURES COMPANY, Indianapolis, Ind.

NOTICE—Mr. Robert De Noyelles is no longer in our service. All mail matter to be sent direct to us. METTILA & PAANANEN, Star Theater, Calumet, Mich.

YOUR OPPORTUNITY—Owing to death, successful publishing firm quits business and I have bought the 350 textbooks remaining from edition that has been selling like hot cakes. Book gives authors all essential information about scenario writing. Best scenario editors have endorsed the book, and the Moving Picture World devoted a column of complimentary mention to the work. Books readily sell at fifty cents to $1.00 a copy. Editorial recommendations go with books, which are in first-class condition. A nice business for someone during the winter months. Every offer made for these books carefully considered and answered. Will sell at a sacrifice, and first come, first served. Write or wire. Address, S. U. N., care Moving Picture World, New York City.

THEATERS WANTED.

Wanted to buy or lease Moving Picture Theaters everywhere. Send full particulars. Address, C. H. ROSENBERG, 201 Sixth Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

AT LIBERTY—Vaudeville pianist and trap-drummer. References furnished. Salary, $47.50. Can join on wire. One way fare paid. Address, "Leaderd," care Moving Picture World, New York City.

Licensed Release Dates

BIOGRAPH

Sept. 14—The Squaw's Love (Dr.)..... 998
Sept. 18—Dan, the Dandy (Com.)..... 998
Sept. 21—When Wifey Holds the Purse Strings (Com.) 463
Sept. 21—A Convenient Burglar (Com.)..... 534
Sept. 25—The Revenue Man and the Girl (Dr.) 999
Sept. 28—Her Awakening (Dr.)..... 997
Oct. 2—Too Many Burglars (Com.)..... 499
Oct. 2—Mr. Bragg, a Fugitive (Com.)..... 497
Oct. 5—The Making of a Man (Dr.).....1000

EDISON.

Sept. 16—The Sheriff (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 19—The Sailor's Love Letter (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 20—An Unknown Language (Com.)..... 985
Sept. 22—The Battle of Trafalgar (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 23—The Big Dam (W. Dr.) 1000
Sept. 26—Mary's Masquerade (Com.).....1000
Sept. 27—A Cure for Crime (Com.).....1000
Sept. 29—The Death of Nathan Hale (Edu.)..1000
Sept. 30—The Maiden of the Pie Faced Indians 500
Sept. 30—Turning the Tables (Com.)..... 500
Oct. 3—Eugene Wrayburn (Dr.).....1000
Oct. 4—The Summer Girl (Com.).....1000
Oct. 6—Foul Play (3 reels) (Dr.).....3000
Oct. 7—Leaves of a Romance (W. Dr.).....1000

ESSANAY.

Sept. 16—The Millionaire and the Squatter (W. Dr.) 980
Sept. 19—Saved from the Torrents (Dr.)..... 980
Sept. 21—All On Account of the Porter (Com.).——
Sept. 21—Everybody's Troubles (Com.)..... 980
Sept. 22—Live, Love and Believe (Mil. Dr.).. 980
Sept. 23—An Indian's Sacrifice (W. Dr.)..... 980
Sept. 26—Lost Years (Dr.)..... 980
Sept. 28—The Power of Good (W. Dr.)..... 980
Sept. 29—When He Died (Com.)..... 980
Sept. 30—The Strike at the "Little Jonny" Mine (W. Dr.)..... 980
Oct. 3—Grandma (Dr.) 1000
Oct. 5—Master Cupid, Detective (Dr.).....1000
Oct. 6—The Sheriff's Decision (W. Dr.).....1000
Oct. 7—Townhall, Tonight (W. Com.).....1000

GAUMONT.
(G. Kleine.)

Sept. 12—How to Catch a Bachelor (Com.).... 836
Sept. 12—From Bordeaux to Pauillac, France (Sc.) 164
Sept. 16—The Cinematograph Fiend (Com.)... 575
Sept. 16—A Mountain Torrent In Austria (Sc.) 415
Sept. 19—Jimmie on Guard (Dr.)..... 710
Sept. 19—Crossing the Alps In a Motor (Sc.).. 285
Sept. 23—A Heart Breaker by Trade (Com.).. 710
Sept. 23—The Culture of Bulbous Flowers (Sc.) 290
Sept. 26—A Friend of the Family (Com.).... 850
Sept. 26—The City of Bordeaux, France (Sc.).. 175
Sept. 30—Hearts May be Broken (Dr.).....1015
Oct. 3—Jimmie's Midnight Flight (Com. Dr.) 675
Oct. 3—Ajaccio, the Birthplace of Napoleon (Scenic). 325
Oct. 7—The Upward Way (Dr.)..... 726
Oct. 7—Cinta, a Picturesque Town of Portugal (Scenic) 269

KALEM.

Sept. 11—A Sheepman's Triumph (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 13—The Express Envelope (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 15—The Alpine Lease (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 18—The Ranger's Stratagem (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 20—Losing to Win (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 22—The Cowboy's Bride (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 25—Arizona Bill (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 27—Hal Chase's Home Run (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 29—The Blackfoot Halfbreed (Dr.).....1000
Oct. 2—The Phoney Strike Breakers (Com.)..1000
Oct. 4—The Saving Sign (Dr.).....1000
Oct. 6—The California Revolution of 1846 (Dr.) 1000

LUBIN.

Sept. 14—Al Martin's Game (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 16—Cement Rock Blasting (Ind.).....
Sept. 16—The Scheme That Failed (Com.)....1000
Sept. 18—The Senorita's Conquest (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 20—The Life Saver (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 21—The Human Torpedo (Com.).....1000
Sept. 23—Her Inspiration (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 25—The Matchmaker (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 27—A Cowboy's Love (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 28—A Counterfeit Roll (Com.).....1000
Sept. 30—A Nearsighted Chaperone (Com.)....1000
Oct. 2—His Stubborn Way (Com.).....1000
Oct. 4—The Idle Bonst (Dr.).....1000
Oct. 5—His Exoneration (Dr.).....1000
Oct. 7—Revenge Is Sweet (Com.).....
Oct. 7—From the Field to the Cradle (Ind.)..1000

MELIES.

Sept. 7—The Hobo Cowboy (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 14—A Shattered Dream (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 21—$200.00 (Dr.) 1000
Sept. 28—The Mission Waif (Dr.).....1000
Oct. 5—The Stolen Grey (Dr.).....1000

ECLIPSE.
(G. Kleine.)

Sept. 6—Clever Beyond Her Years (Dr.).... 675
Sept. 6—Lake Thun In Switzerland (Sc.).... 325
Sept. 13—The Hand of the Law (Dr.)..... 665
Sept. 13—Norwich and Vicinity (Sc.)..... 330
Sept. 20—In Ancient Days (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 27—The Trials of a Tall Traveler (Com.) 458
Sept. 27—Manufacturing Fireworks (Ind.)..... 522
Oct. 4—A Jealous Wife (Com.)..... 338
Oct. 4—The Grand Charterense (Scenic)..... 292
Oct. 4—Eyra and the Fortune Teller (Com.).. 348

PATHE.

Sept. 19—Pathe's Weekly No. 38 (Topical)....1000
Sept. 20—An Up-to-Date Squaw (Com.)..... 754
Sept. 20—African Birds and Their Enemies (Ed.) 197
Sept. 21—Starlight's Necklace (Dr.)..... 951
Sept. 22—Old Delhi and Its Ruins (Sc.)..... 285
Sept. 22—Electric Boots (Com.) 426
Sept. 22—Surfing: National Sport in the Hawaiian Islands (Sc.)..... 285
Sept. 23—Gypsy Maids (Dr.) 900
Sept. 25—The Disappointed Old Maids (Com.).. 490
Sept. 25—Whiffles' Hard Luck Stories (Com.).. 475
Sept. 26—Pathe's Weekly, No. 39 (Topical)....1000
Sept. 27—Driven From the Tribe (Am. Dr.)..1000
Sept. 28—Gypsy Honor (Am. Dr.).....1000
Sept. 29—The Bell-ringer of the Abbey (Fairy Tale) 815
Sept. 29—Across the Polar Seas (Sc.)..... 397
Sept. 30—A Convict's Heart (Am. Dr.).....1000
Oct. 2—Little Moritz Is Too Short (Com.)... 525
Oct. 2—Raugoon, India (Scenic)..... 400
Oct. 3—Pathe's Weekly No. 40 (Topical)....1000
Oct. 4—Crazy Dope (Am. Com.)..... 663
Oct. 4—Circus in Australia (Scenic)..... 325
Oct. 5—The Squaw's Mistaken Love (Am. Dr.).1000
Oct. 6—Flirts (Com.-Dr.) 813
Oct. 6—Trained Dogs.—(Novelty)..... 180
Oct. 7—For Massa's Sake (Am. Dr.).....1000

SELIG.

Sept. 18—Lost In the Arctic (Dr.) 880
Sept. 18—Noted Men (Sc.) 180
Sept. 19—McKee Rankin's '4'9" (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 21—A Cup of Cold Water (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 22—Shipwrecked (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 25—Two Orphans (1st reel) (Dr.).....1075
Sept. 26—Two Orphans (2d reel) (Dr.)..... 986
Sept. 28—Two Orphans (3d reel) (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 29—John Oakhurst—Gambler (Dr.).....1000
Oct. 2—A Summer Adventure (Dr.).....1000
Oct. 3—The Rival Stage Lines (Com.).....1000
Oct. 5—Maud Muller (Dr.).....1000
Oct. 6—The Artist's Sons (Dr.).....1000

VITAGRAPH.

Sept. 16—By Woman's Wit (Com.).....1000
Sept. 18—One Flag At Last (Mil. Dr.).....1000
Sept. 19—How Millie Became an Actress (Com.) 1000
Sept. 20—Beyond the Law (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 22—Forgotten (Dr.) 1000
Sept. 23—Over the Chafing Dish (Com.).....
Sept. 23—The Tired, Absent Minded Man (Com.) 1000
Sept. 25—By the Camp Fire's Flicker (Dr.)....1000
Sept. 26—His Sister's Children (Com.).....1000
Sept. 27—A Western Heroine (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 29—Ninety and Nine (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 30—Her Hero (Com.).....1000
Oct. 2—Our Navy (Topical).....1000
Oct. 3—The Wager (Com.).....1000
Oct. 4—The Mate of the John M. (Dr.).....1000
Oct. 6—Carr's Regeneration (Dr.).....1000
Oct. 7—Ups and Downs (Com.).....1000

YERKES' SOUND EFFECTS

Are used exclusively by the Monopol Film Co. for their DANTE'S INFERNO picture, and for the Kinemacolor Co.'s CORONATION PICTURES. Send for Our New Sound Effect List

Phone Lenox 600

Yerkes Manufacturing Company, 202 East 88th Street NEW YORK

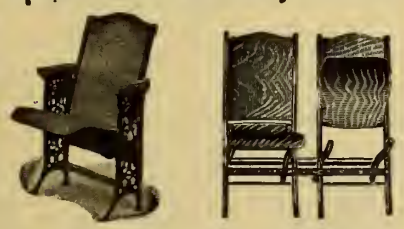
CHEAP
STEEL FRAME
THEATRE CHAIRS
ABSOLUTELY
NON-BREAKABLE

Suitable for small Theatres and Moving Picture Shows. We carry these chairs in stock and can ship immediately.
Second Hand Chairs
Also seating for Out-of-door use
Address
Dept. W.
STEEL FURNITURE CO., GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.
New York Office: 150 Fifth Avenue

OPERA CHAIRS

FOR EVERY PURPOSE
1,000 STYLES
ESTABLISHED 1865
WRITE FOR CAT. No 31
The A. H. Andrews Co.
174-176 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill. Branches in all leading cities

Opera and Assembly Chairs



Most popular priced chairs on the market for picture show use.
Prompt Shipments. Write for Catalogue
PEABODY SCHOOL FURNITURE CO.
North Manchester - - Indiana
New York Agents: ROBERT J. EHLERS CO.
Lexington Ave. and 43d St. - New York, N. Y.

WE CAN BOOK YOU ON A MINUTE'S NOTICE
Singers, Piano Players, Drummers, Operators or anything else in the show business.
We personally try out every one, and know their ability before leaving our office.
A TRIAL WILL CONVINCE YOU
Columbia Theatrical Exchange, 405 RANDOLPH BUILDING South East Cor. Clark and Randolph
TELEPHONES: RANDOLPH 756 and AUTOMATIC 44-279 CHICAGO, ILL.

NOW READY
DANTE'S INFERNO ILLUSTRATED LECTURE
TWO STYLES
24 beautifully colored slides, - $15.00
76 " " " 40.00
Lecture free with each set. We supply heralds and one sheet posters
A. J. CLAPHAM Manufacturers Fine Art Slides 12 East 15th Street, New York

THEATRE SALES CO.
211 Dearborn Street, opposite Post Office
CHICAGO, ILLINOIS
Long Distance Phone, Harrison 341
Dealers in Theatres anywhere in the United States and especially Chicago. Write or Call. Make Known Your Wants

OPERA CHAIRS
ALL KINDS of SEATING
ROYAL METAL MFG. CO.
1823 Dearborn St.
CHICAGO, ILL.

OPERA CHAIRS

GEO. W. BENNETT
744 W. 5th Street
CINCINNATI OHIO

Get Our Prices Before You Buy
The Wisconsin Lumber and Veneer Co.
Port Washington, Wisconsin, U.S.A.

FOLDING CHAIRS
For Moving Picture Shows, Grand Stands, Assembly Halls, etc. In sections if wanted.
Write for Catalog No. 2
The Kauffman Manufacturing Co.
ASHLAND, OHIO

THEATRE SEATING—Send for Moving Picture Chair Cat. "V4," Upholstered Chair Cat. "V5."
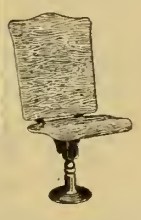
AMERICAN SEATING COMPANY
Chicago New York Boston Philadelphia

SCENERY PAINTED FOR MOVING PICTURE THEATERS
P. J. DONIGAN SCENIC STUDIO, 416 S. Kedzie Ave., Chicago, Ill
Phone, Garfield 2710
Write for our prices on Picture Curtains

In answering advertisements kindly mention The Moving Picture World.

SPECIAL TRIAL OFFER ON
AROMA FOAM
The Powerful Perfumed Disinfectant
Immediately upon receipt of your remittance of $1.96 for a four quart order of assorted Geranium, Luxuran, Azuran and Viodor, we will ship you FREE a large compressed air sprayer and an artistically colored glass slide.
Sanitary Service Corporation
82 Wall Street, New York City
Address all communications to Laboratory,
1293 FULTON STREET, BROOKLYN, N. Y.

OH! MR. EXHIBITOR!! THINK OF THE MOTHERLESS, THE FATHERLESS AND THE



Childless homes as the result of theater panics. Protect the lives of your patrons by installing our "ANTI-PANIC" THEATER CHAIR. 26 Dead at Cannonsburg, 176 at Boyertown, 575 at Iriquois Theater, Chicago. Make these horrors impossible.
Our chair is a friend to the Public.
It advertises your theater and makes your business grow.
It is a space-saver, life-saver, money-saver. Gives 25% more seating.
IT IS THE ONLY SANITARY CHAIR
It will make your theater all aisles.
It is the world's greatest theater chair, perfected to the highest degree.
Write today for Circular A. THE HARDESTY MFG. CO., Canal Dover, Ohio, U. S. A.

Independent Release Dates

AMERICAN.

Sept. 4—The Cowboy and the Artist (W. D.)..1000
Sept. 7—Three Million Dollars (W. Com.)....1000
Sept. 11—The Stage Robbers of San Juan (Dr.) 1000
Sept. 14—The Mother of the Ranch (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 18—The Gun Man (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 21—The Claim Jumper (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 25—The Circular Fence (Com. Dr.).....1000
Sept. 28—The Rustler Sheriff (Dr.).....1000
Oct. 2—The Love of the West (Dr.).....1000
Oct. 5—The Miner's Wife (W. Dr.).....1000

CHAMPION.

Sept. 4—Grant and Lincoln (Dr.)..... 950
Sept. 6—When the Law Came (Dr.)..... 950
Sept. 11—Charley's Buttie (Dr.).....
Sept. 13—The Red Devils (Dr.)..... 950
Sept. 18—Shenandoah (Dr.)..... 950
Sept. 20—The Stolen Horse (Dr.)..... 950
Sept. 25—The Black Horse Troop of Culver (Scenic) 950
Sept. 27—The Cook of the Ranch (Com.)..... 950
Oct. 2—Barbara Frietchie (Dr.)..... 950
Oct. 4—As Things Used To Be (Dr.)..... 950

ECLAIR.

Aug. 28—A marriage in the Stars (Com.)..... 755
Aug. 28—An Obliging Young Man (Com.)..... 235
Sept. 4—All On Account of a Coat (Com.)... 886
Sept. 11—How Poor Babies Are Reared in Paris (Edu.)..... 630
Sept. 11—How Teddy Lost His Bet (Com.)... 235
Sept. 18—Magic Music (Trick)..... 330
Sept. 18—When the Leaves Fall (Dr.)..... 665
Sept. 25—A Just General (Military Dr.).....1000
Oct. 2—Hearts and Eyes (Dr.)..... 630
Oct. 2—For Your Hats, Ladies! (Edu.)..... 370

GREAT NORTHERN.

Aug. 19—The Victory of Love (Dr.).....
Aug. 26—A Traitor to His Country (Dr.).....
Sept. 2—The Foundling (Dr.).....
Sept. 9—A Dream with a Lesson (Dr.).....
Sept. 16—The Conspirators (Dr.).....
Sept. 23—Caught in His Own Net (Dr.).....
Sept. 30—The Conspirators (Dr.).....

IMP.

Sept. 4—The Haunted House (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 7—Duty (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 11—By the House that Jack Built (Dr.) 1000
Sept. 14—The Brothers (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 18—The Great Charleston Hurricane Flood (Scenic) 500
Sept. 18—The Bicycle Bug's Dream (Com.)... 500
Sept. 21—By Registered Mail (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 25—The Co-Ed Professor (Com.)..... 750
Sept. 25—Through the Dells of the Wisconsin in a Motor Boat (Sc.)..... 250
Sept. 28—'Tween Two Loves (Dr.).....1000
Oct. 2—The Rose's Story (Dr.).....1000
Oct. 5—Through the Air (Dr.).....1000

LUX.

Sept. 1—Bill as a Game-Keeper (Com.)..... 504
Sept. 1—The Invisible Wrestler (Com.)..... 340
Sept. 8—Bill Buys a Lobster (Com.)..... 350
Sept. 8—A Romance of a Wager (Dr.)..... 642
Sept. 15—Bill as a Bill Poster (Com.)..... 573
Sept. 15—His Mania for Collecting Antiques (Com.) 357
Sept. 22—Bill as an Express Messenger (Com.).. 344
Sept. 22—The Stolen Diamond (Dr.)..... 629
Sept. 29—Bill and His Friend (Com.)..... 491
Sept. 29—The Little Goatherd (Dr.)..... 386

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO. BISON.

Sept. 1—The Sheriff's Love (Dr.).....
Sept. 5—Little Dove's Romance (Dr.).....
Sept. 8—A Western Tramp (Dr.).....
Sept. 12—The Lost Letter (Dr.).....
Sept. 15—Lone Star's Return (Dr.).....
Sept. 29—The Sheriff's Brother (Dr.).....
Sept. 22—The Missionary's Gratitude (Dr.)....
Sept. 26—Lucky Bob (Dr.).....
Sept. 29—White Fawn's Peril (Dr.).....

AMBROSIO.

(By N. Y. M. P. Co.)

Sept. 6—Tweedledum and the Adventuress (Com.) .....
Sept. 6—Italian Artillery (Scenic).....
Sept. 13—Calu's Retribution (Dr.).....
Sept. 13—Tiny Tom Wins a Lottery Prize (Com.) .....
Sept. 20—Tweedledum's Riding boots (Com.)..
Sept. 20—Tiny Tom as a Detective (Com.)...
Sept. 23—The Hornet (Com.) .....
Sept. 23—The Mask of the Red Death (Dr.)..
Sept. 27—Alice's Dream (Com.).....
Sept. 27—Tweedledum's Auto Skates (Com.)...
Sept. 30—The Law of Retaliation (Dr.).....
Sept. 30—A Strange Invitation to Dinner (Com.)

ITALA.

Sept. 2—Clio and Phyletes (Dr.).....
Sept. 7—Infinite Ways of Provideuce (Dr.)...
Sept. 9—Foolshead Hypnotizer (Com.).....
Sept. 9—Toto Has a Purse (Com.).....
Sept. 16—The Horse of the Regiment (Dr.)....
Sept. 16—Foolshead Charges Himself With Removal (Com.).....

NESTOR.

Sept. 2—Mutt & Jeff and the German Band (Com.) .....
Sept. 6—The Flower of the Tribe (W. Dr.)..
Sept. 9—Mutt & Jeff and the Escaped Lunatic (Com.).....
Sept. 13—At Perry's Ranch (Dr.).....
Sept. 16—Mutt & Jeff and the Newsboys (Com.)
Sept. 20—Across the Divide (Dr.).....
Sept. 23—Mutt & Jeff and the Dog Catchers (Com.) .....
Sept. 23—Obliging a Friend (Com.).....
Sept. 27—The Young Doctor (Dr.).....
Sept. 30—Mutt & Jeff as Reporters (Com.)....
Sept. 30—Getting Even (Com.).....
Oct. 4—Those Jersey Cowpunchers (Dr.).....
Oct. 7—Mutt & Jeff Spend a Quiet Day in the Country (Com.).....
Oct. 7—The Meddling Parson (Com.).....

POWERS.

Sept. 2—Silver Tail and His Squaw (Dr.)....
Sept. 5—Red Feather's Friendship (Dr.).....
Sept. 9—The Twins Squaw (Dr.).....
Sept. 12—Gray Wolf's Grief (Dr.).....
Sept. 16—The Horse Thief (Dr.).....
Sept. 19—Lost in a Hotel (Com.).....
Sept. 19—An Old Time Nightmare (Com.)....
Sept. 23—Red Star's Honor (Dr.).....
Sept. 26—The Falls of Bohemia (Sc.).....
Sept. 26—Imaginative Willie (Com.).....
Sept. 30—The Half-Breed's Atonement (Dr.)..
Oct. 3—The Call From the Hills (Com.).....
Oct. 3—A Matrimonial Idyl (Dr.).....
Oct. 7—The Branded Indian (Dr.).....

RELIANCE.

Aug. 26—The Godfather (Dr.).....
Aug. 30—A Straight Path (Dr.).....
Sept. 2—Clouds and Sunshine (Dr.).....
Sept. 6—Temptation (Dr.).....
Sept. 9—His Dream (Dr.).....
Sept. 13—The Cobbler (Dr.).....
Sept. 16—Pals (Dr.).....
Sept. 20—The Stolen Play (Dr.).....
Sept. 23—The Way of a Maid (Dr.).....
Sept. 27—For His Sake (Dr.).....
Sept. 30—Weighed in the Scale (Dr.).....

REX.

July 20—Sherlock Holmes, Jr. (Dr.).....
Aug. 3—The Artist Financier (Dr.).....
Aug. 10—The White Red Man (Dr.).....
Aug. 17—The Colonel's Daughter (Dr.).....
Aug. 24—Castles in the Air (Com.).....
Aug. 31—The Torn Scarf (Dr.).....
Sept. 7—Picturesque Colorado (Scenic).....
Sept. 14—Faith (Dr.) .....
Sept. 21—The Rose and the Dagger (Dr.).....
Sept. 28—The Derelict (Dr.).....

SOLAX.

Sept. 1—The Hold Up (Military).....
Sept. 6—Hector's Inheritance (Com.).....
Sept. 8—The Best Policy (Mil. Dr.).....
Sept. 13—Her Uncle's Will (Com.).....
Sept. 15—The Altered Message (Mil. Dr.).....
Sept. 20—Oh! You Stenographer (Com.).....
Sept. 22—Nellie's Soldier (Mil. Dr.).....
Sept. 27—How Hopkins Raised the Rent (Com.)
Sept. 29—An Italian's Gratitude (Dr.).....
Oct. 4—A Breezy Morning (Com.).....
Oct. 6—His Sister's Sweetheart (Military)....
Oct. 11—He Was a Millionaire (Com.).....

THANHOUSER.

Sept. 1—Romeo and Juliet (Dr.).....
Sept. 5—Count Ivan and the Waitress (Dr.)
Sept. 8—Romeo and Juliet—Part 2 (Dr.).....
Sept. 12—The Buddhist Priestess (Dr.).....
Sept. 15—In the Chorus (Dr.).....
Sept. 19—The Lie (Dr.).....
Sept. 22—The Honeymooners (Dr.).....
Sept. 26—Lochinvar (Dr.).....
Sept. 29—Love's Sacrifice (Dr.).....
Oct. 3—The Five Rose Sisters (Dr.).....
Oct. 6—The East and the West (Dr.).....

YANKEE.

Sept. 1—A Great Wrong Righted (Dr.).....
Sept. 4—Iushavogue (Dr.).....
Sept. 8—Mesmerizing Moe (Com.).....
Sept. 8—Faded Roses (Dr.).....
Sept. 11—Tangled Heartstrings (Dr.).....
Sept. 15—Woman (Dr.).....
Sept. 18—The Star Reporter (Dr.).....
Sept. 22—The Girl and the Chauffeur (Dr.)....
Sept. 25—For the Wearing of the Green (Dr.)
Sept. 29—Man (Dr.) .....
Oct. 2—She Never Knew (Dr.).....
Oct. 6—The Goose Girl (Dr.).....

Get Simpson's Celebrated Song Slides
OF ALL THE POPULAR SONGS
Perfection of Artistic Coloring
ALFRED L. SIMPSON
113 W. 132d St. N. Y. City

Money Makers for you. Think of the people passing by or out of your place that would drop another nickel or dime. Many styles. Catalog No. 34 tells all.
KINGERY MFG. CO.
CINCINNATI, O.

FILM FOR SALE
Over 1000 reels in stock at all times, from $2.50 up.

Three Musketeers	2 reels	$50.00
Dame of Montsereau	2 reels	50.00
Fall of Troy	2 reels	75.00

Send for catalogue.
A. J. CLAPHAM
12 E. 15th St., New York, N.Y.

Operators!
I guarantee quick and satisfactory repair work on all machines. Only genuine parts supplied. Get my prices on ONE DROP OIL and BULL DOG CEMENT the best articles of their kind on the market.
H. A. MACKIE
853 Broadway, Cor. 14th Street New York
'Phone: 2478 Stuyvesant

SPECIAL ROLL TICKETS The Big Ticket. Any Printing Any Colors

5,000	$1.25	20,000	$4.60	50,000	$7.50
10,000	$2.50	25,000	$5.50	100,000	$10.00

Get the Samples Stock Tickets, 6 Cents
NATIONAL TICKET COMPANY - - - Shamokin, Pa.

"Electra" Pink Label Carbons Help Good Lamps Give Better Light

"Electra" is the pure, fine grained, homogeneous carbon, absolutely straight, and of uniform diameter throughout.

It is the carbon that burns steady, that burns uniform—that does a big part in making the steady light.

It is the carbon, above all others, that is not liable to sputter or to jump.

"Electra" is the carbon of greatest economy—the carbon of little waste—the carbon that means less cleaning and trimming expense.

"Excello" Flaming Carbons

The original genuine flaming arc lamp carbon.

Not adapted to, but designed and made to give the best service in any flaming arc lamps.

Resistance is reduced to the minimum because of the special patented form of metal vein, thus maximum light from the available current is assured.

"Excello" Carbons produce a much higher candle power than any other brand of flaming carbons.

Yellow, pearl white, brilliant white or red light.

HUGO REISINGER

Sole Importer of "Electra" and Excello Carbons

11 BROADWAY - NEW YORK

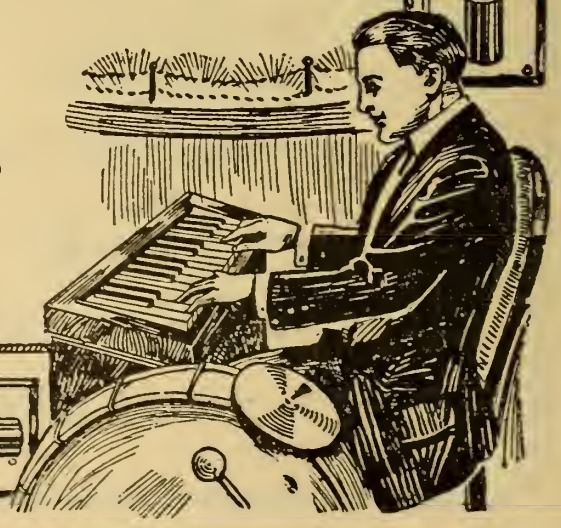
LOOK AT THIS

W. H. ESCH,
Majestic Theatre, La Porte, Ind.,

says that he installed a set of Deagan's No. 310 Electric Bells at $75.00, and had to lock the exit and entrance doors the third night to keep the people from breaking in. The house next door, with a large orchestra, and four vaudeville acts, did practically nothing, while the first few weeks the business in the Majestic was as good at 11 o'clock at night as at any other time of the day, with no other added feature except the bells.

The net income of the house was increased $375.00 the first four weeks—absolutely the best investment ever made and he would not be without a set at any price.

The Bells paid for themselves the first three weeks they were used.



THE testimonial of Mr. W. H. Esch (see page preceding) is not an exceptional case as we have hundreds of customers ready to testify the value of the Deagan's Bells and other musical instruments as an amusement attraction.

Mr. Exhibitor, you are not taking any chances. We refund your money if you are not entirely satisfied.

We have been 31 years in business and from almost nothing built up a $100,000.00 proposition by delivering the goods every time.

We make these bells in sets from

$40.00 up

The most popular set of bells we are now making is the

No. 310 outfit

25 Bells, 2 Octaves, Chromatic C to C

Complete with resonators, keyboard and all electrical apparatus.

Price of this outfit is $75.00

Will be shipped to you for examination and trial on receipt of $5.00 to guarantee express charges.

Every set of bells guaranteed one year.

Write for circulars and descriptive matter

J. C. DEAGAN

3800 N. Clark Street
CHICAGO, ILL.

Address all communications to our Main Office, Avenue E at 43rd Street, Bayonne, N. J.

NESTOR

NESTOR

NESTOR

"The Worth-While Film"

GET THEM!—EVERY WEEK 2 NESTOR FILM FEATURES—GET THEM!

Release of Wednesday, September 27th, 1911

"THE YOUNG DOCTOR"

Scene from "The Young Doctor"

A CHARMING Western Foto-Drama that entertains throughout its entire length (978 feet). How a young doctor, backed by modern science, triumphs over an old medico and the fossilized school of medicine, thereby winning the latter's fair daughter, who scores a decided victory over them both. Get "The Young Doctor" and you'll also win—a sure cure for poor business—makes good business better—The panacea for all exhibitors' ills.—GET IT.

Release of Wednesday, October 4th, 1911

"THOSE JERSEY COWPUNCHERS"

The most amusing satire ever pictured
Get it! Rough-house for it! Get it!

Mahan & Wright, McKees Rocks, Pa., says:-

"We cannot speak too highly of the fine Indian and Western films you have been producing of late, and we earnestly hope you will adhere to your present policy, for they are the kind the public want. A Nestor Lobby Magnet on display gets the crowd."

GET THEM!—EVERY WEEK 2 NESTOR FILM FEATURES—GET THEM!

A Split Reel of United Fun, Released Saturday, September 30th, 1911

"MUTT and JEFF as Reporters"

and "Getting Even"

Two Capital Comedies on One Reel—Two Storms of Wholesome Laughter
A Mirthful Double Bill.—GET IT!

Release of Saturday, October 7th, 1911

"MUTT and JEFF Spend a Quiet Day In the Country" and "THE MEDDLING PARSON"

This Comedy Split Reel Is a Veritable Niagara of Merriment BOOK IT NOW! GET IT!

Roscoe C. Cuneo, Star Theatre, Upper Sandusky, Ohio, sends in the following:-

"Your Mutt and Jeff pictures are the best coin getters I have ever had—just pack the house and all are delighted. You make the best films and do the best advertising. Continue the good work."

GET THEM! :-: :-: EVERY WEEK 2 NESTOR FILM FEATURES :-: :-: GET THEM!

NESTOR

DAVID HORSLEY
BAYONNE, N. J.
'Phone, Bayonne 940

MOTION PICTURE DISTRIBUTING AND SALES CO.
Sole Distributors

NESTOR

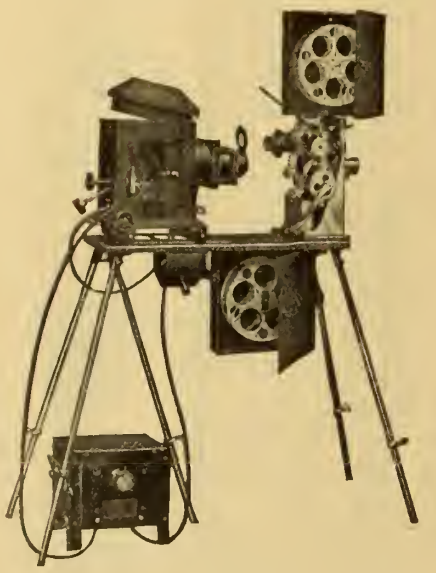
COMING!—DESPERATE DESMOND—COMING!

TRADE MARK

Besides being the best motion picture machine made, the safest, the easiest to operate and the longest wearing,

THE EDISON KINETOSCOPE

is the best advertisement for your show.



Your patrons know that what Thomas A. Edison produces is right. They know that the show that uses an Edison machine is prepared to give them the best, clearest, steadiest pictures, that such a show is a safe place in which to spend their recreation time and that they'll get their money's worth.

Your patrons have confidence in the name Edison—and the Edison Kinetoscope repays them well for that confidence.

A cheap machine brings nothing but trouble—and eats up your profit on the constant and frequent repairs it requires. The way to reap all the profit there is in the motion picture business is to install the Edison Kinetoscope.

Write us today for complete information and a copy of the Edison Kinetogram.

Thomas A. Edison, Inc

72 Lakeside Ave., Orange, N. J.

It's a quick and easy matter to hitch a

Kimble A C

Variable Speed Picture Machine Motor to your machine.

And when you start it off and watch the human way in which it responds to every touch of its one-and-only lever, you will kick yourself for not having put it in long ago.

It varies speeds, up and down the scale, as desired, between 300 and 3,000 r.p.m.; not by "steps," but by imperceptible gradations; and it's the only alternating current motor in the world that can do this.

It does all the heavy WORK.

You do the heavy thinking and scheming.

Hands and eyes and brain free from the grind at the wheel, your skill and ingenuity will suggest a hundred ways of giving the audience new thrills—"stunts" that your competitors can never do.

And, by the same token, if some live competitor gets his "Kimble" in first, and advertises his place as

"The only electric theatre in town"

he'll give you a lively fight for your very existence.

So, better hurry up with your order.

Prices f. o. b. Chicago

1-8 h.p. Kimble A C Motor with grooved pulley.

110 volts - - - -	$27.00
220 volts - - - -	28.50
Countershaft - - -	10.00

(Countershaft is not necessary when you belt direct from pulley on motor to pulley on flywheel of machine.)

Better get busy on this and be the first. Use the coupon.

Kimble Electric Company

1118 Washington Boulevard
CHICAGO

Kimble Electric Company, Chicago.

How soon could you ship a ⅛ h.p. picture machine motor.....volts.....cycles, to operate a No. .....machine, and which method of connecting it do you recommend?

Name .....

P. O..... State.....

Moving Picture World (Date)

DANTE'S INFERNO

List of States Sold and States Open

DANTE'S INFERNO MILANO FILMS

Virginia	Jake Wells
North Carolina	Jake Wells
South Carolina	Jake Wells
Alabama	Jake Wells
Florida	Jake Wells
Georgia	Jake Wells
Tennessee	Jake Wells
Mississippi	Jake Wells
Louisiana	Jake Wells
Arkansas	Jake Wells
Texas	Banner Film & Supply Co., Kansas City, Mo.
Oklahoma	Banner Film & Supply Co., Kansas City, Mo.
Iowa	Banner Film & Supply Co., Kansas City, Mo.
Nebraska	Banner Film & Supply Co., Kansas City, Mo.
New Mexico	Banner Film & Supply Co., Kansas City, Mo.
North Dakota	Banner Film & Supply Co., Kansas City, Mo.
South Dakota	Banner Film & Supply Co., Kansas City, Mo.
Massachusetts	Fieghry & Place, 145 W. 45th St., New York
Rhode Island	Fieghry & Place, 145 W. 45th St., New York
Colorado	G. H. Greaves, Princess Theater, Denver, Col.
Oregon	People's Amusement Co., Portland, Ore.
West Virginia	Colonial Amusement Co., Charleston, W. Va.
Ohio	Erb & Osler, Cincinnati, Ohio
Kansas	Karl Bornschein, Ellsworth, Kan.

Balance of the United States and all of Canada is still open. Write or wire, or, better still, come to New York and secure the greatest money maker in the history of the amusement business.

DANTE'S INFERNO--HELIOS

STATES OPEN

Maine, New York, Washington, Delaware, Idaho, Iowa, North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas, Texas, Montana, New Mexico, Rhode Island, Massachusetts, Missouri, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Kentucky, Utah, Michigan, West Virginia, New Hampshire, Colorado, Oregon, Vermont, Wisconsin, Arizona, Illinois, New Jersey, Nevada, Wyoming, Minnesota, Indiana, Oklahoma, Maryland, Connecticut, Indian Territory, District of Columbia, Philippines, West Indies, Canadian Provinces and Mexico.

The lithographic work for Dante's Inferno by the Courier Co., of Buffalo, is the finest ever made. Including: 24-sheets—2 kinds of 8-sheets—4 kinds of 2-sheets—4 kinds of 1-sheets—2 kinds of ½-sheets; booklets, cards, etc.

IN PREPARATION—The Aviator—Pilgrim's Progress—Paradise Lost

P. P. CRAFT, General Manager

Monopol Film Co.,

145 West 45th St. New York City

See our Advertisement on next two pages.

Dante's Inferno
(Milano)
In 5 Reels

Dante's Inferno
(Helios)
In 2 Reels

DANTE ALIGHIERI

A PICTURE THAT IS DESTINED TO ESTABLISH MOTOGRAPHY AS ONE OF THE FINE ARTS.

THE POEM HAS EXISTED FOR 600 YEARS AND THE PICTURES WILL LAST FOREVER.

A PRODUCTION OF GROTESQUE GRANDEUR DWARFING THE STAGECRAFT OF ALL TIME.

THE GREATEST IMPETUS THE EDUCATIONAL MOVEMENT in MOTOGRAPHY HAS EVER HAD.

PRESERVING ALL THE DIGNITY AND REVERENCE of the ORIGINAL POEM and PAINTINGS.

Write, Wire or Come to New York.

Dante's Inferno is classed with the big theatrical attractions by the leading managers, including the Shuberts, Klaw & Erlanger, John Cort, Jake Wells, Stair & Havlin and others.

Dante's

We will guarantee to secure bookings in the large theatres in your state on liberal sharing terms. Don't neglect this opportunity to make your fortune with the greatest picture ever made in the history of Motography

MONOPOL

P.P. CRAFT, General Manager

Crowded houses in the leading cities of America, including New York, Chicago, Washington, Baltimore, Cincinnati, St. Louis, Los Angeles, Atlanta, Indianapolis, Kansas City, Ottawa, San Francisco, Memphis, Richmond.

Inferno

DANTE'S
INFERNO
will be shown every Sunday all season at the Herald Sq. Theatre, New York

Read what the leading papers say:

"The greatest accomplishment of the moving picture world to date."—Los Angeles Herald.

"Grace George postponed for third week of Dante's Inferno."—Montreal Star.

"A visual realization of the appaling grandeur of Hell."—Baltimore News.

"This realistic exposition is, in itself, a liberal education."—St. Louis Republic.

"How were such scenes made possible to photography? Each picture is perfect from the artistic point of view."—Montreal Tribune.

FILM CO.

145 W. 45th St., NEW YORK

The sweet breath of the pines in our release of Tues., Oct. 3.

The Call from the Hills

A pastoral narrative of the unrequited love of a young country musician in the city and his return to his native home.

On the same reel—A comedy of the kill—'em—dead kind

A Matrimonial Idyl

A picture depicting the perils of love at first sight. Many an innocent man by the simple process of flirtation has found himself floundering in the hot water sea of matrimony. A timely warning to promising young men who are about to take the step.

An entirely probable story of early ranch life — Sat., Oct. 7.

The Branded Indian

With the conquering of the redman by the pale face, race prejudice did not die away and an Indian did not get the benefit of the doubt when accused by an unscrupulous white man.

This picture tells of the noble self-sacrifice of an Indian brave for a white maiden when he had every reason to hate the white race. A strong tale of an outlaw with the traits of a hero.

Tuesday, September 26 — THE FALLS OF BOHEMIA
On the same reel, Tues., Sept. 26, IMAGINATIVE WILLIE
Sat., Sept. 30 — THE HALF-BREED'S ATONEMENT

POWERS PICTURE PLAYS

145 West 45th Street, New York

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD

VOLUME IX

July-September, 1911

Edited by
J. P. CHALMERS

PUBLISHED BY

THE WORLD PHOTOGRAPHIC PUBLISHING CO.

125 East Twenty-third Street, New York

Index to Volume IX.—July to September, 1911

A

PAGE.

Advent of the Topical Picture 283
Advertising for Exhibitors. I. By Epes Winthrop Sargent 876
Advertising for Exhibitors. II. By Epes Winthrop Sargent 960
Aeroplane Disaster, An 43
American Born Eskimo Girl Plays Leading Part in Selig Film 291
Another Step Forward 102
And No Man Putteth New Wine Into Old Bottles. By W. Stephen Bush 605
Another Independent Manufacturer 983
Arrest of Signor Calzibini 102
Artist Financier, The 289
Artists of the Screen, The. By William H. Kitchell 876

B

Baltimore Censorship Flurry 102
Beware of Moving Picture Men 354
Beware of the Red Lights 774

C

Call of the Song (Imp) 112
Camera Press Man, The 868
Child and the Picture, The 689
Copyrighting a Scenario. By George Rockhill Craw 20
Coliseum Theatre, Seattle, Wash 26
Compelling Harmony of the Whole, The. By W. Stephen Bush 103
Coming National Convention of Exhibitors 186
Corporation Pictures in Chicago 208
Colleen Bawn 289
Coming Enfranchisement of the Moving Picture. By W. Stephen Bush. 355
Condemns "Sixtus the Fifth" 702
Copperfield, David (three reels) (Thanhouser) 952
Currier with Western Song Slide Exchange 290

D

"Dante's Inferno" 17
Dante's Inferno (Milano Films Company) 101
Dante's L'Inferno. By W. Stephen Bush 188-189
Dante's Inferno at the Princess, Chicago. By Charles Young 789
Dangerous Theatre, A 113
Day of the Dump. By Homer W. Sibley 273
Day with Simpson, A. By A. Mac Arthur 704
Declaration of Independence 43
Detroit Police Make Rules 279
Death of Noted Film Actor 530
Dealers and Brokers in Moving Picture Realism (Inc.) By W. Stephen Bush 868
Does It Pay to be Funny? By William H. Kitchel 16

E

Earmark on the Film, The. By Epes Winthrop Sargent 521
Edison off on the Mauretania 367
Electric Turnstile and the Cash Box 130
Epic in Moving Pictures, A Great (Jerusalem Delivered) 14
Ever Potent Moving Picture, The 612
Exhibitions of Kinemacolor in Chicago 23
Exhibitors' Opportunity, The 269
Exhibitors' Library, The 382
Exhibitors Rise to the Occasion 437
Exhibitors Form National League 440-443

F

Facing an Audience. By W. Stephen Bush 774
Film Maker's Responsibilities, The 270
Flying "A" Bungalow, The 529
Fools Rush In 102
Framing the Screen 874

G

Giving Musical Expression to the Drama 354
Gotch-Hackenschmidt Match Film 964
Growth of the Wichita Film & Supply Company 43
Great Triumph, A 530

H

Handy Tool for Operators, A 49
Herrick Exploits Kinemacolor 382
High Class Advertising 43
Historical Pictures 606
High Brow, The. By Louis Reeves Harrison 775
Horrible Example, A 202
Holmes, Jr. (Rex). Sherlock 291
How Buckwalter Saved the Show. By M. H. Walker 368
Home of the Degan Bells, The 461

I

Importance of Trade Organizations 444
Impressions of Dante's Inferno 780
Interview with Thomas Edison, An. By Frank P. Hulette 104
Is the Two-Dollar-a-Seat Theater in Sight. By Robert Grau 959

J

Jacobson's Arc Reflector 460
Justice to the Film Makers. By W. Stephen Bush 353

K

Kalem Girl in Ireland, A 31
Kinemacholor Exhibition 13
Kinemacolor Pictures at Garrick 290
Kinemacolor Sound Effects 549
Kinemacolor Makes a Hit 362

L

PAGE.

Letter from an Old Exhibitor to a New Film Maker 37
Letter from an Old Exhibitor to a New Film Maker 368
Letter from an Old Exhibitor to a New Film Maker 532
Letter from an Old Exhibitor to a New Film Maker 700
Letter from an Old Exhibitor to a New Film Maker 786
Lost Gallery, The 185-186
Longest Throw in the World 539
Lucky Escape from Drowning 291

M

Martin's Tour a Big Success, Clyde 25
Mistakes Will Sometimes Happen 102
Michigan State Convention of Exhibitors 196
Mirror Screen Company Increases Capital Stock 275
Mirroroide 290
Moving Picture Actor Drowned 112
Motion Picture Hearing Adjourned 283
Moore's Enterprise, Tom 290
Montgomery Opens Atlanta House 526
More Light on the Moving Picture League of America 608
Moving Picture Absurdities. By W. Stephen Bush 773
Moral of the Films, The 865
Montgomery Theater, The New 877
Moving Pictures in Providence, R. I 897
Murder of Othello, The. By H. F. Hoffman 110
My Policies. By Henry 867

N

National Association 367
Nat. Goodwin in Pictures 367
Need of a National Association 282
New Departure, The 288
No Sectarian Films. By W. Stephen Bush 438

O

Official League Announcement 530
Open Market, The. By W. Stephen Bush 522
Original Critique, An 705
Outline of How to Write a Photoplay 27

P

Parallel and a Prediction, A. By Epes Winthrop Sargeant 533
Picture New Object 447
Picture Trade in Other Lands 703
Power in New Quarters 49
Possibilities of Musical Synchronization. By W. Stephen Bush 606
Possibilities of the Film. By Edward R. Higgins 610
Possibilities of the Picture 774
Powers Representative, New 896
Progress of the Independent Product 29
Production Commercialized 186
Princess Theater, Denver, Colo 534
Proprietors Not Liable 786
Press Agent and the Exhibitors. By W. Stephen Bush 866
Punk Plays. By Louis Reeves Harrison 356

Q

Quality Stands the Test 784

R

Racing the Films 616
Reviews of Notable Films:
As a Boy Dreams (Imp) 360
An Old Time Nightmare (Powers) 778
Blind Princess and the Poet (Biograph) 358
Battle of Trafalgar (Edison) 695
Connecting Link, The (Eclair) 274
Coronation in Kinemacolor 274
Code of the Hills (Vitagraph) 610
Colleen Bawn, The (Kalem) 954
Cleo & Phyletes (Itala) 778
Dad, The Constable (Essanay) 106
Death of King Edward III (Vitagraph) 358
Declaration of Independence (Edison) 693
Don Ramon's Daughter (Kalem) 777
From Oestersund to Storlein (Great N.) 524
Jimmie Elopes (Gaumont) 18
Judge's Story, The (Thanhouser) 274
Jimmie as a Footman (Gaumont) 609
Legend of Lake Desolation (Pathe) 190
Last Drop of Water (Biograph) 193
Little Child, A (Reliance) 524
Little Dove's Romance (Biograph) 992
Mexican Joan of Arc (Kalem) 19
My Old Dutch (Vitagraph) 446
Mission Waif (Melies) 524
New Manager, The (Essanay) 275
Ninety and Nine (Vitagraph) 777
On a Tramp Steamer (Vitagraph) 194
Out of the Darkness (Reliance) 360
Pied Piper of Hamelin (Thanhouser) 106
Profligate, The (Selig) 192
Pathe Journal, The (Pathe) 359
Picturesque Colorado (Rex) 870
Pathe Weekly, The (Pathe) 871
Ranchman's Nerve (American) 190
Rory O'More (Kalem) 445
Romeo and Juliet (Thanhouser) 446
Red Devils, The (Champion) 691
Ruling Passion 695
She Came, She Saw, She Conquered (Vitagraph) 194
Special Messenger (Kalem) 359
Swords and Hearts (Biograph) 523
'Tween Two Loves (Imp) 776

PAGE.
Two Orphans, The (Selig) ... 869
Under One Flag (Vitagraph) ... 693
Veil of Happiness (Pathe) ... 19
When Two Hearts Are Won (Kalem) ... 610
Woman (Yankee) ... 692
Reynolds Secures State Rights ... 290
Rex in Europe ... 779

S

Sales Company Employees' Ball ... 879
Screen Test, A ... 549
Serious Vaudeville Situation, A. By Robert Grau ... 21
Selig Western Stock Company ... 297
Selig Entertains ... 701
Short Talks to the Moving Picture League ... 607
Sign of the Harvest. By W. Stephen Bush ... 272
Some Scenarios and Others. By Emmett Campbell Hall ... 109
Special Release and the Small Exhibition. By Epes Winthrop Sargent. 965
Strike That Failed ... 27
Standard Fiction in Films. By W. Stephen Bush ... 950
Superior Plays. By Louis Reeves Harrison ... 361
Superior Plays. By Louis Reeves Harrison ... 957

T

Taking Pictures Under Difficulties ... 784
Testing Chauffeurs by Aid of Moving Pictures ... 364
Testing the New York Operators' Law ... 539
Testing the New York Operators' Law ... 779

PAGE.
Technique of the Photoplay (Chapter 1) (Epes Winthrop Sargent) 108-109
" " " " " 2 " " " 197-198
" " " " " 3 " " " 281-282
" " " " " 4 " " " 363-364
" " " " " 5 " " " 450-451
" " " " " 6 " " " 525-526
" " " " " 7 " " " 613-614
" " " " " 8 " " " 696-697
Those Sound Effects ... 873
Triumph and the Trivial, The. By Epes Winthrop Sargent ... 689
Truth About the Jest. By Emmett Campbell Hall ... 881

U

Unfair Competition in Jackson, Tenn ... 297
Universal Appliance Supply Company, The ... 26

V

Vogue of Western and Military Drama, The ... 271

W

Waste and a Danger, A. By W. Stephen Bush ... 105
Want Sanitary Booths ... 113
Want Ordinance Enforced ... 784
Weekly Film of the World Events ... 187
Working Sound Effects. Clyde Martin ... 873
Why Is a Censor? By Louis Reeves Harrison ... 866
Where Effects Are Unnecessary Noises. By W. Stephen Bush ... 690
Wise Rejection, A ... 521-522
Will Specials Lead to Ruus. By Epes Winthrop Sargent ... 606

Index to the Stories of the Films.

For the benefit of the readers of the Moving Picture World we have compiled a complete list of films with their dates which have been released during the past three months. Some of the films listed, and which have no page numbers, indicate that the synopses were not furnished by the manufacturers.

LICENSED RELEASES.

A

Aceideutal Outlaw (Rel'd July 29)—Lubin.... 223
Academy Girl, The (Rel'd Aug. 12)—Gaumont 305
Across the Mountain Passes of New Zealand (Rel'd Aug. 25)—Pathe ...
Adventures of a Baby, The (Rel'd Aug. 9) —Edison ... 306
Ad, the Maid, and the Man, The (Rel'd Aug. 17)—Pathe ... 391
Aeroplane Disaster, An (Rel'd Aug. 1) —Gaumont ... 144
African Sharpshooters (Rel'd Sept. 2)—Gaumont
African Birds and Their Enemies (Rel'd Sept. 30)—Pathe ...
Ajaccio, the Birthplace of Napoleon (Rel'd Oct. 3)—Gaumont ... 990
Alice's Sacrifice (Rel'd July 17)—Lubin..... 54
Al Martin's Game (Rel'd Sept. 14)—Lubin.. 640
Alpine Lease, The (Rel'd Sept. 15)—Kalem... 725
All on Account of the Porter (Rel'd Sept. 21) —Essanay ... 818
Amateur Skater, An (Rel'd July 26)—Eclipse.. 144
American Field Artillery Maneuvers (Rel'd Aug. 3)—Pathe ...
Among the Japanese (Rel'd Aug. 28)—Selig..
Arrow Head (Rel'd Aug. 12)—Lubin..... 305
Archibald, the Hero (Rel'd Aug. 26)—Lubin.. 476
Arizona Bill (Rel'd Sept. 25)—Kalem..... 905
Arabian Types and Customs (Rel'd Sept. 8) —Pathe ...
Art Industries in Kabylie (Rel'd Sept. 14) —Pathe ...
As Fate Decreed (Rel'd July 27)—Pathe..... 222
At the Gringo Mine (Rel'd July 17)—Melies.. 140
At Jones Ferry (Rel'd Sept. 8)—Edison..... 639
Auto Bug, The (Rel'd Aug. 14)—Lubin..... 392

B

Badge of Courage, The (Rel'd July 17)—Kalem 54
Backwoodman's Suspicion, The (Rel'd July 15) —Essanay ... 60
Battle of Bunker Hill, The (Rel'd Aug. 8) —Edison ... 306
Barnacle's Baby, Capt. (Rel'd Aug. 15) —Vitagraph ... 392
Baron, The (Rel'd Aug. 31)—Biograph..... 637
Battle of Trafalgar, The (Rel'd Sept. 22) —Edison ... 822
Bessie's Ride (Rel'd July 20)—Melies..... 54
Beautiful Voice, The (Rel'd July 31)—Biograph 305
Boss of the Forest (Rel'd Aug. 24)—Lubin.. 476
Betty's Buttons (Rel'd Aug. 30)—Edison.... 555
Beyond the Law (Rel'd Sept. 20)—Vitagraph.. 725
Bell-Ringer of the Abbey, The (Rel'd Sept. 29) —Vitagraph ... 906
Benares, the Holy City of the Hindoos (Rel'd July 17)—Pathe ...
Bell of Justice, The (Rel'd Aug. 11)—Vitagraph 308
Billy, the Kid (Rel'd Aug. 9)—Vitagraph.... 308
Birds of a Feather (Rel'd Aug. 24)—Vitagraph.. 308
Billy's Marriage (Rel'd Aug. 12)—Pathe..... 391
Bill's Ward (Rel'd Sept. 9)—Lubin..... 604
Big Dam, The (Rel'd Sept. 23)—Edison..... 822
Blue Wing and the Violinist (Rel'd Aug. 3) —Pathe ... 306
Blacksmith's Love, The (Rel'd Aug. 17)—Selig 391
Blind Princess and the Poet, The (Rel'd Aug. 17)—Biograph ... 475
Blackfoot Half-breed, The (Rel'd Sept. 29) —Kalem ... 905
Bobby, the Coward (Rel'd July 13)—Biograph. 56
Bob and Rowdy (Rel'd July 13)—Edison.... 142
Bob's New Scheme (Rel'd Aug. 10)—Lubin.. 305
Boy of the Revolution, A (Rel'd Aug. 26) —Pathe ... 478
Branded Shoulder, The (Rel'd Aug. 28)—Kalem 556
Bragg, a Fugitive, Mr. (Rel'd Oct. 2)—Biograph 992
Broncho Bill's Last Spree (Rel'd Sept. 9) —Essanay ... 842
Building the New Line (Rel'd Aug. 30)—Kalem 556
Burglarized Burglar, The (Rel'd Sept. 15) —Essanay ... 728
By Woman's Wit (Rel'd Sept. 16)—Vitagraph 725
By the Camp Fire's Flicker (Rel'd Sept. 25) —Vitagraph ... 906
By Aid of the Lariat (Rel'd July 21)—Kalem.. 138

C

Capt. Kate (Rel'd July 13)—Selig..... 54
Capture of Fort Ticonderoga (Rel'd July 21) —Edison ... 60
Caught in the Act (Rel'd July 31)—Selig.... 223
Carrot Caterpillar, The (Rel'd Sept 1)—Pathe 556
Call of the Wilderness, The (Rel'd Aug. 31) —Melies ... 560
California Revolution of 1846, The (Rel'd Oct. 6)—Kalem ... 988
Carr's Regeneration (Rel'd Oct. 6)—Vitagraph. 992
Cement Rock Blasting (Rel'd Sept. 16)—Lubin 724
Chance Shot, A (Rel'd July 24)—Kalem..... 138
Christian and Moor (Rel'd Aug. 1)—Edison.. 224
Cheyenne's Bride, The (Rel'd Aug. 24)—Pathe.. 478
Cherry Blossoms (Rel'd Sept. 8)—Vitagraph.. 637
Chrysanthemums (Rel'd Aug. 21)—Pathe.....
Child Crusoes, The (Rel'd Sept. 13)—Vitagraph 906
City of Singapore, The (Rel'd Aug. 10) —Pathe ...
Cinematograph Fiend, The (Rel'd Sept. 16) —Gaumont ... 724
City of Bordeaux, France, The (Rel'd Sept. 26) —Gaumont ... 904
Cintra, a Picturesque Town of Portugal (Rel'd Oct. 7)—Gaumont ... 990
Clown's Baby, The (Rel'd July 28)—Essanay.. 222
Clown and His Performance, The (Rel'd Aug. 1) —Vitagraph ... 226
Clever Beyond Her Years (Rel'd Sept. 6) —Eclipse ... 644
Conquering Carrie (Rel'd July 26)—Kalem.... 138
Country Cupid, A (Rel'd July 24)—Biograph... 222
Colonel's Son, The (Rel'd Aug. 4)—Kalem.... 223
Commy, the Canvasser (Rel'd Aug. 1)—Essanay 306
Condemned for Treason (Rel'd Aug. 23)—Eclipse 478
College Sweethearts (Rel'd Sept. 14)—Pathe.. 724
Cowboy's Bride, The (Rel'd Sept. 22)—Kalem 820
Convenient Burglar (Rel'd Sept. 21)—Biograph 824
Cowboy's Love, A (Rel'd Sept. 27)—Lubin.. 905
Counterfeit Roll, A (Rel'd Sept. 28)—Lubin.. 905
Convict's Heart, A (Rel'd Sept. 30)—Pathe.. 908
Crazy Dope (Rel'd Oct. 4)—Pathe..... 992
Crossing the Alps in a Motor (Rel'd Sept. 19) —Gaumont ... 820
Culture of the Dahlia, The (Rel'd Sept. 8) —Pathe ... 642
Culture of Bulbous Flowers (Rel'd Sept. 23) —Gaumont ... 820
Cup of Cold Water, A (Rel'd Sept. 21)—Selig. 822
Cure for Crime, A (Rel'd Sept. 27)—Edison.. 905

D

Dad's Boy (Rel'd July 15)—Pathe..... 56
Daughter of the Watch, The (Rel'd July 17) —Pathe ... 138
Daughter of the South, The (Rel'd Sept. 9) —Pathe ... 556
Dark Romance of a Tobacco Can, The (Rel'd Sept. 7)—Essanay ... 642
Dad's Girls (Rel'd Sept. 12)—Selig..... 728
Dan, the Dandy (Rel'd Sept. 18)—Biograph.. 824
Death of King Edward III, The (Rel'd Aug. 5) —Vitagraph ... 223
Declaration of Independence, The (Rel'd Sept. 1)—Edison ... 638
Death of Nathan Hale, The (Rel'd Sept. 29) —Edison ... 905
Diving Girl, The (Rel'd Aug. 21)—Biograph.. 556
Diamond Gang, The (Rel'd Sept. 5)—Essanay 642
Disappointed Old Maids (Rel'd Sept. 25)—Pathe 906
Divided Interest (Rel'd Sept. 11)—Lubin.... 640
Doomed Ship, The (Rel'd July 28)—Selig.... 142
Don Ramon's Daughter (Rel'd Aug. 23)—Kalem 475
Driven from the Tribe (Rel'd Sept. 27)—Pathe. 906
During Cherry Time (Rel'd July 27)—Lubin.. 138

E

Easterner's Sacrifice, The (Rel'd Sept. 2)—Lubin 559
Eastern Europe (Rel'd Aug. 25)—Pathe.....
Electric Booths (Rel'd Sept. 22)—Pathe.....
Elephant Hunting in Victoria Nyanza (Rel'd July 28)—Pathe ...
Escaped Lunatic, The (Rel'd Sept. 13)—Edison 725
Eva is Tired of Life (Rel'd Sept. 11)—Pathe.. 724
Everybody's Troubles (Rel'd Sept. 21)—Essanay 818
Everyday Life in Malacca (Rel'd Sept. 15) —Pathe ...
Express Envelope, The (Rel'd Sept. 13)—Edison 725
Extracting Palm Juice in the Forest (Rel'd Aug. 14)—Pathe ...
Ezra and the Fortune Teller (Rel'd Oct. 4) —Eclipse ... 990

F

Father and Son (Rel'd July 13)—Pathe..... 56
Famous Duel, A (Rel'd July 19)—Edison.... 60
Favoring Current, A (Rel'd July 25)—Gaumont 144
Fair Exchange, A (Rel'd Aug. 7)—Selig..... 308
Fate's Funny Frolic (Rel'd Aug. 25)—Essanay 475
Farming, Old and New Methods (Rel'd Sept. 9) —Gaumont ... 644
Fickle Fiancee, The (Rel'd July 28)—Pathe.. 222
Five Bold Bad Men (Rel'd July 25)—Essanay. 222
Fidelity (Rel'd Aug. 10)—Pathe..... 391
Fire Brigade in Moscow (Rel'd Sept. 18) —Pathe ...
Flowers and Plants in Winter (Rel'd Aug. 5) —Gaumont ... 224
Flaming Arrows, The (Rel'd Aug. 9)—Pathe.. 391
Flirts (Rel'd Oct. 6)—Pathe..... 992
For Love and Glory (Rel'd Aug. 14)—Vitagraph 392
For He's a Jolly Good Fellow (Rel'd Aug. 18) —Essanay ... 475
For the Honor of the Name (Rel'd Aug. 16) —Eclipse ... 555
For the Sake of the Tribe (Rel'd Aug. 30) —Pathe ... 556
For Massa's Sake (Rel'd Oct. 9)—Pathe..... 992
For the Queen (Rel'd Sept. 13)—Edison..... 725

For $200 (Rel'd Sept. 21)—Melies..... 824
Fountain of Youth (Rel'd Aug. 28)—Lubin.. 560
Foraging (Rel'd Sept. 11)—Vitagraph..... 725
Forgotten (Rel'd Sept. 22)—Vitagraph..... 818
Foul Play (Three Reels. Rel'd Oct. 6)—Edison 990
Frolicsome Florrie (Rel'd July 15)—Gaumont.. 58
Friday, the 13th (Rel'd Aug. 12)—Edison.... 308
Friendly Marriage, A (Rel'd Sept. 5)—Vitagraph 637
From Bordeaux to Pauillac, France (Rel'd Sept. 12)—Gaumont 724
Fright, The (Rel'd Sept. 18)—Pathe..... 818
Friend of the Family, A (Rel'd Sept. 26)—Gaumont 904
From Field to Cradle (Rel'd Oct. 7)—Lubin.. 990
From Lourdes to Garvarnie (Rel'd Sept. 11)—Pathe .....
$500 Reward (Rel'd Aug. 21)—Biograph..... 556

G

Gay Time in Atlantic City, A (Rel'd July 20)—Lubin 54
Gay Time in Washington (Rel'd Sept. 4)—Lubin 559
General Strike, A (Rel'd Aug. 8)—Gaumont.. 305
General's Daughter, The (Rel'd Aug. 28)—Vitagraph 560
Ghost, The (Rel'd July 20)—Biograph..... 140
Giving the High Sign to Women Haters (Rel'd Aug. 26)—Gaumont 555
Good for Evil (Rel'd July 15)—Kalem..... 54
Gordian Knot, The (Rel'd Aug. 11)—Essanay. 391
Gossiping Yapville (Rel'd Aug. 22)—Essanay. 475
God's Inn by the Sea (Rel'd July 21)—Essanay 140
Gray Wolves, The (Rel'd Aug. 24)—Selig..... 476
Grandma (Rel'd Oct. 3)—Essanay..... 988
Grand Chartreuse, The (Rel'd Oct. 4)—Eclipse 990
Gypsy Maids (Rel'd Sept. 23)—Pathe..... 818
Gypsy Honor (Rel'd Sept. 28)—Pathe..... 906
Gypsy, The (Rel'd Aug. 3)—Lubin.....

H

Hair Restorer and the Indians (Rel'd July 26)—Edison 142
Handsomer Man, A (Rel'd Aug. 26)—Vitagraph 478
Hand of the Law, The (Rel'd Sept. 13)—Eclipse 724
Hal Chase's Home Run (Rel'd Sept. 27)—Kalem 905
Her Gypsy Rival (Rel'd July 19)—Pathe..... 138
Her Baby (Rel'd July 22)—Pathe..... 138
Her Dad, the Constable (Rel'd July 18)—Essanay 140
Her Two Sons (Rel'd Aug. 7th)—Luhin..... 305
Her Crowning Glory (Rel'd Sept. 12)—Vitagraph 638
Her Inspiration (Rel'd Sept. 23)—Lubin..... 822
Her Hero (Rel'd Sept. 30)—Vitagraph..... 906
Her Awakening (Rel'd Sept. 28)—Biograph.... 906
Heiress, The (Rel'd Aug. 9)—Eclipse..... 305
Hermit, The (Rel'd Sept. 4)—Pathe..... 642
Heart of John Barlow, The (Rel'd Sept. 8)—Selig 725
Heart Breaker by Trade, A (Rel'd Sept. 23)—Gaumont 820
Hearts May be Broken (Rel'd Sept. 30)—Gaumont 904
Herring Fishing of Boulogne (Rel'd July 24)—Pathe .....
His Terrible Lesson (Rel'd Aug. 10)—Melies... 308
His First Trip (Rel'd Aug. 16)—Edison..... 393
His Girlie (Rel'd Sept. 13)—Luhin..... 640
His Sister's Children (Rel'd Sept. 26)—Vitagraph 906
His Stubborn Way (Rel'd Oct. 2)—Luhin..... 988
His Exoneration (Rel'd Oct. 5)—Luhin..... 988
Home Is Best After All (Rel'd Aug. 14)—Luhin 392
How Betty Won the School (Rel'd Aug. 22)—Vitagraph 478
How Algy Captured the Wild Man (Rel'd Sept. 4th)—Selig 640
How to Catch a Bachelor (Rel'd Sept. 12)—Gaumont 724
How Millie Became an Actress (Rel'd Sept. 19)—Vitagraph 818
Hovering a Hero (Rel'd Sept. 6)—Pathe..... 642
Hoho Cowboy, The (Rel'd Sept. 7)—Melies.... 644
Human Torpedo, The (Rel'd Sept. 21)—Lubin.. 822

I

Idle Boast, The (Rel'd Oct. 4)—Luhin..... 988
Indian Maid's Sacrifice, The (Rel'd July 28)—Kalem 138
Indian Brothers, The (Rel'd July 17)—Biograph 140
Indian's Appreciation, An (Rel'd Aug. 5)—Lubin 223
Indian's Sacrifice (Rel'd Sept. 23)—Essanay... 820
In the Shadow of Vesuvius (Rel'd July 22)—Gaumont 58
In the Paris Slums (Rel'd Aug. 14)—Pathe.... 391
In the Shadow of the Pines (Rel'd Aug. 28)—Selig 555
In Ancient Days (Rel'd Sept 20)—Eclipse.... 820
In Switzerland (Rel'd Aug. 7)—Pathe.....
In Cambodia (Rel'd Aug. 11)—Pathe.....
Intrepid Davy (Rel'd Aug. 7)—Vitagraph.... 308
Interrupted Game, An (Rel'd Aug. 10)—Biograph 391
Inventor, The (Rel'd Aug. 15)—Gaumont..... 392
Island of Ischia, Italy, The (Rel'd Aug. 26)—Gaumont 477

J

Japanese Dice and Butterflies (Rel'd Sept. 7)—Pathe .....
Jealous Husband, The (Rel'd July 10)—Biograph 56
Jealous George (Rel'd Aug. 14)—Selig..... 391
Jealousy (Sept. 4)—Vitagraph..... 637
Jealous Wife, A (Rel'd Oct. 4)—Eclipse..... 990
Jimmie as a Philanthropist (Rel'd July 15)—Gaumont 58
Jimmie the Detective (Rel'd July 22)—Gaumont 58
Jimmie Wears a Crown (Rel'd Aug. 1)—Gaumont 144
Jimmie's Luck (Rel'd Aug. 12)—Gaumont..... 305
Jimmie to the Rescue (Rel'd Aug. 29)—Gaumont 555
Jimmie's Job (Rel'd Sept. 9) Vitagraph..... 638
Jimmie on Guard (Rel'd Sept 19)—Gaumont... 820
Jimmie's Midnight Flight (Rel'd Oct. 3)—Gaumont 990
Jinks Joins the Temperance Club (Rel'd July 20)—Biograph 140
John Oakhurst, Gambler (Rel'd Sept. 29)—Selig 990
Judge Simpkins' Summer Court (Rel'd Aug. 15)—Essanay 475

K

King for an Hour, A (Rel'd Aug. 30)—Eclair.. 556
Kit Carson's Wooing (Rel'd Sept. 11)—Selig.. 728
Knight Errant, The (Rel'd July 31)—Selig.... 223

L

Last Drop of Water, The (Rel'd July 27)—Biograph 222
Lair, The (Rel'd Aug. 4) Pathe..... 306
Lake Thun in Switzerland (Rel'd Sept. 6)—Gaumont 644
Legend of Lake Desolation (Rel'd Aug. 5)—Pathe 306
Leaves of a Romance (Rel'd Oct. 7)—Edison.. 990
Little Cripple, The (Rel'd Aug. 25)—Kalem.... 475
Life on the Border (Rel'd Aug. 22)—Selig..... 476
Lighthouse by the Sea, The (Rel'd Sept. 15)—Edison 725
Live, Love and Believe (Rel'd Sept. 22)—Essanay 818
Life Saver, The (Rel'd Sept. 20)—Luhin..... 820
Lionelly, Contortionist (Rel'd July 28)—Pathe..
Love and Cheese (Rel'd July 10)—Pathe..... 56
Love and Silence (Rel'd Aug. 2)—Pathe..... 306
Love in the Hills (Rel'd Aug. 8)—Essanay.... 391
Long Skirt, The (Rel'd Aug. 8)—Vitagraph.... 308
Local Bully, The (Rel'd Aug. 17)—Melies.... 392
Losing to Win (Rel'd Sept 20)—Kalem..... 820
Lost in the Arctic (Rel'd Sept. 18)—Selig..... 822
Lost Years (Rel'd Sept. 26)—Essanay 904
Lucky Horseshoe, The (Rel'd Sept. 11)—Biograph 725
Lure of Vanity, The (Rel'd July 18)—Vitagraph 56
Lyons, the Second City of France (Rel'd Aug. 9)—Eclipse 305

M

Making Mother Over (Rel'd July 19)—Kalem.. 54
Max's Divorce Case (Rel'd July 31)—Pathe.... 306
Man to Man (Rel'd Aug. 16)—Vitagraph..... 392
Mated by Chess (Rel'd Sept. 9)—Gaumont..... 644
Madame Tallum (Rel'd Aug. 15)—Pathe..... 724
Manufacturing Fireworks (Rel'd Sept. 29)—Eclipse 905
Matchmaker, The (Rel'd Sept. 25)—Lubin..... 905
Mary's Masquerade (Rel'd Sept. 26)—Edison.. 905
Malden of the Pie-Faced Indians, The (Rel'd Sept. 30)—Edison 905
Master Cupid, Detective (Rel'd Oct. 5)—Essanay 988
Maud Muller (Rel'd Oct. 5)—Selig..... 990
Mate of the John M (Rel'd Oct. 4)—Vitagraph. 992
Making of a Man, The (Rel'd Oct. 5)—Biograph 992
Magnet, The (Rel'd Aug. 4)—Pathe.....
Memories of the Past (Rel'd July 20)—Pathe.. 138
Mexican Joan of Arc (Rel'd July 31)—Kalem.. 223
Message of the Arrow, The (Rel'd Aug. 19)—Pathe 391
Medicine Woman, The (Rel'd Aug. 31)—Pathe 556
Miss Chatterer's Experience (Rel'd Sept. 1)—Essanay 556
Millionaire and the Squatter, The (Rel'd Sept. 16)—Essanay 729
Mission Waif, The (Rel'd Sept. 28)—Melies... 906
Money to Burn (Rel'd Aug. 2)—Edison..... 224
Modern Dianas, The (Rel'd Aug. 19)—Edison.. 393
Mountain Torrent in Australia, A(Rel'd Sept. 16)—Gaumont 724
Monuments and Cascades in Rome (Rel'd Aug. 12)—Pathe .....
Moss Covered Ruins on the Isle of Wight, Great Britain (Rel'd Aug. 16)—Eclipse.....
Moritz and the Butterfly, Little (Rel'd Sept. 11)—Pathe 992
My Old Dutch (Rel'd Aug. 25)—Vitagraph... 478

N

New Church Carpet, The (Rel'd July 18)—Edison 60
New Operator, The (Rel'd July 24)—Lubin.... 138
New Office, The (Rel'd July 31)—Lubin..... 223
New Manager, The (Rel'd Aug. 4)—Essanay... 306
New York Cowboy, A (Rel'd Aug. 29)—Selig.. 555
New York State Barge Canals (Rel'd Sept. 2)—Edison 638
Never Believe in Signs (Rel'd Sept. 7)—Essanay 642
Nearsighted Chaperone, The (Rel'd Sept. 30) Lubin 905
Nick Winter Turns a Trick (Rel'd Aug. 25)—Pathe 478
Ninety and Nine (Sept. 29)—Vitagraph..... 906
No Cooking Allowed (Rel'd Sept. 9)—Edison... 640
Norwich and Vicinity, England (Rel'd Sept. 13)—Eclipse 724
Noted Men (Rel'd Sept. 18)—Selig.....

O

Off the Coast of Maine (Rel'd Sept. 12)—Edison 725
Old Captain, The (Rel'd Aug. 3)—Selig..... 224
Old Confectioner's Mistake, The (Rel'd Sept. 7)—Biograph 724
Old Delhi and Its Ruins (Rel'd Sept. 22)—Pathe
On a Tramp Steamer (Rel'd July 19)—Vitagraph 56
On the Coast of Bengal (Rel'd Aug. 2)—Eclipse 226
On the War Path (Rel'd Sept. 1)—Kalem..... 556
One Hundred Dollar Bill, The (Rel'd Aug. 4—Vitagraph 226
One Flag at Last (Rel'd Sept. 18)—Vitagraph.. 818
Outlaw Samaritan, The (Rel'd July 22)—Eaanay 140
Out from the Shadow (Rel'd Aug. 3)—Biograph 305
Our Navy (Rel'd Oct. 2)—Vitagraph..... 992
Over the Garden Wall (Rel'd Aug. 2)—Kalem.. 223
Over the Chafing Dish (Rel'd Sept. 23)—Vitagraph 818
$100 Bill, The (Rel'd Aug. 4)—Pathe.....

P

Passing Fancy, A (Rel'd Aug. 5)—Gaumont... 224
Pal'a Oath, A (Rel'd Aug. 7)—Essanay..... 475
"Pardon Me" (Rel'd Sept. 6)—Lubin..... 640
Pathe's Weekly, No. 32 (Rel'd Aug. 8)—Pathe
Pathe'a Weekly, No. 33 (Rel'd Aug. 15)—Pathe
Pathe's Weekly, No. 34 (Rel'd Aug. 22)—Pathe
Pathe's Weekly, No. 35 (Rel'd Aug. 29)—Pathe
Pathe's Weekly, No. 36 (Rel'd Sept. 5)—Pathe
Pathe's Weekly, No. 37 (Rel'd Sept. 14)—Pathe
Pathe's Weekly, No. 38 (Rel'd Sept. I9)—Pathe
Pathe's Weekly, No. 39 (Rel'd Sept. 26)—Pathe
Pathe's Weekly, No. 40 (Rel'd Oct. 3)—Pathe 994
Perfume Clue, The (Rel'd July 21)—Pathe.... 138
Peggy, the Moonshiner's Daughter (Rel'd Aug. 7th—Kalem 223
Peck Goes Calling, Mr. (Rel'd July 31)—Biograph 305
Phoney Strike Breakers (Rel'd Oct. 2)—Kalem 988
Playwright, The (Rel'd Aug. 29)—Essanay.... 556
Power of Good, The (Rel'd Sept. 28)—Essanay 994
Profligate, The (Rel'd July 20)—Selig..... 56
Price of Gold (Rel'd Aug. 2)—Vitagraph..... 226
Promoter, The (Rel'd Aug. 18)—Kalem..... 392
Proclaiming Archbishop Prendergast (Rel'd Aug. 19)—Lubin 476
Professor and the New Hat, The (Rel'd Aug. 23)—Edison 476
Prince and the Pumps (Rel'd Sept. 9)—Vitagraph 637
Prisoner of the Mohicans, A (Rel'd Sept. 13)—Pathe 724
Putting It Over (Rel'd Sept. 1)—Essanay..... 556
Puncher's Law, The (Rel'd Sept. 14)—Essanay 728

Q

Quest of Gold, The (Rel'd July 28)—Vitagraph. 140
Queer Folks (Rel'd Aug. 29)—Vitagraph..... 560
Question Mark, The (Rel'd Aug. 23)—Edison.. 476
Question of Modesty (Rel'd Sept. 6)—Luhin.... 640

R

Raising Ostriches in Egypt (Rel'd July 29)—Pathe 222
Raging Sea, A (Rel'd Aug. 8)—Gaumont..... 305
Ranchman's Son, The (Rel'd Aug. 12)—Essanay 391
Ranch in Flames, The (Released Aug. 28)—Pathe 556
Ranch's New Barber, The (Rel'd Sept. 9)—Luhin 640
Ranger's Stratagem, The (Rel'd Sept. 18)—Kalem 820
Raising Ostriches in Egypt (July 17)—Pathe..
Return of "Widow" Pogson's Husband (Rel'd July 22)—Vitagraph 56
Red Cloud's Secret (Rel'd Aug. 3)—Melies 224
Regeneration of the Apache Kid, The (Rel'd Aug. 15)—Selig 391
Rebellious Blossom (Rel'd Aug. 21)—Lubin.... 476
Red Man's Dog, The (Rel'd Sept. 7)—Pathe... 642
Revenue Man and the Girl, The (Rel'd Sept. 25)—Biograph 908
Revenge is Sweet (Rel'd Oct. 7)—Luhin..... 990
Review of the French Army (July 21)—Pathe..
Rival Stage Lines (Rel'd Oct. 3)—Selig..... 990
Rosary, The (Rel'd July 14)—Essanay..... 60
Round-Up in Chili, A (Rel'd July 19)—Eclipse 60
Round-Up at Dawn, The (Rel'd Aug. 9)—Kalem 306
Romance of a Dixie Belle (Rel'd Aug. 11)—Kalem 306
Rose of Kentucky, The (Rel'd Aug. 24)—Biograph 556
Romance of Poud Cove (Rel'd Aug. 31)—Kalem 560
Rory O'Moore (Rel'd Sept. 4)—Kalem..... 637
Ruhber Industry on the Amazon (Rel'd July 25)—Selig 142
Ruling Passion, The (Rel'd Aug. 7)—Biograph.. 391
Runaway Leopard, The (Rel'd Aug. 21)—Pathe 478

S

Satan on a Rampage (Rel'd July 26)—Eclipse.. 144
Saved by the Pony Express (Rel'd Aug. 1)—Selig 224
Satan's Rival (Rel'd Aug. 18)—Pathe..... 391
Saved from the Snow (Rel'd Aug. 21)—Selig.. 475
Saved from the Torrents (Rel'd Sept. 19)—Esanay 818
Sailor's Love Letter, The (Rel'd Sept. 19)—Edison 823
Saving Sign, The (Rel'd Oct. 4)—Kalem..... 988
Scheme that Failed, The (Rel'd Sept. 16)—Lubin 724
Second Honeymoon, The (Rel'd Aug. 19)—Vitagraph 393
Secret, The (Rel'd Aug. 28)—Lubin..... 560
Senorita Conquest, The (Rel'd Sept. 18)—Lubiu 820
Shot from the Brush, A (Rel'd July 18)—Gaumont 58

She Came, She Saw, She Conquered (Rel'd July 26)—Vitagraph 140
Sheriff of Tuolumne (Rel'd July 25)—Selig... 142
Sheriff's Punishment, The (Rel'd July 29)—Pathe 222
Sheriff's Fricud, The (Rel'd Aug. 23)—Vitagraph 478
Sheepman's Triumph, A (Rel'd Sept. 11)—Kalem 729
Shattered Dream, A (Rel'd Sept. 14)—Melies.. 728
Sheriff, The (Rel'd Sept. 16)—Edison..... 822
Sheriff's Decision, The (Rel'd Oct. 6)—Essanay 988
Shipwrecked (Rel'd Sept. 22)—Selig..... 904
Silent Tongue, The (Rel'd Aug. 30)—Edison.... 555
Simple Ike Decides to Marry (Rel'd Aug. 26)—Kalem 475
Sights of Berlin (Rel'd Aug. 30)—Eclipse..... 556
Sir George and the Heiress (Rel'd Aug. 5)—Edison 224
Sightseeing Trip Through Boston, A (Rel'd Sept. 15)—Selig .....
Sky-Pilot, The (Rel'd July 21)—Vitagraph).. 56
Slick's Romance (Rel'd Aug. 8)—Edisou..... 308
Society Mother, A (Rel'd July 25)—Gaumont.. 144
Son of the Shunamulte, The (Rel'd Aug. 19)—Gaumont 392
Sorrowful Example, The (Rel'd Aug. 14)—Essanay 475
Soul of the Violin, The (Rel'd Aug. 22)—Caumont 477
Society Mother, A (Rel'd Sept. 5)—Gaumont 642
Spinster's Marriage, The (Rel'd July 26)—Pathe 222
Spender Family, The (Rel'd Aug. 7)—Essanay 306
Spirit of the Gorge, The (Rel'd Aug. 11)—Edison 308
Special Mesenger (Rel'd Aug. 16)—Kalem..... 392
Spike Shannon's Last Fight (Rel'd Aug. 26)—Esanay 475
Spanish Love Song, A (Rel'd Aug. 24)—Melies 478
Squaw's Love, The (Rel'd Sept. 14)—Biograph 725
Squaw's Mistaken Love (Rel'd Oct. 5)—Pathe 992
Strategy of Anne, The (Rel'd July 29)—Vitagraph 140
St. Malo and the English Channel (Rel'd July 25)—Gaumont 144
Struggle for Life, The (Rel'd Aug. 2)—Eclipse 224
Stolen Dog, The (Rel'd Aug. 9)—Edison..... 306
Summer Babies (Rel'd Aug. 22)—Essanay.... 475
Story of Rosie's Rose, The (Rel'd Sept. 7)—Lubin 559
Stuff Heroes are Made of, The (Rel'd Sept. 4)—Biograph 724
Starlight's Necklace (Rel'd Sept. 21)—Pathe.. 818
Strike at the Little Jonny Mine (Rel'd Sept. 30)—Essanay 904
Stolen Gray, The (Reld Oct. 5)—Melies..... 990
Stranger in Camp (Rel'd July 21)—Pathe....
Stolen Dog, The (Rel'd Aug. 9)—Edison ....
Sunday Hunting Party, A (Rel'd Aug. 26)—Gaumont 477
Surgeon's Temptation, The (Rel'd Aug. 29)—Edison 555
Summer Adventure, A (Rel'd Oct. 2)—Selig... 990
Summer Girl (Rel'd Oct. 4)—Edison..... 990
Surfing—National Sport in the Hawaiian Islands (Rel'd Sept. 22)—Patbe.....
Summer Babies (Rel'd Aug. 22)—Essanay..... 475
Switchman's Tower (Rel'd Aug. 4)—Edison.... 224

T

Tale of a Soldier's Ring (Rel'd July 27)—Selig 142
Tent Village (Rel'd Aug. 10)—Luhin..... 305
Tennessee Love Story, A (Rel'd Sept. 7)—Selig 642
That City Fellow (Rel'd July 24)—Selig..... 142
Their Only Son (Rel'd Aug. 10)—Selig..... 310
That Dare Devil (Rel'd Aug. 10—Biograph.... 391
Through Jealous Eyes (Rel'd Aug. 17)—Lubin.. 416
Then You'll Remember Me (Rel'd Aug. 25)—Edison 476
Through the Window (Rel'd Aug. 23)—Pathe.. 478
Through Fire and Smoke (Rel'd Aug. 31)—Selig 555
Thumb Print, The (Rel'd Sept. 1)—Pathe..... 556
Three Brothers (Rel'd Aug. 30)—Vitagraph..) 560
Three Musketeers (Part I) (Rel'd Sept. 1)—Edison 639
Three Musketeers (Part II) (Rel'd Sept. 6)—Edison 639
That Winsome Winnie Smile (Rel'd Sept. 9)—Edison 640
Tie That Binds, The (Rel'd July 19)—Eclipse.. 60
Tired, Absent-Minded Man, The (Rel'd Sept. 23)—Vitagraph 818
Totem Mark, The (Rel'd Sept. 5)—Selig..... 641
Town Hall Tonight (Rel'd Oct. 7)—Essanay.. 988
Too Many Burglars (Rel'd Oct. 2)—Biograph.. 992
Tragic Wedding (Rel'd July 12)—Pathe..... 56
Treasure Trove (Rel'd July 25)—Vitagraph... 140
Trapper's Fatal Shot, The (Rel'd Aug. 10)—Pathe 391
Tramp Artist, The (Rel'd Aug. 15)—Essanay... 475
Tragedy at Sea, A (Rel'd Sept. 9)—Pathe..... 642
Trials of a Tall Traveler, The (Rel'd Sept. 27)—Eclipse 904
Trip in the Island of Marken, A (Rel'd July 28) Pathe .....
Two Fugitives, The (Rel'd July 29)—Essanay.. 222
Two Wolves and a Lamb (Rel'd July 31)—Vitagraph 226
Turkish Cigarette (Rel'd Aug. 14)—Selig..... 391
Turning the Tables (Rel'd Sept. 30)—Edison... 906
Two Fools and Their Follies (Rel'd Aug. 17)—Melies 392
Two Officers (Rel'd Aug. 18)—Edisou..... 393
Two White Roses (Rel'd Aug. 26)—Edison.... 476
Two Men and a Girl (Rel'd Sept. 12)—Essanay 728
Two Orphans, The (1st Reel) (Rel'd Sept. 25)—Selig 904
Two Orphans, The (2nd Reel) (Rel'd Sept. 26)—Selig 904

U

Under the Palms of Tunis, Africa (Rel'd July 18)—Gaumont 58
Unfinished Letter, The (Rel'd Aug. 2)—Edison 224
Unexpected Gift, The (Rel'd Aug. 11)—Pathe 391
Under the Tropical Sun (Rel'd Sept. 12)—Edisou 725
Unknown Language, An (Rel'd Sept. 20)—Edison 827
Up-to-date Elopement, An (Rel'd Aug. 7)—Pathe 391
Up-to-date Squaw, An (Rel'd Sept. 20)—Pathe 818
Upward Way, The (Rel'd Oct. 7)—Gaumont... 990
Ups and Downs (Rel'd Oct. 7)—Vitagraph.... 992

V

Veil of Happiuess (Rel'd July 14)—Pathe..... 56
Venom of the Poppy, The (Rel'd Aug. 22)—Edison 476
Vitagraph Monthly of Current Events (Rel'd Aug. 18)—Vitagraph 393
Vitagraph Monthly of Current Events (Rel'd Sept. 15)—Vitagraph 725
Villain Foiled, The (Rel'd Aug. 3)—Biograph.. 637
Village Hero, The (Rel'd Sept. 11)—Biograph.. 724
Vienua, Austria (Rel'd Aug. 14)—Pathe.....
Voyager, The (Rel'd Sept. 15)—Selig..... 822

W

Way of the Eskimo, The (Rel'd July 17)—Selig 54
Warrant, The (Rel'd July 18)—Selig..... 54
Wasp, The (Rel'd Aug. 14)—Kalem..... 392
Wages of War (Rel'd Aug. 21)—Vitagraph... 478
Wager, The (Rel'd Oct. 3)—Vitagraph..... 992
Western Girl's Sacrifice, A (Rel'd Sept. 2)—
——— ——— 556
Western Memory, A (Rel'd Aug. 16)—Pathe.. 724
Western Heroine, A (Rel'd Sept. 27)—Vitagraph 906
Wedding Procession in Bavaria (Rel'd Sept. 1)—Pathe .....
When Two Hearts are Won (Rel'd Sept. 6)—Kalem 637
When the Sun Went Out (Rel'd Sept. 8)—Kalem.637
Wheels of Justice (Rel'd Sept. 14)—Selig..... 728
When Wifey Holds the Purse Strings (Rel'd Sept. 21)—Biograph 824
When He Died (Rel'd Sept. 29)—Essauay..... 904
Whiffle's Hard Luck Stories (Rel'd Sept. 25)—Pathe 906
Wifie's New Hat (Rel'd July 24)—Luhin..... 138
Wise, Investigator, Mr. (Rel'd July 25)—Essany 222
Winds of Fate, The (Rel'd Aug. 15)—Edison.. 393
Willow Tree, The (Rel'd Sept. 6)—Vitagraph.. 637
Widow Pogson's Husband (Rel'd July 22)—Vitagraph .....
Wool Industry of Hungary (Rel'd Aug. 26)—Eclipse 478
Working Elephants (Rel'd July 26)—Pathe....
Wrong Patient, The (Rel'd Aug. 29)—Vitagraph 560
Wrong Glove, The (Rel'd Sept. 8)—Vitagraph 642
Wrayhurn, Eugene (Rel'd Oct. 3)—Edison..... 990

Y

Younger Brother, The (Rel'd July 25)—Edison 142

Z

Zebras, The (Rel'd July 22)—Pathe.....

Independent Releases.

A

Accident, The (Rel'd July 14)—Lux..... 66
Across the Divide (Rel'd Sept. 20)—Nestor.. 912
All Aboard for Reno (Rel'd July 19)—Solax.. 148
All on Account of a Coat (Rel'd Sept. 14)—Eclair 648
Alone in the World (Rel'd July 26)—Ambrisio 228
Alias Yellowstone Joe (Rel'd Aug. 23)—Nestor 564
Altered Message, The (Rel'd Sept. 15)—Solax.. 830
Alice's Dream (Rel'd Sept. 27)—Ambrosio... 994
Angel, The (Rel'd July 15)—Reliance..... 144
Artful Tweedledum (Rel'd July 26)—Ambrosio 228
Artist Financier, The (Rel'd Aug. 3)—Rex.. 314
As a Boy Dreams (Rel'd Aug. 24)—Imp..... 479
As Things Used To Be (Rel'd Oct. 4)—Champion 996
At Sea Under Naval Colors (Rel'd July 15)—Nordisk 66
At the Trail's End (Rel'd July 26)—Champion. 148
At Perry's Ranch (Rel'd Sept. 13)—Nestor.... 824
Auntie and the Cowboys (Rel'd Aug. 24)—American 564

B

Baby's Rattle (Rel'd July 12)—Solax 62
Back to Nature (Rel'd Aug. 8)—Thanhouser.. 394
Babes in the Woods (Rel'd Aug. 15)—Powers.. 398
Battle of the Wills (Rel'd Aug. 21)—Imp.... 479
Baumgarten is Elected Deputy (Rel'd Aug. 2)—Ambrosio .....
Barbara Frietchie (Rel'd Oct. 2)—Champion.. 996
Behind the Times (Rel'd Aug. 17)—Imp..... 396
Best Policy, The (Rel'd Sept. 8)—Solax..... 736
Bicentennial Celebration at Mobile, Ala. (Reld. July 21)—Imp 228
Bicycle Bug's Dream, The (Rel'd Sept. 18)—Imp 826
Bill Buys a Bottle of Champagne (Rel'd July 28)—Lux 228
Bill Does His Own Washing (Rel'd Aug. 4)—Lux 312
Bill Wishes to Make Butter (Rel'd Aug. 11)—Lux 396
Bill Tries to Make Bread (Rel'd Aug. 18)—Lux 482
Bill Follows the Doctor's Orders (Rel'd Aug. 25)—Lux 562
Bill as a Game Keeper (Rel'd Sept. 1)—Lux.. 648
Bill Buys a Lobster (Rel'd Sept. 8)—Lux.... 735
Bill Learns to Take Cinematograph Pictures (Rel'd July 14)—Lux..... 66
Bill as a Bill Poster (Rel'd Sept. 15)—Lux.... 826
Bill as an Express Messenger (Rel'd Sept. 22)—Lux 910
Bill and His Friend (Rel'd Sept. 29)—Lux.... 994
Blotted Brand, The (Rel'd Aug. 21)—American 564
Black Cloud's Debt (Rel'd Aug. 22)—Powers.. 650
Black Horse Troop of Culver (Rel'd Sept. 25)—Champion 914
Boy's Best Friend, A (Rel'd Aug. 14)—Imp.. 396
Brand of Fear, The (Rel'd Aug. 17)—American 396
Brothers, The (Rel'd Sept. 14)—Imp..... 730
Branded Indiau, A (Rel'd Sept. 30)—Powers.. 996
Burglar and the Girl (Rel'd Aug. 5)—Nordisk.. 314
Bum and a Bomb, A (Rel'd Aug. 9)—Solax.. 398
Buddhist Priestess, The (Rel'd Sept. 12)—Thanhouser 730
By the House that Jack Built (Rel'd Sept. 11)—Imp 730
By Registered Mail (Rel'd Sept. 21)—Imp.... 826

C

Cattle Thief's Brand, The (Rel'd July 27)—American 226
Cattle Rustler's End, The (Rel'd Aug. 3)—Americau 226
Cattle, Gold and Oil (Rel'd Aug. 7)—American 310
Call of the Song, The (Rel'd Aug. 3)—Imp.. 228
Candle of Life, The (Rel'd Aug. 16)—Ambrosio 479
Castles in the Air (Rel'd Aug. 24)—Rex..... 564
Cain's Retribution (Rel'd Sept. 18)—Ambrosio.. 828
Caught in His Own Net (Rel'd Sept. 23)—Nordisk 914
Call from the Hills, The (Rel'd Oct. 3)—Powers 996
Charley Has a Manuscript to Sell (Rel'd July 17)—Eclair 66
Chief Fire Eye's Game (Rel'd Aug. 9)—Champiou 312
Children's Paradise, A (Rel'd Aug. 14)—Yankee 396
City, The (Rel'd Aug. 9)—Reliance 394
Circular Fence, The (Rel'd Sept. 25)—American 994
Class Reunion, The (Rel'd July 17)—Imp.... 64
Clouds and Sunshine (Rel'd Sept. 2)—Reliance 730
Claim Jumpers, The (Rel'd Sept. 21)—American 910
Clio and Phyletes (Rel'd Sept. 2)—Itala.....
Cowboy's Deliverance, The (Rel'd July 24)—American 226
Connecting Link, The (Rel'd Aug. 14)—Eclair 310
Confessional, The (Rel'd Aug. 23)—Champion. 480
Colleen Bawn (Rel'd Aug. 21)—Yankee..... 480
Cowboy's Loyalty, A (Rel'd Aug. 22)—Bisou. 562
Colonel's Daughter, The (Rel'd Aug. 17)—Rex 564
Count Ivan and the Waitress (Rel'd Sept. 5)—Thanhouser 646
Cowboy and the Artist, The (Rel'd Sept. 14)—American 646
Cobbler, The (Rel'd Sept. 13)—Reliance..... 828
Couspirators, The (Rel'd Sept. 30)—Nordisk.. 830
Co-ed Professor, The (Rel'd Sept. 25)—Imp.... 908
Cook of the Ranch, The (Rel'd Sept. 27)—Champion 914
Cripple, The (Rel'd Aug. 11)—Lux 398
Cross, The (Rel'd Aug. 22)—Thanhouser..... 479
Cupid the Conqueror (Rel'd Aug. 11)—Thanhouser 394

D

Daring Duel, A (Rel'd July 19)—Champion.... 64
Daughter of Dixie, A (Rel'd Aug. 29)—Champion 562
Dark Feather's Squaw, The (Rel'd Aug. 4)—Bison .....
Deposited After Banking Hours (Rel'd July 28)—Yankee 148
Dewey (Rel'd Aug. 7)—Champiou..... 312
Derelict, The (Rel'd Sept. 28)—Rex..... 994
Diamond Smugglers, The (Rel'd Aug. 21)—Ambrosio 646
Doll House, A (Rel'd July 28)—Thanhouser.... 146
Double Elopement, The (Rel'd July 26)—Solax. 228
Dorothy's Family (Rel'd Aug. 10)—Imp..... 310
Doorkeeper, The (Rel'd Aug. 30)—Ambrosio.. 646
Dread of Microbes, The (Rel'd Aug. 16)—Ambrosio 479
Dream with a Lesson, A (Rel'd Sept. 9)—Nordisk 735
Dubuque Regatta, The (Rel'd Aug. 2)—Champion 230
Duty (Rel'd Sept. 7)—Imp..... 644

E

East and West, The (Rel'd Oct. 6)—Thanhouser 998
Edelweiss, The (Rel'd Aug. 21)—Eclair..... 394
Elopement By Aeroplane, An (Rel'd Aug. 4)—Lux 312
Engagemeut Ring, The (Rel'd July 29)—Nordisk 232
End of the Trail, The (Rel'd Aug. 2)—Nestor 312
Enlisted Man's Honor, An (Rel'd Aug. 11)—Solax 398
Evening Bell, The (Rel'd Aug. 3)—Itala.....
Exchange, The (Rel'd July 24)—Champion.... 148

F

Faded Roses (Rel'd Sept. 8)—Yankee..... 648
Faith (Rel'd Sept. 14)—Rex..... 830
Falls of Bohemia (Rel'd Sept. 26)—Powers.... 908
Fatal Sonata, The (Rel'd July 27)—Itala....

Five Rose Sisters, The (Rel'd Oct. 3)—Thanhouser ... 996
Flower of the Tribe, The (Rel'd Sept. 16) Nestor ... 730
Forest Romance, A (Rel'd July 19)—Reliance. 144
Foundling (Rel'd Sept. 2)—Nordisk ... 648
For the Wearing of the Green (Rel'd Sept. 25)—Yankee ... 914
Fool Romance, A (Rel'd July 29)—Powers ...
For His Sake (Rel'd Sept. 25)—Reliance ... 994
Foolshead Heels (Rel'd July 22)—Itala ...
Foolshead's Last Rognery (Rel'd Aug. 5)—Itala
Foolshead Manikin (Rel'd Aug. 18)—Itala ...
Foolshead, Chauffeur (Rel'd Aug. 26)—Itala ...
Foolshead, Hypnotizer (Rel'd Sept. 8)—Itala ..
Foolshead's Removal (Rel'd Sept. 10)—Itala ...
For Your Hats, Ladies (Rel'd Oct. 2)—Eclair. 1000

G

Gay Bachelor, A (Rel'd Aug. 23)—Solax ... 564
Generous Cowboys (Rel'd July 14)—Bison ... 60
Getting Even (Rel'd Sept. 30)—Nestor ... 996
Girl and the Broncho Buster, The (Rel'd July 14) ... 62
Girl and the Chauffeur, The (Rel'd Sept. 22) —Yankee ... 824
Giant of the Ocean (Rel'd July 21)—Yankee ..
Good Natured Man, A (Rel'd Aug. 14)—Yankee 396
Godfather, The (Rel'd Aug. 26)—Reliance ... 644
Goose Girl, The (Rel'd Oct. 6)—Thanhouser .. 998
Grey Wolf's Squaw (Rel'd Aug. 11)—Yankee .. 312
Gray Cloud's Devotion (Rel'd Aug. 8)—Bison .. 394
Grandfather (Rel'd Aug. 19)—Reliance ... 562
Great Wrong Righted, A (Rel'd Sept. 1) —Yankee ... 562
Grant and Lincoln (Rel'd Sept. 4)—Champion. 648
Gray Wolf's Grief (Rel'd Sept. 12)—Powers .. 735
Great Charlestown Hurricane Flood (Rel'd Sept. 18)—Imp ... 826
Gun Man, The (Rel'd Sept. 18)—American ... 910

H

Harmless Flirtation, A (Rel'd Aug. 8)—Lux ... 398
Hands Across the Cradle (Rel'd Aug. 16)— Nestor ... 480
Haunted House, The (Rel'd Sept. 4)—Imp ... 644
Harris in Chicago Swimming Marathon, Anne (Rel'd Aug. 24)—American ... 646
Half-Breed's Atonement (Rel'd Sept. 30)— Powers ... 908
Happy Home (Rel'd July 29)—Nordisk ...
Her Captive (Rel'd July 18)—Bison ... 144
Her Way (Rel'd July 27)—Rex ... 230
Her Father's Secretary (Rel'd Aug. 18)—Yankee 396
Hector's Inheritance (Rel'd Sept. 6)—Solax ... 736
Her Uncle's Will (Rel'd Sept. 13)—Solax ... 830
Hearts and Eyes (Rel'd Oct. 2)—Eclair ... 910
Her Choice (Rel'd July 26)—Reliance ...
His Son (Rel'd Aug. 5)—Reliance ... 394
His Wife's Insurance (Rel'd Aug. 9)—Solax .. 398
His Royal Highness (Rel'd Aug. 28)—Imp ... 566
His Mania for Collecting Antiques (Rel'd Sept. 15)—Lux ... 826
His Dream (Rel'd Sept. 9)—Reliance ... 828
How They Work in Cinema (Rel'd Aug. 21)— Eclair ... 394
How the Girls Got Even (Rel'd Aug. 16)— Champion ... 396
How Tony Became a Hero (Rel'd Aug. 30)— Champion ... 562
How Poor Babies are Reared in Paris (Rel'd Sept. 11)—Eclair ... 648
How Teddy Lost His Bet (Rel'd Sept. 11)— Eclair ... 648
Hold-up, The (Rel'd Sept. 1)—Solax ... 648
Horse Thief, The (Rel'd Sept. 16)—Powers ... 735
Honeymooners, The (Rel'd Sept. 22)—Thanhouser 830
Hot Springs, Arkansas (Rel'd Aug. 28)—Imp ...
Horse of the Regiment, The (Rel'd Sept. 16)— Itala ...
Horuet, The (Rel'd Sept. 23)—Ambrosio ...
How Hopkins Raised the Rent (Rel'd Sept. 27) —Solax ... 994

I

If One Could See Into the Future (Rel'd Aug. 2)—Ambrosio ... 310
Imaginative Willie (Rel'd Aug. 26)—Powers ... 650
Indian Love Affair, An (Rel'd Aug. 18)—Bison. 479
Indian's Love, The (Rel'd Aug. 26)—Ambrosio .. 479
Indian Legend, An (Rel'd Aug. 29)—Bison ... 646
Indian's Love, An (Rel'd Aug. 26)—Powers ... 659
Inshavogue (Rel'd Sept. 4)—Yankee ... 648
Invisible Wrestler, The (Rel'd Sept. 1)—Lux ... 648
In the Chorus (Rel'd Sept. 15)—Thanhouser ... 730
Infinite Ways of Providence (Rel'd Sept. 7)— Itala ...
Italian Artillery (Rel'd Sept. 6)—Ambrosio ...
Itallan Gratitude, An (Rel'd Sept. 29)—Solax .. 994

J

Jim Crow, a Tale of the Turf (Rel'd July 28)— Lux ... 230
Judge's Story, The (Rel'd Aug. 4)—Thanhouser. 228
Just for Her (Rel'd July 20)—Imp ... 64
Just General, A (Rel'd Sept. 25)—Eclair ... 826

K

Kathleen Mavourneen (Rel'd Aug. 7)—Yankee .. 312
Kind Hearted Brother, A (Rel'd July 22)— Nordisk ... 148

L

Last of the Mohicans (Rel'd Aug. 1)—Powers .. 239
Let Not Man Put Asunder (Rel'd Aug. 18)— Solax ... 180
Little Wayfarer, The (Rel'd July 6)—Itala ... 63
Lineman, The (Rel'd July 27)—Imp ... 144
Little Girl (Rel'd July 22)—Powers ... 116
Little Child, A (Rel'd Aug. 23)—Reliance ... 562
Little Dove's Romance (Rel'd Sept. 5)—Bison .. 730
Lie, The (Rel'd Sept. 19)—Thanhouser ... 831
Little Goatherd, The (Rel'd Sept. 29)—Lux ... 994
Love Eagle's Trust (Rel'd Aug. 12)—Powers .. 398
Love and Discipline (Rel'd Aug. 10)—Itala ... 479
Love In a Tepee (Rel'd Aug. 10)—Itala ... 479
Lost In a Hotel (Rel'd Sept. 19)—Powers ... 824
Lone Star's Return (Rel'd Sept. 15)—Bison ... 828
Lost Letter, The (Rel'd Sept. 12)—Bison ... 828
Lochinvar (Rel'd Sept. 26)—Thanhouser ... 908
Love's Sacrifice (Rel'd Sept. 29)—Thanhouser .. 908
Lucky Bob (Rel'd Sept. 26)—Bison ... 994

M

Mascot of Troop "C" (Rel'd Aug. 4)—Solax ... 312
Marriage in the Stars, A (Rel'd Aug. 28)— Eclair ... 564
Magic Music (Rel'd Sept. 18)—Eclair ... 730
Man (Rel'd Sept. 29)—Yankee ... 914
Mask of the Red Death (Rel'd Sept. 23)—Ambrosio ... 994
Matrimonial Idyl (Rel'd Sept. 26)—Powers ... 996
Mesmerizing Moe (Rel'd Sept. 8)—Yankee ... 648
Missionary's Gratitude, The (Rel'd Sept. 22)— Bison ... 910
Moral Coward, A (Rel'd July 18)—Powers ... 146
Mother's Mark, The (Rel'd Aug. 12)—Nordisk .. 398
Moth, The (Rel'd Aug. 29)—Thanhouser ... 562
Mother of the Ranch (Rel'd Sept. 14)—American ... 826
Modern School in the Italian Cavalry (Rel'd Aug. 24)—Itala ...
Mutt & Jeff in a Matrimonial Affair (Rel'd Jnly 15)—Nestor ... 64
Mutt & Jeff at the Fortune Teller's (Rel'd July 22)—Nestor ... 146
Mutt & Jeff Make a Hit (Rel'd July 29)—Nestor 230
Mutt & Jeff Get Passes to the Ball Game (Rel'd Aug. 5)—Nestor ... 312
Mutt & Jeff and the Goldstein Burglars (Rel'd Aug. 12)—Nestor ... 393
Mutt & Jeff in the Banking Business (Rel'd Aug. 19)—Nestor ... 480
Mutt & Jeff and the Country Judge (Rel'd Aug. 20)—Nestor ... 564
Mutt & Jeff and the German Band (Rel'd Sept. 2)—Nestor ... 650
Mutt & Jeff and the Escaped Lunatic (Rel'd Sept. 9)—Nestor ... 732
Mutt & Jeff and the Newsboys (Rel'd Sept. 16)—Nestor ... 824
Mutt & Jeff and the Dog Catchers (Rel'd Sept. 23)—Nestor ... 912
Mutt & Jeff as Reporters (Rel'd Sept. 30)— Nestor ... 996

N

New Cowboy, The (Rel'd Aug. 11)—Bison ... 394
Nellie's Soldier (Rel'd Sept. 22)—Solax ... 910
Nobody Loves a Fat Woman (Rel'd Aug. 15)— Thanhouser ... 394

O

Obliging Young Man, An (Rel'd Aug. 28)— Eclair ... 564
Obliging a Friend (Rel'd Sept. 23)—Nestor ... 912
Oh! You Stenographer (Rel'd Sept. 20)—Solax .. 910
Oh! Baby (Rel'd July 25)—Powers ...
Old Peddler, The (Rel'd Aug. 7)—Imp ... 310
Old Time Nightmare (Rel'd Sept. 19)—Powers ..
One Good Turn Deserves Another (Rel'd July 21)—Lux ... 146
Outwitting Father (Rel'd July 21)—Yankee ... 66
Outwitted by Horse and Lariat (Rel'd July 28)—Solax ... 228
Out of the Darkness (Rel'd Aug. 16)—Reliance

P

Parting Trails, The (Rel'd July 31)—American 226
Patched Shoe, The (Rel'd Aug. 30)—Solax ... 648
Parson and the Bully, The (Rel'd Aug. 30)— Nestor ... 650
Pals (Rel'd Sept. 16)—Reliance ... 910
Perils of a War Messenger, The (Rel'd July 31)—Champion ... 230
Phoney Ring, The (Rel'd Aug. 16)—Solax ... 480
Pied Piper of Hamelin, The (Rel'd Aug. 1)— Thanhouser ... 226
Pitfall, The (Rel'd Aug. 12)—Reliance ... 479
Pioneer Days (Rel'd Aug. 25)—Bison ... 562
Picturesque Colorado (Rel'd Sept. 7)—Rex ... 736
Picnic, The (Rel'd July 29)—Powers ...
Plucky Bill (Rel'd July 21)—Lux ... 146
Plains Across, The (Rel'd July 19)—Nestor ... 146
Pony Express, The (Rel'd July 12)—Nestor ... 64
Poisoned Flume, The (Rel'd Aug. 14)—American ... 310
Power of Devotion, The (Rel'd Aug. 28)— Yankee ... 562
Powers Fire (Rel'd July 25)—Powers ...
Pretty Lady of Marbonne, The (Rel'd July 24)—Eclair ... 144
Prodigal Son, The (Rel'd July 31)—Eclair ... 231

Q

Queen of Nineveh (Rel'd Aug. 9)—Ambrosio ... 394

R

Ranchman's Nerve, The (Rel'd July 17)—American ... 62
Ranch Girl, The (Rel'd Aug. 10)—American ... 310
Red Girl's Heart, A (Rel'd July 11)—Bison ... 69
Revolver Returned to Its Owner, A (Rel'd July 15)—Itala ... 144
Retaliation (Rel'd Aug. 25)—Yankee ... 482
Red Feather's Friendship (Rel'd Sept. 5)— Powers ... 650
Red Devils, The (Rel'd Sept. 13)—Champion ... 734
Red Star's Honor (Rel'd Sept. 23)—Powers ... 824
Roped and Tied (Rel'd Aug. 9)—Nestor ... 393
Romance of Lonely Island, The (Rel'd Aug. 25) —Thanhouser ... 479
Romeo and Juliet (2nd reel) (Rel'd Sept. 8) Thanhouser ... 562
Romance of a Wager (Rel'd Sept. 8)—Lux ... 736
Rose and the Dagger, The (Rel'd Sept. 21)—Rex 914
Romeo and Juliett (2nd reel) (Rel'd Sept. 8) Thanhouser ...
Rose's Story, The (Rel'd Oct. 2)—Imp ... 1000
Rustler Sheriff (Rel'd Sept. 28)—American ... 994

S

Schoolmaster's Overcoat, The (Rel'd July 19)— Ambrosio ... 144
Science (Rel'd July 24)—Imp ... 144
Sergeant Dillon's Bravery (Rel'd July 21)—Solax 148
Settler's Wife, The (Rel'd July 26)—Nestor ... 230
Sea Vultures (Rel'd July 31)—Yankee ... 232
Sherlock Holmes, Jr. (Rel'd Jnly 20)—Rex ... 148
Sheriff's Love, The (Rel'd Sept. 1)—Bison ... 646
Shenandoah (Rel'd Sept. 18)—Champion ... 826
Sheriff's Brother, The (Rel'd Sept. 19)—Bison 910
She Never Knew (Rel'd Oct. 2)—Thanhouser ... 998
Silver Wing's Dream (Rel'd July 25)—Bison ... 228
Sioux Spy, A (Rel'd Aug. 15)—Bison ... 479
Silver Tail and His Squaw (Rel'd Sept. 2)— Powers ... 564
Skating Bug, The (Rel'd July 31)—Imp ... 228
Smugglers, The (Rel'd July 25)—Thanhouser ... 144
Southern Girl's Heroism, A (Rel'd July 10)— Champion ... 64
Soldier's Life, A (Rel'd July 15)—Nordisk ... 66
Sorrowful Mother, The (Rel'd Aug. 7)—Eclair .. 230
Speculation (Rel'd Aug. 5)—Powers ... 232
Sport Restores Youth (Rel'd Aug. 12)—Itala ... 479
Squaw's Devotion, The (Rel'd Aug. 19)—Powers 398
Stranger in Camp, The (Rel'd July 22)—Solax 62
Stepdaughter, The (Rel'd July 24)—Yankee ... 148
Stampede, The (Rel'd Aug. 25)—Solax ... 564
Straight Path, The (Rel'd Aug. 3)—Reliance ... 644
Star Reporter (Rel'd Sept. 18)—Yankee ... 824
Stage Robbers of San Juan (Rel'd Sept. 11)— American ... 826
Stolen Horse (Rel'd Sept. 20)—Champion ... 828
Stolen Pay, The (Rel'd Sept. 20)—Reliance ... 910
Stolen Diamond, The (Rel'd Sept. 22)—Lux ... 910

T

Tables Turned, The (Rel'd July 28)—Bison ... 228
Tangled Heartstrings (Rel'd Sept. 11)—Yankee 732
Teddy's Three Duels (Rel'd July 17)—Eclair ... 66
Teddy Trained by his Mother (Rel'd Aug. 12) —Nordisk ... 398
Temptation (Rel'd Sept. 6)—Reliance ... 730
Thou Shalt Not Lie (Rel'd July 8)—Reliance .. 61
That's Happiness (Rel'd July 18)—Thanhouser 60
That June Bug (Rel'd July 12)—Solax ... 62
Three Calls, The (Rel'd Aug. 14)—Champion .. 396
Three Million Dollars (Rel'd Sept. 7)—American 646
Through the Dells of Wisconsin in a Motor Boat (Rel'd Sept. 25)—Imp ... 908
Thou Shalt Not Steal (Rel'd July 29)—Reliance
Through the Air (Rel'd Oct. 5)—Imp ... 1000
Tiny Tim Wins a Lottery Prize (Rel'd Sept. 13)—Ambrosio ... 830
Tiny Tim as a Detective (Rel'd Sept. 20)— Ambrosio ... 910
Toto—Enthusiast for New Fashion (Rel'd July 15)—Itala ... 144
Toss of a Coin, The (Rel'd Aug. 31)—Imp ... 564
Torn Scarf, The (Rel'd Aug. 31)—Rex ... 648
Toto's Little Cart (Rel'd Aug. 17)—Itala ...
Truth Shall Prevail (Rel'd Aug. 4)—Yankee .. 232
True Hearted Miner, A (Rel'd Aug. 1)—Bison .. 310
Train Despatcher, The (Rel'd Aug. 18)—Thanhouser ... 394
Traitor to His Country, A (Rel'd Aug. 26)— Nordisk ... 562
Turning Point, The (Rel'd Jnly 12)—Reliance .. 60
Two Little Girls (Rel'd July 21)—Thanhouser 62
Two Mothers, The (Rel'd July 22)—Reliance .. 228
Too Much Swedish Drill (Rel'd Aug. 7)—Eclair 230
Tweedledum's White Suit (Rel'd Aug. 30)— Ambrosio ... 646
Twin Squaws, The (Rel'd Sept. 9)—Powers ... 563
Tweedledum and the Adventuress (Rel'd Sept. 6)—Ambrosio ... 730
'Tween Two Loves (Rel'd Sept. 28)—Imp ... 908
Tweedledum's Riding Boots (Rel'd Sept. 20)— Ambrosio ... 910

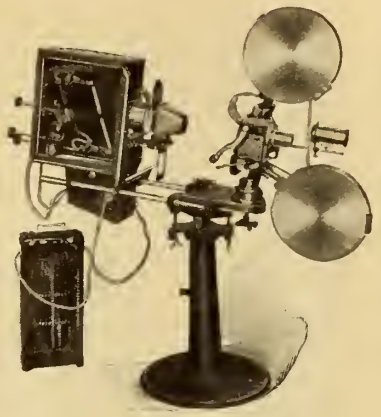
W

Way of the World, The (Rel'd July 17)— Yankee ... 64
Way of a Maid, The (Rel'd Sept. 23)—Reliance 994
Western Doctor's Peril (Rel'd Aug. 28)—American ... 646
Western Tramp, A (Rel'd Sept. 8)—Bison ... 730
When East Comes West (Rel'd July 29)— American ... 62
When Reuben Came to Town (Rel'd Aug. 2)— Solax ... 312
White Red Man, The (Rel'd Aug. 10)—Rex ... 396
When North and South Meet (Rel'd Aug. 21) —Champion ... 480
What a Pennyworth Did (Rel'd Aug. 23)—Lux .. 562
White Chief, The (Rel'd Aug. 29)—Powers ... 564
When the Law Came (Rel'd Sept. 6)—Champion ... 648
When the Leaves Fall (Rel'd Sept. 18)—Eclair 730
White Fawn's Peril (Rel'd Sept. 29)—Bison ... 994
Woman (Rel'd Sept. 15)—Yankee ... 732
Won by a Foot (Rel'd July 24)—Imp ... 144
Wrong Telephone Call, A (Rel'd July 12)—Ambrosio ... 60

Y

Young Doctor, The (Rel'd Sept. 27)—Nestor ... 996

ANOTHER MOTIOGRAPH TRIUMPH
AND SOMETHING TO BE PROUD OF ---



The Electrical Department of the City of Chicago— in their exhibit at the International Municipal Congress held in Chicago, September 18th to 30th, selected the 1912 Model Motiograph as the most modern and up-to-date Motion Picture Machine now manufactured. No other machine would be considered by these experts.

Scientific construction has, in four short years, placed the Motiograph in the lead of all other makes of Motion Picture Machines.

Our watchword is Quality not Quantity.

The care which we use in the design, construction and material of the MOTIOGRAPH is appreciated by those who, for years past, have used machines of cheap construction.

Send for particulars of the 1912 Model. Deliveries commence about October 1st, 1911.

THE ENTERPRISE OPTICAL MANUFACTURING CO.

564-572 WEST RANDOLPH ST. :: :: :: CHICAGO, ILL.

For Sale by Live Agents Everywhere

GOOD PICTURES ATTENDANCE DOOR-RECEIPTS

A Logical Sequence is Brought About—by the Use of

BIO CARBONS

RECOGNIZED STANDARD

THAT'S WHAT
SOME OF YOUR NEIGHBORS TELL US!

LAST 25 to 40% LONGER THAN THE ORDINARY SORT

GIVE ⅓ MORE LIGHT THAN ANY OTHER ON SAME CURRENT

CHARLES L. KIEWERT CO.

NEW YORK
165 Greenwich Street

MILWAUKEE
114-116 Huron St

SAN FRANCISCO
19 Sutter St.

AND ALL LIVE FILM EXCHANGES

PATHÉ'S WEEKLY

HAS MADE THE HIT OF THE CENTURY WITH THE LADIES. FROM EVERY CORNER OF THE COUNTRY COME COMPLIMENTARY LETTERS REGARDING THE

LATEST PARISIAN FASHIONS

IN HATS, CLOAKS, SUITS, DRESSES AND HAIR DRESSING

EVERY WOMAN LIKES TO SEE THE FASHIONS
EVERY FASHION, NEW AND NOVEL, WILL BE IN

PATHÉ'S WEEKLY

IT'S A HUNCH FOR YOU, MR EXHIBITOR
ADVERTISE FASHIONS!

G. MÉLIÈS

Doris to her Father's Rescue

The Stolen Grey

THE prided mare of Donald, a young Englishman in the West, is stolen and later purchased by Dolan, who presents it to his daughter Doris. When, later, some cowboys find the Grey in Dolan's possession, circumstantial evidence points to him as the thief. He is pursued and overtaken. Meanwhile Donald, who has met Doris, learns the truth and together they ride madly to save her father from a horsethief's fate. It is a case of Speed versus Death, won by Youth and a good Steed.

APPROX. 1000 FT. 10-5-11

G. MELIES, 204 EAST 38th ST., NEW YORK

Our agents in Austro-Hungary, Messrs. Rady-Maller, G. m. b. h., of Vienna, have installed in the palace of the a Power's Cameragraph. It was used in a private exhibition before the King, and the pictures projected by it pleased him so much that he expressed the wish to keep it. To the best of our knowledge this is the only moving picture machine permanently installed in a royal palace.

KING OF ROUMANIA

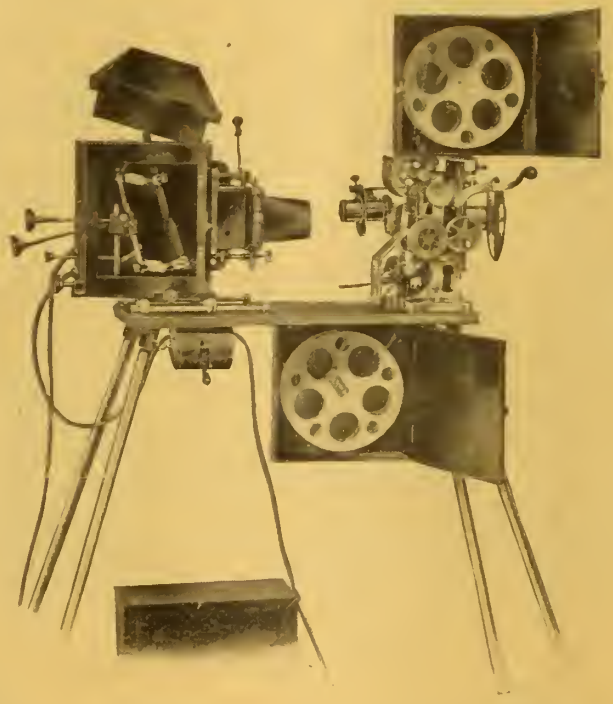
Over 3000 in Daily Use



Mechanism Guaranteed for One Year

POWER'S CAMERAGRAPH NO. 6

The Perfect Motion Picture Machine

is also the choice of His Excellency, the American Exhibitor. If you are not using Power's No. 6 it is your own fault. The price is no higher than that of inferior machines.

If your are an established exhibitor, we will sell it to you through your dealer or exchange on a partial payment plan, which is so liberal that the increased patronage attracted by its steady, flickerless pictures will more than cover the payments.

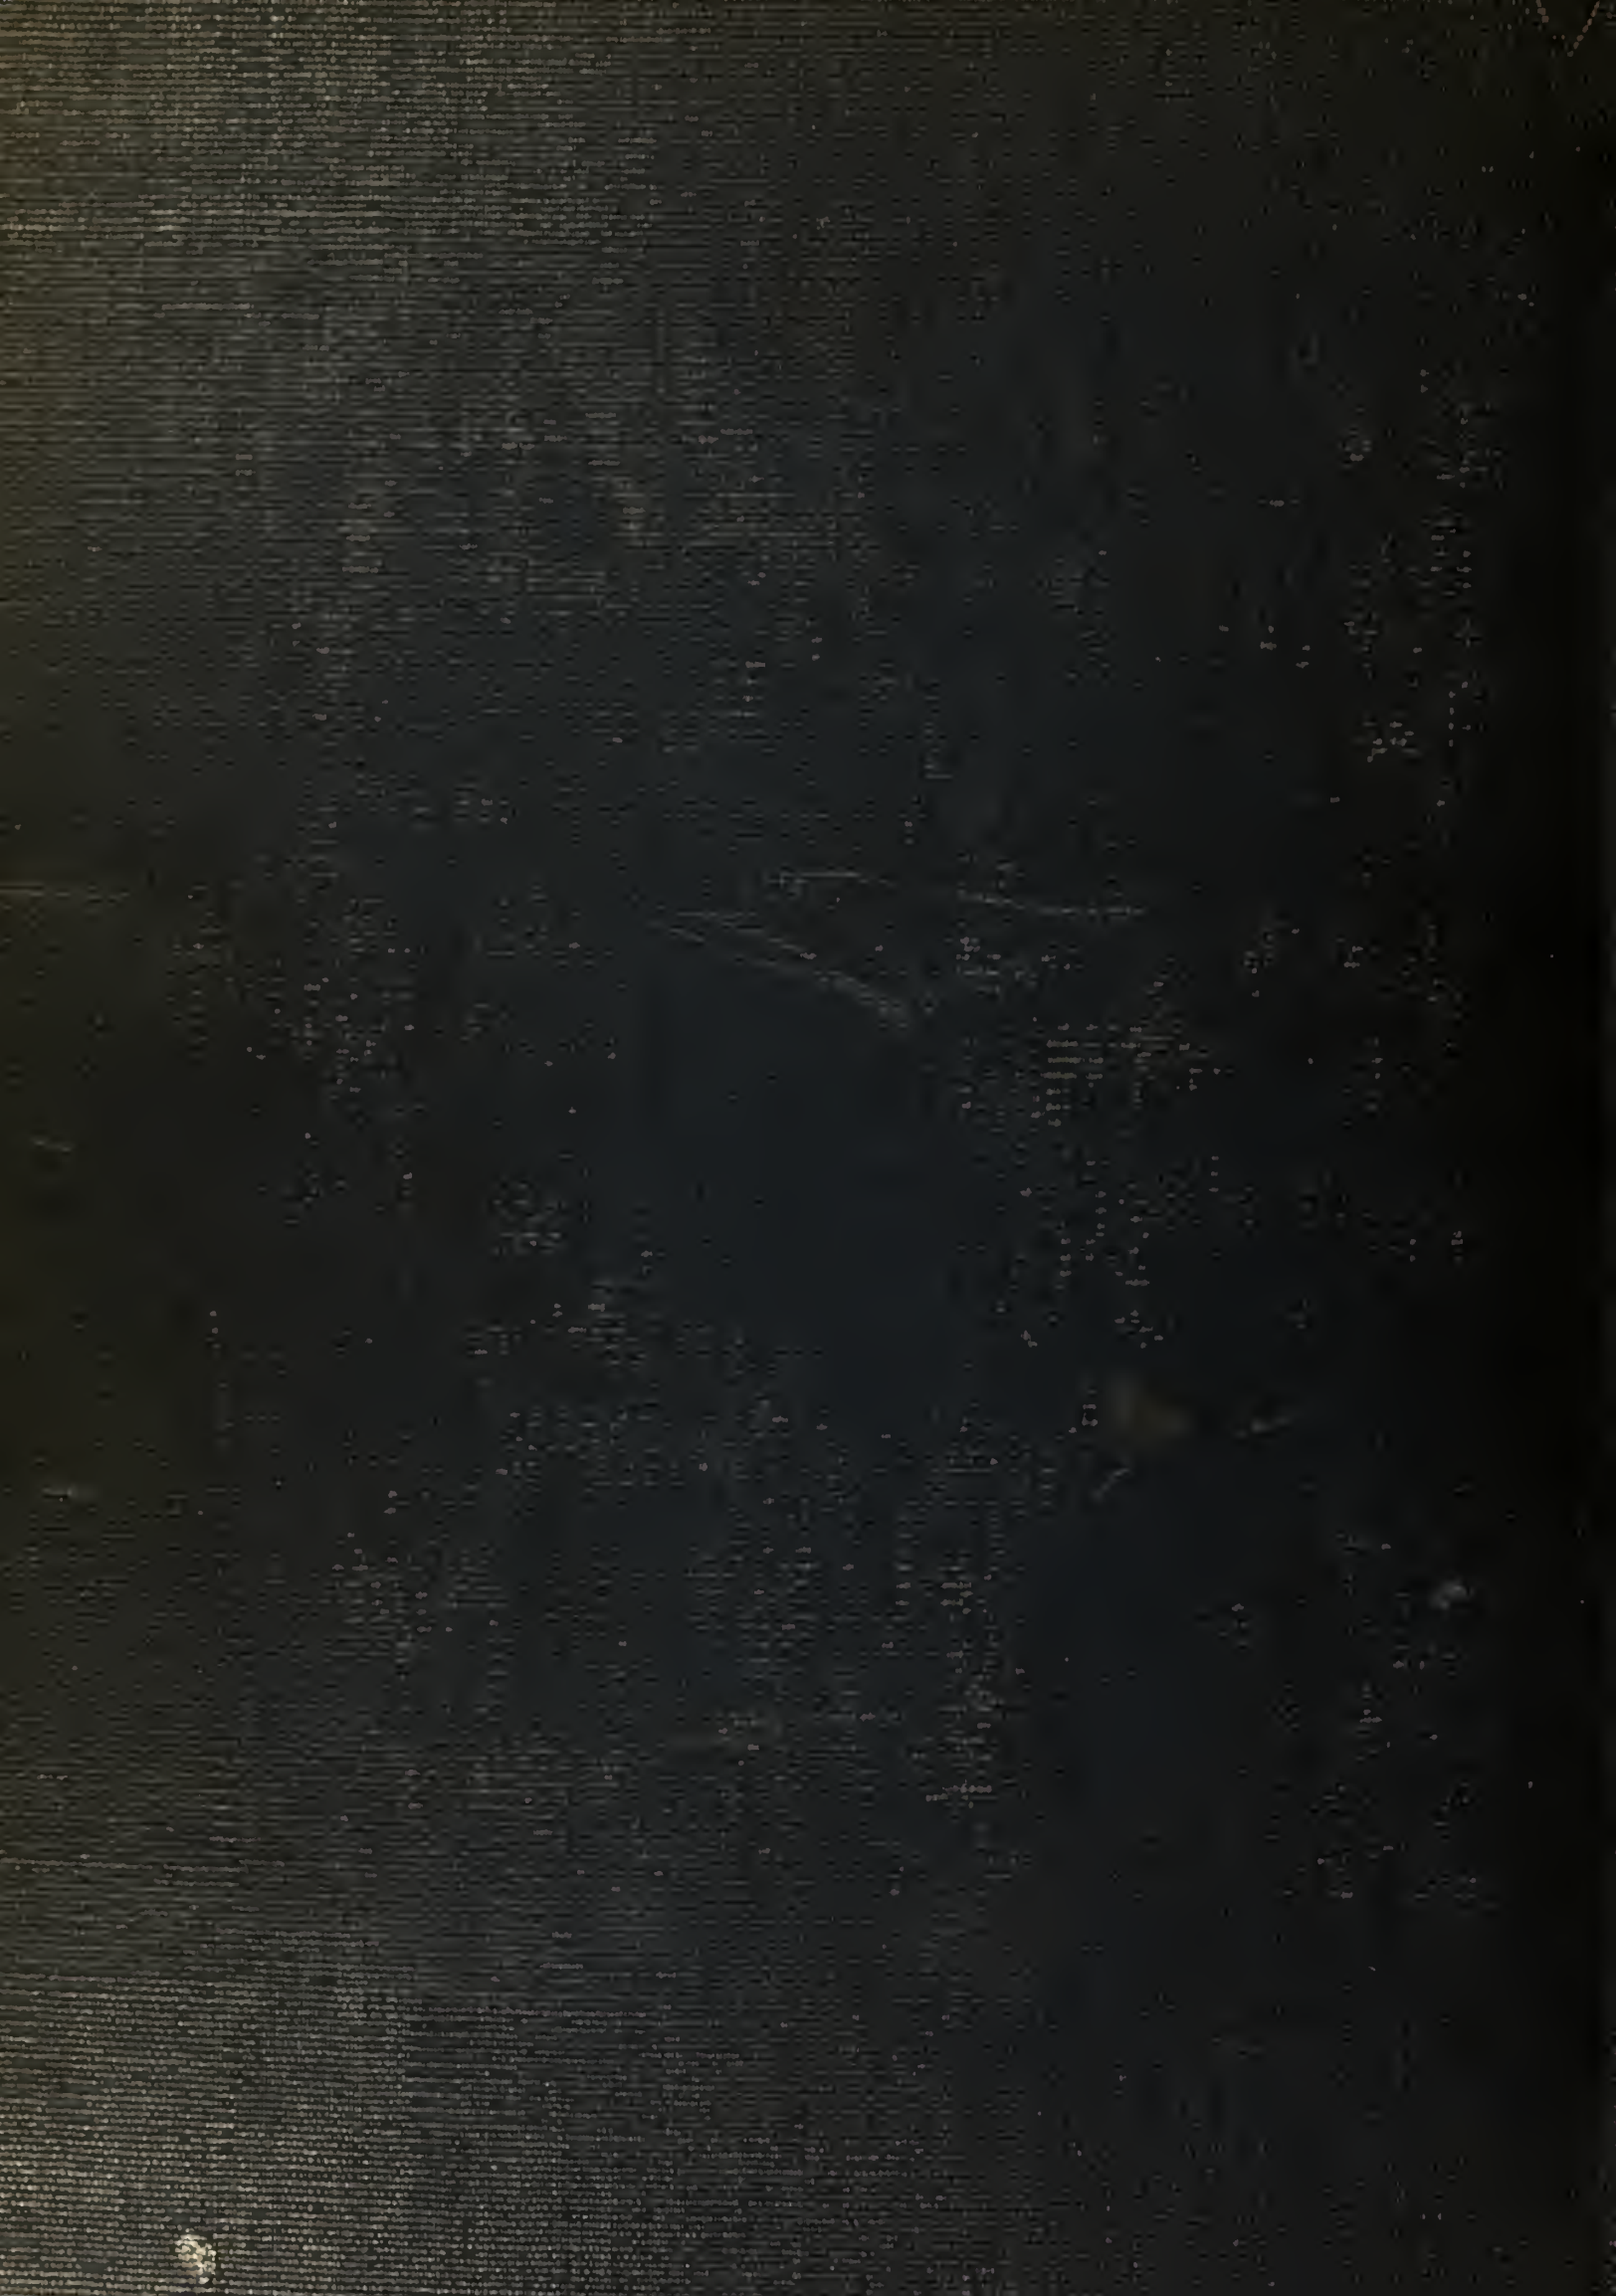
Don't wait until your new theatre is completed. Order at once and avoid undue delay in getting the machine. On account of the wonderful demand for Power's No. 6, it takes us five to seven days to fill an order after its receipt at the factory.

TO THE EXCHANGE: When ordering No. 6 machines for stock, it is advisable to anticipate your requirements as far in advance as possible. The dealer who has the machine in stock will get the business.

Write at once for Catalogue G.

NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY

115 NASSAU ST., NEW YORK

For fourteen years the leading makers of Motion Picture Machines


CAREY PRESS, N. Y.